[o] The word "claim," in an instruction on a trial for murder, following the statement that defendant admitted the killing, and excused himself on the ground of self-defense; that the court would give "a number of instructions based on this claim," was not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 233, 74 Pac. 745.

[p] An instruction in a criminal prosecution defining "alibi," and stating that accused was not required to prove the defense beyond a reasonable doubt, or even a preponderance of the evidence, but was entitled to acquittal if the evidence on that point raised a reasonable doubt, was not erroneous, as discrediting a witness, because of the use of the word "attempt" in the statement that accused's attempt to prove an alibi did not shift the burden of proof.—People v. Lang, 142 Cal. 482, 76 Pac. 232.

[q] The court should not charge in the disjunctive that a defendant is guilty if he "aided, abetted, or assisted" any other person to commit the crime, but such instruction is not cause for reversal of a conviction.—People v. Dole, 51 Pac. 945.

[a] Court is not bound to state the law to jury more than once.—People v. Hong Ah Duck, 61 Cal. 387.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 439. Argumentativeness.

[b] Charge should not be argumentative, or give a résumé of the evidence, or encroach upon the right of the jury by passing upon matters of fact. The judge cannot be too cautious in a criminal trial in avoiding all interference with the conclusions of the jury upon the facts. People v. Choynski, 95 Cal. 640, 30 Pac. 791.

[d] In a criminal prosecution, an instruction that the jury, in weighing the evidence to determine whether there was a reasonable doubt as to defendant's guilt, were entitled to consider that innocent men had been convicted, together with the danger of convicting an innocent man, was properly refused, such proposition being permissible in argument only.—People v. Lonnen, 139 Cal. 634, 73 Pac. 586.

[e] Accused requested an instruction prefaced with the maxim that "it is better that many guilty persons should escape than one innocent person should suffer," and followed by a statement of the danger of "destroying liberty upon evidence that does not produce conviction," and that "where there is a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt the jury have a right to consider that innocent men have been convicted." Held, objectionable as argumentative and an invasion of the province of the jury.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 105, 441, 75 Pac. 676.

[a] In instructions, sections of code may be identified otherwise than by the numbers.—People v. Lewis, 64 Cal. 401, 1 Pac. 490.

[b] Practice of reading opinions in other cases to the jury as part of charge of court in a criminal case is a dangerous one, and is advised against. But where the evidence does not appear in the record, and there is nothing to show whether the defendant was benefited or prejudiced by such practice, the judgment will not be reversed therefor.—People v. McNabb, 79 Cal. 419, 21 Pac. 843.

[c] The method of stating a rule in a charge of the jury as having been held in a cited decision of the highest court of another state is not to be commended.—People v. Holmes, 118 Cal. 444, 50 Pac. 675.

[d] It is better to use words of statute in charge when court is endeavoring to state principle announced in statute.—People v. Newcomer, 118 Cal. 269, 271, 50 Pac. 405.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] In a trial for murder, an instruction was asked, "that if defendant believed decedent to have seduced his wife, and such belief was the result of deprivation of the reasoning faculties, and also believed that he would be justified in shooting decedent, he is entitled to such verdict as will transfer him from the category of sane to insane criminals." The same instruction appeared to have been substantially given before, and this was accordingly refused, whereupon defendant sought a reversal of judgment by reason of such refusal. Held, that the instruction asked was so ambiguous and obscure as, under the circumstances, to justify the refusal.—People v. Hobson, 17 Cal. 424.

[b] Instruction which is so ambiguous that conclusions clearly prejudicial to the defendant may be drawn therefrom by the jury is erroneous.—People v. Maxwell, 24 Cal. 14.

[c] In a trial for robbery, defendants asked the court to instruct the jury that "any fact in favor of a defendant is sufficiently established when proven by a preponderance of evidence, and even though as to such fact the jury have some doubt if it has been proven by a preponderance of evidence, they must acquit." Held, that the instruction asked for was too obscure to warrant a reversal for its refusal.—People v. Carroll, 92 Cal. 568, 28 Pac. 600.

[d] An instruction that, if the jury believed that "such mental difficulty" existed as would preclude the exercise of malice, they must find defendant not guilty was properly refused, as obscure and uncertain.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[b] Where a charge to a jury is contradictory and likely to confuse, a conviction should be set aside.—People v. Messersmith, 57 Cal. 575.

[d] In a prosecution for homicide, instructions held not conflicting.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 443. Confused or Misleading Instructions.

[a] On prosecution for homicide, charge as to intent of defendant held not objectionable as argumentative, misleading, or suggestive.—People v. McRoberts, 1 Cal. App. 25, 81 Pac. 734.

[b] Charge which requires explanation or qualification, or which has a tendency to mislead and confuse the jury, should be refused. People v. Maxwell, 24 Cal. 14; People v. Best, 39 Cal. 690; People v. Strange, 61 Cal. 496.

[e] On the trial of an indictment, a charge as follows: "There is a proposition of law which may or may not be involved in this case, as you determine the facts, but it is eminently proper that I should give it to you, and that is," etc., is not misleading, as leaving to the jury to say whether or not the rule of law as given was applicable to the facts of the case in hand.—People v. Morton, 72 Cal. 62, 13 Pac. 150.

[h] On an indictment for robbery, the only witnesses for the state testified that while one of them was paying money to the other, defendant grabbed it and ran away. Witnesses for defendant testified that at the time of the alleged robbery he was sick and confined to his bed. The court charged that there might be "another corroborating circumstance in the evidence of flight," and that flight was "a corroborating circumstance which with other evidence, might be sufficient to justify a verdict against defendant." Held, that this was misleading, as the witnesses were not corroborated by evidence of defendant's flight, because no other witness than they testified to his flight.—People v. Hong Tong, 85 Cal. 171, 24 Pac. 726.

[i] A charge that accused is presumed to be innocent until the contrary is proved, and, in case of reasonable doubt whether his guilt is satisfactorily shown he is entitled to an acquittal, is not confused and contradictory.—People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134, 54 Pac. 596.

[j] Where the court instructed on the subject of reasonable doubt, and the principles applicable to the case, and that the jury should bring their intelligence to the consideration of the case, and let their common sense and best judgment control in its determination, it was not prejudicial to defendant, as giving the jury the impression that they could disregard the instructions previously given.—People v. Kelly, 132 Cal. 430, 64 Pac. 563.

[l] In a criminal prosecution, an instruction: "Moral certainty is that degree of proof which the law requires of moral evidence. Moral certainty is described as a state of impression produced by facts in which a reasonable mind feels a sort of coercion or necessity to act in accordance with it," is defective as confusing. People v. Huntington, 138 Cal. 261, 70 Pac. 284.

[m] Instructions should be so formulated as to obviate danger of law being misunderstood. People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 239, 74 Pac. 745.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 444. Singling Out Particular Facts.

[a] It is not error to refuse an instruction which singles out, and gives prominence to, certain portions of the evidence.—People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[b] In a trial for murder, where evidence has been given to show ill-will between defendant and deceased, and threats of the former against the latter, it is not error to call the attention of the jury to such evidence, where the evident purpose is to warn them against giving much importance to the same.—People v. Neary, 104 Cal. 373, 37 Pac. 943.

[c] In a prosecution for rape, an instruction that prosecutrix's prompt complaint of the wrong is original evidence, and may be considered in corroboration of her other testimony, is not objectionable as singling out the testimony of a particular witness for comment.—People v. Keith, 141 Cal. 686, 75 Pac. 304.

[d] In a prosecution for rape, defendant requested instructions that he was a competent witness, and the jury were as much bound to consider his evidence as that of any other witness, and to give it all the weight they believed it entitled to; and also that, if from all the testimony, including defendant's, there remained a probability of his innocence, it was sufficient to raise a reasonable doubt, and entitled him to an acquittal. Held, that as these instructions singled out the testimony of a particular witness for comment, it was not error to refuse them.—People v. Keith, 141 Cal. 686, 75 Pac. 304.

[e] An instruction isolating a single item of evidence, and telling the jury that the fact alone of its admission was insufficient to enable it to draw conclusions in connection with other facts as to the facts it tended to establish, was error.—People v. Reed, 52 Pac. 835.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 445. Appeals to Prejudice.

[a] In a trial for murder, it is improper for the judge, in his charge to the jury, to speak of the deceased as "the victim."—People v. Williams, 17 Cal. 142.

[b] In a trial for murder, the judge spoke in his charge of a robbery, in which it was alleged the defendant had been engaged, as an outrage. Held, that the defendant could not have been prejudiced thereby.—People v. Pool, 27 Cal. 572.

[c] Where the court, after charging in strong language as to the presumptions surrounding defendant, and the certainty of proof required, calls the jury's attention to the fact that the law should be fearlessly administered, and that, if they are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt, they will be derelict in duty if they fail to convict, there is no prejudice, but merely bad taste.—People v. Bowers, 18 Pac. 660.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 446. Abstract Instructions and Instructions Abstractly Correct.

[a] An instruction that evidence of defendant's cohabitation with M. prior to his marriage with N. is not sufficient to warrant a finding that defendant was ever married to M. may be refused, where there is much other evidence tending to show such marriage, though the instruction is true as an abstract proposition.—People v. Hartman, 130 Cal. 487, 62 Pac. 823.

[b] A charge that the plea of insanity is sometimes resorted to where aggravated crimes have been committed under circumstances which render hopeless all other means of evading punishment, and while such proof, when satisfactorily established, should be viewed as a full and complete defense, yet it should be examined into with great care, while not prejudicial to defendant, is purely abstract, and should not have been given.—People v. Methever, 132 Cal. 326, 64 Pac. 481.

[c] Where, on a trial for murder in the first degree, the prosecution claims that accused shot and killed decedent, instructions containing statements that it is no offense for one to go and see a fist fight or a crime committed are properly refused.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[e] The refusal to give instructions on mere abstract propositions having no relation to the facts of the case is not error.—People v. Donnolly, 143 Cal. 394, 77 Pac. 177.

[f] In a prosecution for homicide, an instruction that the mere possession of any article, etc., was not of itself sufficient to convict accused held properly refused as abstract.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

[g] Requests to charge in a criminal case, based on a suppositious state of facts, to the existence of which there was no evidence, held properly refused.—People v. Trebilcox (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 684.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 651; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2769-2772, § 1979.

§ 447. Necessity that Instructions Conform to and be Sustained by Evidence.

[b] A charge which is abstract, and not applicable to the evidence, is properly refused.—People v. Hurley, 8 Cal. 390; People v. Sanchez, 24 Cal. 17; People v. Kelly, 46 Cal. 356; People v. Murphy, 47 Cal. 103; People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[d] Refusal of instructions is not error where they are not required by any part of the testimony, or founded thereon.—People v. Juarez, 28 Cal. 380.

[e] If there is no conflict in testimony as to the venue of crime for which defendant is on trial, instructions upon the subject are out of place.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280.

[f] In a prosecution for homicide where the fact of killing is admitted by the defendant, it is not error to refuse an instruction on the question of reasonable doubt, framed so broadly as to include the fact of the killing, as such an instruction would be misleading in that it would tend to distract the minds of the jury from the true points of the controversy.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280.

[g] Although the judge, in charging, presents facts hypothetically, and does not assume their existence, yet, unless there is evidence tending to establish the circumstances recited as possible facts, the charge is erroneous.—People v. Bird, 60 Cal. 7.

[h] Where all the evidence in the case is direct and positive, and the defendant's guilt is in no manner dependent upon an agreement of circumstances, there is no such thing as an hypothesis in the theory of the prosecution, and an instruction based upon such a theory becomes irrelevant and immaterial. There was nothing in the case to warrant such an instruction, and therefore it was proper for the court to refuse it.—People v. Gilbert, 60 Cal. 108.

[j] Court should not give instruction which is not justified by any evidence.—People v. Oldham, 111 Cal. 648, 44 Pac. 312.

[k] It is error to give instruction inapplicable to case, and which assumes existence of evidence not given.—People v. Thompson, 115 Cal. 160, 46 Pac. 912.

[m] An instruction is properly refused which is based upon a state of facts of which there is no evidence.—People v. Matthews, 126 Cal. xvii, 58 Pac. 371.

[n] Where, in a prosecution for murder, the actual existence of defendant's own danger was unquestioned, failure to impress the jury that apparent danger would have justified the homicide is not erroneous.—People v. Emerson, 130 Cal. 562, 62 Pac. 1069.

[o] Where no dying declaration of deceased is introduced, the court will be justified in refusing an instruction that evidence of an oral declaration should be viewed with distrust where the prosecution has a written declaration in its possession.—People v. Brown, 130 Cal. 591, 62 Pac. 1072.

[p] Where a defense to a prosecution for embezzlement was insanity at the time of the offense, caused by long-continued over-indulgence in intoxicating liquors, and there was evidence tending to support it; an instruction that settled insanity, produced by such use of liquor, affected responsibility in the same way as insanity produced by any other cause, but that it must be settled insanity, and not a mere temporary condition, was not improper as misleading and inapplicable to the evidence.—People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472.

[q] Where, in answer to defendant's affidavit for a continuance, counsel for the prosecution admitted that an absent witness, if present, would testify to facts set out in the affidavit of another witness, there was no error in rejecting an instruction based on the theory that the testimony of said absent witness "was conceded and admitted to be true by the prosecution."—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[r] On a trial for murder, where defendant had not testified that he saw or apprehended any danger, but only that he knew nothing of what occurred after deceased struck him until the gun was taken from him after the killing, it was proper to refuse an instruction as to a justifiable killing.—People v. Shears, 133 Cal. 154, 65 Pac. 295.

[s] Where there is no evidence in a prosecution for embezzlement to show that a certain witness for the state was an accomplice, except certain suspicious circumstances, and the case is not tried by either party on the theory that the witness was an accomplice, it is not error to refuse to instruct that if the jury believed that the witness was an accomplice there could be no conviction, unless his testimony was corroborated.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[u] Where there is no evidence in a criminal case which tends to show that a witness for the state has been offered any immunity from punishment if he testifies in such case, it is proper to refuse an instruction that if such witness was offered any such immunity it should be considered in determining the weight which should be given his testimony.—People v. Ward, 134 Cal. 301, 66 Pac. 372.

[v] A requested instruction in a prosecution for an assault with intent to murder was contained, in substance, in an instruction given; but the former was more specific, and would have been more favorable to the defendant in a case in which the evidence tended to show that defendant was too drunk at the time of the commission of the deed to know what he was doing, or was insane. Held, that refusal of the requested instruction was not erroneous, in the absence of evidence of intoxication or insanity. Judgment (1901) 63 Pac. 675, reversed.—People v. Mendenhall, 135 Cal. 344, 67 Pac. 325.

[w] Where the evidence shows that defendant approached the cart in which deceased was sitting, and he placed his gun across the shafts, the gun being uncocked, and not pointing toward the body of either of the occupants of the cart, an instruction of the court purporting to recite the facts, stating that defendant came up to the cart with a gun in his hands, and placed the muzzle close to the body of the deceased, in a position to use the same immediately with the intent to kill deceased if he did not leave the premises, is reversible error. People v. Matthai, 135 Cal. 442, 67 Pac. 694.

[x] Instructions in a criminal case without evidence to sustain them are properly denied, though abstractly correct.—People v. Morine, 138 Cal. 626, 72 Pac. 166.

[y] Where there is direct evidence that accused committed the crime charged, it is not error to refuse a charge assuming that a conviction must necessarily be based on circumstantial evidence.—People v. Clark, 145 Cal. 727, 79 Pac. 434.

[z] On a trial for assault with intent to murder the refusal to permit the jury to consider a hypothetical result, held not error.—People v. Owens (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 980.

[aa] On a trial for assault with intent to murder, a requested instruction held properly refused under the evidence.—People v. Owens (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 980.

[bb] On a trial for homicide, an instruction relating to self-defense held erroneous under the evidence.—People v. Maughs (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 187.

§ 448. Applicability to Case or Issues.

[a] Where, in a prosecution for murder, defendant's sole defense was that he did not commit the act, it was error to instruct that, the commission of the homicide by defendant being proved, the burden of proving circumstances of mitigation or excuse devolved on him, since it was not applicable to the case.—People v. Tapia, 131 Cal. 647, 63 Pac. 1001.

[b] Reading a city ordinance prohibiting the police court clerks from accepting bail bonds outside the city hall is error in a prosecution of such a clerk for filing a false bail bond, under Penal Code, section 115, making it criminal to prosecute or offer any false or forged instrument for registration.—People v. Kelly, 133 Cal. 1, 64 Pac. 1091.

[c] Defendant in a murder prosecution, having been convicted of manslaughter on a former trial on the same information, pleaded former acquittal of murder and former jeopardy for the same offense, and the court instructed to find for defendant on such pleas. The court further instructed as to the elements of crime constituting murder in the first and murder in the second degree, and as to the distinction between these and between murder and manslaughter, and that it was for the jury to determine the grade of crime. Held, that such latter instruction was erroneous, as being outside the issues.—People v. McFarlane, 134 Cal. 618, 66 Pac. 865.

[d] Where, on a prosecution for grand larceny, there was evidence connecting defendant with the commission of the crime other than the mere fact of his presence and failure to interfere with the commission thereof, the refusal to instruct that the mere fact that one is present when a larceny is committed, and makes no attempt to prevent it, does not render him guilty of the crime, was not prejudicial error.—People v. Felix, 136 Cal. xix, 69 Pac. 220.

[e] A prosecution for murder was conducted on the theory that accused, a physician, was knowingly attempting to produce an abortion on decedent, which attempt resulted fatally, and defendant on the theory that accused was ignorant of her pregnancy, and that she died under a surgical operation, probably from the anæsthetic. Held, that it was error for the court to inject an alien issue by instructing, after evidence and argument were closed, that accused might be convicted of manslaughter, if death resulted in the course of legitimate medical treatment from an act done "without due caution or circumspection."—People v. Huntington, 138 Cal. 261, 70 Pac. 284.

[f] Where in prosecution for grand larceny, charged to have been committed by defendant stealing certain money from the prosecutor's person, the only circumstantial evidence introduced was corroborative of the direct testimony of the prosecuting witness, it was not error for the court to refuse requested instructions which assumed that the case was one of circumstantial evidence.—People v. Lonnen, 139 Cal. 634, 73 Cal. 586.

[g] Where accused was jointly indicted with another for the crime charged, it was not error to refuse a charge that the jury could not find him guilty unless they were satisfied that he committed the crime alone.—People v. Clark, 145 Cal. 727, 79 Pac. 434.

[h] A charge that a verdict of acquittal should be rendered on a certain phase of the evidence, regardless of whatever else might be developed in the case, is properly refused.—People v. Clark, 145 Cal. 727, 79 Pac. 434.

[b] Practical administration of justice should not be defeated by a too rigid adherence to a close and technical analysis of instructions to jury.—People v. Bruggy, 93 Cal. 476, 29 Pac. 26.

§ 450. Construction and Effect of Instructions as a Whole.

[a] That isolated instructions are erroneous or misleading is no ground for reversal where instructions as a whole present case properly.—People v. Cleveland, 49 Cal. 578; People v. Kennedy, 55 Cal. 201; People v. De Silvera, 59 Cal. 592; People v. Turcott, 65 Cal. 126, 3 Pac. 461; People v. Biggins, 3 Pac. 853; People v. Carleton, 4 Pac. 763; People v. Prather, 6 Pac. 315; People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 317, 20 Pac. 719; People v. Clark, 84 Cal. 573, 24 Pac. 313; People v. Anderson, 105 Cal. 32, 38 Pac. 513; People v. Wallace, 109 Cal. 611, 42 Pac. 159.

[b] A charge to a jury must be taken and considered as a whole, and it is not necessary to set out in each separate instruction all the exceptions, limitations, and conditions which are applicable, provided their reference thereto, when considered as a whole, was intelligible.—People v. Welch, 49 Cal. 174.

[c] The judge presiding at a trial for murder, the defense being insanity, instructed the jury that a tendency to commit suicide does not prove insanity. Held that, standing alone, this was error; but that, as qualified by telling the jury that, with other facts and circumstances, it was matter for their consideration, it became unobjectionable.—People v. Messersmith, 61 Cal. 246.

[d] Although, standing alone, certain instructions given to a jury may be inaccurate, yet, if taken together, they are substantially correct, and it is apparent that there could have been no misconception, no ground for reversal is shown. Each instruction may be explained and qualified by another.—People v. Morine, 61 Cal. 367.

[e] Charge of trial court must be taken together, and if, without straining any portion of the language, it harmonizes as a whole, and fairly and correctly presents the law bearing on the issues tried, the appellate court will not disturb the judgment because a separate instruction does not contain all the conditions and limitations which are to be gathered from the entire text.—People v. Hurtado, 63 Cal. 288.

[f] The sentences or separate parts of a charge should be read in connection with the context and the instructions as a whole, and, if when so read, it appears that the jury was correctly instructed the judgment will not be reversed because there is an apparent conflict between certain isolated sentences.—People v. Turcott, 65 Cal. 126.

[g] Where the court, in instructing the jury as to the meaning of the words "reasonable doubt," used some expressions which were weak and ambiguous, but others so strong and clear that the jury could not possibly have been misled, an assignment of error, based on the ambiguous portion of the charge, should not be sustained.—People v. Lee Sare Bo, 72 Cal. 623, 14 Pac. 310.

[h] An instruction that the jury must be "satisfied" of defendant's guilt is not erroneous because it omits the words "beyond a reasonable doubt," when the whole of the instructions, taken together, clearly inform the jury that they cannot convict the defendant unless they are satisfied of his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.—People v. Flynn, 73 Cal. 511, 15 Pac. 102.

[i] If law is fairly stated in whole instructions, fact that one instruction is subject to criticism is immaterial.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 339, 20 Pac. 719.

[k] It is sufficient that all instructions taken together state law fairly and favorably to defendant.—People v. Neary, 104 Cal. 373, 37 Pac. 943.

[l] Charge is to be construed as a whole, and is sufficient where it covers the whole case fairly and correctly, and in a manner to leave no misapprehension in the minds of the jury.—People v. Leary, 105 Cal. 486, 39 Pac. 24; People v. Fehrenbach, 102 Cal. 394, 36 Pac. 678.

[m] Instructions to the jury must be read as a whole, and, if the entire charge fairly presents the law of the case, the judgment will not be reversed for minor and unimportant defects, or because the court refuses to repeat itself.—People v. Anderson, 105 Cal. 32, 38 Pac. 513.

[o] The charge of the court is to be taken as a whole, and it is not necessary that each paragraph should contain all the conditions and limitations expressed in the others.—People v. Armstrong, 114 Cal. 570, 46 Pac. 611.

in other portions of the charge, repeatedly told the jury that, if accused was insane in committing the assault, he was incapable of forming the necessary intent.—People v. Burgle, 123 Cal. 303, 55 Pac. 998.

[q] Where a specific charge, taken in connection with the context, is correct, the fact that standing alone it may justify an erroneous inference is immaterial.—People v. Emerson, 130 Cal. 562, 62 Pac. 1069.

[r] Where the court instructed as to the flight of a person immediately after "the crime has been committed with which he knows he is charged," an objection to the next sentence of the charge, that it leaves out the proposition of the knowledge of the defendant "either of the fact of the killing of the deceased, or that he (the defendant) was accused of the same," should be overruled; the whole instruction being clearly based on the condition.—People v. Lem Deo, 132 Cal. 199, 64 Pac. 265.

[s] The giving of an instruction in a criminal case which states a general proposition of law, without stating the exceptions and qualifications of such proposition in its application to the particular case, is not erroneous, if the instructions as a whole correctly state the law applicable to the case. Judgment (1901) 63 Pac. 675, reversed.—People v. Mendenhall, 135 Cal. 344, 67 Pac. 325.

[t] Instruction must be construed as a whole and with reference to other instructions on same proposition.—People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 242, 74 Pac. 745.

[u] In an instruction defining reasonable doubt accused cannot complain of the omission of a part relating to the burden of proof, where it is elsewhere fully given and repeated, and the essential feature of the definition was not destroyed or materially weakened.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 105, 441, 75 Pac. 676.

[v] An instruction to the jury in a prosecution for forgery that, "if the prosecution does not show or establish by proof sufficient to convince you beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant had no authority to sign the name" of the prosecutor, "then you must acquit the defendant," taken in connection with other instructions implying that the jury must also be satisfied as to the false character of the signature and that it was made by defendant, is not erroneous, as assuming that defendant made the signature in question.—People v. Lapique, 67 Pac. 14, judgment reversed, 69 Pac. 226.

[a] An instruction is not objectionable by reason of omitted elements plainly stated in other instructions.—People v. Davis, 1 Cal. App. 8, 81 Pac. 716; Id. (Cal. Sup.), 718.

[b] Where court gives erroneous instructions defining murder in the first degree, and subsequently defines the crime clearly and accurately, the error is not a sufficient ground for a new trial.—People v. Moore, 8 Cal. 90.

[d] An error in refusing to give an instruction to the jury is cured if the instruction refused is thereafter substantially given in the charge to the jury.—People v. Turley, 50 Cal. 469.

[e] In a prosecution for murder, it is not ground for a reversal that instructions were given to the jury in the absence of defendant, if, subsequently, the same instructions were repeated to them during his presence.—People v. Soto, 65 Cal. 621, 4 Pac. 664.

[g] To charge that, if the evidence is "sufficient to satisfy the minds of the jury" that the circumstances relied on to excuse or mitigate the offense existed, they should find the defendant guilty of a simple assault, will not be held prejudicial error, as leading the jury to believe that they must find him guilty unless satisfied of those facts, where, at the end of the charge, they were instructed that they might find the defendant not guilty "in case of reasonable doubt . . . . as to the facts offered in evidence being sufficient to establish his guilt."—People v. Choy Ah Sing, 84 Cal. 276, 24 Pac. 379.

[h] Where the defense is an alibi, a charge that, while defendant's guilt must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, he can establish any fact essential to his defense by a preponderance of evidence, if erroneous, is cured by a charge that he must be acquitted if there is a reasonable doubt of his presence at the commission of the crime.—People v. Chun Heong, 86 Cal. 329, 24 Pac. 1021.

[j] On a trial for burglary, the error of the court in charging that, "in every crime or public offense, there must exist a union or joint operation of act or intent or criminal negligence," is cured by a subsequent charge that the jury must believe from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that defendant entered the house with intent to commit larceny.—People v. Winters, 93 Cal. 277, 28 Pac. 946.

[k] Error of court in saying to jury that he cannot understand how they can fail to agree is not cured by his afterward saying that they are the sole judges of all questions of fact and the credibility of witnesses.—People v. Kindleberger, 100 Cal. 367, 34 Pac. 852.

part of the charge.—People v. Westlake, 124 Cal. 452, 57 Pac. 465.

[m] In a prosecution for theft of calves, the jury was erroneously instructed that the distinction between an accessory before the fact and a principal in case of felony had been abrogated, and all persons concerned in its commission, whether they directly committed the act constituting the offense, or aided or abetted in its commission, though not present, shall be prosecuted, tried, and punished as principals; but this was followed by a correct instruction that all persons concerned in the commission of a crime, whether it be felony or misdemeanor, and whether they directly commit the act constituting the offense, or aid or abet in its commission, or, not being present, have advised and encouraged its commission, are principals in any crime so committed; and the jury were further instructed that the burden was on the prosecution to prove that the calves were stolen by defendant alone, or by defendant and another person or persons, who had conspired together to do so, or that they were stolen by some other person or persons, while defendant aided and abetted in stealing them. Held, that the error in the first instruction was cured.—People v. Warren, 130 Cal. 683, 63 Pac. 86.

[n] Error in an instruction that all persons who aid or abet in the commission of a crime, though not present, shall be prosecuted and punished as principals, was cured where the jury were elsewhere told that all persons who "aid and abet in the commission of a crime are principals," and "in every crime or public offense there must exist a union or joint operation of act and intent or criminal negligence." People v. Warren, 130 Cal. 678, 63 Pac. 87.

[o] On a prosecution under Penal Code, section 507, for the embezzlement of property by a bailee, the court instructed substantially in the language of Civil Code, section 1572, which defines "fraud." Held, that though the section defines "fraud" within the meaning of the chapter relative to contracts, and had no application, there was no prejudice to defendant, the instruction being followed by one stating that the question was whether defendant intended permanently to deprive the owner of his property.—People v. Klee, 137 Cal. xix, 69 Pac. 696.

[p] On a prosecution under Penal Code, section 507, making it embezzlement for one to convert property intrusted to him as a bailee, the question whether it was error to fail to instruct that defendant must have "feloniously" intended to appropriate the property was immaterial on appeal; the jury having been instructed that the test to be applied for determining the guilt or innocence of defendant was whether he intended to permanently deprive prosecutor of his property.—People v. Klee, 137 Cal. xix, 69 Pac. 696.

[q] In a prosecution for robbery defendant pleaded insanity, and there was evidence to support such defense. After retiring, the jury returned for further instruction, and in response to questions propounded the court erroneously stated that the law of the state did not recognize transitory mania or temporary insanity, and repeated such statement in a formal instruction, which was then re-read to the jury. Held, that such error was prejudicial, and was not cured by other instructions on the subject, which, standing alone, were free from error.—People v. Ford, 138 Cal. 140, 70 Pac. 1075.

—— REQUESTS WHOLLY OR PARTLY ERRONEOUS, INAPPLICABLE OR MISLEADING, § 466.
NOTING DISPOSITION OF REQUEST, § 467.

[a] Trial court is not required to give instructions on particular points, where no request therefor is made.—People v. Haun, 44 Cal. 96; People v. Gray, 66 Cal. 271, 5 Pac. 240; People v. Marks, 72 Cal. 46, 13 Pac. 149; People v. Fice, 97 Cal. 459, 32 Pac. 531.

[b] Omissions by the court to instruct the jury "that no presumption of guilt follows from [defendant's] failure to testify in his own behalf," and to define the phrase "reasonable doubt," as used in some of the instructions, are not erroneous, where defendant's counsel did not request such instructions at the proper time.—People v. Flynn, 73 Cal. 511, 15 Pac. 102.

[c] Error cannot be predicated on a failure to instruct on a certain point, where there was no request to instruct.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 85, 50 Pac. 390.

[d] Omission to charge on any point is not error, where the party wishing an instruction did not ask for it.—People v. Appleton, 130 Cal. 250, 52 Pac. 582; People v. Oliveria, 127 Cal. 376, 59 Pac. 772.

[f] Under Penal Code, sections 1093, 1127, providing that the court must state all matters of law necessary for the information of the jury, and must charge on any points pertinent to the issue if requested, it was error to fail to instruct that in determining whether there was sufficient evidence of the corpus delicti the asserted confession or other evidence, which did not tend to prove the corpus delicti, but merely tended to connect defendant with the crime charged, could not be considered, though the instructions requested on such question were not correctly drawn.—People v. Tapia, 131 Cal. 647, 63 Pac. 1001.

[g] Defendant cannot object that evidence was not restricted to a particular purpose where he made no request to charge that the evidence be so restricted.—People v. Monroe, 138 Cal. 97, 70 Pac. 1072.

[h] The failure of accused's counsel to ask additional instructions did not preclude reversal for the further error in omitting to instruct that the law exacts only ordinary and reasonable care and skill on the part of a physician.—People v. Huntington, 138 Cal. 261, 70 Pac. 284.

[i] On a prosecution for robbery, where evidence was admitted as to property taken from prosecutor and found on defendant, defendant held not entitled to complain on appeal of the absence of an order limiting the effect of the evidence.—People v. Castile (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 745.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 453. —— Further or More Specific Instructions.

[c] An objection that an instruction as to reasonable doubt, given by the court on its own motion, in a murder trial, "would exclude from the consideration of the jury a doubt founded upon a knowledge of natural laws inconsistent with the hypothesis contended for by the prosecution," is not available, where defendant made no request for a more specific charge, and it does not appear from the record that the prosecution contended for any hypothesis claimed to be inconsistent with any natural law, or that evidence of any natural law would have been relevant or material.—People v. Donguli, 92 Cal. 607, 28 Pac. 782.

[d] Where defendant thinks instructions are not full enough, he should request more specific one.—People v. White, 116 Cal. 19, 47 Pac. 771.

[e] Where the definition of reasonable doubt was correctly given, the omission, in that connection, to tell the jury that "the guilt of defendant should be inconsistent with every other rational hypothesis," was not error, in the absence of a request to give the language quoted.—People v. Brittan, 118 Cal. 409, 50 Pac. 664.

[f] If the instructions on self-defense given in the language of the code are not sufficiently full to satisfy defendant, he should propose proper instructions.—People v. Dobbins, 138 Cal. 694, 72 Pac. 339.

[g] In homicide, where an accomplice was defined in a charge as one who in some manner aided or assisted or participated in the criminal act, defendant, had she desired a fuller instruction on the subject, should have asked for it.—People v. Balkwell, 143 Cal. 259, 76 Pac. 1017.

[h] In absence of any request for further instruction setting forth defendant's theory of case, an objection that such theory is omitted or not set forth with sufficient prominence is not available.—People v. Wong Chow, 4 Pac. 763.

[i] An objection to an instruction in a criminal case that it is not sufficiently full is unavailable unless a fuller instruction is requested.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

[j] On a prosecution for robbery, a charge defining the crime in the general terms of the statute is sufficient, in the absence of a request for an instruction more particularly charging the elements of the offense.—People v. Castile (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 746.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 453½. —— Cautionary Instruction.

[a] In the absence of a request to charge as to the good character of defendant, the failure of the court to do so on its own motion is not reversible error.—People v. McNutt, 93 Cal. 658, 29 Pac. 243.

[a] Where the trial court, in a prosecution for arson, was not requested to define circumstantial evidence to the jury, it was not error to omit to do so.—People v. Hiltel, 131 Cal. 577, 63 Pac. 919.

[b] Defendant in homicide, who asked for no instruction on the nature and value of circumstantial evidence, cannot complain of the court's failure to instruct thereon.—People v. Balkwell, 143 Cal. 259, 76 Pac. 1017.

[b] In a prosecution for attempt to rape, defendant, if he wishes the attention of the jury called to the lesser offense of simple assault, must request an instruction therefor.—People v. Barney, 114 Cal. 554, 47 Pac. 41.

[c] Failure to instruct on lesser or other offense included in charge is not error when there is no request for such instruction.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 91, 50 Pac. 390.

[d] Where defendant on a prosecution for grand larceny did not request an instruction that he might be convicted of petit larceny, failure to give to the jury a form of verdict permitting them to find him guilty of petit larceny was not erroneous, especially under evidence showing that defendant was guilty of larceny from the person or grand larceny if he was guilty of anything.—People v. Clark, 145 Cal. 727, 79 Pac. 434.

[e] In a prosecution for robbery, it was not error, in the absence of a request, to omit to charge that defendant, under the information, might be convicted of petit larceny.—People v. Modina, 146 Cal. 142, 79 Pac. 842.

[a] In a prosecution for murder, it is not error to fail to give to the jury the definition of malice contained in Penal Code, section 188, no special instruction having been requested.—People v. Glaze, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

[a] Where defendant did not request an instruction that he was presumed innocent, as provided by Penal Code, section 1096, the failure of the court to charge on the subject was not erroneous, though section 1127 requires the court to instruct the jury on all matters of law necessary for their information.—People v. Matthai, 135 Cal. 442, 67 Pac. 694.

[a] Failure of court in its instructions to define the meaning of the words "reasonable doubt" is not erroneous, if no specific instruction upon that subject was requested by the defendant.—People v. Flynn, 73 Cal. 511; People v. Christensen, 85 Cal. 568; People v. Ahern, 93 Cal. 518, 15 Pac. 102.

[b] Where the definition of a "reasonable doubt," as given in the charge of the court, has been repeatedly approved, if a defendant wants a more satisfactory one he should ask for it.—People v. Winters, 93 Cal. 277, 28 Pac. 946.

§ 460. Time to Make Request.

[a] Courts have the right to make a rule, in criminal cases that written instructions must be handed to the court before the argument of the case commences.—People v. Sears, 18 Cal. 635.

[b] Where injustice would be done a defendant by refusing to consider instructions because not offered before the argument, as where such instructions may be necessary in consequence of the propositions or argument of the district attorney, the court should either give the instructions asked by defendant, or so explain its own as to put the law correctly before the jury.—People v. Sears, 18 Cal. 635.

[c] A rule of court requiring parties who desire instructions to be given to present them to the court before argument may be proper and beneficial as a general rule, when applied to doubtful and controverted questions of law; but rules of court are only a means to accomplish the ends of justice and may be departed from when the purposes of justice require it; and such general rule should not be allowed to prevent the court from giving an instruction upon request of the counsel of the defendant which is usually given by courts of their own motion, and a refusal to give such instruction is ground for a new trial.—People v. Demasters, 105 Cal. 669, 39 Pac. 35.

[d] The rule of court that instructions requested must be presented before argument does not apply to the instruction that "the testimony of an accomplice is to be viewed with distrust," which Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, declares is to be given on all proper occasions.—People v. Silva, 121 Cal. 668, 54 Pac. 146.

[e] A rule of court that requested instructions must be submitted before argument should be adhered to, if no essential point has been omitted in the instructions given.—People v. Lang, 142 Cal. 482, 76 Pac. 232.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 461. Necessity for Written Request.

[a] Rule of court requiring instructions to be handed up in writing before argument begins is proper, and is designed to give the court an opportunity to determine the correctness and propriety of the instruction, so as to prevent error and promote justice; but when its strict observance would defeat or impede justice, the court may suspend the rule, and it is its duty to do so.—People v. Silva, 121 Cal. 668, 54 Pac. 146.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 662; 14 Cent. Dig., col. 2813, § 2007.

§ 462. Change or Modification of Requested Instruction.

[a] Proper instruction should be given in the very words asked.—People v. Williams, 17 Cal. 142.

[b] A judge, in instructing a jury, is not required to use the very words of the counsel asking the instruction, and if he thinks that, by altering the words without altering the sense, they can be made more intelligible to the jury, he is at liberty to do so.—People v. Dodge, 30 Cal. 448; People v. Cadd, 60 Cal. 640; (1892) People v. Lemperle, 94 Cal. 45, 29 Pac. 709.

[c] Giving a charge requested by accused, with an addition to it, which does not change or modify the sense, but states a further principle germane to the point of the instruction, is not error.—People v. Kelly, 46 Cal. 355.

[d] It is not error for the court, in a criminal case, to give an instruction requested by the defendant, with an addition to it, which does not change or modify the sense, but states a further principle germane to the point of the instruction.—People v. Davis, 47 Cal. 93.

[e] The court, before giving instruction asked by the defendant, may strike therefrom a clause which is irrelevant and not connected with remainder of instruction.—People v. Cotta, 49 Cal. 166.

[f] A trial judge may, of his own motion, give a charge in explanation and modification of those requested, so as to make them conform to his own views of the law.—People v. Hall, 94 Cal. 595, 30 Pac. 7; People v. Sherman, 32 Pac. 879.

[g] On a murder trial, where there is evidence that defendant and others were together when deceased was shot, it is proper to modify an instruction that if the jury find that the evidence points as clearly to the commission of the crime by another as by defendant, and if they entertain a reasonable doubt as to defendant's guilt, they should acquit him, by adding, unless they find that such other person is the guilty party, and that defendant aided and abetted him in committing the crime.—People v. Ah Len, 98 Cal. 133, 32 Pac. 880.

[i] Amendment to instruction requested by defendant, which states law correctly, is not prejudicial to defendant, because appended to such requested instruction.—People v. Barney, 114 Cal. 554, 47 Pac. 41.

[j] Changing an instruction so as to read "a reasonable doubt" instead of "all reasonable doubt" is not assignable as error.—People v. Ashmead, 118 Cal. 508, 50 Pac. 681.

[k] Where the testimony as to the robbery was direct and not circumstantial, a requested instruction that the jury must consider that innocent persons have been convicted, and consider the danger of convicting an innocent person in weighing the testimony to determine whether there is a reasonable doubt, is not improperly modified by adding that they must also consider that guilty persons have been sometimes acquitted, and consider the danger to society of acquitting a guilty person. The instruction and the modification do not constitute propositions of the law, but merely direct the jury to consider matter of common knowledge.—People v. Sternberg, 127 Cal. 511, 59 Pac. 942.

[l] Where defendant, who was charged with murder, pleaded insanity as a defense, it was proper, in a charge respecting the responsibility of insane persons, to insert after the words "insane persons" the words "as 'insanity' is defined in these instructions."—People v. Methever, 132 Cal. 326, 64 Pac. 481.

[m] A charge that an insane person was incapable of committing crime, and that if the jury were satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant, when he killed deceased, was either a lunatic or an insane person, he should be acquitted, was properly modified by eliminating the words, "beyond a reasonable doubt."—People v. Methever, 132 Cal. 326, 64 Pac. 481.

[n] An instruction substantially covering instructions requested by defendant in a rape case that, "if the jury believe that any witness has willfully sworn falsely to any material matter, then it is your duty to scan closely and distrust the entire evidence of such witness," is not objectionable on account of the words "to scan closely."—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[o] Where defendant, in a prosecution for sending a forged telegram, submitted numerous instructions correctly announcing the law therein, none of which were directed to the question of his credibility as a witness, it was error for the court, in giving them, to add repeated modifications that "in this connection" it is the duty of the jury to consider these facts in determining the credibility of defendant as a witness.—People v. Chadwick, 143 Cal. 116, 76 Pac. 884.

[p] Under Penal Code, sections 1093 (6), 1127, a requested instruction modified by the court becomes the court's instruction, and, if erroneous, is subject to the same exception as if given without any request.—People v. Wong Sang Lung (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 843.

[q] Where accused requested that the jury be told that he was entitled to the independent judgment of every juryman, it was proper for the court to modify the instruction so as to read that each side was entitled to the independent judgment, etc.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 463. Refusal of Requests—Duty of Court.

[a] Better practice is for court never to refuse instruction asked on behalf of defendant in a criminal case, to which there is no valid objection, although the jury may have been already fully instructed on the point. A district attorney ought never to object to such instructions.—People v. Lachanais, 32 Cal. 433.

[b] It is better to give an instruction in a criminal case, which in the main states the law correctly, with modifications if required, than to refuse it, although no error may be committed in refusing it.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280.

[a] If instruction be refused for reason that it has already been given, the reason of the refusal should be stated, so as not to mislead the jury.—People v. Hurley, 8 Cal. 390; People v. Ramirez, 13 Cal. 172; People v. Williams, 17 Cal. 142.

[c] Court need not instruct that certain instructions asked by defendant were refused because already given in other instructions.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 11, 52 Pac. 112.

[d] Jury can consider only those instructions which have been given and have no knowledge of those which have been refused.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 11, 52 Pac. 112.

[b] Requested instructions, which are already substantially given and covered by the general charge, or special instructions, are properly refused.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280; People v. Hope, 62 Cal. 291; People v. Turner, 65 Cal. 540, 4 Pac. 553; People v. Righetti, 66 Cal. 184, 4 Pac. 1063; People v. McCoy, 71 Cal. 395, 12 Pac. 272; People v. Rogers, 71 Cal. 565, 12 Pac. 679; People v. Giancoli, 74 Cal. 642, 16 Pac. 510; People v. O'Brien, 78 Cal. 41, 20 Pac. 359; People v. Swalm, 80 Cal. 46, 13 Am. St. Rep. 96, 22 Pac. 67; People v. Ah Jake, 91 Cal. 98, 27 Pac. 595; People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[c] Where the court assumed that the evidence was circumstantial, it was error to refuse to instruct the jury that, in order to convict the defendant, it was necessary, not only that all the circumstances should concur to show that he committed the crime charged, but that they should all be inconsistent with any other rational conclusion, and should exclude to a moral certainty every other hypothesis but the one of guilt, though the general charge comprehended the legal proposition contained in some of the instructions requested and refused, but not in the instructions set forth.—People v. Dick, 32 Cal. 213.

[d] Where an instruction asked has already been given substantially by the court, it is not error to refuse it; but in a criminal case, the better course is to give it.—(1866) People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151; People v. Murray, 41 Cal. 66.

[e] When legal principle has been once announced in the instructions of the court there can be no necessity for its repetition, and there can be no error in refusing to give it in a second instruction.—People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533, 38 Am. Rep. 73.

[f] Requested instructions included in general charge are properly refused.—People v. Wong Ah Foo, 69 Cal. 182, 10 Pac. 375; People v. Phillips, 70 Cal. 69, 11 Pac. 493; People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 10, 13, 52 Pac. 112; People v. Burns, 121 Cal. 529, 53 Pac. 1096; People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404; People v. Shears, 133 Cal. 154, 65 Pac. 295; People v. Fitzgerald, 138 Cal. 39, 70 Pac. 1014; People v. Castile (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 746.

[h] Instructions already given need not be repeated.—People v. Madden, 76 Cal. 522, 18 Pac. 402; People v. Doane, 77 Cal. 562, 20 Pac. 84; People v. Fine, 77 Cal. 149, 19 Pac. 269; People v. O'Brien, 78 Cal. 44, 20 Pac. 359; People v. Swalm, 80 Cal. 51, 13 Am. St. Rep. 96, 22 Pac. 67; People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 235, 24 Pac. 629; People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 11, 43 Pac. 201; People v. Barney, 114 Cal. 554, 47 Pac. 41; O'Brien v. Ballou, 116 Cal. 318, 48 Pac. 130; People v. Elliott, 119 Cal. 593, 51 Pac. 955; People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134, 54 Pac. 596; Clark v. Bennett, 123 Cal. 275, 55 Pac. 908; People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 105, 441, 75 Pac. 676; People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169; People v. Donnolly, 143 Cal. 394, 77 Pac. 177; People v. Moran, 144 Cal. 48, 77 Pac. 777; People v. Eldridge, 147 Cal. 782, 82 Pac. 442; People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100; People v. Fernandez (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 899.

[i] It is proper to refuse instructions requested by the defendant upon the subject of reasonable doubt, upon the ground that they are given elsewhere, if the charge contains all

[j] It is not necessary that the court should repeat instructions in every possible connection in which reference can be made to the degrees of the offense; but it is sufficient if such instruction is once clearly and explicitly given.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[k] It is not error to refuse a proposed instruction upon the law of self-defense, where that law has been adequately set forth in the instructions given.—People v. Roemer, 114 Cal. 51, 45 Pac. 1003.

[n] On trial for perjury, an instruction was given that there must be direct testimony of at least one credible witness, directly contradictory of defendant's oath, and, in addition thereto, there must be testimony of another witness, or corroborating circumstances established by independent evidence, and of such character as to overcome defendant's oath and the presumption of innocence. Another instruction was that the additional evidence must be at least strongly corroborative of the accusing witness. Held, that it was proper to refuse an instruction that there must be something in the corroborative evidence which makes the facts sworn to by defendant not true if the corroborative evidence be true, but if the corroboration does not go to that extent, defendant must be acquitted, since the former instructions were sufficient on corroboration.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[o] Where two instructions as to evidence of defendant's good character were as favorable as defendant could reasonably ask, it was not error to refuse to add a third instruction on that subject, everything stated in it being plainly implied in the other two.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[p] Where, in addition to instructions that the burden of proof was on the prosecution, and that the jury must be entirely satisfied of defendant's guilt before they could convict, an instruction was given that if, on the proof given, there was a reasonable doubt, the accused was entitled to an acquittal, and the evidence must establish the truth of the charge to a reasonable and moral certainty, it was not error to refuse to instruct that a preponderance of evidence would not be sufficient to justify a conviction.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[q] Where an erroneous instruction cautioning the jury against testimony of verbal admissions was given, it was not error to refuse defendant's other requested instructions that the jury view with caution testimony of a witness as to oral admissions by defendant, and also the testimony of another witness as to oral admissions of the beneficiary of the will, between whom and defendant there was alleged to be a conspiracy to defraud the estate, since the subject of such instructions had been treated in the first one, of which defendant could not complain, he having requested it.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[r] Where the rule as to the degree of proof required in criminal cases and the doctrine of reasonable doubt were fully stated and explained in instructions in a prosecution for embezzlement, a requested instruction that the jury had a right to consider that innocent men had been convicted, and the danger of convicting innocent men, was properly refused.—People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472.

[t] Where the court instructed that, if the evidence tended to establish an alibi, to the extent that it raised a reasonable doubt as to defendant's guilt, he should be acquitted, and gave other correct instructions on the subject, the refusal to instruct that, if the jury entertained a reasonable doubt as to the sufficiency of the evidence to establish an alibi, defendant should be acquitted, was not reversible error.—People v. Feliz, 136 Cal. xix, 69 Pac. 220.

[u] It is not error to refuse instructions substantially given in charge of court, or which are not pertinent to evidence in the case, nor to give instructions substantially the same as the provisions of the code, or which are correct statements of the law.—People v. McGlade, 139 Cal. 66, 72 Pac. 600.

[v] Instruction requested by defendant on the subject of reasonable doubt and burden of proof, in the language of Mr. Justice Shaw, in Commonwealth v. Webster, is not materially weakened because the part thereof on the subject of burden of proof is omitted as being elsewhere given and repeated in the charge of the court.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 105, 75 Pac. 676.

[w] Where the court gives that portion of an instruction requested in a prosecution for murder, which declares that the drunkenness of defendant is to be considered in determining the degree of the offense, the fact that it strikes out another portion containing the same proposition is not error.—People v. Ochoa, 142 Cal. 268, 75 Pac. 847.

[x] Where, on a trial for crime, the court charged that the burden of prof was on the prosecution, and that defendant was presumed to be innocent until his guilt was established, and that he was entitled to the benefit of any reasonable doubt, and could not be convicted unless the jury were convinced by the evidence beyond all reasonable doubt, the refusal to charge that the presumption of innocence attached at the commencement of the trial and remained till its close was not prejudicial.—People v. Miles, 143 Cal. 636, 77 Pac. 666.

[y] Where the court instructed the jury that if they could reasonably account for any fact in the case on a theory which would admit of accused's innocence, it was their duty to do so, and that if they had any reasonable doubt of his guilt, to acquit him, it was not error to refuse a charge that the jury might reject any theory on which "the evidence might point to defendant's guilt, even though such theory may be reasonable, and much more probable than the one which admits of his innocence."—People v. Clark, 145 Cal. 727, 79 Pac. 434.

[z] An instruction as to the jury's right to believe witnesses, in accordance with Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, having been given, it was not error for the court, at the request of the state, to further charge that jurors were the exclusive judges of the weight and sufficiency of the evidence.—People v. Davis, 1 Cal. App. 8, 81 Pac. 716, 718.

[aa] In a prosecution for larceny, held not error to refuse a charge that the jury should not consider testimony stricken out.—People v. Roberts (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 624.

[bb] On a trial for murder the refusal to warn the jury against being influenced by public sentiment held not erroneous in view of the charge given and the facts.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

[cc] In a prosecution for homicide, refusal of the court to charge that, unless the evidence was sufficiently strong to overcome the presumption of innocence and satisfy the jury of defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, defendant was entitled to an acquittal was not error.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

[dd] On a trial for assault with intent to murder, a refusal to charge held not erroneous in view of the charge given.—People v. Owens (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 980.

§ 466. —— Requests Wholly or Partly Erroneous, Inapplicable or Misleading.

[a] Strong expressions, and a manifest attempt at coloring favorable to the defendant, in instructions asked by his counsel, in a criminal case, which state the law correctly, may not be regarded as constituting substantial reasons for refusing the instructions.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280.

[c] If any part of a single instruction ought not to be given, the action of the trial court in rejecting the whole will always be affirmed. People v. Davis, 64 Cal. 440, 1 Pac. 889.

[d] Instruction quoted in the opinion held properly refused on ground that it was calculated to mislead the jury.—People v. Gonzales, 71 Cal. 569, 12 Pac. 783.

[e] Instruction to effect that flight is not inference of guilt, and that timid persons, although innocent, might seek safety thereby, held properly refused.—People v. Giancoli, 74 Cal. 642, 16 Pac. 510.

[g] Instructions inapplicable to any facts in evidence are properly refused.—People v. Buelna, 81 Cal. 140, 22 Pac. 596.

[h] Instruction confining jury to only one theory of case and compelling them to disregard all other facts in evidence is properly refused.—People v. Buelna, 81 Cal. 140, 22 Pac. 596.

[i] Instruction on weight to be attached to evidence is properly refused.—People v. Cline, 87 Cal. 379.

[j] Where an instruction asked for by a defendant in a criminal proceeding, and refused by the court, is so broad in its terms as to be misleading, if not positively erroneous, and so far as correct is given with the necessary qualifications in another instruction allowed by the court, no error is committed in the refusal to give it as asked.—People v. Walters, 98 Cal. 138, 32 Pac. 864.

[k] It is not erroneous to refuse instructions upon subjects unwarranted by testimony.—People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[l] An instruction asked, containing the words, "that the evidence against defendant is purely and wholly circumstantial," when in fact it is not, is properly denied.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[m] Where charge as given to jury fairly covers law bearing upon case, refusal of very numerous instructions asked for by the defendant is not erroneous.—People v. Johnson, 106 Cal. 289, 39 Pac. 622.

[n] Portions of instructions calculated to confuse jury are properly stricken out.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 29, 50 Pac. 15.

[o] Argumentative instruction as to identity of defendant, based upon facts, and not containing any proposition of law, is properly refused.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067.

[p] An instruction requested for the defendant which, so far as correct, consists of commonplace matters well known to the jury, and which contains an incomplete statement of the manner by which the defendant may be impeached, and an incorrect presumption of law as to the good character of the defendant as a witness, in the absence of one kind of impeaching testimony, is properly refused. People v. Gleason, 127 Cal. 323, 59 Pac. 592.

[r] Instructions having no application to facts of the case are properly disallowed.—People v. Brown, 130 Cal. 591, 62 Pac. 1072.

[s] Where, upon affidavit of defendant for continuance, it was admitted that witness whose evidence was desired would, if present, testify to facts set out in affidavit, instruction requested by defendant that testimony of such witness was conceded and admitted to be true by prosecution, was properly rejected, no such concession having been made by prosecution.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[t] Requested proper instructions, which are coupled with improper instructions, so as to constitute a presumed whole, may be properly refused as a whole.—People v. Davis, 135 Cal. 162, 67 Pac. 59.

[u] Upon trial of information for embezzlement, where evidence, without conflict, showed that crime committed was embezzlement, and nothing else, requested instructions as to the crime of larceny were properly refused.—People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 462, 71 Pac. 566.

[v] Requested instruction involving a matter of fact was properly refused, though it might have been harmless if given. Where the jury were properly instructed as to the elements of each offense included in the crime charged, if the defendant desired a more elaborate definition of malice given to the jury, he should have requested a special instruction upon that subject.—People v. Glaze, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

[w] Requested instruction which embodies only proper matter of argument by defendant's counsel to jury, was properly refused. People v. Lonnen, 139 Cal. 634, 73 Pac. 586.

[x] In a prosecution for robbery, a requested instruction, without evidence to support it, was properly refused.—People v. Stevens, 141 Cal. 488, 75 Pac. 62.

[dd] Requested instructions which are unnecessary, argumentative, or an invasion of the province of the jury, or which are included fully in the charge of the court, are properly refused.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 105, 75 Pac. 676.

[ff] In a prosecution for homicide, an instruction that the evidence of certain named witnesses had been stricken, and therefore must not be considered, held properly refused. People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

[a] That an instruction is indorsed by the court "Given as modified" does not show that part of it was refused, so as to require the court, as provided by Penal Code, section 1127, in such case, to make an indorsement showing part given and part refused, as modification may have consisted in something added by court by way of correction or otherwise.—People v. Owens, 123 Cal. 482, 56 Pac. 251.

[b] Pending the trial, and while the jury was in his charge, the sheriff conducted the jurymen to public saloons, and furnished them with liquor at his own expense. A reward had been offered for the conviction of the defendants, which the sheriff hoped to obtain. Held, that the conduct of the sheriff was a sufficient irregularity to warrant a new trial. [c] Under the facts juror held not to have acted improperly in conversation with clerk and prosecuting attorney.—People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 581, 10 Pac. 212.

[d] Conversation between jurymen in the jury-box is not of itself misconduct, and unless it be shown to have improper reference to the evidence or merits of the case, and be prejudicial to defendant, it will not work a reversal.—People v. Kramer, 117 Cal. 647, 49 Pac. 842.

[e] After a juror had asked another to take a drink while in a hotel, the sheriff asked all the jurors to take a drink; and some of them took about two tablespoonfuls of whisky, some took cigars, and one took mineral water. No one was affected in any way by what he drank. Held, the verdict should not be set aside.—People v. Van Horn, 119 Cal. 323, 51 Pac. 538.

[g] Upon review of the facts appearing in counter-affidavits, showing the incorrectness of a charge made in the defendant's affidavit on motion for a new trial, that the juror had visited the county jail without permission of the court, in reference to points contained in the testimony in regard to the treatment of the defendant in the jail—held, that a case of misconduct of the juror was not made out. People v. Fitzgerald, 138 Cal. 39, 70 Pac. 1014.

a new trial should be granted for misconduct of jurors in investigating the case out of the courtroom, where it appears by uncontradicted affidavits that two of the jurors experimented with a rifle out of court for the purpose of ascertaining at what distance powder marks upon clothing would be carried by the firing of the rifle.—People v. Conkling, 111 Cal. 616, 44 Pac. 314.

[a] Reading by jury while deliberating upon their verdict of copy of writing which had been introduced in evidence, but which they did not take with them when retiring for deliberation, is the reception of evidence out of court, within the meaning of section 1181 of the Penal Code.—People v. [b] Court should see to it, by contempt proceedings, if necessary, that no newspaper articles tending to prejudice defendant's cause reach jury.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 353, 19 Pac. 161.

[c] Consent of counsel for defendant, in presence of defendant, that certain articles be taken to jury-room waives all objection.—People v. Mahoney, 77 Cal. 531, 20 Pac. 73.

[a] It is not a disobedience of the admonition of the court not to talk about the merits of the case, for a juror to state, at the conclusion of the charge of the court, that there is a misunderstanding among the jury as to the testimony of a witness, and ask to have stated what the testimony was.—People v. West, 73 Cal. 345, 14 Pac. 848.

[a] Juror has no right to separate from others without permission of the court, even though defendant's counsel consented to it. People v. Backus, 5 Cal. 275.

[ab] Fact that jury occupied separate rooms in hotel is not separation.—People v. Bush, 68 Cal. 627, 628, 10 Pac. 169.

[c] After the jury have retired to deliberate upon their verdict, they must be kept together; and the court has no power to permit their separation, nor can the consent of the defendant or his counsel operate to empower or excuse the court in violating the express provisions of the statute; but such separation is not ground for a motion to discharge the defendant, though it is of itself, and without any showing of improper conduct on the part of the jury or any of them, during their separation, a sufficient ground for granting a new trial.—People v. Hawley, 111 Cal. 78, 43 Pac. 404.

[f] It was not error, in the trial of a criminal case, to permit the jurors to separate on adjourment from day to day, after having been admonished, as provided by Penal Code, section 1122, as such action is discretionary. People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652, 49 Pac. 1049.

[h] Where, after a criminal case had been submitted to a jury, which was in charge of a bailiff directed to keep them together until they had agreed or been discharged, the bailiff divided the jurors into three groups at night, and put them into three rooms, each on a different floor or story of the hotel, where they were kept locked up for eight or nine hours, such acts constituted a separation of the jury, prohibited by Penal Code, sections 1128, 1135, 1136, which vitiated their verdict. People v. Adams, 143 Cal. 208, 76 Pac. 954, 66 L. R. A. 247.

[i] Where, on a trial for homicide, the court had exercised the discretion conferred by Penal Code, section 1121, by ordering the jury to remain in the custody of the sheriff during the trial, it was error to permit the jurors to separate during the progress of the trial.—People v. Maughs (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 187.

§ 477. Instructions After Submission of Case.

[a] Under code, section 362, as amended in 1855, it is error orally to instruct a jury, returned after retirement, in the absence of the phonographic reporter, without consent of the counsel.—People v. Hersey, 53 Cal. 574.

[b] After the jury had retired, they returned and inquired what was the least punishment for the offense charged. The court instructed them orally that they had nothing to do with the matter, but informed them of the penalty. Held, that the instruction was immaterial, and that it was of no consequence that it was not in writing.—People v. Jackson, 57 Cal. 316.

[c] A court may cause the jury to be returned for further instructions, though the jury has not requested them.—People v. Perry, 65 Cal. 568, 4 Pac. 572; People v. Righetti, 66 Cal. 184, 4 Pac. 1063.

[d] It is not error to recall jury, and to give instruction in absence of defendant's counsel, where they cannot be found after search, if defendant himself is present, and court directs an exception in his behalf.—People v. Mayes, 113 Cal. 618, 45 Pac. 860.

[e] Upon a request by jury for further instructions, it is immaterial whether court confined itself to the points upon which information was asked or not, provided the language used, though not the best that could have been used, was not such that the jury could have been misled.—People v. McKay, 122 Cal. 628, 55 Pac. 594.

[f] It was error for the court, after having instructed the jury, and having given them two forms of verdict, "Guilty, as charged," and "Not guilty," and, on their return to the courtroom after deliberating, having reiterated the same instructions, to give them a further instruction on a subsequent return to the courtroom, after over twenty-four hours' deliberations, and after the opinions of the jurors were fully disclosed, and they had announced that they could not reach a verdict under the instructions as they then stood, to give them, for the first time, an instruction and form of verdict authorizing a conviction of attempt to commit the crime.—People v. Stouter, 142 Cal. 146, 75 Pac. 780.

§ 478. Restating Testimony After Submission.

[a] The statute (Wood's Digest, 301, article 1655) authorizes the judge, on the trial of a criminal case, at the request of the jury on their return into court, to state to them the testimony of a witness.—People v. Ybarra, 17 Cal. 166.

[b] It is not error for the court to give information asked, by reading a memorandum taken by another person, instead of reading its own minutes or relying upon its own memory.—People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

[c] The jury, after being out several hours, asked to have read the testimony of a witness. It was found that this would take several hours, and owing to the lateness of the hour the court, without objection or exception, announced an adjournment until the next day, when the testimony was to be read, but just before the time set therefor the jury announced an agreement. Held, that their verdict was thereupon properly received, without the reading of such testimony.—People v. Warren, 130 Cal. 678, 63 Pac. 87.

[d] Conduct of trial judge in not compelling the jury on their return after retiring to hear all the testimony of defendant, held not error. People v. Smith (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 449.

§ 479. Urging Agreement.

[a] Remarks of the court to jury, on sending them out for further consideration of the case after they had returned into court and the foreman had informed the court that he did not think that an agreement was possible, and other jurors had stated that there might be a change, to the effect that if there was a mistrial a great expense would be incurred because of a retrial, and if the jury thought there would be an agreement and thus save the expense of a retrial they should again retire, and that they must arrive at a verdict solely from the evidence and the instructions, did not constitute prejudicial error.—People v. Miles, 143 Cal. 636, 77 Pac. 666.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 480. Discharge of Jury.

[a] After the impaneling of the jury and commencement of a trial, it was an abuse of discretion to discharge the jury for sixty-three days, on motion of the state, because one of its witnesses was unable to attend, where the nature of the offense charged was likely to create prejudice against the defendant in the community from which they were drawn.—People v. Dinsmore, 102 Cal. 381, 36 Pac. 661.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Discharge of jury without a verdict: 1 Am. Dec. 176, note.

§ 481. —— For Failure to Agree.

[a] A prisoner confined on a criminal charge is not entitled to his discharge on habeas corpus because a jury impaneled to try him was discharged by the court, without his consent, by reason of its inability to agree on a verdict.—McLaughlin, Ex parte, 41 Cal. 211, 10 Am. Rep. 272.

[b] Inability of jury to agree after a reasonable time for deliberation, and close of term, are sufficient grounds for discharge.—People v. Cage, 48 Cal. 323, 17 Am. Rep. 436.

[c] Discretion of court in discharge of jury because of their inability to agree must be exercised upon some kind of evidence, and the judgment of the court on the point should be expressed in some form upon the record; and a discharge of a jury, in a criminal case, in the absence of defendant, upon an oral report made by the sheriff to the court that the jury say that they are unable to agree, and without the court requiring the jury to come before him, is an irregular exercise of his discretion, and is equivalent to an acquittal.—People v. Cage, 48 Cal. 323, 17 Am. Rep. 436.

[d] Inability of jury to agree upon a verdict is one of those necessities that will anthorize the court to discharge the jury, and thereby subject the defendant to a second trial.—People v. Smalling, 94 Cal. 112, 29 Pac. 421.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 482. —— For Rendering Void Verdict.

[a] Where verdict is void, jury should not be discharged but should be sent out for further deliberation.—People v. Curtis, 76 Cal. 59, 17 Pac. 941.

[a] Mere fact that juror visited premises during trial is not ground for discharging jury.—People v. Hope, 62 Cal. 291.

[b] Jury may be discharged from further service for purposely disregarding evidence and returning verdict in violation of sworn duty.—People v. Murray, 85 Cal. 355, 24 Pac. 666.

[a] A jury may be constitutionally discharged on a legal holiday.—People v. Soto, 65 Cal. 621, 4 Pac. 664.

§ 485. Form and Sufficiency in General.

[a] A strict adherence to the terms of the form of verdict given by the Penal Code is not required. An informal verdict, in a criminal case, is sufficient, if it can be clearly understood as being a general verdict of guilty or not guilty.—People v. McCarty, 48 Cal. 557.

[b] A verdict "that the jury do find the defendant guilty of the indictment as charged to him" is invalid, since the words are meaningless.—People v. Ah Gow, 53 Cal. 627.

[c] A verdict finding the defendant "guilty as he stands charged in the indictment" is sufficient.—People v. De Cleer, 60 Cal. 382.

[d] A verdict in a criminal case must contain, either in itself or by reference to the indictment, every element of the crime.—People v. Cummings, 117 Cal. 497, 49 Pac. 576.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 486. General or Special Verdict.

[a] In criminal cases, jury may render a general or special verdict, except upon an indictment for libel, when it must be general.—People v. Antonio, 27 Cal. 404.

[b] Under Criminal Practice Act, section 417, providing that the jury may render either a special or general verdict, accused cannot demand a special verdict.—People v. Antonio, 27 Cal. 404.

[c] In a prosecution for burglary committed in another county from that where the venue is laid, a verdict is not defective, as being both general and special, because it contains the unnecessary statement that the goods stolen were taken by the defendant into the county where the venue is laid.—People v. Jochinsky, 106 Cal. 638, 39 Pac. 1077.

§ 487. Conformity to Indictment.

[a] When offense is statutory, verdict of conviction must be of very crime charged.—People v. Keefer, 18 Cal. 637.

[a] Surplusage in general verdict of guilty is not prejudicial to defendant, and is not ground for reversal of judgment of conviction.—People v. Jochinsky, 106 Cal. 638, 39 Pac. 1077.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 489. Misnomer of Accused.

[a] Where a verdict finds the defendant guilty, the fact that it inserts his name after the word "defendant," and inserts the wrong middle initial, is immaterial, since finding the "defendant" guilty is sufficient, and the name is merely surplusage.—People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

[b] Where the jury found a verdict that, "in the case of the People of California v. Ty Chin, a Chinaman, do find the said Ty Chin, a Chinaman, guilty," when the defendant was indicted by the name of John Doe, and gave his name as Ah Ye, and no objection was made to the form of the verdict at the time by the court or district attorney, the verdict was held to be a finding that

[c] Fact that jury, in prefixing to their verdict the title of the case, make a mistake in the name of the defendant, does not invalidate the judgment.—People v. Ah Kim, 34 Cal. 189.

§ 490. Verdict Against Codefendants.

[a] Where defendant pleaded former conviction or acquittal, as well as not guilty, verdict must expressly find whether special plea is true or not.—People v. Kinsey, 51 Cal. 278; People v. Helbing, 59 Cal. 567; People v. Fuqua, 61 Cal. 377; (1888) People v. O'Leary, 16 Pac. 884.

[b] If there is a plea of not guilty and also a plea of former conviction or acquittal, the defendant is entitled to a verdict on each plea. If there is a verdict of guilty alone there can be no judgment of conviction.—People v. Kinsey, 51 Cal. 278; People v. Fuqua, 61 Cal. 377.

[c] Issue on plea of former jeopardy must be specially passed on in addition to general finding on plea of not guilty.—People v. Hamberg, 84 Cal. 473, 24 Pac. 298.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 492. Specification of Offense Found.

[a] On a trial for assault with intent to commit murder, a verdict of the jury finding the defendant "guilty of an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to inflict a bodily injury," is sufficient to sustain a judgment subjecting the accused to confinement in the state prison.—People v. English, 30 Cal. 214.

[b] Verdict must specify the offense found. Verdict of "guilty of the indictment" is insufficient.—People v. Ah Gow, 53 Cal. 627.

[c] Under Penal Code, section 1151, providing that a general verdict on a plea of not guilty is either "guilty" or "not guilty," which imports a conviction or acquittal of the offense charged in the indictment, the designation of the offense in a general verdict is mere surplusage, and a verdict finding defendant guilty of "burgularly" is valid.—People v. Brady, 133 Cal. xx, 65 Pac. 823.

[a] If conviction is for any lesser offense than that charged, but included therein, it must be specified in the verdict.—People v. March, 6 Cal. 543.

[b] Where the offense consists of different degrees, a verdict of guilty must state the degree of which accused is convicted.—People v. Marquis, 15 Cal. 38; People v. Coch, 53 Cal. 627.

[c] Where an indictment charges only the lowest degree of crime, as defined by the Penal Code, it is unnecessary for the jury, in their verdict, to specify the degree of the crime of which the accused is found guilty.—People v. Fisher, 51 Cal. 319.

[d] In criminal case where indictment charges an offense that includes an offense of less degree, and the jury returns a verdict of "guilty as charged in the indictment," the verdict is so uncertain that judgment cannot be passed, and the record of the trial is not evidence of jeopardy upon a new trial under the same indictment.—People v. Baza, 53 Cal. 690.

[f] Where there are no degrees to offense charged, verdict of guilty as charged is sufficient.—People v. Perez, 87 Cal. 123, 25 Pac. 262.

[g] If the verdict is required to specify the degree of the crime, a verdict omitting to specify the degree is invalid, though it assess a punishment prescribed for a certain degree.—People v. Le Yune Chong, 94 Cal. 379, 29 Pac. 776.

[h] Under Penal Code, section 1157, providing that, whenever a crime is distinguished into degrees, the jury, if they convict, must find the degree of which defendant is guilty, the jury are not excused from finding the degree by the fact that the court instructed that, if the jury found defendant guilty, it could be for the lower degree.—(1893) People v. Bannister, 34 Pac. 710; (1894) People v. Cornwell, 35 Pac. 566.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 494. Specification of Place of Commission of Crime.

[a] Under an indictment charging an offense in a certain county, a general verdict of guilty is sufficiently responsive without specifying the county in which the offense was committed.—People v. Jochinsky, 106 Cal. 638, 39 Pac. 1077.

§ 495. Recommendation to Mercy.

[a] A recommendation to mercy, accompanying a verdict of guilty, is addressed to the discretion of the court, and an order to record the verdict without it is proper.—People v. Lee, 17 Cal. 76.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 697; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2931, 2932, § 2108.

§ 496. Rendition and Reception.

not prejudice a defendant if jury were all present and had agreed.—People v. Rodundo, 44 Cal. 538.

[b] Order of court, made by consent of accused, authorizing the sheriff to receive from the jury a sealed verdict, and on its receipt to allow the jury to separate until the session of court on the following morning, is not an error of which accused can complain.—People v. Kelly, 46 Cal. 355.

[c] On a prosecution for burglary it was not error to leave it to the jury to formulate their own verdict on blank forms furnished, stating the degree of guilt of the defendants, if either of them were guilty, and that, if the jury needed further instruction as to framing a verdict, it should return to the courtroom for such instruction.—People v. Brady, 133 Cal. xx, 65 Pac. 823.

[a] If verdict is defective in form, court may require it to be amended by jury before receiving it.—People v. Dick, 34 Cal. 663; (1880) People v. Jenkins, 56 Cal. 4.

[b] It is the duty of a court to look after the form and substance of a verdict, so as to prevent a doubtful or insufficient finding from passing into the records of the court, and for that purpose the court can, at any time while the jury is before it, and under its control, see that the verdict is amended in form so as to meet the requirements of the law.—People v. Jenkins, 56 Cal. 4.

[c] After a jury have returned their verdict, been discharged, and separated, they cannot be recalled to alter or amend it.—People v. Lee Yune Chong, 94 Cal. 379, 29 Pac. 776.

[d] Where the jury has returned a defective verdict, and the court accepts it, he has no power subsequently to direct the jury to amend it by assessing the degree of the crime. People v. Lee Yune Chong, 94 Cal. 379, 29 Pac. 776.

§ 498. Setting Aside.

[a] If, through misdirection of judge in matter of law, a verdict is improperly rendered, it can never afterward, on application of the prosecution in any form of proceeding, be set aside.—People v. Terrill, 132 Cal. 497, 64 Pac. 894.

[a] Fact that verdict is not transcribed in the minute-book until after jury have been discharged does not render it invalid, where it was transcribed on a sheet of paper and read to and acknowledged by the jury.—People v. Smith, 59 Cal. 601.

[b] Recording verdict before it is read, when defendant requests that it first be read, is an irregularity.—People v. Nichols, 62 Cal. 518.

[c] Court handed the jury forms of verdicts as to the pleas of former acquittal, former conviction, and once in jeopardy, and instructed them to find for the people thereon. Upon the return of the jury the foreman declared the verdict to be guilty of murder. The clerk read the verdict to the jury as recorded, and asked them if that was their verdict, and they all responded, "Yes." The foreman also handed to the court their verdicts on the three special pleas. The court then, in the presence of the jury, stated that these verdicts were in favor of the people, and asked the counsel for the defendant whether they insisted upon having them then entered by the clerk before the jury were discharged, and read to them, and have them declared whether they were their verdicts. The counsel for the defendant having waived the then recording of these verdicts the jury were discharged, and the verdicts were recorded afterward. Held, that the requirements of sections 1149 and 1164 of the Penal Code, as to the manner of declaring and recording the verdicts, had not been complied with, but that the irregularity was without prejudice.—People v. Smalling, 94 Cal. 112, 29 Pac. 421.

§ 500. Construction and Operation.

[a] Where a defendant was indicted for an assault with intent to commit murder, and the jury found a verdict of guilty of an "assault with intent to do bodily injury," the verdict only found the prisoner guilty of an assault and not of a felony.—People v. Vanard, 6 Cal. 562.

[b] A verdict, on an indictment for an assault with intent to commit murder, finding "the defendant guilty of an assault to do great bodily injury," is a verdict for a misdemeanor merely, and does not warrant an imprisonment in the state prison.—Max, Ex parte, 44 Cal. 579.

[c] Verdict finding defendants guilty of involuntary manslaughter, "not a felony," is sufficient to sustain a conviction for manslaughter, although that is a felony.—People v. Holmes, 118 Cal. 444, 50 Pac. 675.

[d] Where one accused of manslaughter pleads not guilty, and also "once in jeopardy," and the jury find against him on the latter plea, and disagree on the former, he is not entitled to have his plea of "once in jeopardy" submitted to the jury at his second trial.—People v. Smith, 121 Cal. 355, 53 Pac. 802.

[a] Better practice is for court never to refuse instruction asked on behalf of defendant in a criminal case, to which there is no valid objection, although the jury may have been already fully instructed on the point. A district attorney ought never to object to such instructions.—People v. Lachanais, 32 Cal. 433.

[b] It is better to give an instruction in a criminal case, which in the main states the law correctly, with modifications if required, than to refuse it, although no error may be committed in refusing it.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 666; 14 Cent. Dig., cols. 2831-2833, §§ 2017, 2018.

[a] If instruction be refused for reason that it has already been given, the reason of the refusal should be stated, so as not to mislead the jury.—People v. Hurley, 8 Cal. 390; People v. Ramirez, 13 Cal. 172; People v. Williams, 17 Cal. 142.

[c] Court need not instruct that certain instructions asked by defendant were refused because already given in other instructions.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 11, 52 Pac. 112.

[d] Jury can consider only those instructions which have been given and have no knowledge of those which have been refused.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 11, 52 Pac. 112.

[b] Requested instructions, which are already substantially given and covered by the general charge, or special instructions, are properly refused.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280; People v. Hope, 62 Cal. 291; People v. Turner, 65 Cal. 540, 4 Pac. 553; People v. Righetti, 66 Cal. 184, 4 Pac. 1063; People v. McCoy, 71 Cal. 395, 12 Pac. 272; People v. Rogers, 71 Cal. 565, 12 Pac. 679; People v. Giancoli, 74 Cal. 642, 16 Pac. 510; People v. O'Brien, 78 Cal. 41, 20 Pac. 359; People v. Swalm, 80 Cal. 46, 13 Am. St. Rep. 96, 22 Pac. 67; People v. Ah Jake, 91 Cal. 98, 27 Pac. 595; People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[c] Where the court assumed that the evidence was circumstantial, it was error to refuse to instruct the jury that, in order to convict the defendant, it was necessary, not only that all the circumstances should concur to show that he committed the crime charged, but that they should all be inconsistent with any other rational conclusion, and should exclude to a moral certainty every other hypothesis but the one of guilt, though the general charge comprehended the legal proposition contained in some of the instructions requested and refused, but not in the instructions set forth.—People v. Dick, 32 Cal. 213.

[d] Where an instruction asked has already been given substantially by the court, it is not error to refuse it; but in a criminal case, the better course is to give it.—(1866) People v. Strong, 30 Cal. 151; People v. Murray, 41 Cal. 66.

[e] When legal principle has been once announced in the instructions of the court there can be no necessity for its repetition, and there can be no error in refusing to give it in a second instruction.—People v. Ramirez, 56 Cal. 533, 38 Am. Rep. 73.

[f] Requested instructions included in general charge are properly refused.—People v. Wong Ah Foo, 69 Cal. 182, 10 Pac. 375; People v. Phillips, 70 Cal. 69, 11 Pac. 493; People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 10, 13, 52 Pac. 112; People v. Burns, 121 Cal. 529, 53 Pac. 1096; People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404; People v. Shears, 133 Cal. 154, 65 Pac. 295; People v. Fitzgerald, 138 Cal. 39, 70 Pac. 1014; People v. Castile (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 746.

[h] Instructions already given need not be repeated.—People v. Madden, 76 Cal. 522, 18 Pac. 402; People v. Doane, 77 Cal. 562, 20 Pac. 84; People v. Fine, 77 Cal. 149, 19 Pac. 269; People v. O'Brien, 78 Cal. 44, 20 Pac. 359; People v. Swalm, 80 Cal. 51, 13 Am. St. Rep. 96, 22 Pac. 67; People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 235, 24 Pac. 629; People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 11, 43 Pac. 201; People v. [i] It is proper to refuse instructions requested by the defendant upon the subject of reasonable doubt, upon the ground that they are given elsewhere, if the charge contains all

[j] It is not necessary that the court should repeat instructions in every possible connection in which reference can be made to the degrees of the offense; but it is sufficient if such instruction is once clearly and explicitly given.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[k] It is not error to refuse a proposed instruction upon the law of self-defense, where that law has been adequately set forth in the instructions given.—People v. Roemer, 114 Cal. 51, 45 Pac. 1003.

[n] On trial for perjury, an instruction was given that there must be direct testimony of at least one credible witness, directly contradictory of defendant's oath, and, in addition thereto, there must be testimony of another witness, or corroborating circumstances established by independent evidence, and of such character as to overcome defendant's oath and the presumption of innocence. Another instruction was that the additional evidence must be at least strongly corroborative of the accusing witness. Held, that it was proper to refuse an instruction that there must be something in the corroborative evidence which makes the facts sworn to by defendant not true if the corroborative evidence be true, but if the corroboration does not go to that extent, defendant must be acquitted, since the former instructions were sufficient on corroboration.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[o] Where two instructions as to evidence of defendant's good character were as favorable as defendant could reasonably ask, it was not error to refuse to add a third instruction on that subject, everything stated in it being plainly implied in the other two.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[p] Where, in addition to instructions that the burden of proof was on the prosecution, and that the jury must be entirely satisfied of defendant's guilt before they could convict, an instruction was given that if, on the proof given, there was a reasonable doubt, the accused was entitled to an acquittal, and the evidence must establish the truth of the charge to a reasonable and moral certainty, it was not error to refuse to instruct that a preponderance of evidence would not be sufficient to justify a conviction.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[q] Where an erroneous instruction cautioning the jury against testimony of verbal admissions was given, it was not error to refuse defendant's other requested instructions that the jury view with caution testimony of a witness as to oral admissions by defendant, and also the testimony of another witness as to oral admissions of the beneficiary of the will, between whom and defendant there was alleged to be a conspiracy to defraud the estate, since the subject of such instructions had been treated in the first one, of which defendant could not complain, he having requested it.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[r] Where the rule as to the degree of proof required in criminal cases and the doctrine of reasonable doubt were fully stated and explained in instructions in a prosecution for embezzlement, a requested instruction that the jury had a right to consider that innocent men had been convicted, and the danger of convicting innocent men, was properly refused.—People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472.

[s] Defendant cannot complain of instruction which is in substance the same as those requested by him and rejected by court.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[t] Where the court instructed that, if the evidence tended to establish an alibi, to the extent that it raised a reasonable doubt as to defendant's guilt, he should be acquitted, and gave other correct instructions on the subject, the refusal to instruct that, if the jury entertained a reasonable doubt as to the sufficiency of the evidence to establish an alibi, defendant should be acquitted, was not reversible error.—People v. Feliz, 136 Cal. xix, 69 Pac. 220.

[u] It is not error to refuse instructions substantially given in charge of court, or which are not pertinent to evidence in the case, nor to give instructions substantially the same as the provisions of the code, or which are correct statements of the law.—People v. McGlade, 139 Cal. 66, 72 Pac. 600.

[v] Instruction requested by defendant on the subject of reasonable doubt and burden of proof, in the language of Mr. Justice Shaw, in Commonwealth v. Webster, is not materially weakened because the part thereof on the subject of burden of proof is omitted as being elsewhere given and repeated in the charge of the court.—People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 105, 75 Pac. 676.

[w] Where the court gives that portion of an instruction requested in a prosecution for murder, which declares that the drunkenness of defendant is to be considered in determining the degree of the offense, the fact that it strikes out another portion containing the same proposition is not error.—People v. Ochoa, 142 Cal. 268, 75 Pac. 847.

[x] Where, on a trial for crime, the court charged that the burden of prof was on the prosecution, and that defendant was presumed to be innocent until his guilt was established, and that he was entitled to the benefit of any reasonable doubt, and could not be convicted unless the jury were convinced by the evidence beyond all reasonable doubt, the refusal to charge that the presumption of innocence attached at the commencement of the trial and remained till its close was not prejudicial.—People v. Miles, 143 Cal. 636, 77 Pac. 666.

[y] Where the court instructed the jury that if they could reasonably account for any fact in the case on a theory which would admit of accused's innocence, it was their duty to do so, and that if they had any reasonable doubt of his guilt, to acquit him, it was not error to refuse a charge that the jury might reject any theory on which "the evidence might point to defendant's guilt, even though such theory may be reasonable, and much more probable than the one which admits of his innocence."—People v. Clark, 145 Cal. 727, 79 Pac. 434.

[z] An instruction as to the jury's right to believe witnesses, in accordance with Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, having been given, it was not error for the court, at the request of the state, to further charge that jurors were the exclusive judges of the weight and sufficiency of the evidence.—People v. Davis, 1 Cal. App. 8, 81 Pac. 716, 718.

[aa] In a prosecution for larceny, held not error to refuse a charge that the jury should not consider testimony stricken out.—People v. Roberts (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 624.

[bb] On a trial for murder the refusal to warn the jury against being influenced by public sentiment held not erroneous in view of the charge given and the facts.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

[cc] In a prosecution for homicide, refusal of the court to charge that, unless the evidence was sufficiently strong to overcome the presumption of innocence and satisfy the jury of defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, defendant was entitled to an acquittal was not error.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

[dd] On a trial for assault with intent to murder, a refusal to charge held not erroneous in view of the charge given.—People v. Owens (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 980.

§ 466. —— Requests Wholly or Partly Erroneous, Inapplicable or Misleading.

[a] Strong expressions, and a manifest attempt at coloring favorable to the defendant, in instructions asked by his counsel, in a criminal case, which state the law correctly, may not be regarded as constituting substantial reasons for refusing the instructions.—People v. Williams, 32 Cal. 280.

[c] If any part of a single instruction ought not to be given, the action of the trial court in rejecting the whole will always be affirmed. People v. Davis, 64 Cal. 440, 1 Pac. 889.

[d] Instruction quoted in the opinion held properly refused on ground that it was calculated to mislead the jury.—People v. Gonzales, 71 Cal. 569, 12 Pac. 783.

[e] Instruction to effect that flight is not inference of guilt, and that timid persons, although innocent, might seek safety thereby, held properly refused.—People v. Giaccoli, 74 Cal. 642, 16 Pac. 510.

[g] Instructions inapplicable to any facts in evidence are properly refused.—People v. Buelna, 81 Cal. 140, 22 Pac. 596.

[h] Instruction confining jury to only one theory of case and compelling them to disregard all other facts in evidence is properly refused.—People v. Buelna, 81 Cal. 140, 22 Pac. 596.

[i] Instruction on weight to be attached to evidence is properly refused.—People v. Cline, 87 Cal. 379.

[j] Where an instruction asked for by a defendant in a criminal proceeding, and refused by the court, is so broad in its terms as to be misleading, if not positively erroneous, and so far as correct is given with the necessary qualifications in another instruction allowed by the court, no error is committed in the refusal to give it as asked.—People v. Walters, 98 Cal. 138, 32 Pac. 864.

[k] It is not erroneous to refuse instructions upon subjects unwarranted by testimony.—People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791.

[l] An instruction asked, containing the words, "that the evidence against defendant is purely and wholly circumstantial," when in fact it is not, is properly denied.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

[m] Where charge as given to jury fairly covers law bearing upon case, refusal of very numerous instructions asked for by the defendant is not erroneous.—People v. Johnson, 106 Cal. 289, 39 Pac. 622.

[n] Portions of instructions calculated to confuse jury are properly stricken out.—People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 29, 50 Pac. 15.

[o] Argumentative instruction as to identity of defendant, based upon facts, and not containing any proposition of law, is properly refused.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067.

[p] An instruction requested for the defendant which, so far as correct, consists of commonplace matters well known to the jury, and which contains an incomplete statement of the manner by which the defendant may be impeached, and an incorrect presumption of law as to the good character of the defendant as a witness, in the absence of one kind of impeaching testimony, is properly refused. People v. Gleason, 127 Cal. 323, 59 Pac. 592.

[s] Where, upon affidavit of defendant for continuance, it was admitted that witness whose evidence was desired would, if present, testify to facts set out in affidavit, instruction requested by defendant that testimony of such witness was conceded and admitted to be true by prosecution, was properly rejected, no such concession having been made by prosecution.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[t] Requested proper instructions, which are coupled with improper instructions, so as to constitute a presumed whole, may be properly refused as a whole.—People v. Davis, 135 Cal. 162, 67 Pac. 59.

[v] Requested instruction involving a matter of fact was properly refused, though it might have been harmless if given. Where the jury were properly instructed as to the elements of each offense included in the crime charged, if the defendant desired a more elaborate definition of malice given to the jury, he should have requested a special instruction upon that subject.—People v. Glaze, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

[w] Requested instruction which embodies only proper matter of argument by defendant's counsel to jury, was properly refused. People v. Lonnen, 139 Cal. 634, 73 Pac. 586.

[x] In a prosecution for robbery, a requested instruction, without evidence to support it, was properly refused.—People v. Stevens, 141 Cal. 488, 75 Pac. 62.

§ 467. Noting Disposition of Request.

[a] That an instruction is indorsed by the court "Given as modified" does not show that part of it was refused, so as to require the court, as provided by Penal Code, section 1127, in such case, to make an indorsement showing part given and part refused, as modification may have consisted in something added by court by way of correction or otherwise.—People v. Owens, 123 Cal. 482, 56 Pac. 251.

and public are clamoring for punishment, does not prevent defendant from having fair trial if jury is fair and uninfluenced except by evidence adduced.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 223, 224, 48 Pac. 75.

[a] At a trial for assault with intent to commit a rape on a young child, the fact that she was sworn, but then withdrawn from the stand before she had testified to any fact in the case, she being, in fact, too young to do so, is not sufficient cause for a new trial, on the ground that her appearance on the stand was calculated to excite the sympathies of the jury.—People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 261.

[b] A new trial will not be granted, on an indictment for murder, because another judge took the place of the presiding judge during the course of the trial, but with the express consent of defendant, or because the judge who first presided resumed his seat after the rendition of the verdict, and acted in the subsequent proceedings.—People v. Henderson, 28 Cal. 465.

[c] After issue of fact is joined, every step taken for purpose of determination of that issue, up to and including the verdict upon such issue, must be regarded as arising during the course of the trial.—People v. Turner, 39 Cal. 370.

[d] Any substantial error of court on question or matter arising during course of trial is a proper ground for a motion for a new trial.—People v. Turner, 39 Cal. 370.

[e] Fact that sheriff, in absence of the judge, adjourned court at 10 A. M., instead of waiting until 12 M., is not ground for a new trial in a criminal case.—People v. Shainwold, 51 Cal. 468.

§ 521. —— Failure of Judge to Attend View.

[a] Defendant is entitled to a new trial where the judge does not accompany jury on a view.—People v. Yut Ling, 74 Cal. 569, 16 Pac. 489.

§ 522. —— View Without Presence of Accused.

[a] Fact that jury, during a murder trial, were allowed to view the scene of the crime, and a buggy in which defendant and deceased had been seen driving together on the day of the murder, without the presence of defendant, was held no ground for a new trial, especially since the prisoner made no objection, and did not ask to accompany them at the time.—People v. Bonney, 19 Cal. 426.

[a] In a criminal case, if the court below impose upon counsel, against their consent, a limitation of time for argument before the jury, it is done at the risk of a new trial, if it be shown by the uncontradicted affidavits of the counsel that the prisoner was deprived, by the limitation, of the opportunity of a full defense; for this is his constitutional right, without which he cannot be lawfully convicted.—People v. Keenan, 13 Cal. 581.

[a] In cases of felony, prisoner must be present during whole of his trial, and, where depositions are read to a jury during his absence, a new trial will be ordered.—People v. Kohler, 5 Cal. 72.

[b] That defendants' trial was continued in his absence, and that he was not present at the trial of his codefendant, are not grounds for a new trial.—People v. O'Brien, 88 Cal. 483, 26 Pac. 362.

[a] Absence of judge from the courtroom during any part of trial for felony, though he may be within hearing of courtroom, is prejudicial error entitling accused to a new trial. People v. Blackman, 127 Cal. 238, 59 Pac. 573.

[a] At a trial for an assault on a young child, whose tender age prevented her giving any material testimony, the court allowed the question to be put to another witness, "Did the child tell you how this occurred, at the time?" Held, that the ruling of the court, in allowing this question, was erroneous, but that, unless it was shown that some objectionable testimony was given in answer to the question, the objection could not be availed of as a ground for a new trial.—People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 261.

[b] Where a portion of a conversation is admitted tending to establish a material admission by defendant, the exclusion of the balance of the conversation is ground for a new trial.—People v. Murphy, 39 Cal. 52.

[c] That declarations of one deceased, not made in the presence of defendant, and inadmissible under the law, and prejudicial to defendant, were received in evidence, is ground for a new trial.—People v. Dailey, 59 Cal. 600.

[d] Where jury viewed premises, and were particularly instructed to view the various bullet marks, error in refusing to allow a witness to testify as to what he saw concerning course of a bullet or bullet mark in the wall is not ground for a new trial.—People v. Chin Hane, 108 Cal. 597, 41 Pac. 697.

[a] A ruling depriving the prisoner of a statutory privilege, like the right to demand that the charge should be in writing, may be objected to for the first time on a motion for a new trial.—People v. Ah Fong, 12 Cal. 345.

[b] All the charge must be taken together, and if it harmonizes as a whole, and correctly presents the law, a new trial will not be granted because a separate instruction does not contain all the conditions which are to be gathered from the entire text.—People v. Doyell, 48 Cal. 85; People v. Nelson, 56 Cal. 77.

[c] It is better practice to refrain from instructing jurors as to relation of defendant to case, and rule heretofore declared will be strictly adhered to, and new trials will be the result if its limits are overstepped by any extent.—People v. Curry, 103 Cal. 548, 37 Pac. 503.

[a] An erroneous statement of the testimony to the jury by counsel, in the trial of a cause, is not an error for which a new trial will be granted.—People v. Barnhart, 59 Cal. 402; People v. Lee Ah Yute, 60 Cal. 95.

[b] Where a defendant charged with murder was taken to the coroner's inquest by the officers, but was not sworn as a witness by the coroner's jury, who were conducting an ex parte examination, and called upon whom they pleased as witnesses, remarks by the district attorney in his closing argument drawing conclusions adverse to defendant from fact that he had not stated certain matters at coroner's inquest, which he had testified to on trial, and remarks of judge implying that it was proper to claim that defendant had failed to make statements before coroner, are improper, and unfair to defendant.—People v. Lemperle, 94 Cal. 45, 29 Pac. 709.

[c] Where alleged misconduct of judge and counsel for the people consisted in various statements made in presence of the jury, and in the asking of improper questions, but there is no extreme case, and no willful error, or display of anger, working injustice against the defendant, appears a new trial will not be granted for the alleged misconduct.—People v. Wong Chuey, 117 Cal. 624, 49 Pac. 833.

[d] New trial may be granted for misconduct of prosecuting attorney in his opening statement.—People v. Searcey, 121 Cal. 4, 53 Pac. 359.

[de] New trial will not be granted for misconduct of district attorney in opening statement not such as to justify conclusion that he was actuated by bad faith.—People v. Searcey, 121 Cal. 4, 5, 53 Pac. 359.

[e] In a criminal case, held, that there was no ground for granting a new trial because of misconduct of counsel.—People v. Woods, 147 Cal. 265, 81 Pac. 652.

§ 529. Misconduct of Officer of Court.

[a] Misconduct by officers of the court should be presented to the trial court on motion for a new trial, and not by appeal to the supreme court.—People v. Torres, 38 Cal. 141.

§ 530. Misconduct of Jury—In General.

[a] On a murder trial, one of defendant's principal witnesses was a woman who kept a disreputable place, and with whom he lived. During the trial, four of the jurors visited her place repeatedly, and their conduct became so notorious that the judge reprimanded them, and placed them in the custody of the sheriff, and his comments were published in the newspapers. The sheriff also told the jury that, if a disagreement was brought about by those of their number guilty of the misconduct, "there would be hell to pay." Held, that a conviction would be set aside, since the only way the jury could free themselves from suspicion was by a conviction.—People v. Mitchell, 100 Cal. 328, 34 Pac. 698.

[b] On a motion for a new trial, an affidavit was made that, on the day before the trial closed, one of the jurors was seen in earnest conversation with deceased's brother, the conversation being out of hearing. Defendant's counsel also made affidavit five days after the verdict that he had been informed that another juror had publicly stated during the trial that defendant ought to be hanged, but no one was named who heard the statement. Held, that the discretion of the court in refusing to examine the jurors or to order a new trial would not be interfered with.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[a] Where juror has manifested inclination to talk about case, such impropriety on the part of the juror is not a sufficient ground for setting aside the verdict if it appear conclusively that the defendant was not affected prejudicially thereby.—People v. Dennis, 39 Cal. 625.

[b] To secure new trial for misconduct of juror defendant need not, in all cases, show affirmatively that he was injured.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 335, 338, 20 Pac. 719.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 78-125, §§ 2238-2282.

§ 532. —— Before Being Sworn.

[a] New trial will be granted on ground of improper conduct of a juror after having been called and examined on his voir dire, and before being finally sworn as a juror.—People v. Turner, 39 Cal. 370.

[a] The fact that the jury, after agreeing on their verdict, were allowed to remain in the courtroom while the officer waited on the porch some minutes for the judge, is not ground for new trial, where it does not appear that any communication was had with the jury in the meantime.—People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

[b] Verdict of guilty will not be set aside on a showing that a third person expressed in the presence of the jury, while they were deliberating upon their verdict, a wish that the defendant should be convicted, where the expression appears to have been a mere passing remark, and not part of a conversation in which the jury engaged.—People v. Brannigan, 21 Cal. 337.

[c] The facts that the jury, after they retired for deliberation, were conducted by the officer having them in charge to the dining-room of a hotel, where they remained together for three-quarters of an hour; that one of the doors of the room was opened and accessible to strangers; and that the officer in charge was absent from the room for a few minutes during the period named—are insufficient to constitute misconduct on the part of the jury or of the officer, for which a new trial should be granted.—People v. Kelly, 46 Cal. 355.

[a] Where there is no reason to suppose that any injury has resulted from a few accidental or careless remarks passing between the jury and strangers, there can be no necessity for ordering a new trial therefor.—People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

[b] Fact that a person outside the jury-room spoke to one of the jurors during their deliberations, and that some of the jurors spoke to other persons outside, is not ground for new trial where it does not appear that anything was said referring to the trial.—People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 535. —— Failure to Admonish Jury.

[a] A new trial will not be ordered, on the ground that the court, before adjournment, did not admonish the jury not to converse or express an opinion on the case, etc., as Criminal Practice Act, section 894, provides, when defendant has shown no injury resulting to himself from the neglect of the court.—People v. Colmere, 23 Cal. 631.

[a] It is ground for new trial that one of the jurors separated from the others, though he did so by consent of prisoner's counsel.—People v. Backus, 5 Cal. 275.

[b] If one or more jurors in a criminal trial separate without leave of court, so that such juror might have been improperly influenced by others, verdict will be set aside.—People v. Backus, 5 Cal. 275.

[c] The fact that during a trial for murder some of the jurors lifted up a witness, who had suddenly fainted during her examination, and carried her into an adjoining chamber of the judge, and laid her upon a sofa—the deputy sheriff in attendance upon the court accompanying the jurors, who were absent about a minute, during which time the witness was insensible—is no ground for a new trial because of a separation of the jurors.—People v. Lee, 17 Cal. 76.

[e] In a criminal action, the separation of the jury without permission of the court, after retiring to consider their verdict, is ground for setting aside their verdict of guilty, unless it be affirmatively shown by the prosecuting attorney that no prejudice resulted to defendant.—People v. Brannigan, 21 Cal. 337.

[f] Mere fact that a jury, in a capital case, separated without permission of court, and that some of the jury conversed with third persons before rendering a verdict, is not a sufficient ground for a new trial being granted, if it is shown that no injury to defendant resulted therefrom.—People v. Symonds, 22 Cal. 348.

[g] The retirement of a jury for a necessary purpose for a few moments, with the permission of the sheriff, out of his sight, there being no evidence that during such retirement they communicated with anyone or with each other, but positive proof to the contrary, is not sufficient ground on which to grant a new trial.—People v. Moore, 41 Cal. 238.

[h] After retiring for deliberation, jury went to restaurant. While there, three jurors went to the bar, about twenty-five feet from where the others sat, for drinks. Held, that, under Penal Code, section 1181, subdivision 3, regulating new trials, such separation is ground for new trial.—People v. Thornton, 74 Cal. 482, 16 Pac. 244.

[i] Fact that some of jurors in making a view were occasionally out of sight of the others does not constitute a separation if they were kept as much in a body as the nature of the premises viewed would permit. People v. Yut Ling, 74 Cal. 569, 16 Pac. 489.

[j] Momentary separation of jury while viewing premises, with consent of both parties, is harmless.—People v. Tarm Poi, 86 Cal. 229, 231, 24 Pac. 998.

[k] The fact that several jurors, in a murder cause, were separated from their fellow-jurors during the progress of the trial, and out of the sight of the officer who had them in charge, contrary to the orders of the court, is not sufficient ground to grant a new trial, where it does not appear that anything was said to either of them concerning the cause, or that they were guilty of any misconduct, or that they did any act inconsistent with their duties as jurors during the separation.—People v. Bemmerly, 98 Cal. 299, 33 Pac. 263.

[l] Where, during the progress of a criminal trial, a witness for the people, while upon the stand, becomes ill, and unable to proceed in giving evidence, and physicians report that it would not be safe for him to continue his testimony within the next two months, an order continuing the case for a period of sixty-three days, and instructing the jury to return to court in that time, and allowing them to return to their homes, and there remain until the expiration of the continuance, is an abuse of discretion, entitling the defendant to a new trial.—People v. Dinsmore, 102 Cal. 381, 36 Pac. 661.

[a] Proof that certain of the jurors agreed on their verdict, in a criminal case, under a mistaken impression as to the powers of the court to punish on their conviction, is no ground for a new trial. The question of guilt is the sole province of the jury.—People v. Lee, 17 Cal. 76.

[a] A new trial, in a criminal case, will not be granted because the judge informed the jury, after it had been out some time, that, if it did not agree in five minutes, it would have to stay out all night.—People v. Hughes, 29 Cal. 257.

§ 539. —— Improperly Influencing Jury.

[a] Where, after the statement of a juror that the jury were unable to agree without a view of the premises, defendant requested that a view might be had, and consented to a separation of the jury until morning for that purpose, at which time he moved for his discharge on account of the separation of the jury, which motion was denied, whereupon the judge made indignant statements to the jury about the change of defendant's action, and told them to retire for deliberation, five minutes after which they returned a verdict of guilty, the conclusion is justified that they were improperly influenced by the manner and statements of the judge, and that they inferred that the defendant did not really desire a view of the premises, and that such view would have added to the evidence of his guilt; and a new trial should be granted.—People v. Hawley, 111 Cal. 78, 43 Pac. 404.

[a] Reading by a juror, during the progress of the trial of a newspaper containing any matter in connection with the subject matter of the trial would be at all likely to influence him in the performance of his duty, is sufficient misconduct to warrant a new trial.—People v. McCoy, 71 Cal. 395, 12 Pac. 272.

[b] Reading by jury of newspaper article written for purpose of intimidating them, and inducing them to find defendant guilty is ground for new trial.—People v. Murray, 85 Cal. 361, 24 Pac. 666.

[c] Where the jury, after retiring to deliberate on a verdict, read newspaper statements that two men will hang the jury, that their identity is known to the public, and that attempts will be made to corrupt the jury, the verdict will be set aside.—People v. Stokes, 103 Cal. 193, 42 Am. St. Rep. 102, 37 Pac. 207.

[d] An affidavit that a juror read in a newspaper "reports of the progress of the trial" was insufficient to show misconduct justifying a new trial.—People v. Fernandez (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 899.

[e] A newspaper article published during the trial of a criminal case referring to one of the jurors and read by the jury held not to contain matter that would unduly influence any of the jurors not referred to in the article.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

[f] One convicted of crime who moves for new trial on the ground of misconduct of the jury arising from their reading a newspaper article held required to show that the article came to the knowledge of the jury.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

§ 541. —— Receiving Evidence Out of Court.

[a] On motion for a new trial on the ground that the jury received evidence out of court, presumption is that jurors perform their duty, and to overthrow this presumption, positive evidence of misconduct must be introduced.—People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31.

[b] Where, on the trial of an indictment for larceny in stealing a cow, horns, which had been introduced in evidence on the general statement of a witness that they were the horns of the stolen cow, were handled and examined by one of the jurors during a recess in the court, such examination does not amount to receiving evidence out of court, within the meaning of Penal Code, section 1181, subdivision 2, providing that a new trial may be granted where the jury has received any evidence out of court.—People v. Tipton, 73 Cal. 405, 14 Pac. 894.

[c] On trial for libel, after retiring, the jury found and read portions of a pamphlet containing the alleged libel. The pamphlet had been admitted in evidence, and partly read to the jury. Held, that the jury had "received evidence out of court," and, under Penal Code, section 1181, subdivision 2, a new trial should be granted.—People v. Thornton, 74 Cal. 482, 16 Pac. 244.

[d] On a prosecution for homicide, certain diagrams of the premises where the killing occurred were introduced in evidence without objection, and were tacked to a blackboard in view of the jury. During a recess, one of the jurors left the jury-box and stepped over and casually inspected the diagrams. Held no ground for new trial under Penal Code, section 1181, subdivision 2, forbidding the jury to receive evidence out of court other than that resulting from a view of the premises, as against an objection that the diagrams purported to represent not only the house in which the homicide occurred, but the surrounding premises, including on outhouse or closet in which was found some of the material objects introduced in evidence, and that there was also on the diagrams the representation of a building occupied by other parties; there being no suggestion as to what the "surrounding premises" were, or what the "building occupied by parties other than the defendant" was, and there being no question as to the other portions of the diagram having been accurately represented.—People v. Antony, 146 Cal. 124, 79 Pac. 858.

[e] A diagram drawn by a juror on a blackboard in the jury-room, from the juror's memory of the evidence, held not objectionable as the reception of evidence out of court. People v. Gallanar (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 814.

§ 542. —— Use of Intoxicating Liquors.

[a] During a murder trial, lasting eleven days, large quantities of beer, wine, and whisky were ordered by the jury, at their own expense, and consumed by them, mostly before the submission, but some afterward, without permission of the court, and without the knowledge of the defendant. It did not clearly appear that any juror was intoxicated. Held, that a conviction must be set aside.—People v. Gray, 61 Cal. 164, 44 Am. Rep. 549.

[b] Use of wine or liquor by jury while deliberating upon their verdict in capital case is ground for new trial.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 332, 20 Pac. 719.

[c] Use of intoxicating liquors by jury, or a juror, is not ground for a new trial, in absence of any showing that injurious consequences resulted therefrom.—People v. Sansome, 98 Cal. 235, 33 Pac. 202; People v. Bemmerly, 98 Cal. 299, 33 Pac. 263; People v. Leary, 105 Cal. 486, 39 Pac. 24.

[e] Mere fact that, during a trial which lasted over thirty days, two or three of the jurors, after the adjournment of the court for the day, drank a few glasses of liquor at the expense of the district attorney, or that one of them took dinner at his house under circumstances rendering the act of invitation necessary, or took supper with counsel under similar circumstances, is no ground for new trial.—People v. Lyle, 4 Pac. 977.

§ 543. —— Change of Officer in Charge.

[a] A new trial will not be granted, in a criminal case, because, after a deputy sheriff was sworn to take charge of the jury, the sheriff himself took charge of them.—People v. Hughes, 29 Cal. 257.

[a] Fact that officer having charge of jury was absent from their room for some minutes is not ground for a new trial when it does not appear that the jury were allowed to separate.—People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 545. Irregularities or Defects in Verdict.

[a] Where a defendant accused of crime has interposed a plea of not guilty, and also a separate plea of "once in jeopardy" for the same offense, he is entitled to have the latter plea passed upon by the jury before judgment can properly be pronounced against him, and, where the jury found a verdict of guilty without passing upon the plea of "once in jeopardy," a judgment of conviction will be reversed, and a new trial granted. People v. Tucker, 115 Cal. 337, 47 Pac. 111.

[b] Where, from the verdict and the instructions, it is impossible to say whether the jury found that defendant was present at the time a crime was actually committed, and participated in that commission, or whether they found that, though he was elsewhere at the time of the commission, of the crime, still he was guilty as an aider and abettor, a new trial will be granted.—People v. Schoedde, 126 Cal. 373, 58 Pac. 859.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 730, 731; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 125-129, §§ 2283-2292.

§ 546. —— Verdict Improperly Influenced.

[a] Interruption by juryman of counsel for defense in an improper manner tends to show passion or prejudice.—People v. Hamilton, 46 Cal. 540.

[b] It is always competent for convicted defendant to show that verdict is result of improper influences—e. g., newspaper articles. People v. Murray, 85 Cal. 361, 24 Pac. 666.

[c] Where there is legal evidence to support a verdict of guilty, the jury's recommendation of "extreme mercy of the court" negatives the claim of "passion and prejudice" in rendering the verdict.—People v. Wilson, 119 Cal. 384, 51 Pac. 639.

§ 547. —— Verdict Contrary to Evidence.

[a] A new trial will not be granted when there is evidence, though conflicting, to support it.—People v. Ah Ti, 9 Cal. 16.

[b] A new trial will be granted where the issue involves matters of fact only, and the facts proved require a different verdict from that found by the jury, or where there has been no proof whatever of a material fact, or not sufficient proof of the facts in issue.—People v. Ah Ti, 9 Cal. 16.

[c] To justify interference with verdict there must be an absence of evidence against prisoner, or a decided preponderance in his favor.—People v. Ah Loy, 10 Cal. 301.

[d] If the judge before whom a case is tried is satisfied that a verdict is obtained against the accused on the testimony of witnesses unworthy of belief, it is his duty, on the application of defendant, to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial.—People v. Baker, 39 Cal. 686.

[e] Defendant may move for new trial on ground of preponderance of evidence in his favor upon some issue which it is material for prosecution to establish, and court, if it is of the opinion that there is such a preponderance, should set aside the verdict.—People v. Ashnauer, 47 Cal. 98.

§ 548. Reception of Verdict in Absence of Defendant.

[a] People may examine a witness who did not testify before grand jury and whose name is not indorsed on indictment, without first giving notice of such intended examination; and the rule in respect to surprise is the same as to the evidence of such a witness as to that of any other witness.—People v. Jocelyn, 29 Cal. 562.

[b] In a prosecution for homicide, the fact that the attorney general changed his theory of the case on final argument thereof to the jury, held not ground for new trial.—People v. Weber, (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

§ 550. Newly Discovered Evidence—In General.

[a] In criminal cases newly discovered evidence is not ground for new trial. Statute names all grounds for setting aside verdict. People v. Bernstein, 18 Cal. 699.

[b] A new trial will not be granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence, unless the affidavits set forth evidence which would have been admissible on the trial.—People v. Voll, 43 Cal. 166.

[c] Evidence stated in an affidavit for continuance is not newly discovered.—People v. Ah Yute, 53 Cal. 614.

[d] To entitle a party to a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, it must appear that the evidence, and not merely its materiality, be newly discovered; that the party could not with reasonable diligence have discovered and produced it at the trial; and that these facts be shown by the best evidence which the case admits.—People v. Sutton, 73 Cal. 243, 15 Pac. 86.

[e] Application for a new trial in a criminal case, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, should be regarded with distrust and disfavor.—People v. Howard, 74 Cal. 547, 16 Pac. 394.

[f] Newly discovered evidence from a witness for the prosecution, which was so closely related to evidence given by him at the trial that it might have been called out upon cross-examination at that time, is not ground for a new trial.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[g] Defendant filed the affidavits of himself and two others alleging that he was in a certain saloon when the offense was committed, that another person had admitted that he did the act, and that defendant did not know of such evidence until after trial. Held, that a new trial was improperly refused.—People v. Kelleher, 16 Pac. 705.

[a] A and B were jointly indicted for a crime. A, being tried separately, was found guilty. It appeared that A had reason, if innocent, to believe that B was guilty, and had opportunity on the trial to examine B, but neglected to do so. Held, that a new trial would not be granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence.—People v. Miller, 33 Cal. 99.

[b] Motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence should not be granted without a satisfactory showing of diligence.—People v. Ah Ton, 53 Cal. 741.

[c] Defendant was entitled to a new trial, where he had been precluded by prosecution from inquiring into material matter until after his conviction.—People v. Stanford, 64 Cal. 27, 28 Pac. 106.

[d] Newly discovered evidence is not ground for new trial in absence of showing that such evidence could not, by reasonable diligence, have been had on the trial.—People v. [c] New trial will not be granted for newly discovered evidence unless excuse shown for not producing it at trial.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 431, 24 Pac. 1006.

[f] When the affidavits on the subject of diligence in the discovery of the new evidence are vague and general, and do not disclose the manner in which the evidence was discovered, and no explanation is given why it was not discovered before the trial, it is not an abuse of discretion to deny the motion for want of diligence.—People v. Kloss, 115 Cal. 567, 47 Pac. 459.

[g] New trial cannot be granted for newly discovered evidence where affidavits in support of motion do not make a showing of diligence, and the newly discovered evidence appears to be merely cumulative to proof given upon the trial.—People v. Brittan, 118 Cal. 409, 50 Pac. 664.

[h] A new trial will not be granted on the ground of material evidence not presented at the trial, where the party was aware of the existence of such evidence, and the one who could have testified to it was in court during part of the trial, and no effort was made to secure his testimony.—People v. Luchetti, 119 Cal. 501, 51 Pac. 707.

[i] Where there is no strong or exceptional showing made, to overcome the lack of diligence in securing the evidence, there is no abuse of discretion in denying the motion.—People v. Griner, 124 Cal. 19, 56 Pac. 625.

[j] Motion for a new trial upon ground of newly discovered evidence is looked upon with disfavor; and where it appears, in view of the affidavits and counter-affidavits, that there is not a sufficient showing of diligence or of the truth and materiality of the evidence to make a strong case in favor of the motion, it is properly denied.—People v. Warren, 130 Cal. 683, 63 Pac. 86.

[a] After-discovered evidence that earmarks of hog alleged to have been stolen are different from marks testified to on trial is material.—People v. Stanford, 64 Cal. 27, 28 Pac. 106.

[b] New trial should not be granted for newly discovered evidence which would not probably produce different result.—People v. Sutton, 73 Cal. 243, 15 Pac. 86; People v. Howard, 74 Cal. 547, 16 Pac. 394; People v. Leong Yune Gun, 77 Cal. 636, 20 Pac. 27; People v. Demasters, 109 Cal. 607, 42 Pac. 236.

[c] New trial will not be granted for newly discovered evidence which is immaterial.—People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 431, 24 Pac. 1006.

[d] Newly discovered evidence which could not have changed result is not ground for new trial.—People v. Luchetti, 119 Cal. 509, 51 Pac. 707.

[e] New trial will not be granted on ground of newly discovered evidence where such evidence was of little importance, and no diligence was used in discovering evidence before trial.—People v. Soap, 127 Cal. 408, 59 Pac. 771.

[a] New trial will not be awarded for newly discovered evidence which is merely cumulative.—People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 583, 10 Pac. 207; People v. Wong At Foo, 69 Cal. 182, 10 Pac. 375; People v. Fang Ah Sing, 70 Cal. 8, 11 Pac. 323; People v. Sutton, 73 Cal. 243, 15 Pac. 86; People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 352, 27 Pac. 295; People v. O'Brien, 78 Cal. 48, 20 Pac. 359; People v. [b] The denial by the trial court of a motion for new trial, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, tending to show statements of the prosecuting witness inconsistent with his testimony, will be affirmed, where two eye-witnesses gave testimony directly contrary to that of such prosecuting witness, since such new evidence is merely cumulative.—People v. Loui Tung, 90 Cal. 377, 27 Pac. 295.

[c] New trial on ground of newly discovered evidence is properly refused where substantially the same matters set forth in the affidavit were testified to by the witnesses at the trial, the only difference being that a certain statement made by defendant was testified to by witnesses as having been made before the trial, while the affidavit referred to statements made subsequent to the trial.—People v. Hong Quin Moon, 92 Cal. 41, 27 Pac. 1096.

[d] The denial of an application for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence will not be reversed where such evidence was merely cumulative, and in every material point contradicted by counter-affidavits.—People v. Mesa, 93 Cal. 580, 29 Pac. 116.

[e] Testimony of a physician who attended defendant at the time of an injury that, in his opinion, it was the kind of an injury which would produce epilepsy, is but cumulative evidence, not calling for a new trial: the physicians who testified as experts having had all the data that he had, and more, and defendant's expert having testified to the same thing.—People v. Kloss, 115 Cal. 567, 47 Cal. 459.

[f] When, on a motion for a new trial on a prosecution for rape, affidavits of persons who claimed to have met defendant at different times, from one to three days after the alleged rape, stating that they had seen no marks or scratches on his face, and that they were sure they would have noticed them if they had been there, were presented, and evidence to such effect had been given at the trial, it was no abuse of discretion to deny a motion for a new trial for newly discovered evidence, since the evidence was merely cumulative.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[g] A new trial should not be granted because of newly discovered evidence which is merely cumulative, and manifestly would not have changed the result.—People v. Chrisman, 135 Cal. 282, 67 Pac. 136.

[h] Where it appears that, upon the trial of a defendant charged with forgery, the evidence was strongly conflicting, and evidence on part of prosecution, leaving out of view that of defendant, was extremely slight and unsatisfactory, matters which in ordinary cases might be disregarded on motion for a new trial will be closely examined, and a new trial should be granted for newly discovered evidence that the prosecuting witness had declared that he himself had signed the note alleged to be forged, although such evidence is, in some sense, cumulative for the defendant.—People v. Lapique, 136 Cal. 503, 69 Pac. 226.

[i] On a prosecution for forgery, wherein the prosecutor testified that he did not sign the note in question, and two other witnesses testified that he had admitted the signature to be genuine, newly discovered evidence that the prosecutor had admitted that the signature to the note had been placed there by himself is not ground for a new trial since it was merely cumulative and impeaching.—People v. Lapique, 67 Pac. 14; judgment reversed, 69 Pac. 226.

[a] Newly discovered evidence, which is designed to contradict a witness, is not of a character to warrant a new trial.—People v. Anthony, 56 Cal. 397; People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 583, 10 Pac. 207; People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161; People v. Loui Tung, 90 Cal. 377, 27 Pac. 295; People v. Freeman, 92 Cal. 359, 28 Pac. 261; People v. Holmes, 126 Cal. 462, 58 Pac. 917.

[b] Refusal of trial court to grant new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence will be affirmed when such evidence is merely contradictory of the state's testimony, and counter-affidavits show that unless such testimony is false defendant must have known of it before.—People v. Cesena, 90 Cal. 381, 27 Pac. 300.

[c] New trial cannot be granted on ground of newly discovered evidence, the effect of which would be to impeach prosecuting witness, where counter-affidavits weaken, showing and make it unsatisfactory.—People v. Ah Noon, 116 Cal. 657, 658, 48 Pac. 794.

[d] In a prosecution for homicide, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to refuse a new trial for newly discovered evidence impeaching the testimony of a witness merely as to one of the reasons which he gave for his identification of a weapon.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 555. —— Conflicting or Contradicted Evidence.

[a] An application for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence is properly refused when the newly discovered evidence is irreconcilable with the testimony which defendant gave on the first trial.—People v. McCauley, 45 Cal. 146.

[b] Although a defendant may make as many and different defenses to a charge as he may see fit, although they may be inconsistent, yet if he proceeds to trial upon a certain line of defense without making due inquiry and preparation as to any other defense that he may have to the charge, he cannot be permitted, when the issue has gone against him, to thereafter come in, and, upon a motion for a new trial, suggest for the first time that there is other evidence material to his defense, upon a new and different theory, in conflict with the defense made at the trial. People v. Freeman, 92 Cal. 359, 28 Pac. 261.

§ 556. —— Credibility or Probate Effect of Evidence.

[a] Defendant was convicted of embezzlement, his identity being established by four witnesses, three of whom testified that he had a beard of about two weeks' growth at the time of the crime. Defendant asked a new trial, based on newly discovered evidence, tending to show that he had no beard, and filed several affidavits. In one of these affiant stated that another told him before the trial that he had committed the crime. Affiant did not make this alleged fact known until after defendant's conviction. This affidavit also seriously contradicted statements made upon defendant's preliminary examination. Held, that the affidavits contained nothing which rendered it probable that on a retrial of the case a different result would be reached.—People v. Woodruff, 126 Cal. xvii, 58 Pac. 854.

ent times, from one to three days after the alleged rape, stating that they had seen no marks or scratches on his face, and that they were sure they would have noticed them if they had been there, were presented, and evidence to such effect had been given at the trial, and there had been a prior trial, it was no abuse of discretion to deny the motion on the ground of newly discovered evidence since the evidence would not probably have changed the result.—People v. Benc, 130 Cal. 159, 62 Pac. 404.

[c] In considering a motion for a new trial in a criminal case there is always a question whether, under all the circumstances, the newly discovered evidence is produced in such a way and is of such a nature that its introduction upon another trial would render a different result reasonably probable, and whether, in the absence of such evidence, defendant has had a fair trial on the merits.—People v. Sing Yow, 145 Cal. 1, 78 Pac. 235.

[d] To justify the granting of a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence in a criminal case the evidence newly discovered must be such as to render a different result probable in the event of a new trial.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 742; 15 Cent. Dig., col. 178, § 2336.

§ 557. Application or Motion for New Trial—Formal Requisites.

[a] A motion for a new trial being an application for a rule or order made viva voce to a court or judge, the attention of the court must be called to it, and the court moved to grant it; merely making out and filing a written application for such rule or order is not sufficient.—People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 645.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 558. —— Amendment of Motion.

[a] Where defendant's motion for a new trial is denied, and judgment is pronounced, his application for leave to amend the motion, made nearly a year later, is properly denied, since no motion for a new trial is pending, and there is nothing to amend.—People v. Wessel, 98 Cal. 352, 33 Pac. 216.

§ 559. —— Jurisdiction to Hear and Grant.

[a] The mere fact that the motion for a new trial, in a murder case, is without objection from the defendant, heard before different judges from those sitting at the trial, will not, without some special cause shown, constitute of itself a sufficient ground for the reversal of judgment.—People v. Hobson, 17 Cal. 424.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 560. —— Time for Making.

[a] Statute does not contemplate a motion for new trial until all of the issues have been passed upon.—People v. Smith, 121 Cal. 355.

[b] Under Penal Code, section 1182, providing that in criminal cases a motion for a new trial must be made "before judgment," where such a motion was made and denied when the defendant was brought before the court, and judgment was then pronounced without arraignment, he is not authorized to make another motion for a new trial upon the vacation of the judgment and his subsequent arraignment.—People v. Walker, 142 Cal. 90, 75 Pac. 658.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 743, 744; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 183-188, §§ 2349-2358.

§ 562. —— Parties.

[a] Under the statutes, courts are authorized to grant new trials, in criminal cases, only on application of defendant.—People v. Bangeneaur, 40 Cal. 613.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cent. Dig., col. 179, § 2338.

§ 563. —— Necessity and Sufficiency of Affidavits and Other Proofs in General.

[a] If a prisoner objects that he was absent at the time of trial or the rendition of the verdict, or the passing of the sentence, he must prove his absence.—People v. Stuart, 4 Cal. 218.

[b] Defendant ought, on motion for new trial on ground that testimony was excluded —motion being based on affidavit by counsel of defendant that he was surprised by the exclusion of the testimony, and that he had, during the trial, another witness who could have proved the fact that deceased fired the first shot, and whom counsel could have introduced but for the admission of deceased's statement, and that this witness was now within reach of court,—to have tendered the affidavit of this witness, or have shown that it could not be had.—People v. Bealoba, 17 Cal. 389.

[c] Affidavit which states that affiant is informed and believes that jury, while deliberating, reads slips of paper and books containing evidence produced at a former trial, is not sufficient proof of receiving evidence out of court as a ground for granting a new trial.—People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31.

[d] Where defendant moves for new trial on ground that court erred in not granting him a continuance by reason of absence of his witnesses, he should procure the affidavits of witnesses to show that they could testify to the facts desired to be proved by them.—People v. De Lacey, 28 Cal. 589.

[e] A motion to set aside a verdict on the ground of surprise will be denied, when the affidavit does not show that the testimony of the witness objected to was not true, or that it could be obviated by other evidence.—People v. Jocelyn, 29 Cal. 562.

[f] Where a motion for a new trial is made on the ground that the verdict is contrary to the evidence, the motion is heard as it would be were it brought on for hearing immediately after the verdict, and neither a statement nor the reporter's notes are required to be filed in support of the motion.—People v. Fisher, 51 Cal. 319.

[g] On motion for new trial defendant may show whether jury read newspaper article having intimidating effect on them.—People v. Murray, 85 Cal. 361, 24 Pac. 666.

[h] Affidavit of misconduct of jury made on information and belief is insufficient.—People v. Tarm Poi, 86 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 998; People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472; People v. Chin Non, 146 Cal. 561, 80 Pac. 681; People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

[i] Motion to be allowed to file additional affidavits in support of a motion for a new trial is properly denied when made after the new trial has been denied, and without production of the affidavits.—People v. Fice, 97 Cal. 459, 32 Pac. 531.

[j] Proof of the publication of articles in newspapers during a criminal trial adverse to accused held not to raise a presumption that the articles came to the knowledge of the jurors.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

[k] Evidence of accused after conviction given on the trial of his companion charged with the same offense held unavailable on accused's application for a new trial to rebut evidence given on his trial.—People v. Sullivan (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 834.

[a] On a motion for new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence, counter-affidavits are competent to show that defendant has not exercised due diligence.—People v. Cesena, 90 Cal. 381, 27 Pac. 300.

[b] Where defendant's affidavits in support of a motion for a new trial for newly discovered evidence are fully contradicted by affidavits of the prosecution, a new trial is properly denied.—People v. Fice, 97 Cal. 459, 32 Pac. 531.

[c] On a motion for a new trial in a criminal case on the ground of newly discovered evidence shown by affidavits of the proposed witnesses, it is not error for the court to permit the state to file counter-affidavits.—People v. Sing Yow, 145 Cal. 1, 78 Pac. 235.

[a] Affidavit of juryman, made after verdict, that he had formed and expressed an opinion before the trial, cannot be received on a motion for a new trial.—People v. Baker, 1 Cal. 403.

[b] Affidavit of juror, purging his conduct from imputation of corruption or impropriety, will not be admitted where he separates from the rest of jury in a criminal trial without permission of court.—People v. Backus, 5 Cal. 275.

[c] Verdict cannot be impeached by affidavit of one juror tending to show that it was not fair expression of opinion of jury.—People v. Wyman, 15 Cal. 70.

[d] While a juror is not disqualified from becoming a witness in a proper case, public policy prohibits him from impeaching his own verdict by an affidavit that a juror made statements in the jury-room of matters not in evidence.—People v. Doyell, 48 Cal. 85.

[e] Affidavits of jurors are competent to rebut affidavits of misconduct on their part urged in support of a new trial.—People v. Hunt, 59 Cal. 430.

[f] Affidavits of jurors denying misconduct or that they read newspaper articles are admissible and conclusive on that point.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 352, 19 Pac. 161.

[g] Affidavits of jurors are inadmissible to impeach their verdict.—People v. Pratt, 78 Cal. 350, 20 Pac. 731.

[h] Where defendant in criminal prosecution has introduced evidence upon a motion for a new trial, showing that the jury had read newspaper articles during the trial, which it was claimed had a tendency to influence their verdict, it is proper to receive rebutting evidence on the part of the prosecution, showing by the jurors themselves that the reading of the articles had not influenced them in any way prejudicial to the defendant in rendering their verdict.—People v. Murray, 94 Cal. 212, 28 Am. St. Rep. 113, 29 Pac. 494.

[i] Affidavits of jurors may be used to disprove or explain alleged misconduct, but cannot, admitting misconduct, be used to show that verdict was not influenced thereby.—People v. Azoff, 105 Cal. 632, 39 Pac. 59.

[j] The affidavit of a juror cannot be received to impeach the verdict to which he agreed, by swearing that he was misled by statements of the foreman, and that he did not understand the verdict, and was too timid and confused to express his dissent at the time when he ought to have dissented.—People v. Kloss, 115 Cal. 567, 47 Pac. 459.

[k] An affidavit of the jurymen in explanation of the verdict cannot be read upon motion for new trial, since that is an attempted impeachment of the verdict by the jurymen.—People v. Holmes, 118 Cal. 444, 50 Pac. 675.

[l] Affidavit of a juror cannot be received to impeach the verdict by setting forth a misrepresentation made by a juror as to the limit of punishment which could be inflicted for manslaughter, by which many jurors were induced to agree upon a verdict of guilty of that offense.—People v. Soap, 127 Cal. 408, 59 Pac. 771.

[m] Verdict of a jury cannot be impeached in this state by the affidavits of jurors showing misconduct on the part of any member of the jury, except where the verdict is reached "by a resort to the determination of chance." Nor can the verdict be impeached by the hearsay statements of jurors; and an affidavit of the defendant as to the misconduct of the jury, based on information and belief, is entitled to no weight.—People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472.

[n] Jurors cannot impeach verdict by showing that improper statements were made by some of them when deliberating upon the verdict; and an affidavit of the defendant which must necessarily rest upon hearsay from jurors cannot be received to show such misconduct. People v. Dobbins, 138 Cal. 693, 72 Pac. 339.

[o] A juror cannot be allowed by his own testimony or declarations to impeach and defeat his verdict, except in a case authorized by statute.—People v. Murphy, 146 Cal. 502, 80 Pac. 709.

[q] Affidavit of juror though sufficient to show knowledge on his part of a newspaper article commenting on his being a juror in the case held insufficient to show that he was influenced by the article.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

[r] Affidavits of jurors made in opposition to a motion for a new trial on the ground of misconduct held not proof of misconduct except so far as the averments affirmatively allege misconduct.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

§ 566. —— —— To Prove Chance or Compromise Verdict.

[a] New trial will not be granted on affidavits of jurors as to their own misconduct, except in case of a chance verdict.—People v. Hughes, 29 Cal. 257.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 657, providing that, when any of the jurors have been induced to assent to any verdict or finding by a resort to a determination by chance, such misconduct may be proved by the affidavit of any of the jurors, the misconduct of a juror, in a prosecution for embezzlement, other than a resort to chance, could not be proved by the affidavits of jurors.—People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472.

[c] A verdict finding a defendant charged with murder guilty of manslaughter cannot be impeached by affidavits of the jurors that it was agreed to as a compromise between jurors who were in favor of a higher degree and those who were for acquittal.—People v. Richards (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 691.

§ 567. —— Testimony of Officer in Charge of Jury.

§ 568. —— Affidavit of Newly Discovered Evidence.

[a] Affidavits in support of motion for new trial, on ground of newly discovered evidence in a criminal case, must set forth such evidence as would be received on the trial.—People v. Voll, 43 Cal. 166.

[b] Application must show that evidence was not discoverable before trial and is such as to render different result probable on retrial.—People v. Leong Yune Gun, 77 Cal. 637, 20 Pac. 27.

[c] A motion for new trial, or permission to make such motion, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, is properly denied—no affidavits being produced or offered, or statement made of the nature, character, or time of discovery of the evidence.—People v. Eppinger, 114 Cal. 350, 46 Pac. 97.

[d] An affidavit for new trial in a homicide case on newly discovered evidence is objectionable in not stating why witness could not have been discovered in the six months between the homicide and the trial, or the manner in which he was discovered.—People v. Kloss, 115 Cal. 567, 47 Pac. 459.

[e] Where, on a motion for a new trial on account of newly discovered evidence, it was not shown why the evidence was not produced, and it appeared from counter-affidavits that the substance of what was set forth in the supporting affidavit was testified to by affiant on the trial, the motion was properly denied.—People v. Warren, 130 Cal. 683, 63 Pac. 86.

[a] Court may, in its discretion, allow defendant to cross-examine parties who filed counter-affidavits in support of verdict, but refusal to do so is not error.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 339, 20 Pac. 719.

port of a motion for a new trial in a criminal case.—People v. Tucker, 117 Cal. 229, 49 Pac. 134.

[c] There was no abuse of discretion in refusing to hear oral evidence of the intoxication of a juror during the trial of a criminal case, on a motion for a new trial, though it was claimed that the affidavits of the witnesses could not be obtained; the juror's condition being within the observation of the judge, and defendant's counsel not even presenting their own affidavits as to the facts claimed.—People v. Tucker, 117 Cal. 229, 49 Pac. 134.

[d] Where showing on request for more time to prepare affidavits for motion for new trial did not indicate what misconduct of jury consisted in, name of guilty juror, nature of newly discovered evidence, why it was not produced at trial, nor that it could be produced on new trial, request is properly refused.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 92, 50 Pac. 395.

[e] A motion for a new trial in a prosecution for felony, based on the judge's absence form the courtroom, must be determined on the affidavits filed, and not on his belief as to the length of time he was absent.—People v. Blackman, 127 Cal. 248, 59 Pac. 573.

[f] Exclusion of oral testimony of witnesses subpoenaed by defendant in support of charge of misconduct of jury is not prejudicial, where affidavits of each of the witnesses was presented, if there is no showing that any one of them had refused to testify fully by affidavit to all the material facts within his knowledge. The law allows no difference between affidavits or depositions or oral testimony when offered in support of motions.—People v. Sullivan, 129 Cal. 557, 62 Pac. 101.

[g] Where neither a convicted defendant nor any one in his behalf presents any affidavit in support of a motion for a continuance of the date for argument on a motion to set aside the verdict because of jury's misconduct of a newly discovered evidence showing any fact in regard to such grounds, and no other showing is made, it was proper to refuse a continuance.—People v. Ross, 134 Cal. 256, 66 Pac. 229.

§ 569½. Arrest of Judgment—For Want of Preliminary Examination.

[a] Want of preliminary examination and commitment before filing the information is not a ground for arrest of judgment.—People v. Bawden, 90 Cal. 195, 27 Pac. 204.

§ 570. —— For Causes Mentioned in Statute Only.

[a] Only grounds on which a motion in arrest of judgment can be based are those mentioned in the statute.—People v. Indian Peter, 48 Cal. 250.

§ 571. —— For Illegality of Commitment.

[a] Motion in arrest of judgment can only be founded on defects appearing upon the face of the information or indictment, and cannot be made for want of a legal commitment before the filing of the information.—People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134, 54 Pac. 596.

§ 572. —— For Defects in Indictment or Information.

[a] Objection that indictment charges more than one offense can be taken advantage of only by demurrer, cannot be considered on motion to arrest judgment.—People v. Shotwell, 27 Cal. 394.

[b] Where a defendant, failed to demur to indictment on ground that it did not substantially conform to the requirements of sections 950-952 of the Penal Code, requiring the indictment to set forth the particular circumstances of the offense, he cannot move in arrest of judgment, after verdict, on the ground that indictment did not conform to the sections.—People v. Swenson, 49 Cal. 388.

[c] Under Penal Code, sections 1004, 1185, a motion in arrest of judgment can only be founded on defects in the indictment or information appearing on the face of it.—People v. Johnson, 71 Cal. 384, 12 Pac. 261; People v. O'Leary, 77 Cal. 34, 18 Pac. 856; People v. McConnell, 82 Cal. 620, 23 Pac. 40; People v. Gardner, 98 Cal. 127, 32 Pac. 880; People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134, 54 Pac. 596; People v. Cole, 127 Cal. 545, 59 Pac. 984.

[d] Where information and indictment does not allege facts affirmatively showing jurisdiction of the offense, and its allegations are consistent with the fact that the offense was committed outside of the jurisdiction of the court, a motion in arrest of judgment should be granted, and the action dismissed.—People v. Wong Wang, 92 Cal. 277, 28 Pac. 270.

[e] Objection that an information for attempt to rape a girl under the age of fourteen years states that the girl was eleven years old, and therefore does not charge the offense, if of any merit at all, is too technical to be raised by motion in arrest, or otherwise than by special demurrer.—People v. Gardner, 98 Cal. 127, 32 Pac. 880.

[f] Objection that information is defective in alleging that offense was committed in a certain county, over a portion of the territory of which the court has no jurisdiction, without denying its commission on such excepted territory, is a matter of defense, and cannot be raised by motion in arrest.—People v. Fredericks, 106 Cal. 554, 39 Pac. 944.

[g] Minor defects and imperfections in pleadings, not affecting any substantial right of defendant as provided by Penal Code, sections 960-1258, are insufficient to sustain a motion to arrest judgment.—People v. Wynn, 133 Cal. 72, 65 Pac. 126.

§ 573. —— For Defects in Verdict.

[a] Intent to defraud is an essential element of crime of forgery, and is an essential averment in every indictment or information for forgery; and where one of two counts in an information is defective, in omitting such averment, and evidence is introduced under both counts, a general verdict of guilty cannot be referred to the good count only, and a motion in arrest of judgment should be granted, and a judgment of conviction will be reversed upon appeal. [a] Objection that court has no jurisdiction to affix any penalty or render any judgment, because of failure of statute to provide any punishment for offense charged, cannot be urged upon the hearing of such motion.—People v. Gardner, 98 Cal. 127, 32 Pac. 880.

§ 575. —— Motion for New Trial as Waiver of Right.

[a] Defendant who has demurred to an information as charging two offenses does not waive his right to move in arrest of judgment by moving for a new trial.—People v. Clement, 35 Pac. 1022.

[a] Court of first instance had no authority under Mexican law to pronounce sentence of death upon a prisoner convicted of a capital offense. In such case the proceedings were to be sent up to the court of second instance, in which court alone could final judgment be rendered. (Per Bennett, J.) People v. Daniels, 1 Cal. 106.

[b] The judge of a district in which cause was tried may pass sentence on a verdict of guilty when the judge of another district presided during the argument of case to jury and received the verdict.—People v. Henderson, 28 Cal. 465.

§ 579. Time to Pronounce Sentence.

[a] Statute does not require judgment to be pronounced at same term at which verdict was found.—People v. Felix, 45 Cal. 163.

[b] Defendant may waive time allowed by the Penal Code, after conviction before sentence is pronounced, and consent that immediate judgment be pronounced.—People v. Robinson, 46 Cal. 94.

[c] It is doubtful whether limitation of time fixed in the Penal Code, within which judgment may be pronounced in a criminal case after conviction, applies in case of a judgment upon plea of guilty.—People v. Robinson, 46 Cal. 94.

[e] One convicted of felony may waive time which code says must elapse between verdict and sentence and consent that judgment be pronounced immediately.—People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 174, 25 Pac. 1116.

[f] Refusal to continue the time for pronouncing judgment is not error, several continuances having been had.—People v. Holmes, 126 Cal. 462, 58 Pac. 917.

§ 580. Sentence on Plea of Guilty.

[a] Proceeding to determine degree of crime of murder, after a plea of guilty, is not a trial requiring a jury, but is a question for court.—People v. Noll, 20 Cal. 164.

[b] Under the statutory provision requiring that, after a plea of guilty, witnesses shall be examined to determine the degree of the crime, a judgment reciting the plea and examination of witnesses, and that "the court now finds defendant guilty of murder in the first degree and doth adjudge the penalty therefor to be death," is sufficient, since no form of judgment is prescribed by statute. People v. Noll, 20 Cal. 164.

[c] Where accused pleads guilty to an indictment charging an offense which is divided into degrees, court before passing sentence, must ascertain degree.—People v. Jefferson, 52 Cal. 452.

[d] Penal Code, section 1192, provides that, on a plea of guilty of a crime divided into degrees, the court must, before passing sentence, determine the degree. After a plea of guilty of burglary, the court swore the accused, and interrogated him, ascertaining that the crime was committed at 11 o'clock P. M., from which evidence the court determined that the crime was burglary in the first degree. Held, that this did not amount to trying the defendant after he had pleaded "Guilty," so as to constitute error.—People v. Miller, 137 Cal. 642, 70 Pac. 735.

[e] Penal Code, section 1192, devolving on the court the duty of determining the degree of crime where defendant pleads guilty, is supplemented by Code of Civil Procedure, section 187, providing that, where jurisdiction is by any statute conferred on a court, all means necessary to carry it into effect are also given.—People v. Chew Lan Ong, 141 Cal. 550, 75 Pac. 186.

[f] Defendant pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary in the first degree, and the judgment recited that, "whereas defendant has been convicted of the crime of burglary in the first degree, ... it is ordered," etc. Held, that the judgment was valid, though the minutes of the court did not show that any evidence was heard as to the degree.—Woods, Ex parte, 41 Pac. 796.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 581. Insanity After Conviction.

[a] Under code, section 1201, it is only when court is in doubt as to sanity of one convicted of a crime that the question of sanity need be passed upon by a jury before sentence is pronounced.—People v. Pico, 62 Cal. 50.

[b] Where the only evidence of accused's insanity was an affidavit of his attorneys that, during two months last passed, they had frequently seen him and that they were informed and believed he was insane, no question of his insanity having been raised during the trial, a refusal after conviction to submit a special issue of his insanity will not be disturbed, under Penal Code, section 1201, providing for a trial of the issue of accused's insanity if, in the opinion of the court, there is a reasonable ground to believe him insane.—People v. Knott, 122 Cal. 410, 55 Pac. 154.

§ 582. Sentence on Conviction of Lesser Offense Included in Charge.

[a] If defendant is convicted of an offense of a lesser grade than that for which he was indicted, and the lesser offense is included in the greater, the verdict is followed by the same judgment as though the defendant had been indicted for the offense of which he was convicted.—People v. English, 30 Cal. 214.

[a] On the day set for sentence the court, on motion of counsel for defendant (the district attorney consenting), ordered that sentence be suspended, and defendant allowed to ship on a certain vessel. The sheriff returned that he had delivered defendant on board the vessel indicated, where he was shipped as a sailor. Nearly four years thereafter defendant was arrested on a bench warrant, the order of suspension of judgment set aside, and sentence of imprisonment imposed. Held, that defendant could not be heard to complain of such sentence, on the ground that the court had lost jurisdiction, as the former order merely suspended sentence until the further order of the court, and was made on motion of defendant.—People v. Patrick, 118 Cal. 332, 50 Pac. 425.

[a] It is no error for court to set day for pronouncing sentence in absence of prisoner.

It is only requisite that he should be present when the sentence is pronounced.—People v. Galvin, 9 Cal. 115.

§ 585. Formalities in Pronouncing Sentence. —Informing Accused of Nature of Charge, etc.

[a] Where, before sentence, the court called defendant, whereon his counsel, without waiting, moved for a new trial, after denial of which sentence was pronounced, such action was not a waiver of defendant's right to be informed of the nature of the charge, plea and verdict, and to be asked if there was any reason why judgment should not be pronounced. Judgment (1900) 61 Pac. 800, modified.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

[b] Where defendant was sentenced without being informed of the nature of the charge against him, or the plea and verdict, or asked if there was any reason why judgment should not be pronounced, he was not entitled to be discharged on motion. Judgment (1900) 61 Pac. 800, modified.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

[a] Judgments of inferior criminal courts created by statute are not required to be of any different form from those of criminal courts of general jurisdiction.—People v. Forbes, 22 Cal. 135.

[b] Judgment of court, to be entered by clerk in court's minutes, is sufficient, if it states of what offense defendant was finally convicted, and the penalty imposed by the court, and it need not recite the facts contained in the other papers constituting the record.—Ring, In re, 28 Cal. 247.

[c] A recital in the judgment that the defendant was found guilty of the offense of gaming at tan, as charged in the information, is equivalent to a recital that the defendant was found guilty of gaming at tan by carrying on and conducting the same for money or its equivalent.—People v. Sam Lung, 70 Cal. 515, 11 Pac. 673.

[d] Fact that process was not served by proper person or at proper place or time, or warrant void and arrest unlawful, will not render judgment void.—Ah Men, Ex parte, 77 Cal. 201, 11 Am. St. Rep. 263, 19 Pac. 380.

[e] Judgment that accused be imprisoned in state prison of California at San Quentin for term of nine years held sufficient.—People v. Perez, 87 Cal. 123, 25 Pac. 262.

[f] Judgment stating crime for which defendant is convicted and sentence of court is sufficient.—People v. Douglas, 87 Cal. 283, 25 Pac. 417.

[g] Judgment is not rendered insufficient in form because it orders and adjudges that defendant be punished by imprisonment in the state prison.—People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 114, 26 Pac. 95.

[h] Judgment ordering that defendant be punished by imprisonment need not direct that he be imprisoned.—People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 176, 25 Pac. 1116.

[i] Where information charges that offense was committed in "the city and county of San Francisco," the place where it was committed need not be repeated in the judgment.—People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 171, 25 Pac. 1116.

[j] Only material parts of a judgment in a criminal case are the statement of the offense for which the defendant has been convicted and the sentence of the court, and it is not necessary that anything which is contained in the papers which precede it should be repeated therein.—Williams, Ex parte, 89 Cal. 421, 26 Pac. 887.

[k] Judgment in criminal case need not run in name of people of state, under Constitution, article 6, section 20. That section does not include such a judgment.—Ahern, Ex parte, 103 Cal. 412, 37 Pac. 390.

[l] If judgment sufficiently expresses that which is adjudged, failure to recite facts on which it is based does not make it void but merely erroneous.—People v. Kelly, 120 Cal. 273, 52 Pac. 587.

[a] On a conviction under an indictment charging the making and passing of a fictitious check with intent to defraud (Pen. Code, sec. 476), it is error to enter judgment of conviction of forgery (section 470), though the penalty is the same for both offenses.—People v. Eppinger, 114 Cal. 350, 46 Pac. 97.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 588. —— Stating Venue.

§ 589. —— Time of Commencement of Imprisonment.

[a] A sentence of imprisonment for a certain term, "to commence at the expiration of previous sentences," without definitely fixing the time of the commencement of the term, held valid upon habeas corpus, and prisoner remanded.—People v. Forbes, 22 Cal. 135.

[b] Sentence to imprisonment which does not specify any time for the imprisonment to commence is not void. It is sufficient if it states the duration and place of confinement. People v. King, 28 Cal. 265; People v. Hughes, 29 Cal. 257.

[c] Judgment that defendant be imprisoned four years from time of his delivery to warden of penitentiary is not erroneous.—People v. Hughes, 29 Cal. 257.

See, also, post, § 823.

[a] Portion of judgment providing for imprisonment to enforce payment of fine is separable and will not avoid judgment.—Mitchell, Ex parte, 70 Cal. 3, 11 Pac. 488; Soto, Ex parte, 88 Cal. 624, 26 Pac. 530.

[b] Imprisonment until fine is paid at specified rate is valid if total imprisonment does not exceed statutory limitation.—Sing Ah Tong, Ex parte, 84 Cal. 167, 24 Pac. 181.

[a] Where part of sentence is illegal, if part that is valid can be separated from the rest, it will be enforced.—Mitchell, Ex parte, 70 Cal. 1, 11 Pac. 488.

[b] Judgment imposing fine and imprisonment and further imprisonment for nonpayment of fine is void as to latter portion only. Lowrey v. Hogue, 85 Cal. 602, 24 Pac. 995.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1205, where the court imposed a fine and provided for imprisonment in the state prison until payment thereof, it had no authority after the commitment of defendant to modify the provision as to imprisonment.—Sullivan, In re (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 781.

[a] Under Criminal Practice Act, sections 462, 463, providing that the entry of judgment in a criminal case shall state briefly the offense for which conviction was had, an entry that defendant was duly convicted, etc., of the crime of misdemeanor, is sufficient.—Murray, Ex parte, 43 Cal. 455.

[b] Mistake in entry of statement by court to defendant of nature of offense for which he has been convicted does not invalidate the judgment, since it is not a part of it.—People v. Murback, 64 Cal. 369, 30 Pac. 608.

[c] Record in prosecution for felony sufficiently shows that defendant was present in court when verdict was received, if it recites that parties and their attorneys were present at every stage of proceedings, and that upon discharge of jury defendant was remanded to custody of sheriff.—People v. Jung Qung Sing, 70 Cal. 469, 11 Pac. 755.

[d] Where record shows prior convictions which court had right to consider in imposing sentence, omission of clerk to recite prior conviction in entering judgment is harmless error.—People v. Kelly, 120 Cal. 273, 274, 52 Pac. 587.

[e] Record in a criminal case should disclose fact that court at each adjournment admonished the jury, as required by Penal Code, section 1122.—People v. Maughs (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 187.

§ 595. Amending and Correcting Record.

[b] Inherent power of court to amend its records to accord with facts exists in criminal as well as civil cases.—People v. Ward, 141 Cal. 630, 75 Pac. 306.

[d] A record recited a conviction of embezzlement and an order that defendant "be punished by imprisonment in the state at F. for the term of seven years," and concluded with a statement that defendant was to be delivered to the proper officers of "said state prison at F." The only sentence that can be imposed for embezzlement is incarceration in the state prison, and there is a state prison at F. Held, that the record was sufficient to authorize its correction so as to recite an order that defendant be "punished by imprisonment in the state prison at F. for the term of seven years."—People v. Ward, 141 Cal. 628, 75 Pac. 306.

[a] Where the clerk omits to enter the judgment in a criminal case when it is pronounced, defendant being then present, an order to enter the judgment nunc pro tunc may afterwards be made, though defendant is not in court.—People v. Lenon, 79 Cal. 625, 631, 21 Pac. 967.

[b] The trial court can amend its minutes nunc pro tunc to show, in accordance with the fact, that when defendant appeared for judgment, he was asked "if he had any legal cause to show why judgment should not be pronounced against him."—People v. McNulty, 93 Cal. 427, 29 Pac. 61.

[a] If illegal sentence be imposed, court before which conviction was had has power, within reasonable time, to vacate sentence and impose one in accordance with law; and delay of six days between time of first and second sentence is not unreasonable.—Gilmore, Ex parte, 71 Cal. 624, 12 Pac. 800.

[b] Crime of forgery, as defined by section 470 of the Penal Code, and that of passing a fictitious check with intent to defraud, under section 476 of the same code, are different offenses, and the entry of a judgment for forgery upon a charge of passing a fictitious check is a material variance, for which the judgment must be set aside.—People v. Eppinger, 114 Cal. 350, 46 Pac. 97.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 598. Execution of Judgment.

[a] Mode of executing judgments in criminal cases is prescribed and controlled by statute, and not by an order of an appellate court.—People v. Dick, 39 Cal. 102.

Commitment for abduction. See Abduction, § 14.

[b] A commitment to the state prison, which consists only of the history of the proceedings against the prisoner, is fatally defective, as such a commitment should consist of a certified copy of the judgment as entered on the court's minutes.—Gibson, Ex parte, 31 Cal. 619, 91 Am. Dec. 546.

[c] Where the court, at defendant's request, stayed execution of judgment of conviction until the judgment had become final by the expiration of more than a year after its entry without appeal, and without a motion for a new trial, defendant cannot object to an order vacating the order staying execution and directing a commitment to issue; otherwise, the court would be powerless to carry the judgment into effect.—People v. Walker, 61 Pac. 800.

[a] Demurrer to indictment for perjury being sustained, the district attorney took no exception, but moved for and obtained an order submitting the case to another grand jury. Subsequently the people appeal from the order sustaining the demurrer. Held, that the failure to except and taking this order was an acquiescence in the judgment on demurrer, and a waiver of any right of appeal. People v. Wooster, 16 Cal. 435.

[b] It seems that no appeal lies by state from order directing jury to find for defendant.—People v. Horn, 70 Cal. 18, 11 Pac. 470.

[c] Rejection of evidence offered by the people cannot be reviewed, under Penal Code, section 1238, subdivision 5, authorizing an appeal from an order directing the jury to find for defendant.—People v. Roberts, 114 Cal. 67, 45 Pac. 1016.

[d] Where accused was tried in a court of competent jurisdiction on a valid information for attempting to bribe a witness, and was acquitted by a verdict, jeopardy attached, and as she could not again be tried, the case will not be reviewed on appeal by the state. § 603. Dispensing with Rules Governing Appeals.

[a] In cases involving life or liberty or in case of peculiar hardship, supreme court will dispense with rules designed merely to expedite business.—People v. Northey, 77 Cal. 635, 19 Pac. 865, 20 Pac. 129.

§ 604. Mode of Review—Appeal.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 606. —— Certiorari or Habeas Corpus.

[a] Certiorari does not lie to bring up for review an erroneous decision of the county court in overruling a demurrer in a case of misdemeanor.—People v. Burney, 29 Cal. 459.

[b] An erroneous refusal of a county court to hear an appeal, in a criminal case, because no statement was made, is not an excess of the jurisdiction of the county court for which relief may be had by certiorari from the district court.—Morly v. Elkins, 37 Cal. 454.

[c] An error by the court in taxing costs on defendant is not an excess of jurisdiction, and consequently is not reviewable on certiorari.—Petty v. County Court of San Joaquin, 45 Cal. 245.

[d] Under Constitution, article 6, section 4, giving the supreme court appellate jurisdiction, "in all criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or information," no appeal lies from a judgment imposing a fine for contempt. The remedy must be by habeas corpus or certiorari.—Tyler v. Connolly, 65 Cal. 28, 2 Pac. 414.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1067 et seq., providing for writs of certiorari when there is no remedy by appeal, certiorari will not lie to the police court to determine the validity of an ordinance on which a conviction was based, and the sufficiency of the complaint and judgment, but such subjects are determinable on appeal from the conviction, and cannot be reviewed on certiorari, though the right to appeal has been lost by laches, or where an appeal has been heard and decided adversely to appellant.—Valentine v. Police Court of City and County of San Francisco, 141 Cal. 615, 75 Pac. 336.

[f] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1068, providing for a review on certiorari when an inferior tribunal, board, or officer exercising judicial functions exceeds its jurisdiction, and there is no appeal or other adequate remedy, that writ does not lie to review the action of a police judge in ordering or summoning a jury, pursuant to section 230, for the trial of a misdemeanor case.—Wittman v. § 607. Double Appeals.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1176, which provides that the instructions given or refused, with the indorsements thereon, form a part of the record, and the rulings may be reviewed on appeal as though embodied in a bill of exceptions; and section 1237, which provides for an appeal from the judgment of conviction, and from an order refusing a new trial—defendant may prosecute both appeals, and can have alleged error in the giving of instructions considered on either of them, but not on both.—People v. Thompson, 115 Cal. 160, 46 Pac. 912.

[a] Constitution, article 6, section 4, giving the supreme court appellate jurisdiction in "cases at law" involving legality of taxation or municipal fines, refers to civil, as distinguished from criminal, cases.—People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98.

[b] Question, whether supreme court has jurisdiction to review verdict in criminal case upon a question of fact, raised by the attorney general, but not decided.—People v. Dodge, 30 Cal. 448.

[c] Under late constitution, supreme court had appellate jurisdiction in criminal cases, on questions of law alone; and such a question is presented—where the verdict is complained of as being contrary to the evidence—only where there is no evidence to establish the charge; and not where there is evidence tending to prove it.—People v. Smallman, 55 Cal. 185.

[d] Defendants, as New City Hall commissioners for the city and county of San Francisco, were indicted for misconduct in office. Held, this court has jurisdiction of the appeal.—People v. Kalloch, 60 Cal. 113, 115.

[e] The supreme court has jurisdiction of an appeal from a judgment of conviction rendered by a court without jurisdiction.—People v. Pingree, 61 Cal. 141.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 609. —— Dependent on Degree of Crime.

[a] The supreme court of this state has no appellate jurisdiction in cases of misdemeanors or crimes of a less degree than felony, and no jurisdiction can be conferred by the legislature in these cases.—People v. Applegate, 5 Cal. 295.

[b] Supreme court has no jurisdiction of a criminal case not amounting to a felony.—People v. Vick, 7 Cal. 165; People v. Shear, 7 Cal. 140; People v. Burney, 29 Cal. 459; People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98; People v. Aubrey, 53 Cal. 427; People v. Apgar, 35 Cal. 389.

[c] To an indictment for an assault with intent to commit murder, the defendant pleaded guilty of an assault with intent to commit bodily injury, and was sentenced to pay a fine of twelve hundred dollars, or to be imprisoned in the county jail. Held, that the offense was only a misdemeanor, and that the supreme court had no jurisdiction of an appeal.—People v. Cornell, 16 Cal. 187.

[d] Where to an indictment which charges an offense punishable either by imprisonment in the state prison or by fine, a demurrer interposed by the defendant is sustained, and the defendant has judgment thereon, from which the people appeal. Held, that no judgment having been pronounced which protects the defendant from liability to be punished by imprisonment in the state prison, this court has jurisdiction of the appeal.—People v. War, 20 Cal. 117.

[f] In all cases of misdemeanor, the judgment of the county court is final, except where there has been an excess of jurisdiction.—People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98.

[g] This court has no jurisdiction of an appeal where the defendant was convicted of a misdemeanor, although he was indicted for a felony in which the misdemeanor is included. People v. Apgar, 35 Cal. 389.

[h] Jurisdiction of supreme court in criminal cases, on defendant's appeal, is not to be determined by offense charged in indictment, but by offense of which defendant is convicted.—People v. Apgar, 35 Cal. 389.

[i] The provisions of the Penal Code with reference to appeals in criminal cases amounting to felonies are applicable to misdemeanors prosecuted by indictment or information, and the supreme court adopts such as the practice, and will entertain such appeals when taken in the manner prescribed in Penal Code, chapter 1, title 9, part 2.—People v. Jordan, 65 Cal. 644, 4 Pac. 683.

[j] The supreme court has no jurisdiction of an appeal from a judgment of the superior court, affirming a judgment of the police court, adjudging a defendant guilty of a misdemeanor, and imposing a fine.—People v. Meiggs' Wharf Co., 65 Cal. 99.

[a] Where an application to the supreme court for a writ of review is made merely to test the validity of the grand jury, and presents no real controversy between the parties to the record, the court will not take cognizance of it.—People v. Wallace, 91 Cal. 535, 27 Pac. 767.

§ 611. Appealable Judgments and Orders.

[a] Provision of 1 Hittell's Digest, page 299, article 2068, section 481, that the party aggrieved in a criminal action, whether the people or the defendant, may appeal, etc., when construed with reference to Constitution, article 1, section 8, providing that no person shall be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, must be understood to have reference to such errors, only, as may occur in the proceedings before the legal jeopardy attaches.—People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467.

[c] No appeal lies to the supreme court from a judgment in a criminal case, unless it is one prosecuted by indictment or information.—Tyler v. Connolly, 65 Cal. 28, 2 Pac. 414.

[a] Under our statute, motions for continuance in criminal cases are subject to review upon appeal.—People v. Diaz, 6 Cal. 248.

[a] Order dismissing an information for want of prosecution is not appealable.—People v. Hollis, 65 Cal. 78, 2 Pac. 893.

[b] No appeal lies on behalf of the people from order made by superior court, of its own motion, dismissing criminal action.—People v. More, 71 Cal. 546, 12 Pac. 631.

[b] An order of the court, setting aside an indictment for a felony, and discharging the defendant without delay, constitutes a final disposition of the case, and is a final judgment in the sense of the statute in relation to appeals in criminal cases. Crim. Prac. Act, sec. 481.—People v. Stacey, 34 Cal. 307.

[d] An order setting aside an information accusing a defendant of a felony is not appealable, and an appeal by the people therefrom must be dismissed.—People v. Richter, 113 Cal. 473, 45 Pac. 811; People v. Higgins, 114 Cal. 63, 45 Pac. 1004.

[e] Order denying motion to set aside indictment is not appealable.—People v. Simmons, 119 Cal. 2, 50 Pac. 844.

[f] Order denying motion to set aside indictment is reviewable on appeal from judgment when proceedings are brought up by bill of exceptions.—People v. Simmons, 119 Cal. 2, 50 Pac. 844.

[a] Order overruling a demurrer is not an order affecting a substantial right, and is not appealable.—People v. Ah Fong, 12 Cal. 424; People v. Hall, 45 Cal. 253.

[b] To an indictment for an offense punishable both as a felony and as a misdemeanor, a demurrer was sustained. Held, that an appeal from the judgment sustaining the demurrer would lie, since no judgment had been pronounced protecting the defendant from liability to a punishment as for felony.—People v. War, 20 Cal. 117.

[c] Order sustaining a demurrer to an indictment is a final judgment in the court granting it, from which an appeal will lie.—People v. Ah Own, 39 Cal. 604.

[e] A demurrer to an indictment was sustained, and the court ordered the district attorney to file an information against defendant. Held, that the order was not appealable. People v. Specht, 62 Cal. 537.

[g] People have a right to appeal from an order sustaining a demurrer to an indictment where the order is excepted to; and the fact that the court of its own motion or volition directed a submission of the case to another grand jury cannot affect the right of appeal, and a motion to dismiss such appeal upon the ground that the court directed such submission will be denied.—People v. Lee, 107 Cal. 477, 40 Pac. 754.

[a] It is within the power, and it is the duty of the court, where the accused has been acquitted on the ground of variance, to order his detention and to direct a new information; but, as a new information can be filed without the order of the court, there is no practical utility in an appeal from an order refusing to detain the prisoner, and an appeal, therefore, will not be entertained.—People v. Allen, 61 Cal. 140.

[b] Order refusing to allow second information to be filed after setting aside first is appealable.—People v. More, 68 Cal. 504, 9 Pac. 461, 463.

[a] Statute authorizing appeal from order granting or refusing new trial, or which affects a substantial right, does not apply to interlocutory orders made in the progress of the trial.—People v. Ah Fong, 12 Cal. 424.

[b] By the provisions of Criminal Practice Act, section 484, to the effect that intermediate orders or proceedings forming part of the record of a criminal case may be reviewed on appeal from the final judgment, it is intended to prohibit a separable appeal from such intermediate orders or proceedings. People v. Clarke, 42 Cal. 622.

[c] An order of a county court directing that a criminal charge, ignored by one grand jury, be submitted to another, is not the subject of an independent appeal, but is only reviewable, if at all, on an appeal from the final judgment. The true construction of the provisions of the Criminal Practice Act on this subject is that orders and proceedings occurring prior to the judgment which are subject to review can be corrected on an appeal from the judgment, or from an order granting or refusing a new trial; while an order affecting a substantial right of a party, made after final judgment, can be reviewed on a direct appeal from the order.—People v. Clarke, 42 Cal. 622.

[a] An appeal will not lie from an order overruling a motion to correct the minutes of the court as to arraignment of defendant, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 963, allowing an appeal from a special order made after final judgment.—People v. Walker, 61 Pac. 800.

§ 620. —— Denying New Trial.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1172, which provides for an exception to an order denying a new trial, such order may be reviewed on an appeal from the judgment on a proper record; and there is no necessity for a separate appeal from the order, though both are provided for by section 1237.—People v. Thompson, 115 Cal. 160, 46 Pac. 912.

[b] An appeal will not lie from an order denying a motion for a new trial.—People v. Majors, 2 Pac. 744.

[a] That portion of Criminal Practice Acts, section 481, which authorizes an appeal from an order "which affects a substantial right in a criminal case, amounting to a felony," applies only to orders made after final judgment. People v. Clarke, 42 Cal. 622.

[b] An order of court fixing the time of sentence, after conviction of felony, is not an appealable order, and an exception taken to such order, because it provided for a sentence before the time provided by law, is not reviewable.—People v. Mess, 65 Cal. 174, 3 Pac. 670.

[c] Under Penal Code, section 1237, subdivision 3, order, made after a capital conviction, fixing the time and place of execution, may be appealed.—People v. McNulty, 95 Cal. 594, 30 Pac. 963.

[d] Where the death warrant was signed on the third day after the judgment was entered, but not in the presence of defendant or of his counsel, or with the knowledge of either, such order is appealable, under Penal Code, section 1237, providing that an appeal may be taken by defendant from an order made after judgment, affecting his substantial rights.—People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652, 49 Pac. 1049, 40 L. R. A. 269; People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 201, 51 Pac. 185.

[e] Order directing the entry of judgment nunc pro tunc, as of a prior date, reciting that judgment was then duly rendered, and that the clerk failed to enter it fully and correctly, is an order after judgment affecting a substantial right of the defendant, which is appealable.—Ward v. Dunne, 136 Cal. 19, 68 Pac. 105.

[f] Under Penal Code, section 1174, order made after judgment, refusing to settle a bill of exceptions, is not final and appealable, under section 1237, as an order, made after judgment, affecting defendant's substantial rights.—People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 32, 70 Pac. 918.

§ 622. —— Refusing to Set Aside Order or Judgment.

[a] An order refusing to hear a motion to set aside a former order denying a new trial is not appealable.—People v. Mayne, 118 Cal. 516, 62 Am. St. Rep. 256, 50 Pac. 654.

[b] Where defendant moved to vacate a judgment and correct the minutes on the ground that they incorrectly stated that before sentence defendant was informed of the nature of the charge, plea and verdict, and asked if there was any reason why judgment should not be pronounced against him, an appeal would lie from orders refusing the motions, as they affected substantial rights, and could not have been reviewed on appeal from the judgment. Judgment (1900) 61 Pac. 800, modified.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

[c] An appeal will not lie from an order overruling a motion to discharge from imprisonment, nor from an order denying a motion to vacate the judgment of conviction, since the judgment of conviction was appealable, and all objections could have been reviewed on appeal from it.—People v. Walker, 61 Pac. 800.

[a] Appeal cannot be taken from an order made after a verdict of guilty, in a criminal case, arresting the judgment.—People v. Ah Kim, 44 Cal. 384.

§ 624. —— Denying Motion in Arrest of Judgment.

[a] Order denying motion in arrest of judgment is not appealable.—People v. Henry, 77 Cal. 446, 19 Pac. 830; People v. Dolan, 96 Cal. 315, 31 Pac. 107; People v. Sansome, 98 Cal. 235, 33 Pac. 202; People v. Burgle, 123 Cal. 303, 55 Pac. 998; People v. Ford, 138 Cal. 140, 70 Pac. 1075; People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 462, 71 Pac. 566; People v. Cadot, 138 Cal. 527, 71 Pac. 649; People v. Matuszewski, 138 Cal. 533, 71 Pac. 701; People v. Lonnen, 139 Cal. 634, 73 Pac. 586; People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.) 86 Pac. 1100.

[c] No appeal lies from an order denying a motion in arrest of judgment, but it can be reviewed only on appeal from the judgment. Judgment (1900) 61 Pac. 800, modified.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

[d] Appeal will not lie from an order denying a motion in arrest of judgment, since it may be reviewed on appeal from final judgment.—People v. Walker, 61 Pac. 800.

§ 625. Necessity for Objection in Lower Court.

[b] Where defendant filed an affidavit for trial before another judge because of prejudice, as authorized by Code of Civil Procedure, section 170, and counter-affidavits of the judge were filed, and considered by the court in determining whether the judge was disqualified, without objection of defendant, it is too late to make such objection on appeal from conviction.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[a] Objections to an indictment on account of the omission of certain words, or of alleged uncertainty in the form of allegations, not appearing to have been raised in the court below, by demurrer or otherwise, will not be noticed by the appellate court.—People v. Gatewood, 20 Cal. 146.

[b] Failure to demur to an indictment for burglary which charges that the defendant entered, etc., with intent to commit a felony, without stating what particular felony, does not waive the objection.—People v. Nelson, 58 Cal. 104.

[c] Objection that facts stated in indictment do not constitute a crime may be taken for the first time in the appellate court, and is not waived by failing to demur or move in arrest of judgment in the trial court.—People v. McKenna, 81 Cal. 158, 22 Pac. 488.

[d] Where the affidavit and information charge a public offense of which the court has jurisdiction, an objection thereto on the ground of uncertainty cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.—People v. Nesbitt, 102 Cal. 327, 36 Pac. 654.

[e] Objection that information lacks certainty and directness cannot be raised for first time on appeal.—People v. Ellenwood, 119 Cal. 168, 51 Pac. 553.

[f] An information against defendant for the crime of rape alleged that "said P., on August 10, 1900, at the county of S., and before the filing of this information, with one C., a female child under the age of sixteen years, to wit, of the age of fourteen years, and not the wife of the said defendant, P., unlawfully and feloniously did," etc. Held, that the information was not void, as against objection first made on appeal, as failing to charge that the prosecutrix was not the wife of defendant on August 10, 1900.—People v. Parks, 133 Cal. 3, 65 Pac. 13.

[g] Conviction under statutes of 1891, page 285, chapter 206, will not be reversed on appeal because the indictment did not charge that defendant, in permitting his wife to be placed in a house of prostitution, did so for the purpose of prostitution, where the objection was not made by demurrer, but by motion in arrest.—People v. Mead, 145 Cal. 500, 76 Pac. 1047.

§ 627. —— Competency of Jurors and Rulings Thereon.

[a] When a challenge to a juror for actual bias is tried by the court, its judgment upon that issue will not be reviewed by the appellate court, unless an exception is taken to its ruling in admitting or rejecting evidence. People v. Cotta, 49 Cal. 166.

[b] A judgment will not be reversed on the ground that a juror was not on the assessment-roll, in a case where the competency of the juror was not objected to when the juror was called.—People v. Mortier, 58 Cal. 262.

[c] Examination of juror or any ruling during its continuance cannot be made the foundation for alleged error, unless the challenge is taken at some stage of the proceedings in the court below.—People v. Hamilton, 62 Cal. 377, 382.

[d] The disallowance of challenges of jurors for actual bias will not be reviewed where defendant did not challenge the jurors peremptorily, nor exhaust his peremptory challenges.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 85, 50 Pac. 390.

[a] An objection that the jury were not duly selected and summoned cannot be raised in the appellate court for the first time.—Spencer v. Doane, 23 Cal. 418.

[b] An objection in a criminal case that the special venire was placed in the hands of the coroner rather than the sheriff, without any showing why it was so placed, cannot be raised on appeal, where no such fact was stated as a basis of the challenge to the panel. People v. Enwright, 134 Cal. 527, 66 Pac. 726.

§ 629. —— Appointment of Jury Trial.

[a] An objection to the appointment of a trier must be made at the time of such appointment, and exception to the court's ruling thereon must be reserved in the usual way.—People v. Voll, 43 Cal. 166.

[a] Error in the admission of evidence is not ground for reversal where no objections were made or exceptions taken thereto.—People v. Reinhart, 39 Cal. 449; People v. Moan, 65 Cal. 532; 4 Pac. 545.

[c] Where no objection is taken to admission of evidence, supreme court will assume that it was by consent of all parties.—People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 580, 10 Pac. 207; People v. Northey, 77 Cal. 633, 19 Pac. 865, 20 Pac. 129.

[e] Question should clearly disclose what it is proposed to prove, or proposition to prove certain facts should be submitted to court below and refused in order to present question to appellate court.—People v. Powell, 87 Cal. 365, 25 Pac. 481.

[f] On trial for forgery of a note, where, to show a guilty intent, other alleged forged notes were admitted in evidence on proof of extrajudicial confessions by defendant that they were forged by him, and the only objection made was that the notes were incompetent, immaterial and irrelevant, the objection that sufficient foundation for their admission was not laid cannot be made for the first time on appeal.—People v. Baird, 105 Cal. 126, 38 Pac. 633.

[g] Defendant objected to a question, and his objection was overruled, and he excepted. The question, however, was not answered. Subsequently the same question was asked and answered without objection by defendant. Held, that an objection thereto could not be urged on appeal.—People v. Miller, 122 Cal. 84, 54 Pac. 523.

[h] Where checks executed by the sureties of a tax collector to the county treasurer were admitted in a prosecution for embezzlement as tending to show the amount of the embezzlement by showing that a certain amount had been paid to the treasurer on the tax collector's account, and not by him, the admission could not be complained of on appeal on the ground that it must have raised a presumption that defendant was short in his accounts, in the absence of an objection on such ground at the trial.—People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472.

[i] Objections to the evidence as to the age of prosecutrix in a rape case on the ground that it was based on hearsay, and not the best evidence, must be made in the trial court, or they will not be passed on by the appellate court.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[j] Two defendants were jointly tried for murder—the same counsel acting for both—and a statement of one defendant was erroneously admitted over the objection that it was not voluntary. This was the only objection made, though as to the other defendant the statement was objectionable only because it was hearsay. Held, that on appeal the latter defendant was not precluded from taking advantage of the error because there was no objection on the ground of hearsay, but that both defendants were entitled to take advantage of the objection made.—People v. Gonzales, 136 Cal. 666, 69 Pac. 487.

[k] On prosecution for larceny, a witness on cross-examination was asked if he did not have defendant arrested because of information that a certain person gave him, to which he replied, "Well, principally," and that he knew nothing of his own knowledge against defendant. He was then asked by the prosecution, "Just state why you had him arrested." Held, that hearsay testimony and argumentative matter elicited by the latter question, not having been objected to on any motion made to strike out the same, afforded no ground for reversal.—People v. Cole, 141 Cal. 88, 74 Pac. 547.

[m] In a prosecution for robbery, where the complaining witness was absent and could not be found in the state at the time of the trial, but had testified on the preliminary hearing of the defendant, and his testimony, properly certified and filed by the shorthand reporter, was introduced and read in evidence, the defendant is in no position to predicate error on the fact that the shorthand reporter testified as to the correctness of the transcript of his notes and what was said in the preliminary examination by the witness, where no objection was made nor exception taken at the time on the part of the defendant.—People v. Lewandowski, 143 Cal. 574, 77 Pac. 467.

[n] The deposition of a witness, taken at a preliminary hearing of defendant and read in evidence in a prosecution for robbery, pursuant to Penal Code, section 686, subdivision 3, showed that the witness, after testifying that three men attacked him, two of them pointing their pistols at him, was asked to state whether he saw two of the men in court, and according to the deposition his answer was, "There is one; that fellow [pointing]." Held, that defendant was in no position to predicate error on the admission of the testimony of the shorthand reporter, who took down the testimony, to the effect that witness pointed at defendant; no objection having been made to the question, nor motion made to strike out the answer.—People v. Lewandowski, 143 Cal. 574, 77 Pac. 467.

[o] Proceedings pursuant to a stipulation that the preliminary evidence as to the admissibility of a confession, and the argument on defendant's objections, should be heard in the absence of the jury, will not be reviewed, in the absence of objection and exception in the trial court.—People v. Evans, 41 Pac. 444.

[a] When no objection to the court's instruction to a witness is made at the time it is given, no objection can afterward be raised to it in the appellate court.—People v. Bruzzo, 24 Cal. 41.

[b] Where defendant neither objects nor excepts to the remarks of the trial court or his conduct in examining witnesses, such objections cannot be urged on appeal.—People v. Bishop, 134 Cal. 682, 66 Pac. 976.

[a] Intemperate language in the closing argument of the prosecuting attorney is not ground for reversal of a conviction, in the absence of any showing that the trial judge's attention was called to it, and where the result reached is clearly right upon the evidence. People v. Shem Ah Fook, 64 Cal. 380, 1 Pac. 347; (1890) People v. Beaver, 83 Cal. 419, 23 Pac. 321.

[b] That sheriff and district attorney laid bowie-knife, pistol and coat of mail on table before jury, which were not put in evidence, is not ground for reversal where court's attention was not called to them and no instructions were asked in respect to them.—People v. Cox, 76 Cal. 284, 18 Pac. 332.

[c] Improper argument will not be considered on appeal where no action of court forbidding it was requested.—People v. Beaver, 83 Cal. 420, 23 Pac. 321.

[e] Where an objection to the language of the district attorney used on the argument is general, and the court's attention was in no way directed to any particular feature complained of, the fact that the district attorney improperly commented upon or called attention to the personal appearance of the defendant as a factor in the evidence, though the defendant did not submit himself as a witness in the case, cannot be taken advantage of for the first time on appeal. In order to avail himself of the objection, it was the duty of the defendant to direct the court's attention specifically to such transgression of the people's privilege.—People v. Frigerio, 107 Cal. 151, 40 Pac. 107.

[f] Objection to improper remarks by counsel in his address to the jury cannot be urged for the first time on appeal.—People v. Kramer, 117 Cal. 647, 49 Pac. 842.

[g] Misconduct of the district attorney cannot be reviewed where no objection is made or exception taken.—People v. Brittan, 118 Cal. 409, 50 Pac. 664.

[h] Misconduct of the prosecuting attorney while cross-examining a witness, if not objected to at the time, cannot be considered on appeal.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[i] A new trial should not be granted for improper remarks of district attorney, where defendant merely excepted to the statement, since its effect would have been removed if defendant had asked the court to instruct the jury to disregard it.—People v. Shears, 133 Cal. 154, 65 Pac. 295.

[j] An objection to the manner in which the district attorney questioned a witness cannot be made for the first time on appeal. People v. Farrington, 140 Cal. 656, 74 Pac. 288.

[k] Objection to the remarks of the district attorney in a criminal case cannot be made for the first time in the appellate court.—People v. Owens (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 980.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 633. —— Instructions.

[a] Objection that court below directed jury to find specially, as to particular fact, comes too late if made in the supreme court for the first time, it not appearing that the party objecting was injured by the direction.—People v. Chu Quong, 15 Cal. 332.

[b] Where, on trial of an indictment for assault with intent to rob, the court charged, at defendant's request, that it must be shown that defendant committed the assault as charged, and with the intent charged, in order to convict, and the forms of verdict approved by defendant's counsel were sent to the jury—one of "Guilty of assault with intent to commit robbery," and one of "Not guilty,"—defendant could not, after verdict, object that a form for the lesser crime of assault was not also submitted.—People v. Hite, 135 Cal. 76, 67 Pac. 57.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 634. —— —— Necessity for Request.

[a] If charge, in a criminal case, is sufficiently comprehensive, under Criminal Practice Act, section 400, it is not open to the objection of being too general, especially where the accused does not request it to be made more specific or minute.—People v. Byrnes, 30 Cal. 206.

[b] Defendant in criminal case cannot complain that court did not instruct the jury upon a point in issue, unless he asked an instruction on the point, and it was refused.—People v. Ah Wee, 48 Cal. 236.

[e] Appellant cannot complain that charge lacks explicitness unless he has requested more explicit instruction.—People v. Marshall, 120 Cal. 71, 52 Pac. 129.

[f] Omission to charge on material issue is not reversible in absence of request.—People v. Appleton, 120 Cal. 252, 52 Pac. 582.

[g] Upon trial of charge of rape, where the defendant requested no instruction that the jury might find him guilty of the lesser offense of an attempt to commit rape, it is not reversible error for the court to fail to give such instruction of its own motion.—People v. Bailey, 142 Cal. 434, 76 Pac. 49.

[h] Defendant cannot complain, on appeal, of the court's failure to instruct on any particular proposition of law, where he did not request such instruction.—People v. Smith (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 449.

§ 635. —— Custody and Conduct of Jury.

[a] Where a party in the trial of a criminal action sees or knows of an act of misconduct by a juror which he does not bring to the attention of the court, or object to at the time, or at any other time during the trial, or on the hearing of a motion for a new trial, it will be too late to make it the basis of objection and exception on appeal.—People v. McCoy, 71 Cal. 395, 12 Pac. 272.

[b] If, during trial, a juror appears to be intoxicated in court, defendant should object to his serving before the jury retire.—People v. Deegan, 88 Cal. 602, 26 Pac. 500.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 636. —— —— Separation.

[a] Separation of jury cannot be considered on appeal unless objected to when opportunity was offered.—People v. Tarm Poi, 86 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 998.

§ 637. —— View or Inspection by Jury.

[a] In the absence of objection, it will be presumed that the consent of the parties

was had to an inspection by the jury, after the instructions had been given, of articles of wearing apparel having a bearing on the case.—People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 576, 10 Pac. 207.

[b] Upon the trial of a defendant accused of receiving stolen property, knowing it to have been stolen, it is an improper and unauthorized proceeding to conduct the jury to view a steer alleged to have been one of the cattle stolen, the only authorized view of a jury being of the place in which the offense is charged to have been committed; but if the proceeding is not objected to as being irregular and unauthorized, and an exception is taken only upon grounds which are not tenable, it cannot be objected on appeal for the first time that the proceeding was irregular and unauthorized.—People v. Fitzpatrick, 80 Cal. 538, 22 Pac. 215.

[a] Judgment pronounced sooner than two days after verdict cannot be objected to for first time on appeal.—People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 174, 25 Pac. 1116; People v. Barton, 88 Cal. 177, 25 Pac. 1117.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 639. Sufficiency of Objection.

[b] Failure to specify objection to admitted evidence which might have been obviated if specified, is waived by failure to specify such objection with particularity; and where proffered evidence admitted is imperfect by lack of preliminary proof, which may or may not be supplied, objector must specify that objection, and a general objection to the evidence is not sufficient to warrant an investigation on appeal as to the insufficiency of the preliminary proof.—People v. Louie Foo, 112 Cal. 17, 44 Pac. 453.

[c] On a prosecution for burglary, a witness was allowed to state as a fact that two exhibits were written by the same person. Defendant objected only on the ground that the corpus delicti had not been proven. Held, that the error was not available to defendant on appeal.—People v. Lang, 142 Cal. 482, 76 Pac. 232.

[a] Where a defendant's objection to the admission of testimony on the trial is general he cannot be permitted to make it special, for the first time, in this court.—People v. Glenn, 10 Cal. 32.

[b] Defendant, in a criminal case, cannot on appeal abandon the ground of objection to the admission of evidence made on the trial, and assign a new ground.—People v. McCauley, 45 Cal. 146.

§ 641. Necessity for Motion to Strike Out.

[a] Where, on a prosecution for an assault on a boy, he has testified without objection to what he told his mother on complaint made to her, the admission of the mother's testimony, in answer but not responsive, to a proper question, that the boy said somebody had done something to him, is not prejudicial; no motion being made to strike out such answer.—People v. Swist, 136 Cal. 520, 69 Pac. 223.

[b] Where there is no motion to strike out hearsay and argumentative matter in answer, objection cannot be raised on appeal.—People v. Cole, 141 Cal. 92, 74 Pac. 547.

[a] The supreme court will not, on appeal, review technical irregularities happening during a trial in the district court, which were not excepted to at the time, and which did not work injustice.—People v. McCauley, 1 Cal. 379.

[b] When the record fails to show that exceptions were taken to a ruling, the ruling will not be reviewed.—People v. Miller, 122 Cal. 84, 54 Pac. 523.

[c] On a prosecution for murder, a ruling of the trial court, not excepted to, held not reviewable on appeal.—People v. Woods, 147 Cal. 265, 81 Pac. 652.

[d] Questions as to the ruling of the court in connection with the argument of the district attorney cannot be reviewed on appeal, where no exception was taken.—People v. Melandrez (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 372.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Rulings on evidence cannot be considered unless proper exceptions are reversed.—People v. Morino, 85 Cal. 517, 24 Pac. 892.

[b] Rulings of the trial court upon the admission of evidence will not be reviewed where no exceptions thereto are found in the record.—People v. Lon Yeck, 123 Cal. 246, 55 Pac. 984.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 644. —— Remarks of Court.

[a] An objection to remarks made by the trial court in the presence of the jury, touching the conduct of appellant's attorney in regard to the bribery of a witness, will not be considered upon appeal where no exception was noted to the course pursued by the court. People v. Abbott, 101 Cal. 645, 36 Pac. 129.

[a] Where the court overrules a challenge, and the prisoner excepts, the exception is to the decision overruling the challenge, and not to the right of the court to decide the question at all.—People v. Renfrow, 41 Cal. 37.

§ 646. Necessity for Motion for New Trial.

[a] If, in a criminal case, the defendant is tried on a good indictment, and convicted and sentenced, and an error of law occurs in the progress of the trial to defendant's prejudice and he appeals, the judgment must be reversed, although the defendant does not ask for a new trial.—People v. Olwell, 28 Cal. 456.

[b] Exceptions do not lie to the acts or conduct of the officers of the court, but the question must be raised on motion for new trial.—People v. Torres, 38 Cal. 141.

[c] The alleged misconduct of a juror, which was not made one of the grounds for a new trial, will not be considered on appeal.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 317, 20 Pac. 719.

[d] Where the defendant in a criminal case fails to testify in his own behalf, the district attorney has no right, in addressing the jury, to comment upon such failure; but error in making such comments can only be availed of on motion for new trial, and is waived unless properly presented upon the record of such motion.—People v. Sansome, 98 Cal. 235, 33 Pac. 202.

[e] On appeal from a judgment in a criminal case, a defendant, without having made a motion for a new trial, may, if he has a bill of exceptions as provided in Penal Code, section 1171, rely on any of the grounds of exception mentioned in section 1170, including decisions in admitting or rejecting testimony. People v. Walker, 142 Cal. 90, 75 Pac. 658.

See 12 Cyc. 822, 823; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 462-469, §§ 2676-2684.

C. PROCEEDING FOR TRANSFER OF CAUSE, AND EFFECT THEREOF.

IN GENERAL, § 647.
TIME TO APPEAL, § 648.
CERTIFICATE OF PROBABLE CAUSE, § 649.
NOTICE OF APPEAL, § 650.
CALENDAR, § 651.
EFFECT OF TRANSFER, § 652.
—— APPEAL ON ISSUE OF INSANITY, § 653
—— STAY OF PROCEEDINGS, § 654.

§ 647. In General.

[a] A single justice of the supreme court held without jurisdiction to grant the application of an attorney convicted of perjury, for permission to visit the county clerk's office to enable him as his own attorney to prepare an appeal to the district court of appeals.—People v. Collins (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 895.

[a] Appeal from order denying new trial must be dismissed if taken after time limited therefor by section 1239, Penal Code.—People v. Daniels, 105 Cal. 262, 38 Pac. 720.

[b] Where an order is made fixing the time of execution of defendant at a date which renders the preparation and presentation of a bill of exceptions to the supreme court, in an application for a certificate of probable cause, impossible, the order is void on its face, and justifies the issuance of a certificate without a bill of exceptions.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 201, 51 Pac. 185.

[c] The limitation in the Penal Code of one year after the rendition of the judgment within which "an appeal from a judgment must be taken," is mandatory; and this court has no jurisdiction to entertain such appeal taken after the lapse of that period, and it must be dismissed.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

[d] Under Penal Code, section 1239, requiring appeal from a judgment to be taken within a year, an appeal from a conviction in a criminal case, taken more than one year after rendition of judgment, cannot be considered. People v. Walker, 61 Pac. 800.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 649. Certificate of Probable Cause.

[a] Certificate of probable cause for appeal should be granted when case presented is debatable, not palpably frivolous and vexatious, and productive of honest difference of opinion.—Adams, In re, 81 Cal. 167, 22 Pac. 547.

[b] To warrant certificate of probable cause for appeal, it is not necessary that there be probable ground for reversal.—Adams, In re, 81 Cal. 166, 22 Pac. 547.

[c] On application for certificate of probable cause, judge should give prisoner benefit of every doubt.—Adams, In re, 81 Cal. 168, 22 Pac. 547.

[d] Judge must grant certificate of probable cause for appeal, though he believes conviction regular and valid, unless case is so clear as to admit of no rational doubt or serious discussion.—Adams, In re, 81 Cal. 167, 22 Pac. 547.

[e] Certificate of probable cause will be granted by supreme court only on notice to district attorney and production of settled bill of exceptions or copy thereof.—Adams, In re, 81 Cal. 164, 22 Pac. 547.

[f] Remedy for refusal of certificate of probable cause for appeal is not by appeal from order, but by renewing application before justice of supreme court.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 209, 51 Pac. 185.

[g] Appellant from a judgment of conviction of a felony has a right to have it determined by the trial court, or by a justice of this court, whether there is probable cause for his appeal and to have a stay of proceedings in a proper case; and is entitled to a reasonable stay until the matter can be determined.—People v. Clark, 125 Cal. 251, 57 Pac. 986.

[h] Under Penal Code, section 1243, providing for certificate by the trial judge or a justice of the supreme court of probable cause for appealing from a judgment of conviction of a crime, but not from an order entered after judgment, a justice of the supreme court will not grant such certificate on an appeal from an order for the execution of a capital sentence, but the application for certificate or supersedeas should be made to the court.—People v. Ross, 135 Cal. 59, 67 Pac. 13.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 650. Notice of Appeal.

[a] Notice of an appeal taken by the people in a criminal case must be served on the defendant personally, if he reside in the county where the trial took place, and service on his attorney will not be sufficient.—People v. Wallace, 23 Cal. 93.

[b] Where it appears from the indorsements on a notice of appeal that the notice was filed on the day of its date, and an admission of service was indorsed beneath the indorsement of filing, the service will be presumed to have been made on the day of the filing.—People v. Ah Yute, 56 Cal. 119.

[c] A notice of appeal in a criminal case may be signed by an attorney other than the attorney of record for accused, since Code, sections 284, 285, requiring a formal substitution of attorneys, do not apply to criminal cases.—Clarke, Ex parte, 62 Cal. 490.

[d] A notice of appeal entitled "In the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California," and referring to the order of "said court," plainly indicates the intention to appeal from an order of the superior court.—People v. Jordan, 65 Cal. 644, 4 Pac. 683.

[f] Judgment was rendered December 2, 1899, but was not entered until an order was made November 19, 1901, directing the entry nunc pro tunc. Afterward, more than a year from December 2, 1899, defendant filed his notice of appeal. Held, that as, if the order nunc pro tunc was proper, the notice was too late, and if it was improper there was no judgment to appeal from, an order directing the clerk of the lower court to print a transcript would be refused.—People v. Ward, 138 Cal. 684, 72 Pac. 343.

[g] Service on district attorney of a notice of appeal from an order denying a new trial on a conviction of crime, after the expiration of more than sixty days after the denial of the new trial, is ineffectual.—People v. Salas (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 295.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Criminal causes are regularly placed on the first calendar of the supreme court made up (whether for Sacramento, Los Angeles, or San Francisco) after the records are filed, regardless of the county in which the case was tried.—People v. McDermott, 97 Cal. 247, 32 Pac. 7.

[b] Rules for making up calendar and filing brief are designed to expedite, not delay, decision of causes and will be disregarded when their enforcement would have latter effect.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 205, 206, 51 Pac. 185.

[c] When attorney general has confessed error, appeal may be decided immediately without waiting to place cause on calendar in regular course.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 205, 206, 51 Pac. 185.

[a] Appeal does not lie from an order of the superior court refusing a new trial on the plea of former conviction, and it is within the power of the court to proceed with the trial of a case where such attempted appeal has been taken and is still pending in the appellate court.—People v. Majors, 65 Cal. 138.

[b] Penal Code, section 1243, provides that an appeal to the superior court from a conviction in a capital case stays the execution of judgment. Held, that the warden of the state prison need not, on such an appeal by the prisoner, deliver him to the sheriff of the county where he was tried.—Fredricks, Ex parte, 104 Cal. 400, 38 Pac. 51.

[c] While an appeal from an order denying a new trial is pending, the superior court has no jurisdiction to change the order.—People v. Mayne, 118 Cal. 516, 62 Am. St. Rep. 256, 50 Pac. 654.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 653. —— Appeal on Issue of Insanity.

[a] Trial on main charge in indictment will not be postponed because of appeal on the issue of insanity.—People v. Moice, 15 Cal. 329.

[a] Stay of execution of capital punishment may be allowed in supreme court.—State v. Tanner, 2 Cal. 257.

[b] Under Penal Code, section 1243, providing that an appeal from a judgment of death

shall not stay execution unless the judge of the court in which the conviction was had, or one of the justices of the supreme court shall certify "that in his opinion there is probable cause for the appeal," in the absence of any such certificate by the trial judge, the supreme court will refuse a supersedeas, where it is satisfied, by examining the record, that there were no errors resulting in the judgment, and that there is "no probable cause for the appeal."—People v. Valencia, 45 Cal. 304.

[c] Temporary stay of proceedings may be granted by superior or supreme court pending preparation of petition for certificate of probable cause.—Adams, In re, 81 Cal. 165, 22 Pac. 547.

[d] Under Penal Code, section 1243, providing that "an appeal . . . . from a judgment of conviction stays the execution of the judgment in all capital cases, and in all other cases upon filing . . . . a certificate of the judge . . . . or of a justice of the supreme court that in his opinion there is probable cause for the appeal, but not otherwise," an appeal from an order fixing the time and place of execution does not stay the execution, unless such a certificate is filed.—People v. McNulty, 95 Cal. 594, 30 Pac. 963.

[e] Where a defendant convicted of murder is refused a certificate of probable cause by the superior court, and is also refused a stay of proceedings pending settlement of his bill of exceptions, in order that he may renew the application for such a certificate in the appellate court, a stay will be granted by the chief justice of the supreme court pending the settlement of the bill of exceptions and the application in that court for a certificate of probable cause.—People v. Lane, 96 Cal. 596, 31 Pac. 580.

[f] By appeal to superior court enforcement of judgment appealed from is stayed until after determination of appeal; and until its determination proceedings is a pending action in which the rights of neither party have been conclusively determined.—Spears v. County of Modoc, 101 Cal. 303, 35 Pac. 869.

[g] Imprisonment, if part of penalty is not stayed without a certificate of probable cause for appeal.—Fredericks, Ex parte, 104 Cal. 400, 38 Pac. 51.

[h] It is the appeal and not the merit of appellant's contention that operates as stay. Edgar, Ex parte, 119 Cal. 127, 51 Pac. 29.

[i] Appeal from order fixing date of execution does not stay execution without certificate of probable cause.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 209, 51 Pac. 185.

[j] Petitioner having appealed from a judgment of imprisonment, and the judge before whom he was tried, and likewise the presiding judge, being absent, and the judge temporarily acting in his place having refused a stay pending return of the trial judge, the supreme court will stay proceedings till the trial judge returns and hears application for a certificate of probable cause, or till some other judge of the same court appointed to act in his place has heard and decided it.—People v. Clark, 125 Cal. 251, 57 Pac. 986.

[k] Where a defendant was convicted of a felony, and the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court, and defendant was granted a writ of error to the federal supreme court, the sheriff has no authority to deliver the defendant to the warden of the state prison pending the decision of the federal court, since the writ of error operated as a supersedeas.—Rodley, Ex parte, 132 Cal. 40, 64 Pac. 91.

under any circumstances, the judgment will be reversed, even though the facts on which it is based are not brought up in the record. People v. Levison, 16 Cal. 98, 76 Am. Dec. 505; People v. Long, 39 Cal. 694.

[b] Record of trial for murder need not show affirmatively that charge was in writing.—People v. Chung Lit, 17 Cal. 320.

[c] Under Practice Act, if it appears, on appeal, that the court below had no jurisdiction of the offense of an accessary, judgment will be arrested, although the want of jurisdiction is not stated as one of the grounds of the appeal.—People v. Hodges, 27 Cal. 340.

[d] Failure of reporter to take down oral charge must affirmatively appear of record. People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 175, 25 Pac. 1116; People v. Barton, 88 Cal. 178, 25 Pac. 1117.

[f] A clerical error in the minutes of the court in stating that "the jury, defendant, and all counsel" were present at a time specified will be disregarded where the bill of exceptions states that "defendants and respective counsel" were then present, nor can the defendants impeach the verity of the bill of exceptions, and if any of them were not present, that fact should have been made affirmatively to appear; nor is the silence of the record in failing to show that defendants were present when the verdict was rendered ground for reversal, all intendments upon appeal being in favor of the regularity of the judgment, and error will not be presumed, but the absence of the defendants, or any of them, must be made to appear affirmatively in the record.—People v. Holmes, 118 Cal. 444, 50 Pac. 675.

[g] The record in a criminal case should show that on the hearing of a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence the affidavits in support thereof were offered or read by defendant.—People v. Fitzgerald (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 555.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 656. —— Matters Essential to Maintenance of Appeal.

[a] Ye Cow is indicted for larceny; Ah Cow is arraigned, and pleads not guilty; Ey Chow demands a separate trial, and is tried; the verdict and judgment are against Ah Cow; Ey Chow moves for a new trial and appeals. Held, that Ey Chow who appeals is sufficiently identified with the proceedings, by being named as the party who was tried, to maintain the appeal.—People v. Ah Cow, 17 Cal. 101.

[b] The transcript upon an appeal in a criminal case must show, expressly, the filing and service of a notice of appeal; otherwise, the court is not required to look into the case. A mere recital in a bill of exceptions that a notice of appeal has been served and filed is not enough, for it is not the office of a bill of exceptions to show that proceedings have been taken to effect an appeal.—People v. Phillips, 45 Cal. 44.

[c] Transcript in a criminal case must show that an appeal has, in fact been taken, otherwise the court is not required to look into the case.—People v. Phillips, 45 Cal. 44.

[d] Where the record fails to show that notice of appeal was given as required by law, the appeal will be dismissed.—(Cal. 1875) People v. Clark, 49 Cal. 455; (1886) People v. Bell, 70 Cal. 33, 11 Pac. 327.

[f] Where record contains no notice of appeal or does not show its service, appeal must be dismissed.—People v. Colon, 119 Cal. 669, 51 Pac. 1082.

[g] On appeal from a conviction and an order denying a new trial, though the opinion of the trial judge attached to the bill of exceptions showed clearly that a new trial should have been granted because of the insufficiency of the evidence, such opinion cannot be considered in determining whether the conviction should be set aside, since it is not a part of the record.—People v. Tapia, 131 Cal. 647, 63 Pac. 1001.

[h] An appeal will be dismissed where the record does not show service of the notice of appeal, required by Penal Code, section 1240, and, no certificate of the clerk that there was service has been filed, though permission to file such certificate, on the ground that the failure of the record to show such service was due to an error of the printer, was asked several months before the dismissal.—People v. Swearinger, 38 Pac. 972.

[i] Where the transcript of a criminal appeal failed to show that the notice of appeal was served on any person, as prescribed by Penal Code, section 1240, the appeal cannot be considered.—People v. Brown (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 204.

[a] Affidavits used at a hearing are not part of the record unless made so by a bill of exceptions.—People v. Honshell, 10 Cal. 83.

[b] Affidavits on motion for new trial in criminal case, not embodied or referred to in any statement or bill of exceptions, are no part of the record.—People v. Price, 17 Cal. 310.

[c] Affidavits used on motion for new trial will not be considered when not embodied in bill of exceptions and not certified by judge, certificate of clerk is insufficient.—People v. Mahony, 77 Cal. 532, 20 Pac. 73.

[d] Affidavit of counsel filed in case long before bill of exceptions was settled, stating question which does not appear in bill of exceptions has no place in record, and cannot be considered.—People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[e] Where a motion for a new trial is made upon the ground of newly discovered evidence, affidavits inserted in the transcript which are not incorporated in any bill of exceptions, nor identified in any way by the judge as having been used and considered upon the hearing of the motion for a new trial, cannot be considered upon appeal.—People v. Fredericks, 106 Cal. 554, 39 Pac. 944.

[f] Affidavit found in the record purporting to supply a question not appearing in the statement on motion for new trial, and filed on the day that the motion for new trial was filed, cannot be considered as any part of the record, where it is not identified as having been read upon the hearing of the motion, and is not embodied in the statement, or contained in any bill of exceptions. People v. Louie Foo, 112 Cal. 17, 44 Pac. 453.

[g] Affidavit of defendant as to irregularities occurring during trial, printed in the transcript, but not appearing in the bill of exceptions, in no way authenticated, and marked as having been read on motion for new trial, cannot be considered on appeal.—People v. McMahon, 124 Cal. 435, 57 Pac. 224.

[h] Where the bill of exceptions showed that affidavits of defendant's counsel and of the district attorney as to the argument of the district attorney at the trial were filed, but failed to show that they were called to the attention of the court, and did not set forth the use of the language alleged, nor show a finding as to whether or not it was used, the affidavits cannot be considered on appeal.—People v. Philbon, 138 Cal. 530, 71 Pac. 650.

[i] Where affidavits used in support of a motion to set aside the verdict on the ground that defendant had not been legally committed by a magistrate were not included in the judgment-roll, nor incorporated in the record by a bill of exceptions, or otherwise authenticated as required by Supreme Court Rule 29 (64 Pac. xii), the denial of such motion could not be reviewed on appeal.—People v. Lonnen, 139 Cal. 634, 73 Pac. 586.

[a] Upon appeal by the people from order sustaining demurrer to indictment, provision of section 1207, Penal Code, making minutes of court part of the judgment-roll upon appeal from judgment of conviction, has no application; and exceptions merely noted in minutes cannot be reviewed upon appeal from such order.—People v. Long, 121 Cal. 494, 53 Pac. 1097.

§ 659. —— Return of Sheriff on Venire.

[a] Return of sheriff upon venire under which trial jury was summoned in a criminal case is not a part of the judgment-roll, and constitutes no part of the record upon appeal from the judgment when not incorporated in a bill of exceptions.—People v. O'Brien, 88 Cal. 483, 26 Pac. 362.

[a] Notes of evidence taken by phonographic reporter at the trial, and transcribed into longhand, even if verified by his affidavit, do not constitute a part of the record on appeal for any purpose.—People v. Armstrong, 44 Cal. 326.

[b] Statement of evidence which is not part of bill of exceptions certified by the judge, will not be taken into consideration by the appellate court.—People v. Brown, 48 Cal. 253.

[c] A statement of defendant's testimony in the assignment of errors, in a criminal cause, cannot be considered as a part of the record in determining whether or not the court below erred in permitting certain questions to be asked him.—(1892) People v. Faulke, 96 Cal. 17, 30 Pac. 837; (1893) People v. Bemmerly, 98 Cal. 299, 33 Pac. 263.

[d] When only evidence of defendant's guilt consisted in comparison of handwriting by jury, it was sufficient for the state, in response to an exception to the sufficiency of the evidence, merely to specify, in the bill of exceptions, of what the evidence consisted; since it could not incorporate such evidence into the bill, or provide fac similes of the writings.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 146, 47 Pac. 1009.

[e] A discrepancy between the shorthand notes and the transcript, principally in the matter of punctuation, causing a dispute whether the prosecuting witness had said that he went to bed or got up "at 7 o'clock," is presumed harmless, in the absence of any evidence in the record upon appeal showing the materiality of the variance. If the variance was in fact material, the defendant should have embodied enough of the evidence in the record to show its materiality. People v. McIntyre, 127 Cal. 423, 59 Pac. 779.

[a] Instructions not authenticated by the trial judge, nor shown by the bill of exceptions to have been either given or refused by him, form no part of the judgment-roll, and will not be considered by the supreme court.—(1856) People v. Lockwood, 6 Cal. 205; (1870) People v. Tetherow, 40 Cal. 286; (1889) People v. Rogers, 81 Cal. 209, 22 Pac. 592; (1889) People v. Keeley, 81 Cal. 210, 22 Pac. 593; (1890) People v. Beaver, 83 Cal. 419, 23 Pac. 321.

[b] Instructions given to the jury upon the trial of a criminal cause, by the court, of its own motion, do not form part of the judgment-roll, and are not reviewable on appeal, unless brought up by bill of exceptions.—People v. Hart, 44 Cal. 598.

[c] Papers purporting to be instructions inserted by clerk in record cannot be considered unless authenticated by indorsement of the court.—People v. Flahave, 58 Cal. 249.

[d] The charge of the court of its own motion is not required to be marked by the judge. It is sufficient if it appear that the charge was given.—People v. Samsels, 66 Cal. 99, 4 Pac. 1061.

[g] Instructions in transcript, certified to by clerk but not authenticated by judge, will not be considered.—People v. O'Brien, 78 Cal. 48, 20 Pac. 359.

[h] Manuscript attached to judgment-roll purporting to be oral charge, but not incorporated in bill of exceptions nor authenticated, will not be considered.—People v. Von, 78 Cal. 3, 4, 20 Pac. 35.

[i] Instructions not authenticated by judge nor incorporated in bill cannot be considered.—People v. Rogers, 81 Cal. 210, 22 Pac. 592; People v. Keeley, 81 Cal. 212, 22 Pac. 592.

[j] Courts and prosecuting attorneys should avoid loading up record with mass of doubtful and unnecessary instructions of their own drafting.—People v. Mullings, 83 Cal. 147, 17 Am. St. Rep. 223, 23 Pac. 229.

[k] Charge not incorporated in bill of exceptions nor authenticated in any manner by the judge cannot be considered on appeal.—People v. Beaver, 83 Cal. 419, 23 Pac. 321.

[l] A copy of the judge's charge, made from the official reporter's notes, and certified by the county clerk, and which is materially different from the copy in the printed record, is no part of such record, and cannot be used to correct the charge as contained in the bill of exceptions, which has been indorsed and authenticated by the judge.—People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933.

[m] Where instructions are properly authenticated by the judge they are a part of the judgment-roll, and do not properly belong in a bill of exceptions; and it is only where an oral charge is given and not otherwise authenticated, or modifications are made in written instructions which it is desired to show, that it is either necessary or proper to preserve instructions in a bill of exceptions.—People v. Gibson, 106 Cal. 458, 39 Pac. 864.

[n] Where charge to jury has been properly certified by court, it is part of record and should not be repeated in bill of exceptions.—People v. Padilla, 143 Cal. 158, 76 Pac. 889.

§ 662. —— Grounds of Motion for New Trial.

[a] If record fails to disclose grounds upon which motion for a new trial was heard and determined, ruling of court upon the motion cannot be reviewed on appeal.—People v. McCoy, 71 Cal. 395, 12 Pac. 272.

[a] The transcript does not contain the judgment from which the appeal purports to be taken, and the appeal therefore cannot be entertained.—People v. Sing Lum, 60 Cal. 6.

[a] A bill of exceptions, when properly constituted and authenticated, as required by Criminal Practice Act, sections 433-438, is a part of the record in a criminal prosecution, if it is duly signed and settled by the judge, and contains evidence necessary to illustrate points of exception.—People v. Trim, 37 Cal. 274.

[a] It is duty of clerk to furnish or certify true copies of papers on file in his office, such as the statements on appeal and on new trial, and the exhibits on file in his office; but he is not required to certify a document made up by incorporating one or more of such papers within another.—People v. Bartlett. 40 Cal. 142.

[b] It is not duty of clerk of district court to engross statement either on new trial or appeal; nor is it his duty when a copy of a statement is required to insert any document which is merely referred to and directed to be inserted.—People v. Bartlett, 40 Cal. 142.

[c] The refusal of the court to certify, on the stenographer's transcript of certain oral instructions, that they were given, so as to make them a part of the record, is not ground for reversal, where such instructions are made a part of the record by bill of exceptions.—People v. Clark, 106 Cal. 32, 39 Pac. 53.

[d] A certificate that a transcript of evidence contains a "full and complete record of the testimony" is a substantial compliance with Penal Code, section 869, requiring the certificate to state that the transcript is a "correct statement of the testimony."—People v. McIntyre, 127 Cal. 423, 59 Pac. 779.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 666. —— Compelling.

to a statement is by motion in court where record in cause remains, and not by mandamus.—People v. Bartlett, 40 Cal. 142.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1246, requiring the clerk of the court to transmit to the appellate court printed copies of the record and bill of exceptions, and providing that the cost of the printing shall be a charge on the county, such printing and transmitting is an official duty, which the clerk must perform, although the board of supervisors have made no allowance with which to pay for the same.—People v. Black, 120 Cal. 553, 52 Pac. 840.

[b] Where an appeal is pending from an order directing a judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc as of a former date, and the bill of exceptions to that order has been settled and the transcript printed and filed, and that appeal will determine whether the case is ended or whether an appeal from the judgment is premature, this court will not grant a motion to compel the clerk of the superior court to print a transcript upon appeal from the judgment.—People v. Ward, 138 Cal. 684, 72 Pac. 343.

§ 668. Transmission—Time.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1246, requiring the clerk with whom the notice of appeal is filed, within ten days thereafter, or within ten days after the settlement of the bill of exceptions, to transmit to the clerk of the appellate court a copy of the record, an appeal will be dismissed on a showing by certificate of the clerk below that four years have elapsed since the taking of the appeal, that defendant has never requested the clerk to make up a transcript, that the bill of exceptions has never been filed, though settled, and that no transcript has been sent to the supreme court.—People v. Frink, 12 Pac. 616.

For Authorities from Other States:

[a] When record contains nothing to controvert truth of recitals in judgment they are binding on appeal.—People v. Rozelle, 78 Cal. 91, 20 Pac. 36.

[b] Where a defendant charged with an assault with intent to kill, and also with having suffered a prior conviction of another felony, when arraigned, pleaded not guilty of the offense charged, and denied the prior conviction, and the verdict passed only on the plea of not guilty, but the sentence was too great, unless based on the prior conviction, and the judgment recited that defendant subsequently, on a specified day, confessed the prior conviction, the truth of which recital was not controverted, the verity of the recital must be accepted.—People v. McNeill, 118 Cal. 388, 50 Pac. 538.

§ 670. Amendment and Correction.

[a] Errors in dates, in copies of documents, in the description of premises taken from conveyances, and the like, can be corrected by a resettlement; and, upon proper showing, made before argument, the supreme court may send the record back to the court below for that purpose. So where the errors are admitted.—People v. Romero, 18 Cal. 89.

[b] After transcript on appeal in a criminal case has been filed in the supreme court, it will not be sent back in order that the statement or bill of exceptions may be changed by a resettlement, except upon like proof or admission of the mistake or omission alleged. This court will not listen to affidavits or statements of parties as to what was admitted or proved in the course of proceedings in the court below; and the certificate of the judge, independent of the settled bill of exceptions, ranks no higher than such affidavits.—People v. Romero, 18 Cal. 89.

[c] The district judge should always be ready to relieve parties convicted of murder from any omission of counsel in preparing papers for the appellate court, where no fault is imputable to the prisoner, and he applies immediately upon discovery of the neglect or omission, though it should first be shown that the appeal is based upon reasonable grounds, and is not intended merely for delay.—People v. Kahl, 18 Cal. 432.

[d] A mistake in the entry of a statement by the court to defendant of the nature of the offense for which he has been convicted may be corrected by order of the court made pending an appeal from the judgment.—People v. Murback, 64 Cal. 369, 30 Pac. 605.

[e] Record upon appeal cannot be amended or added to by the filing of a paper consisting of copies, certified by the private secretary of the governor, of certain correspondence between the regular judge of the trial court and the county clerk on the one side, and the governor on the other, relating to the designation of another judge to preside in the place of the regular judge for the trial of the defendant and others whose prosecution had been commenced by the regular judge while district attorney. To make them part of the record they should have been embodied in the bill of exceptions.—People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933.

[f] Paper filed in supreme court as attempted amendment or addition to record upon appeal, which consists of what appears to be a certified copy of the longhand transcript of official reporter's notes of the trial judge's charge to the jury, filed with the clerk, but never indorsed or authenticated by the judge, is no part of the record, and cannot be used to correct the copy of the charge which is embraced in the bill of exceptions settled and allowed by the judge.—People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933.

[g] Papers filed as proposed amendments to the record must be disregarded, when not embodied in the bill of exceptions.—People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933.

[h] Court has inherent right to correct its records so as to comport with verity.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 193, 48 Pac. 75.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 671. Impeaching or Contradicting.

[a] The verity of a transcript cannot be attacked in the appellate court by affidavits filed in support of a motion to dismiss.—People v. Jordan, 66 Cal. 10, 56 Am. Rep. 73, 4 Pac. 773.

[b] Recorded affidavit of the committing magistrate failed to set out that all the continuances were with the consent of defendant, but the affidavit of the attorney prosecuting so alleged, and was opposed by only the counter-affidavit of defendant. Held, that the record does not show such want of consent as to violate Penal Code, section 861, providing that a postponement cannot be had unless by consent, or on motion of defendant. People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

[c] Record of the discharge of a jury, in a criminal case, for failure to agree, cannot be impeached by extrinsic evidence showing an abuse of judicial discretion; and the exclusion of a transcript of the proceedings, offered to show, by the answers of the jurors to the court's questions, that the judge abused his discretion, if error, is harmless.—People v. Smalling, 94 Cal. 112, 29 Pac. 421.

[d] Where the commissioner's report, in a proceeding under Penal Code, section 1174, to prove an exception, presents a conflict of testimony as to whether the language complained of was in fact used by the prosecuting attorney, the action of the trial court in striking it from the bill of exceptions must be sustained.—In re Howard, 108 Cal. 31, 40 Pac. 1043.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 672. Questions Presented for Review—In General.

[a] The appellate court cannot take the oral suggestion of the district attorney that any evidence was given which is omitted from the bill of exceptions.—People v. English, 52 Cal. 211.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 673. —— Objection to Indictment.

[a] An objection to an indictment for incest, that defendant was on the same day indicted for rape upon the same person at the same time and place, cannot be considered on appeal when the record does not show that any such indictment was found.—People v. Kaiser, 119 Cal. 456, 51 Pac. 702.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 674. —— Delay in Trial.

[a] Refusal to discharge defendant under Penal Code, section 1382, could not be reversed on appeal, when it did not appear from bill of exceptions that a previous postponement of the trial was not assented to by defendant, nor that there was not good cause shown for such refusal.—People v. Douglass, 100 Cal. 1, 34 Pac. 490.

[a] Error cannot be predicated on the failure of the record to show the appointment of a shorthand reporter at a preliminary examination, in the absence of proof that he acted, or reported the evidence, or certified thereto.—People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652, 49 Pac. 1049, 40 L. R. A. 269.

[b] Record showed that a complaint was filed with the justice, a warrant issued, and defendant arrested, and committed for examination on the 17th of September, and held to answer on the 4th of October. Held, on appeal from a refusal to set aside the information because such examination was not given until the last-named date, when the justice had lost jurisdiction of the case, that it did not appear but that such examination occupied the entire time intervening between the two dates.—People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652, 49 Pac. 1049, 40 L. R. A. 269.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 676. —— Qualification and Selection of Jurors.

[a] Appellate court will not set aside a conviction because the trial court erred in its ruling on a challenge to a juror for cause, unless it clearly appears from the juror's answer that the court erred.—People v. Henderson, 28 Cal. 465.

[b] Challenge to entire panel will not be reviewed when transcript does not disclose any evidence in support thereof.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 346, 19 Pac. 161.

cusing of a juror, recited: "Examination of jurors continued. Prosecution and defendant exercise desired challenges, leaving four talesmen in the box." It then disclosed a colloquy between defendant's counsel and the court as to the right of defendant to exercise a challenge on a full panel, defendant's counsel stating that he desired to reserve the right to do so. There was nothing to show that defendant's counsel ever asked any right to challenge that was denied him. Held, that the record was insufficient to present the question of error in compelling defendant to exercise his right of challenge without a full panel of jurors.—People v. Cebulla, 137 Cal. 314, 70 Pac. 181.

§ 677. —— Absence of Accused During Trial.

[a] Fact that record states generally that prisoner was absent during a portion of the trial is sufficient to reverse the judgment. The record should show when, or for what time, or at what part of the proceedings the prisoner was absent, so that this court can judge of the effect to be given to such absence.—People v. Bealoba, 17 Cal. 389.

[a] Whether conduct of trial judge shows hostility to accused so as to prejudice jury can only be ascertained when record shows that conduct and remarks contained something from which supreme court can say that jurors were prejudiced.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 353, 19 Pac. 161.

§ 679. —— Refusal to Allow Reading of Law to Jury.

[a] Refusal to allow the reading of a law book to the jury is not ground for reversal where the record does not show the abstract sought to be read.—People v. Godwin, 123 Cal. 374, 55 Pac. 1059.

[a] Bill of exceptions which sets up a question the objection to which was overruled is defective when it omits an answer to the question.—People v. White, 34 Cal. 183.

[b] When a question which is not per se objectionable, and which might be admissible under some circumstances, is put to a witness, and answered under objection, the record must show the facts previously established in evidence, or the court will not be able to pass on the propriety of the question or answer.—People v. Williams, 45 Cal. 25.

[c] If a defendant who is jointly indicted with another for a crime relies, on appeal, on the fact that the declarations of his confederate were received in evidence against him on his trial, and that he was not present when the declarations were made, the bill of exceptions must show that he was not present when the declarations were made, or it will show error.—People v. Williams, 45 Cal. 25.

[f] The action of the trial court in overruling an objection to evidence cannot be reviewed when the evidence is not before the appellate court; and the case will not be reversed when it appears that the jury were instructed not to consider the evidence, unless it is shown that the substantial rights of defendants were affected by its admission.—People v. Olsen, 80 Cal. 122, 22 Pac. 125.

[g] Where the record on appeal in a criminal cause does not contain defendant's testimony in the court below, an objection that the court erred in permitting the district attorney to cross-examine him upon matters not brought out in direct examination will not be considered.—People v. Bemmerly, 98 Cal. 299, 33 Pac. 263.

[h] Exception to reading in evidence in a criminal case of pleadings in a civil action cannot be considered if the record does not contain the papers offered, nor substance of them, nor even show what action was about. People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[i] Where the record does not affirmatively show whether a deposition taken at the preliminary examination of the defendant before the committing magistrate was not properly transcribed, certified, and filed, and does not show any specific objection to have been taken on that ground in the court below, it must be presumed upon appeal that the court rightfully performed its duty in admitting the deposition in evidence.—People v. Reilly, 106 Cal. 648, 40 Pac. 13.

[j] On error assigned to the admission of the reporter's record of evidence on preliminary examination, the certificate, if not set out in the record, is presumed to have been in proper form.—People v. Davis, 36 Pac. 96.

[a] On a motion for a new trial on ground that the verdict is against the evidence, it is usual to set out in the statement on which the motion is made all the material portions of the testimony, and, as a general rule, the court will not review on appeal, unless such testimony is in the record.—People v. York, 9 Cal. 421.

[b] When record states that it gives "in substance all that was proven on the part of the state," it is sufficient. The facts, as proved, being given, there is no necessity of setting forth the testimony.—People v. York, 9 Cal. 421.

[c] Unless whole of the evidence is preserved in the record, the supreme court will not inquire whether the verdict is against the evidence.—People v. McAusland, 43 Cal. 55; People v. Woods, 43 Cal. 176; (1874) People v. Perdue, 49 Cal. 425.

[d] It is not necessary in bill of exceptions in a criminal case for the defendant to specify the respects in which the evidence is alleged to be insufficient to sustain the verdict; but it is sufficient to say that the evidence is insufficient to sustain the verdict.—People v. Fisher, 51 Cal. 319.

[e] In absence of bill of exceptions containing the evidence, it will not be reviewed. Ott v. Tailors' P. & B. Union, 75 Cal. 308, 7 Am. St. Rep. 156, 17 Pac. 217.

[f] When transcript does not purport to contain all evidence, sufficiency of proof of venue will not be reviewed.—People v. Carroll, 80 Cal. 157, 22 Pac. 129.

[g] An objection that the venue was not proved will not be heard on appeal, where the record does not affirmatively show that fact, nor that it contains all the evidence in the case.—People v. Tonielli, 81 Cal. 275, 22 Pac. 678.

[h] Although it is not necessary for the appellant in a criminal proceeding to state the particulars in which the evidence is insufficient to sustain the verdict, yet it must appear somewhere in the record that the point of the insufficiency of the evidence was made in the court below in order to entitle the appellant to raise the point upon appeal.—People v. Crowley, 100 Cal. 478, 35 Pac. 84.

[j] On an appeal from the judgment under Penal Code, section 1259, providing that on appeal from a judgment the court may review any intermediate order or ruling involving the merits, or which may have affected the judgment, the question of the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict is presented for review on exception to the refusal of a motion at the close of the people's evidence to instruct the jury to acquit.—People v. Ward, 145 Cal. 736, 79 Pac. 448.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 682. —— Examination of Witnesses.

[a] Where the printed record does not disclose the motive of the trial court in permitting the asking of leading questions of the prosecution's principal witness, such trial court will not be declared to have abused its discretion.—People v. Brown, 130 Cal. 591, 62 Pac. 1072.

[a] Error in a charge cannot be considered when there is no statement of facts.—People v. McCauley, 1 Cal. 379; People v. Baker, 1 Cal. 403; (1885) People v. Johnson, 8 Pac. 690.

[b] Where instructions are correct as abstract propositions of law, and evidence is not fully set out in record, judgment will be affirmed.—People v. Lafuente, 6 Cal. 202; People v. King, 27 Cal. 507, 87 Am. Dec. 95; People v. English, 30 Cal. 215; People v. Dick, 34 Cal. 663; People v. Strong, 46 Cal. 302.

[c] Instructions will not be considered on appeal, where they are not embodied in the bill of exceptions.—People v. Thompson, 28 Cal. 214; People v. Marseiler, 70 Cal. 98, 11 Pac. 503.

[d] If the court below has based a charge upon an assumption that a certain state of facts had been proved, which shows the applicability of instructions given or refused, the appellate court will review the action of the court therein, although the evidence is not embodied in the record.—People v. Dick, 32 Cal. 213.

[e] Where the facts brought up in the record do not show whether a charge was erroneous or correct, error will not be presumed, and the charge will be sustained.—People v. Best, 39 Cal. 690.

[f] When the evidence is not brought up in the transcript the judgment will not usually be reversed for an alleged error in the instructions.—People v. Long, 39 Cal. 694.

[g] Objections to instructions will not be considered unless the instructions are brought before the court as provided by the practice act.—People v. Tetherow, 40 Cal. 286.

[h] Exceptions to the refusal of charges will not be considered on appeal where the evidence, or so much thereof as would warrant such an instruction, is not in the record. People v. Bourke, 66 Cal. 455, 6 Pac. 89.

[i] Where an appeal is taken on the judgment-roll alone, and the record shows that oral instructions, not made part of it, were given, the judgment will not be reversed for the erroneous refusal to give instructions requested, as the same propositions may have been covered by the oral instructions.—People v. Von, 78 Cal. 1, 20 Pac. 35.

[j] Where the evidence is not made part of the record on appeal, an alleged error, committed by the court in reading to the jury a case decided by the supreme court, saying that the case reported "was in many respects similar to the one at bar," is not sufficient to cause a reversal of the conviction, as the defendant might, under the facts of the case, have been benefited, instead of prejudiced, by the remark.—People v. McNabb, 79 Cal. 419, 21 Pac. 843.

[m] Refusal of instructions as to insanity as a defense, unobjectionable in form, will be presumed proper, the record not showing that such a defense was made, or that there was any such question in the case.—People v. Clark, 121 Cal. 633, 54 Pac. 147.

[n] The defendant cannot on appeal complain of the refusal of the trial court to give certain instructions, where it does not appear from the transcript that they were requested by defendant.—People v. Hettick, 126 Cal. 425, 58 Pac. 918.

[o] Objection to the manner of a trial judge while charging a jury in a criminal case cannot be reviewed on appeal, unless made to appear in some manner provided for by the code.—People v. DeGraaff, 127 Cal. 676, 60 Pac. 429.

[p] Where error is admitted by the state on appeal, as to material portions of the charge, the court will not consider certified copies of instructions alleged to have been given at the request of defendant, similar to those of the state, when such instructions do not bear the signature of the trial judge, nor purport to have been requested by anyone.—People v. Cole, 127 Cal. 545, 59 Pac. 984.

[r] An instruction as to the value and effect of the evidence can be reviewed, though the evidence has not been brought up by a bill of exceptions, as the court will presume that there was evidence of some character to which the instruction would apply; and where the instruction would be erroneous, as applied to all possible evidence to which it would be applicable, error has been shown.—People v. Vereneseneckockockhoff, 129 Cal. 497, 58 Pac. 156.

[s] Instructions based on evidence not embodied in the bill of exceptions cannot be considered on appeal.—People v. Arlington, 131 Cal. 231, 63 Pac. 347.

[t] Where instructions are not contained in transcript, it will be presumed they were proper.—People v. McMahon, 133 Cal. 278, 65 Pac. 571.

[v] Where the record in a murder trial recites that the court read to the jury "instructions asked by the respective parties, and allowed by the court, and those given by the court of its own motion," but does not contain those given by the court of its own motion, or requested by the people, the appellate court will not determine whether or not the trial court erred in refusing to give an instruction asked by defendant, but will set aside a submission of the cause, and restore it to the calendar, to be heard when all the instructions are incorporated into the record.—People v. Vital, 34 Pac. 617.

[a] Record on appeal from order denying new trial must show motion and grounds on which it was made.—People v. Lenon, 77 Cal. 309, 19 Pac. 521.

[b] On appeal from an order granting a new trial in a criminal case the evidence can be reviewed only so far as is necessary to pass upon points of law raised.—People v. Chew Wing Gow, 120 Cal. 298, 52 Pac. 657.

[a] Where the transcript of the record on appeal showed a complete judgment, from which the appeal was taken, it will be treated as the final judgment, and the sufficiency of a judgment in the case shown by the bill of exceptions to have been rendered in open court will not be determined.—People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 83, 60 Pac. 670.

SCOPE AND CONTENTS OF BILL OF EXCEPTIONS, § 704.
—— EVIDENCE, § 705.
—— INSTRUCTIONS, § 706.
—— INCORPORATION OF DOCUMENT BY IDENTIFYING REFERENCE, § 707.

As part of record. See ante, § 664.

§ 686. Bill of Exceptions Defined.

[a] Bill of exceptions is statement in writing, settled and signed by the judge, of what the ruling was, the facts in view of which it was made, and the protest of counsel.—People v. Torres, 38 Cal. 141.

See 12 Cyc. 845-855; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 573-611, §§ 2803-2861; cols. 1004-1006, § 3204.

[a] It is not necessary for the defendants, in making a motion for a new trial, to have a bill of exceptions or statement prepared beforehand; nor, in arguing and submitting their motion without such bill of exceptions or statement, do they waive their right to have a bill of exceptions settled after the motion is determined; but they are entitled to a record of so much of the evidence, proceedings, and decisions had on the trial as may be necessary to explain the grounds of their motion.—People v. Hewill, 56 Cal. 117.

[b] If bill presented to judge is not full and fair, but mere skeleton of evidence and proceedings, he may refuse to settle it.—Sansome v. Myres, 77 Cal. 356, 357, 19 Pac. 577.

[c] It is duty of party desiring settlement of bill of exceptions to prepare a full and fair draught of the bill.—Sansome v. Myres, 77 Cal. 356, 19 Pac. 577.

[d] Time to prepare exceptions may be extended after time when notice may be given to district attorney has expired.—Willard v. Dillard, 86 Cal. 157, 24 Pac. 940.

688. Notice of Settlement.

[a] District judge may refuse to consider or settle a bill of exceptions presented by defendant, unless the notice required by Penal Code, section 1171, has been given to the district attorney.—People v. Sprague, 53 Cal. 22.

[b] Notice of application to prove bill of exceptions must set forth exceptions taken and evidence in support thereof.—People v. Bitancourt, 73 Cal. 2, 14 Pac. 372.

[c] Where it does not appear that any showing was made to the trial court that the two days' notice was given, or that it had been waived, there is no improper refusal to settle the bill of exceptions.—People v. Hill, 78 Cal. 405, 20 Pac. 862.

[d] Waiver of notice of presentation of bill could be made of record or by some writing. People v. Hill, 78 Cal. 406, 20 Pac. 862.

[e] Code should be liberally construed in favor of the right of a defendant in a criminal case to have a bill of exceptions settled by the court; and where, after verbal notice to the district attorney and associate counsel for the prosecution, the settlement of the proposed bill of exceptions has been postponed by consent, such postponement constitutes a waiver of the service of two days' written notice of the settlement required to be served upon the district attorney by the provisions of section 1171 of the Penal Code, and, if the court refuses to settle the bill for want of such notice, a writ of mandate will issue commanding it to settle the bill of exceptions.—Van Eman v. Superior Court, 106 Cal. 643, 40 Pac. 14.

[g] Where two days' notice of the settlement of the bill of exceptions in a criminal case was not given the district attorney, as required by Penal Code, sections 1117, 1174, but he was given an opportunity to propose amendments, and actually did so, and an excuse for failure to give notice was presented, which was satisfactory to the trial judge, the court will not refuse to consider the bill because of the failure to give notice.—People v. Gonzales, 136 Cal. 666, 69 Pac. 487.

[b] Under sections of the code relating to the settlements of bills of exceptions in criminal cases, and providing that, if the judge who presided at the trial ceases to hold office before the bill was tendered, he may, nevertheless, settle such bill, or the party may apply to the supreme court to prove the same, the judge who heard the motion for a new trial may settle the bill, though the case was originally tried before his predecessor.—People v. Hodgdon, 55 Cal. 72, 36 Am. Rep. 30.

§ 691. Duty of Court in Settling.

[a] It is within the general power of the court to add to a proposed bill of exceptions any testimony given at the trial pertinent to the exceptions and necessary to the correct presentation of the errors assigned.—People v. Kelly, 46 Cal. 355.

[b] Court is bound to see that record is correct, whether district attorney objects to proposed bill or not.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 351, 19 Pac. 161.

[c] In settling bill judge should insert what he actually said to jury as substitute for what reporter has erroneously stated was said. People v. Cox, 76 Cal. 283, 18 Pac. 332.

§ 692. Application to Supreme Court to Prove Exceptions.

[a] Notice of application to prove bill of exceptions under Penal Code, 1174, must be served on judge and district attorney.—People v. Bitancourt, 73 Cal. 2, 14 Pac. 372.

[b] Application to supreme court to prove facts in support of a settled bill should set forth wherein bill settled is incorrect and specify facts desired to be proved.—People v. Bitancourt, 74 Cal. 190, 15 Pac. 744.

[c] Settlement of bill made two years after presentment to judge is not refused within section 1174, Penal Code, allowing proof of exceptions in supreme court when judge says he knows nothing of it and it is not in his possession.—People v. Pratt, 78 Cal. 347, 20 Pac. 731.

[d] On a trial for assault with intent to murder, the trial court excluded a question, put to the person assaulted, "Did you ever threaten this man's life?" and an exception was taken, but afterward the court allowed the question, and in preparing the bill of exceptions excluded the exception. Held, that defendant's application to the supreme court for leave to prove the exception would be denied, since, though the first ruling and the exception should have been inserted, no real injustice was done to defendant.—People v. Scott, 91 Cal. 563, 27 Pac. 930.

[e] Fact that defendant in criminal action is personally blameless for delay in presenting a bill of exceptions, although a fact to be considered by the trial judge in determining his action in settling the bill, is not conclusive.—Brown v. Prewett, 94 Cal. 502, 29 Pac. 951.

[f] Where evidence as to whether or not certain exceptions were made in conflicting, they will not be ordered to be included in the bill.—People v. Scott, 121 Cal. 101, 53 Pac. 364.

[a] Mandamus issued to settle the bill first, and then to sign it, where the bill was filed with the clerk on the last day of the extended time and the excuse offered, of inability to find the judge, was reasonable and sufficient.—People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 510.

[b] A motion for a mandamus to compel the district judge to settle and sign a bill of exceptions in a murder case, which was presented after the proper time, because the prisoner had no money to pay his counsel for its preparation within such time, being accompanied by no copy of the statement proposed, was denied.—People v. Kahl, 18 Cal. 432.

[c] Record on application for mandamus to require a judge of an inferior court to settle a bill of exceptions must enable the supreme court to determine whether, if settled and signed, the bill of exceptions would tend to manifest error committed at the trial.—People v. Dickson, 46 Cal. 53.

[d] When a bill of exceptions was presented to the district judge for settlement in a criminal case, after the expiration of the ten days mentioned in section 1171 of the Penal Code, and of the period fixed by order extending the time for presenting or filing such bill, and the district judge, on examination of the affidavits accompanying the draft bill, and purporting to account for and excuse the delay, declined to settle the bill. Mandamus ought not to issue to compel the district judge to settle the proposed bill.—Sprague v. Fawcett, 53 Cal. 408.

[e] Petition for mandamus to compel settlement of bill of exceptions must show that section 1171, Penal Code, has been complied with or sufficient reason why it has not.—Anschlay v. Superior Court, 76 Cal. 514, 18 Pac. 655.

[a] Fact that bill of exceptions was not signed until more than ten days after trial does not defeat party's right to appeal.—People v. Martin, 6 Cal. 477.

[b] Court was of opinion that a defendant who could not find judge on tenth day, and thereupon filed his bill of exceptions with the clerk, to be handed to the judge at the earliest convenient opportunity, took the most proper course.—People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 510.

[c] When a bill of exceptions is settled, but not within the time required by statute, the reasons of the court for signing it after the prescribed time will not be inquired into, but it will be presumed that they were sufficient. People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 510; People v. White, 34 Cal. 183; People v. Raschke, 73 Cal. 378, 15 Pac. 13.

[d] It is within the power of the court to extend the time for presentation of the draft of a bill of exceptions to an order on motion for new trial.—People v. Keyser, 53 Cal. 183.

[g] A bill of exceptions upon appeal in a criminal case will be considered, although the trial judge refused to settle the bill because the statutory time for settlement had expired when it was presented to him.—People v. Almendares, 136 Cal. 660, 69 Pac. 492.

[h] Under Penal Code, sections 1171, 1174, as amended by Statutes of 1905, page 761, chapter 569, the trial judge cannot, in a criminal case, extend the time for presenting bills of exceptions without a compliance by defendant with the statutory requirements.—People v. Bliss (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 676.

[a] When in criminal case a mistake or omission has occurred in a bill of exceptions settled by the judge, he may allow a resettlement, provided it be asked before the transcript on appeal is sent to the supreme court, and the mistake or omission is supported by documentary evidence, or is not denied by the adverse party. But where the existence of the alleged mistake or omission rests in the mere recollection of the judge or of counsel in the case, and it is not admitted by the parties, resettlement should be denied.—People v. Romero, 18 Cal. 89.

[a] Provisions of section 435 of Criminal Practice Act, prescribing time within which bills of exceptions shall be tendered and settled, are directory.—People v. White, 34 Cal. 183.

[d] A bill of exceptions showing that an oral charge was given, "a written charge having been waived by counsel on both sides," shows a consent that the jury be charged orally.—People v. Lang, 142 Cal. 482, 76 Pac. 232.

[a] Recital in bill of exceptions cannot prove that an appeal was taken.—People v. Phillips, 45 Cal. 44.

[b] Bill of exceptions imports absolute verity and no suggestion can be received as to elimination of material matters therefrom.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 351, 19 Pac. 161.

[d] Where the assignment of error in charging the jury differs from the charge itself, as particularly set forth in the bill of exceptions, the latter will ordinarily control.—People v. Ferry, 84 Cal. 31, 24 Pac. 33.

[e] Where bill of exceptions states that defendant did not offer to challenge, and did not challenge, any of the jurors, and the minutes of the court show that six jurors were peremptorily challenged by the defendant, the statement in the minutes will be accepted, upon appeal, as true.—People v. O'Brien, 88 Cal. 483, 26 Pac. 362.

[f] When, on joint trial of several defendants, the record entry says that the "defendant" was present at the trial, and the bill of exceptions says that the "defendants" were present, there is no error, the bill of exceptions being conclusive against the defendants.—People v. Holmes, 118 Cal. 444, 50 Pac. 675.

[g] Where defendant moved to vacate a judgment and correct the minutes on the ground that they incorrectly stated that before sentence the defendant was informed of the nature of the charge and of the verdict, and asked if he had any cause why judgment should not be pronounced, an order refusing the motions could not imply a finding that the minutes were correct, in view of a statement in the bill of exceptions settled by the judge in which he found facts substantially negativing the facts recited in the minutes. Judgment (1900) 61 Pac. 800, modified.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

[a] If a bill prepared by defendant in criminal case does not contain all evidence given bearing on the point made, the district attorney should be permitted to suggest the addition to the bill of such evidence, but the appellate court cannot take his suggestion that such evidence was given.—People v. English, 52 Cal. 211.

[b] One convicted of a felony need not be present at the hearing of a motion by the state to correct a mistake in the bill of exceptions.—People v. Southern, 118 Cal. 359, 50 Pac. 545.

[c] One convicted of a felony is not entitled to five days' notice of a proceeding by the state to correct a mistake in the bill of exceptions, where the course adopted is in full accord with the practice recognized by Code of Civil Procedure, section 473, which does not contemplate notice in the correction of a mistake.—People v. Southern, 118 Cal. 359, 50 Pac. 545.

[a] Supreme court will not review action of the court below in criminal case unless the record contains a bill of exceptions, or a correct statement of the facts which transpired at the trial, signed and settled by the judge. People v. Martin, 32 Cal. 91.

[b] Exceptions to the rulings of the court below must be preserved by a bill of exceptions signed and sealed by the trial judge.—People v. Martin, 32 Cal. 91.

[c] Errors occurring at the trial of a criminal case cannot be reviewed on appeal, except on bill of exceptions settled and signed by the judge of the court wherein the trial took place.—People v. Ferguson, 34 Cal. 309.

[d] On appeal from a judgment, without moving for new trial, accused may rely on any of the grounds of exception mentioned in the Penal Code, and in such case must have a bill of exceptions settled as provided therein.—People v. Keyser, 53 Cal. 183.

[e] Exceptions to instructions in a criminal case need not be incorporated in a bill of exceptions; but the law preserves an exception to each instruction as fully as though stated in terms in the record, and the defendant has the same advantage of every objection to an erroneous instruction when properly authenticated in the judgment-roll, as when set out in a bill of exceptions and formal exception made.—People v. Gibson, 106 Cal. 458, 39 Pac. 864.

[f] Rule 29 of the supreme court provides that, in all cases of appeal to the supreme court from orders of the superior courts, the papers and evidence used or taken on the hearing of the motion must be authenticated by incorporating the same in a bill of exceptions. Held, that where an information was set aside on the ground that the defendant had not been legally committed by a magistrate, and the record, on an appeal from the order, did not include the affidavits and papers used on the preliminary examination in a bill of exceptions, the order must be affirmed.—People v. Terrill, 131 Cal. 112, 63 Pac. 141.

[a] Order sustaining demurrer to indictment can be reviewed only on exceptions and bill of exceptions provided by Penal Code, sections 1172, 1174, there being no judgment-roll or record in a criminal case, except on conviction (section 1207).—People v. Long, 121 Cal. 494, 53 Pac. 1097.

[b] Sustaining of a demurrer to an indictment cannot be reviewed on appeal in the absence of a bill of exceptions.—People v. Druffel (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 907.

[a] Exception to ruling of the court in refusing a continuance must be presented on appeal by a bill of exceptions.—People v. Ashnauer, 47 Cal. 98.

[b] Exceptions to order overruling a motion for a continuance must be presented to the supreme court by embodying the affidavit in a bill of exceptions, or in some mode clearly identifying it as having been read on the hearing of the motion.—People v. Weaver, 47 Cal. 106.

[a] Where there is no bill of exceptions, certain instructions asked by defendant, not shown by the transcript as either given or refused, and which are in no manner authenticated by the trial judge, do not form a part of the judgment-roll, and will not be considered on appeal from the judgment.—People v. Rogers, 81 Cal. 209, 22 Pac. 592.

[b] On appeal on judgment-roll alone, the judgment will not be reversed for the giving of an instruction, unless such instruction would be erroneous in every conceivable state of the case.—People v. Wong Fook Sam, 146 Cal. 114, 79 Pac. 848.

§ 703. —— Grant or Refusal of New Trial.

[a] Motion for a new trial must be made viva voce, and if desired, the grounds of a motion and of rulings of the court may be embodied in a bill of exceptions, and can be reviewed by the supreme court in no other way.—People v. Ah Sam, 41 Cal. 645.

[b] Where a motion for a new trial is granted, on the ground of the insufficiency of the evidence, the only manner in which the question can be presented to the supreme court is by bill of exception.—People v. Padillia, 42 Cal. 535.

[c] Ruling disallowing a new trial will not be reviewed unless a bill of exceptions is reserved to its refusal.—People v. Ah Fat, 47 Cal. 631.

[a] Affidavits to incompetency of juror must be embodied in a bill of exceptions, or they will not be examined by the appellate court. People v. Stonecifer, 6 Cal. 405.

[b] Bill of exceptions must state ruling, facts upon which it was made, and protest of counsel. Failure to state ruling is fatal.—People v. Torres, 38 Cal. 141.

[c] Judge is justified in refusing to settle a proposed statement or bill of exceptions which consists of the reporter's notes written out, containing questions and answers and remarks of counsel, judge, and jurors during the trial.—People v. Getty, 49 Cal. 581; Valleau v. Superior Court, 62 Cal. 290; Frazer v. Superior Court, 62 Cal. 49.

[d] After refusal of a new trial, accused may present the draft of a bill of exceptions containing any of the grounds relied on for a new trial. It should contain also so much of the evidence, proceedings, and decisions as necessary to explain such ground, and no more. People v. Keyser, 53 Cal. 183.

[e] Trial court certified that, in the examination of proposed jurors, no question as to their competency was disallowed, no evidence rejected, no objection to the admission or rejection of any testimony sustained, and no objection or exception to the allowing or disallowing of any question, evidence, or testimony on said examination was made or saved, except as set forth. Held, on an intimation that the court, in settling the bill of exceptions, had eliminated material matters, that the court properly declined to incorporate into the bill the testimony of the jurors in their examination voir dire.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

[g] Specification of error in bill of exceptions in a criminal case, as to certain remarks claimed to have been made by the district attorney in his closing argument to jury, outside of the evidence in the case, and prejudicial to the defendant, will not be considered where the bill of exceptions does not show, other than by such specifications, that the district attorney did in fact make such remarks.—People v. Faulke, 96 Cal. 17, 30 Pac. 837.

[h] Where, upon appeal from an order denying a viva voce motion for a new trial, in a criminal case, the bill of exceptions fails to show that the alleged error was stated as a ground of the motion, or that the attention of the trial court was called to it, the alleged error must be regarded as waived.—People v. Sansome, 98 Cal. 235, 33 Pac. 202.

[i] Where bill of exceptions does not show that objection was made, or any exception taken to action of court in permitting change or amendment of verdict by jury after it was presented to court its action cannot be reviewed upon appeal.—People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[j] On appeal from order refusing to entertain defendant's motion for new trial on the ground that right thereto is barred by a former motion therefor, its denial, anl lapse of time for appeal therefrom, defendant may have included in the bill of exceptions only the fact of and the circumstances attending the former motion, the denial thereof, the presentation of the new motion, and the proceedings had in regard thereto, and may not have a bill of exceptions covering all the points made on the new motion.—Walker v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 135 Cal. 369, 67 Pac. 336.

[k] Under Penal Code, section 1185, providing that a motion in arrest of judgment may be "founded on any defects in the indictment or information mentioned in section 1004," a bill of exceptions, prepared for and used only on a motion in arrest, cannot properly contain a written plea offered by defendant; and the contents of such writing cannot be looked to in the supreme court to aid the pleas actually entered on the minutes.—People v. O'Leary, 22 Pac. 24.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 705. —— Evidence.

[a] Notes of evidence taken by a stenographer, as provided by act of March 28, 1868, must be written out in longhand and authenticated by the affidavit of the stenographer, showing that the report is a full and true statement of all the evidence.—People v. Tetherow, 40 Cal. 286.

[b] Evidence on new trial motion must be embodied in a bill of exceptions.—People v. Padilla, 42 Cal. 535.

[c] A bill of exceptions showing error in the exclusion of evidence, on a trial in a criminal case, must also show that the excluded testimony was material to the defendant, and that he was injured by its exclusion, or the judgment will not be disturbed.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[d] A bill of exceptions should state the evidence relating to the point presented in a narrative form, or by a statement of its substance, or what it tended to prove.—People v. Getty, 49 Cal. 581.

[e] If motion for new trial is denied, and a bill of exceptions is afterward prepared and settled and signed, it is necessary that the bill should show that evidence was introduced tending to prove every material issue.—People v. Fisher, 51 Cal. 319.

[f] The reporter's notes will not constitute a part of the bill of exceptions, unless embodied therein, or referred to in the bill, so as to identify them.—People v. Taing, 53 Cal. 602.

[g] If bill of exceptions does not contain any of the evidence given at the trial, and the charge to the jury only is given with an exception noted to the charge as an entirety, and no objection to the charge is urged in the brief for the appellant, the judgment will be affirmed.—People v. Sing Lum, 60 Cal. 6.

[i] A bill of exceptions stated merely that each party "introduced evidence to sustain the issue on their respective parts." Held, that this was enough, without a further setting out of the testimony, and, the general statement being insufficient to show that there was no evidence on which to base a verdict of guilty, the objection that the verdict was against evidence was untenable.—People v. Dye, 62 Cal. 523.

[j] If portions of medical works excluded have tendency to discredit witness, they must be incorporated in bill.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 349, 19 Pac. 161.

[k] Where bill contains none of evidence, alleged error in refusing instructions cannot be considered.—People v. O'Leary, 77 Cal. 32, 18 Pac. 856.

[l] Original papers offered in evidence cannot be incorporated in bill, but it should state what evidence was submitted and perhaps on proper application court might order original papers sent up under Rule 25.—People v. Backley, 116 Cal. 148, 149, 47 Pac. 1009.

[m] Where bill of exceptions of defendant specifies insufficiency of evidence to sustain verdict, prosecution must have evidence showing guilt put in bill.—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 147, 148, 47 Pac. 1009.

[n] Defendant, on appeal from judgment of conviction, may not have in the bill of exceptions all the evidence, but only so much as serves to elucidate the matters which, under Penal Code, sections, 1170, 1259, he may have reviewed on such appeal.—Walker v. Superior

[a] Where instructions are in writing, and properly indorsed by the trial judge, they belong in the judgment-roll, and need not appear in the bill of exceptions.—People v. Gibson, 106 Cal. 458, 39 Pac. 864.

[b] Where the charge of the court, and requests to charge, are inserted in the record on appeal as part of the judgment-roll, it is unnecessary to reinsert them as part of the bill of exceptions.—People v. Cole, 127 Cal. 545, 59 Pac. 984.

[c] Where the instructions in a criminal case are certified as provided by law, they constitute a part of the judgment-roll, and should not be reproduced in the bill of exceptions, but affidavits presented on a motion for a new trial and the minutes of the proceedings had on such motion constitute no part of the judgment-roll, and cannot be made a part thereof by the clerk, and should appear only in the bill of exceptions.—People v. Sing Yow, 145 Cal. 1, 78 Pac. 235.

[a] A document referred to in a bill of exceptions, and set out in another part of the record, may be deemed part of such bill, when sufficiently identified as the one so referred to.—People v. Wallace, 94 Cal. 497, 29 Pac. 950.

[a] A statement on appeal is not necessary when the error relied on is disclosed by the record.—People v. Maguire, 26 Cal. 635.

[b] On appeal from an order dismissing a motion for a new trial for want of prosecution, in the absence from the record of an engrossed statement on motion for a new trial, signed and certified by the judge, there are no questions of fact to be reviewed.—People v. Center, 61 Cal. 191.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 709. Time to Make or Sign.

[a] Statute directing the judge to make a statement in criminal cases, within ten days after verdict, is directory merely. The judge's delay cannot prejudice the prisoner's rights. (1859) People v. Woppner, 14 Cal. 437; (1860) People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 510.

[b] Defendant must prepare and tender his statement or bill within ten days, or such further time as may be granted by the judge or give sufficient excuse for his failure so to do.—People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 510.

[c] It seems that if the statement of the judge in a criminal case appears to have been signed after the ten days, it will be presumed that cause was shown to induce the judge to allow the delay.—People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 510.

§ 710. Compelling Settlement.

[a] Agreed statement of judge in criminal case should not be amended without a clear showing of mistake or fraud.—People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 510.

E. ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR, AND BRIEFS.

[a] Where there are no assignments of error by appellant, judgment of court below will be affirmed.—People v. Goldbury, 10 Cal. 312.

[b] When assignments of error differ from charge as specifically set forth in bill of exceptions, latter controls.—People v. Ferry, 84 Cal. 35, 24 Pac. 33.

[c] In criminal, especially, capital, cases law will not deny defendant full consideration of his points because of technical errors or omissions of his counsel.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 217, 48 Pac. 75.

[d] Mere naked statements that court erred in making certain enumerated rulings, without argument made or reason given why they are erroneous, will not be considered.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 297, 52 Pac. 833.

[e] Assignments, on appeal in a criminal case, that the court erred in certain particulars, without argument or reasons showing wherein there was error, will not be considered by the supreme court, where error is not apparent on the face of the record.—People v. Breen, 130 Cal. 72, 62 Pac. 408.

[f] Assignments of error as to rulings on examination of witnesses referred to in the brief as errors in the examination of a certain witness, without reasons as to why the rulings were erroneous, will not be considered.—People v. McLean, 135 Cal. 306, 67 Pac. 770.

[g] Assignment of error should specify in what particular the error consists and not that court erred in this, that it did so, etc.—People v. Creeks, 141 Cal. 533, 75 Pac. 101.

[h] Counsel for appellant must point out particular upon which he predicates error and quote law he invokes to show error.—People v. Chutnacut, 141 Cal. 685, 75 Pac. 340.

[i] Supreme court will not look at instructions refused and given at certain folios and examine certain sections of code to discover error for purpose of reversing case.—People v. Chutnacut, 141 Cal. 685, 75 Pac. 340.

[j] On appeal, the supreme court will not examine instructions upon a general statement in appellant's brief that all the instructions requested by him were improperly refused.—People v. Howard (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 462.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Assignments of error not argued in brief will not be considered.—People v. Cady, 117 Cal. 11, 48 Pac. 908.

[b] A mere statement in the brief that the evidence is so clear that the homicide was justified under the law of defense of habitation that a reversal is asked on that ground, and that the court erred in admitting certain evidence, without reason, authority, or argument being given as to how the court erred, does not require a review of the record.—People v. Cebulla, 137 Cal. 314, 70 Pac. 181.

[c] This court will not examine record upon a mere statement in the brief of appellant that the court erred in admitting in evidence the guns and cartridges, and the testimony of a witness, where no reasons are given nor authority cited as to why the court erred, and the brief does not state that the defendant excepted, nor show that the testimony was prejudicial.—People v. Cebulla, 137 Cal. 314, 70 Pac. 181.

[d] Where, on appeal in a criminal case, a point is argued at length in the opening brief, but is abandoned in the reply brief, it will not be considered.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

[e] On appeal in a criminal case a portion of appellant's brief, "The court erred in refusing defendant's proposed instructions, Nos. 3, 6, and 7 (folios 40-44, inclusive)," is not an argument, and does not justify any consideration of errors supposed to be presented thereby.—People v. Mead, 145 Cal. 500, 78 Pac. 1047.

§ 714. Dismissal—For Escape of Appellant.

[a] Under constitution and code, one charged with a crime can defend only when in custody, and when a defendant charged with murder appealed, and then escaped, the appeal was properly ordered to be dismissed, unless, within a time specified, the defendant should return into custody.—People v. Redinger, 55 Cal. 290, 36 Am. Rep. 32.

[b] Appeal taken by the people from order setting aside information will be dismissed by appellate court of its motion for want of jurisdiction, although objection is not raised by respondent.—People v. Higgins, 114 Cal. 63, 45 Pac. 1004.

[c] Where, pending an appeal from a conviction of murder, accused escapes, the appeal will be dismissed, unless accused returns to custody within a time set by the court.—People v. Elkins, 122 Cal. 654, 55 Pac. 599.

[d] Section 1248, Penal Code, providing for dismissal for irregularity in any substantial particular upon five days' notice, does not permit the consideration of an appeal upon its merits, if no such notice is given, unless it be in cases where the objection to the appeal is not jurisdictional.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

§ 715. —— For Frivolity.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1248, providing that an appeal may be dismissed if it "is irregular in any substantial particular, but not otherwise," an appeal cannot be dismissed on the ground that it is frivolous.—People v. McNulty, 95 Cal. 594, 30 Pac. 963.

§ 716. —— For Want of Actual Controversy.

[a] An appeal from an order fixing the day for execution of a sentence of death will be dismissed where the day fixed has passed. People v. Thompson (Cal.), 46 Pac. 907.

§ 717. —— Notice of Motion to Dismiss.

[a] Penal Code, section 1248, requiring five days' notice of motion to dismiss appeals in criminal cases, has no application to such appeals brought after the time limited by section 1239, as the objection to such appeal is jurisdictional. Judgment 61 Pac. 800, modified.—People v. Walker, 132 Cal. 137, 64 Pac. 133.

§ 718. Reinstatement of Affirmed or Dismissed Appeal.

[a] Where, in a criminal cause, because of the failure of appellant's counsel to file a brief, or to appear at the hearing, an appeal from a conviction has been dismissed, and the judgment affirmed, without examination of the record, as prescribed by Penal Code, section 1253, under section 1265, providing that after the judgment has been remitted to the court below the appellate court has no further jurisdiction of the appeal or of the proceedings thereon, such court has no power to recall such remittitur, and to reinstate such appeal, even though appellant's counsel by inadvertence had failed to file the brief, and to appear at the hearing.—People v. McDermott, 97 Cal. 247, 32 Pac. 7.

[b] Where a conviction is affirmed because of no appearance for appellant, and no brief on file, the appeal will not be reinstated because his counsel was prevented by sickness from preparing a brief and appearing in court, unless he shows plausible claim of error. People v. Busby, 113 Cal. 181, 45 Pac. 191.

[a] Penal Code, section 1252, which provides that "all appeals in criminal cases must be heard and determined by the appellate court within sixty days after the record is filed in said appellate court, unless continued on motion or with the consent of the defendant," is merely directory, and a failure to determine a case within the time mentioned does not entitle the defendant to a discharge.—People v. Staples, 91 Cal. 23, 27 Pac. 523.

[b] Where defendant, for delay only, objects to submitting a case for hearing before the time for filing briefs has expired, and no substantive right of defendant would be prejudiced by thus submitting the case, the objection is without merit.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 201, 51 Pac. 185.

[a] Cases should be fully argued before submission without reservation of other points to be used on petition for rehearing.—People v. Northey, 77 Cal. 635, 19 Pac. 865, 20 Pac. 129.

[b] Upon submission by attorney general without argument of appeal from a conviction of murder in the first degree and a judgment of death, there being no argument or brief of counsel for the appellant, the appellate court will examine the transcript to determine whether error appears in the record.—People v. Clark, 121 Cal. 633, 54 Pac. 147.

[d] It is improper for defendant's counsel, in oral argument, to raise a point as to alleged misconduct of the trial court, not referred to in the briefs, and which counsel for the state has had no opportunity to consider and reply to.—People v. Modina, 146 Cal. 142, 79 Pac. 842.

[a] Technical points urged on petition for rehearing, for first time, will not be considered.—People v. Northey, 77 Cal. 635, 19 Pac. 865, 20 Pac. 129.

[b] Court will not consider, on petition for rehearing, any point waived, either expressly or tacitly, at argument upon which case was originally submitted.—People v. Northey, 77 Cal. 635, 19 Pac. 865, 20 Pac. 129.

[c] On appeal from a sentence of death, the supreme court will consider questions raised for the first time in a petition for rehearing.—People v. Bruggy, 26 Pac. 965.

§ 724. Scope and Extent in General.

[a] On appeal from order refusing or granting new trial, on ground of error or irregularity arising during the course of trial, appellate court is confined to a review of proceedings between issue joined and rendition of the verdict.—People v. Turner, 39 Cal. 370.

[b] Any action of court during progress of trial for felony, which deprives defendant of substantial legal right in premises, or to his prejudice, to any extent, withholds or abridges a substantial, legal, or constitutional privilege of a defendant, and by him claimed on the trial, is a proper subject matter of review on appeal.—People v. Harrington, 42 Cal. 165, 10 Am. Rep. 296.

[c] In reviewing instructions supreme court must take whole charge together, and if thus correctly stating the law, sustain it.—People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 582, 10 Pac. 207.

[f] Facts that cannot be considered by trial court to determine guilt or innocence of accused cannot be considered by court on appeal.—People v. Page, 116 Cal. 396, 48 Pac. 326.

[g] The refusal of a motion at the close of the people's evidence to instruct the jury to acquit is the subject of an exception under Penal Code, section 1170, subdivision 3, authorizing an exception to the decision of any question of law not a matter of discretion, or to a charge to the jury, and may be reviewed on appeal from the judgment under section 1259, providing that on an appeal from a judgment the court may review any intermediate order or ruling involving the merits, or which may have affected the judgment.—People v. Ward, 145 Cal. 736, 79 Pac. 448.

[a] Objections which may be presented by demurrer may further be made available after verdict by motion in arrest of judgment, and action of court on this motion can only be reviewed on appeal from the judgment.—People v. Turner, 39 Cal. 370.

[b] Under Penal Code, sections 1170, 1259, 1181, the sufficiency of the evidence to support an instruction in a criminal case cannot be inquired into on an appeal from the judgment alone.—People v. Durand, 1 Cal. App. 71, 81 Pac. 672.

§ 726. Estoppel to Allege Error—Error Affecting Adverse Party.

taken advantage of by counsel for the people upon an appeal by the defendant.—People v. Noregea, 48 Cal. 123.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 885; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 750-753, §§ 3007-3010.

§ 727. —— Failure to Appear or File Brief.

[a] The appellate court is under no duty to examine the record for errors of law in a criminal case not involving capital punishment, where there is no brief for nor appearance by defendant.—People v. Sing (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 242.

[a] Appellant cannot complain of error, injurious effects of which he has suffered by reason of his acquiescence or failure to avoid it when he had means and opportunity to do so.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 88, 50 Pac. 390.

[b] Where improper matters contained in alleged dying declarations of deceased were ruled out by the court in advance of admitting the declarations, but were finally read in evidence because the defendant insisted thereon, the fact that the evidence tended to contradict such improper matters was not cause for reversal.—People v. Thomson, 145 Cal. 717, 79 Pac. 435.

[a] One cannot object, upon appeal, to the instructions that he himself asked for.—People v. Lopez, 59 Cal. 362; People v. Lon Yeck, 123 Cal. 246, 55 Pac. 984; People v. Holmes, 126 Cal. 462, 58 Pac. 917; People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351; People v. Biggins, 3 Pac. 853.

[b] The appellate court cannot consider the insanity of defendant, disclosed subsequent to the trial, as ground for reversing the judgment. People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[c] Fact that insanity of defendant has become fully developed since the trial, assuming it to be true, does not authorize appellate court to act upon evidence furnished by his present demented condition, and upon that ground reverse a judgment otherwise legal, when it may be true that notwithstanding his present condition, the mental disease may not have so far progressed at the time of the homicide as to relieve the defendant from responsibility for his acts.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 30 Pac. 204.

[d] Only such evidence which the record shows to have been introduced in a criminal case will be considered on appeal.—People v. Brooks, 131 Cal. 311, 63 Pac. 464.

[e] Where, after defendant appeals, a third person confesses that he committed the crime, and that defendant is innocent, these matters, not being in the record, and there being no law by which they can be for the first time presented to the supreme court, cannot be considered by it.—People v. Bowers, 18 Pac. 660.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 731. Presumptions—In General.

[a] Where an indictment appeared to have been presented to a court of sessions consisting of a county judge and two justices of the peace of the courts, the legal presumption was in favor of the validity of the court.—People v. Barbour, 9 Cal. 230.

[b] Presumptions are in favor of regularity of the proceedings of the grand jury.—People v. Mills, 17 Cal. 276.

[c] In the absence of any showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that persons drawn as grand jurors, and excused by the court, were not excused without legal cause.—People v. Millsaps, 35 Cal. 47.

[d] Where record shows that accused was detained upon recommendation of grand jury alone, the usual presumption that the discretion of the court was exercised upon sufficient grounds cannot be indulged.—Bull, Ex parte, 42 Cal. 196.

[e] It will be presumed that bill of exceptions contains all evidence given on the trial bearing on the point of the objection.—People v. English, 52 Cal. 211.

[f] In absence of any showing as to what took place when court made order the appellate court will presume, in support of the action of the court below, that the defendant assented to the order.—People v. Swafford, 65 Cal. 223, 3 Pac. 809.

[h] Where record shows that complaint upon which defendant was examined and held to answer was introduced upon hearing of a motion to set aside the information for variance between complaint and information it will be presumed upon appeal that the trial court, in passing upon and denying the motion, considered the question of variance.—People v. Wallace, 94 Cal. 497, 29 Pac. 250.

[i] Where the minutes of the trial disclose that oral instructions were given to the jury on the trial of a criminal case, it will be presumed that they were taken down by the reporter, as contemplated by Penal Code, section 1093, where there is nothing in the record showing that they were not so taken down.—People v. Ludwig, 118 Cal. 328, 50 Pac. 426.

[j] The presumption that an oral charge was taken down by the reporter is not overthrown

by the production of the record of the action, as constituted by Penal Code, section 1207, containing no instructions as it more properly establishes the fact that the charge, when transcribed by the reporter, was not indorsed by the trial judge, than the fact that it was not taken down by the reporter.—People v. Ludwig, 118 Cal. 328, 50 Pac. 426.

[k] Judgment of conviction will not be reversed because the record entry does not affirmatively show that the defendants were present when the verdict was rendered, since on appeal all intendments are in favor of the regularity of the proceedings.—People v. Holmes, 118 Cal. 444, 50 Pac. 675.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 732. —— Preliminary Examination.

[a] A preliminary examination before a magistrate will be presumed to have been conducted according to law, the contrary not appearing. People v. Smith, 59 Cal. 365.

[b] Where an objection that the deposition of a witness on a preliminary examination was not properly certified by the reporter was not made at the trial, and the record did not show that it had not been properly transcribed and certified, it will be presumed on appeal that the objection was not well founded.—People v. Witty, 138 Cal. 576, 72 Pac. 177.

[a] Where, on appeal, the record fails to show that accused was arraigned and pleaded to the indictment, the court will assume that there was no arraignment or plea.—People v. Gaines, 52 Cal. 479.

[b] Record of arraignment need not show that interpreter was appointed.—People v. Samaros, 84 Cal. 486, 24 Pac. 283.

[a] Where the order committing the defendant to answer is filed on the same day with the filing of the information, it will be presumed, there being no showing to the contrary, that the information was filed subsequent to the commitment.—People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 576, 10 Pac. 207.

[b] Unless record show contrary, it will be presumed that proper commitment was made by duly authorized magistrate.—People v. Williams, 84 Cal. 617, 24 Pac. 145.

[c] In support of a judgment of conviction it will be presumed, in the absence of a showing on the matter, that defendant was legally committed.—People v. Jackson, 138 Cal 462, 71 Pac. 566.

[a] On appeal in a criminal case, it will be presumed that before proceeding with the trial the clerk read the information, unless the contrary appears from the record.—People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 114, 26 Pac. 95.

[b] Where defendant confessed former conviction, it is presumed that clerk performed his duty and omitted to read part of indictment relating thereto.—People v. McGregar, 88 Cal. 141, 26 Pac. 97.

[c] Where record shows that a charge of prior conviction was admitted by the defendant, and also shows that the information was read to the defendant on the arraignment, and no exception appears to have been taken to the failure of the record to show affirmatively whether the clerk read that part of the information relating to the former conviction, it must be presumed that it was properly read.—People v. Ross, 115 Cal. 233, 46 Pac. 1059.

[a] It will be presumed that transfer of criminal case from one department to another was regularly made.—People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 116, 26 Pac. 95.

[a] When the record upon appeal does not show that a continuance of a criminal cause was objected to by the defendant it will be presumed in favor of the action or the court below that the defendant consented to the order.—People v. Douglass, 100 Cal. 1, 34 Pac. 490.

[a] A defendant convicted of murder in the first degree is entitled to be present when the order for his execution is made; but, unless the contrary appears from the record, it will be presumed that he was present.—People v. Sing Lum, 61 Cal. 538.

[b] Where entry on the minutes of the court shows that, after the verdict as announced was entered and read, the defendant was remanded to the custody of the sheriff, and where the amended record shows, moreover, that the defendant was present at all times during the trial, it is conclusive evidence as to the fact of the defendant's presence when the verdict was rendered.—People v. Jung Qung Sing, 70 Cal. 469, 11 Pac. 755.

[c] Where the record shows nothing to the contrary, it will be presumed that defendant was present when the plea of not guilty was entered for him by his counsel.—People v. Clin, 83 Cal. 374, 23 Pac. 391.

[d]] Where the bill of exceptions does not show that defendant was absent when the case was set for trial, it will be presumed that he was present.—People v. Collins, 105 Cal. 504, 39 Pac. 16.

[e] Where the record is silent as to whether a defendant charged with murder, and who had been duly arraigned and pleaded not guilty, was present when the case was set for trial, it will be presumed that he and his counsel were present.—People v. Rader, 136 Cal. 253, 68 Pac. 707.

[a] In the absence of a showing to that effect, it will be presumed that the remark of the judge in relation to the defendant's sanity was not made without any call for it, but was properly made in response to a demand made for a trial of the defendant's insanity before a special jury. If the defendant did not wish the trial jury to hear the judge's response, he should have requested the court to direct the jury to retire while the question was being considered and passed upon.—People v. Findley, 132 Cal. 301, 64 Pac. 472.

[a] Where court below excluded from jury evidence of threats, on the part of the deceased, against the life of defendant, and the record does not show the character of such threats, this court will presume that such proof was properly excluded.—People v. Glenn, 10 Cal. 32.

[b] If record, in indictment for burglary, only shows exception to exhibit of burglarious tools in evidence, the presumption is that all the facts were proved necessary to entitle them to be shown in evidence.—People v. Winters, 29 Cal. 658.

[d] Where a court, after questioning a witness, sustains an objection to a question propounded to the witness by defendant's counsel as to whether he knows the defendant's reputation for peace and quietude in the community in which he lives, and the questions asked by the court do not appear in the record, nor does it appear therein that the witness knew what community the defendant lived in, it must be presumed that the court was satisfied the witness did not know the defendant's reputation, as asked for, in the community in which he lived.—People v. Marseiler, 70 Cal. 98, 11 Pac. 503.

[e] Under Penal Code, section 686, which provides that a deposition taken on preliminary examination in the presence of accused, who had opportunity to cross-examine, may be read on the trial if it is satisfactorily shown to the court that the witness could not be found in the state, the admission of such deposition will be assumed, on appeal, to have been based on satisfactory evidence.—People v. Reilly, 106 Cal. 648, 40 Pac. 13.

[f] On a trial for crime, the people introduced in evidence as a deposition the testimony of a witness at the preliminary examination as certified and filed by the reporter. The certificate of the reporter was not set forth in the bill of exceptions, but it appeared that the people offered the entire transcript for the purpose of giving character to the entire document and the certificate at the end thereof, and that defendant objected to its admission, on the ground that it had not been shown that the person signing the certificate was an official stenographer, and that the court ordered the admission of the entire transcript for the limited purpose. Held, that the court, on appeal, must presume that the transcript offered was certified by the reporter as being a correct statement of the evidence, and therefore under the statute prima facie a correct statement of the testimony constituting the depositions of the witnesses whose testimony was shown therein.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[a] Where the bill of exceptions states simply what the evidence tended to show as to the commission of the crime charged, and does not purport to contain the whole evidence, the court cannot assume that the venue was not proved.—People v. Marks, 72 Cal. 46, 13 Pac. 149.

[b] Where evidence adduced at trial is not set forth in record upon appeal, and affidavit on motion for new trial for newly discovered evidence sets forth presence of affidavit at marking and branding of calves by father and brothers of defendant about a week before date of alleged larceny, and that the defendant was not then present, it cannot be presumed upon appeal, in favor of the materiality of the evidence, that the larceny was shown to have been committed at the time of such marking and branding.—People v. Warren, 130 Cal. 683, 63 Pac. 86.

[c] On appeal from a conviction for burglary, the bill of exceptions stated that witnesses for the people and for defendant were sworn and examined, and that the testimony included certain testimony set out in detail and relating solely to the time when the burglary was committed. One ground of the motion for new trial was that the verdict was contrary to the evidence. Held that, while it would be presumed that the bill of exceptions contained all the evidence as to the time of the commission of the crime, it could not be presumed that it contained all of the evidence submitted.—People v. Coulter, 145 Cal. 66, 78 Pac. 348.

[a] Instructions will be presumed to have been in writing.—(1861) People v. Chung Lit, 17 Cal. 320; (1865) People v. Shuler, 28 Cal. 490; (1873) People v. Wright, 45 Cal. 260.

[b] The presumption is that the instructions of the court were given in the manner provided by law; and, in a trial for murder, the record need not expressly show that they were given in writing.—People v. Chung Lit, 17 Cal. 320.

[c] Where, it is objected to charge that it, in some parts, assumes the guilt of the prisoner, or assumes as proven certain disputed points of fact, and there is no statement of facts in the record, the supreme court will not interfere unless the ruling of the court below cannot be maintained under any imaginable state of facts. In such case all presumptions are in favor of the correctness of the acts and rulings below.—People v. Bonney, 19 Cal. 426.

[d] An oral charge will not be presumed to have been given to the jury, if this fact does not appear from the record.—People v. Garcia, 25 Cal. 531.

[e] Presumption is that jury are capable of understanding the whole charge of the court in its connected relations, and in its application to the facts of the case.—People v. Bagnell, 31 Cal. 409.

[f] Where evidence to which instruction relates does not appear in record presumption will be in favor of its correctness.—People v. Johnson, 47 Cal. 122; People v. Barry, 31 Cal. 357; People v. Best, 39 Cal. 690.

[g] It cannot be assumed as a question of law that a jury understands an instruction given by the court in a sense different from that in which it is commonly understood by those outside the jury-box.—People v. Welch, 49 Cal. 174.

[h] Statute authorizes oral instructions if taken down by shorthand reporter, and legal presumption is that this was done, unless the contrary affirmatively appears from the record. People v. Ferris, 56 Cal. 442.

[i] Where the oral charge of the court appears in full in the transcript of the record, it will be presumed that it was taken down by the shorthand reporter.—(1885) People v. Bourke, 66 Cal. 455, 6 Pac. 89; (1891) People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 114, 26 Pac. 95; (1891) People v. McGregar, 88 Cal. 140, 26 Pac. 97; (1891) People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 171, 25 Pac. 1116; (1891) People v. Barton, 88 Cal. 176, 25 Pac. 1117.

[j] Where the transcript of the record on appeal shows that a certain instruction was given by the lower court of its own motion, and states that "was all the law so given in the action," it cannot be presumed that the court did not give any instructions at the instance of the parties.—People v. Marks, 72 Cal. 46, 13 Pac. 149.

[k] It must be presumed upon appeal, where additional instructions were given which are not embodied in the record, that under such instructions, taken with those given and refused, the law of the case was properly presented to the jury.—Harris v. Barnhart, 97 Cal. 46, 32 Pac. 589.

[l] It will be presumed that the jury were instructed to disregard statements of counsel outside the record, where such statements were made, and the record on appeal does not contain the instructions.—People v. Molina, 126 Cal. 505, 59 Pac. 34.

[m] Where the transcript on appeal showed a heading, "Instructions asked by the defense and refused," under which were several sentences not numbered, it will be presumed that the whole is one instruction; and, a part of the same being erroneous, a refusal of another part cannot be considered error.—People v. Davis, 135 Cal. 162, 67 Pac. 59.

[n] It will not be presumed on appeal, for the purpose of examination for prejudicial error, that an instruction merely marked "Given" was given at request of the prosecution, or that an instruction not given was requested by defendant.—People v. Cebulla, 137 Cal. 314, 70 Pac. 181.

[o] Where the court, of its own motion, gives an instruction based on a contention which it states was made on the trial, it cannot be presumed on appeal, in the absence of such fact being affirmatively shown by a bill of exceptions, that the contention was not made.—People v. Gonzales, 56 Pac. 804.

[a] In absence of bill of exceptions showing that jury was discharged without consent of defendant, it is presumed that consent was given.—People v. Curtis, 76 Cal. 59, 17 Pac. 941.

[a] If the jury returns a general verdict of guilty, in an indictment charging two distinct offenses, it will be presumed either that the verdict was returned on both offenses, or, if only on one, that the judge who tried the case passed sentence accordingly.—People v. Shotwell, 27 Cal. 394.

[b] Where jury are correctly instructed as to applicability of evidence before them it is a presumption of law that they exercised their jurisdiction soundly.—People v. Rogers, 71 Cal. 565, 12 Pac. 679.

[c] Where jury were fully instructed upon evidence of defendant's previous good character, it must be presumed that instructions were regarded.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 207, 48 Pac. 75.

[d] Where the jury's verdict in a criminal prosecution could only have been reached by a misapprehension of the law as given in ambiguous instructions, or by willfully disregarding their duty, it will not be presumed on appeal that the latter was the case.—People v. Sylva, 143 Cal. 62, 76 Pac. 814.

[a] Where, to an indictment for murder, in which the degree was not specified, the prisoner pleaded guilty, and was thereupon sentenced to confinement, etc., the judgment was held to be good; the presumption being that the court had, from the testimony, ascertained the degree of the crime.—Brown, In re, 32 Cal. 48.

[b] All intendments are in support of judgment in criminal case, so far as such intendments are consistent with the record.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[c] It will be presumed, in support of a judgment in a criminal case, that testimony introduced by the prosecution worked no injury to the defendant, if the testimony is not contained in the record.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[d] A defendant pleaded guilty to the charge of "prior convictions," and the court did not instruct as to such prior convictions, nor did it appear from the record that any reference was made to them during the trial. The jury found the defendant guilty, but did not find in reference to the prior convictions, which before judgment were withdrawn on motion of the district attorney, and the court only sentenced the prisoner for one crime. Held, that it must be presumed that the clerk had obeyed the law (Pen. Code, sec. 1093) and omitted to read the prior convictions to the jury, and that the court, in view of their withdrawal, had disregarded them in considering the sentence.—People v. Flynn, 73 Cal. 511, 15 Pac. 102.

[f] Though the judgment-roll does not show that when judgment was pronounced defendant was informed by the court of the nature of the charge against him, of his plea, and of the verdict, conceding that these statements are required by Penal Code, section 1200, it will be presumed on appeal that they were made, when the contrary is not shown.—People v. Barton, 8 Cal. 176, 25 Pac. 1117.

[g] Where, on the trial of an indictment charging defendant with forgery and with having suffered a prior conviction of larceny, the jury returned a verdict of "guilty as charged," and the court imposes the maximum penalty for forgery, it will be presumed that the court treated the verdict as a finding against defendant on the issue of prior conviction.—People v. Eppinger, 109 Cal. 294, 41 Pac. 1037.

§ 746. —— New Trial.

[a] On appeal from an order granting a new trial, general in its terms, it will not be assumed that it was granted on one particular ground when others were properly presented.—People v. Flood, 102 Cal. 330, 36 Pac. 663.

[b] In reviewing an order denying a new trial for newly discovered evidence, it will not be presumed, in support of an affidavit of a witness to an alibi, that the offense was committed at a time to which the affidavit related; there being no evidence in the record.—People v. Warren, 130 Cal. 683, 63 Pac. 86.

[b] Defendant alleging exceptions must show error affirmatively in the record; and, unless a bill of exceptions shows error, none will be presumed.—People v. Connor, 17 Cal. 354; People v. McAuslan, 43 Cal. 55; People v. Lewis, 64 Cal. 401, 1 Pac. 490.

[c] Record must clearly show error, and not leave it to be inferred from argument as to what the language of the record means.—People v. Richmond, 29 Cal. 414; People v. Marks, 72 Cal. 47, 13 Pac. 149; People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 304, 17 Pac. 214; People v. Leong Sing, 77 Cal. 119, 19 Pac. 254; People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 175, 25 Pac. 1116; People v. Barton, 88 Cal. 178, 25 Pac. 1117.

[h] Where a defendant is denied the constitutional right of a public trial he is presumed to be prejudiced, and the burden is not upon him to show injury by reason of the deprivation; and when a defendant has been deprived of any constitutional right he has not had that fair and impartial trial to which he is entitled, however bad and degraded.—People v. Hartman, 103 Cal. 242, 42 Am. St. Rep. 108, 37 Pac. 153.

[i] All intendments of the law are in favor of the regularity of the judgment and proceedings of the court below, and it is incumbent upon the appellants to show error affirmatively. People v. Gibson, 106 Cal. 458, 39 Pac. 864.

[b] Where court refuses to exercise discretion on erroneous ground of want of jurisdiction, order will be reviewed.—People v. Lundquist, 84 Cal. 26, 23 Pac. 1026.

[c] Discretion of trial court will not be reviewed unless abused. Instance.—People v. Manoogian, 141 Cal. 598, 75 Pac. 177.

set aside the indictment, on the ground that one Shepheard was present in the grand jury room while the charge in the indictment was under consideration. Leave refused, because the court below knew Shepheard to have been assistant district attorney at the time. Held, that granting leave rested in the discretion of the court below; and, no circumstances being shown indicating any abuse of that discretion, the action of the court must stand.—People v. Lee, 17 Cal. 76.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 750. —— Bail.

§ 751. —— Change of Venue.

[a] The supreme court having complete appellate power over right to grant change of venue, it is not to be supposed that it will trust implicitly in the discretion of inferior courts.—People v. Lee, 5 Cal. 353.

[b] An order refusing a change of venue on the application of defendant in a criminal prosecution will only be reviewed in cases of gross abuse of discretion.—People v. Fisher, 6 Cal. 154; People v. Perdue, 49 Cal. 425.

[c] Application for change of venue on ground of local bias and prejudice is addressed to discretion.—People v. Elliott, 80 Cal. 298, 22 Pac. 207.

[d] Although discretion granting or refusing change of venue in a criminal action is not an arbitrary discretion, yet where its exercise has not gone beyond legitimate and reasonable limits, it cannot be rightfully interfered with by the appellate court.—People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 25, 30 Pac. 581.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

752. —— Transfer of Cause.

[a] The fact that defendant's case was transferred to another division of the superior court short time before trial did not constitute an abuse of discretion, in the absence of a showing that defendant suffered any injury.—People v. Owens, 132 Cal. 469, 64 Pac. 770.

753. —— Continuance.

[a] An order of the court denying a new trial, sought on the ground of error in refusing to grant a continuance on account of absence of witnesses, will not be reversed where a counter-affidavit was filed to show that the application for a continuance was not made in good faith, and where on the motion for a new trial the affidavits of the absent witnesses were not produced to show that they could testify to the facts desired to be proved by them.—(1865) People v. De Lacey, 28 Cal. 589; (1866) People v. Jocelyn, 29 Cal. 562.

[b] Refusal of continuance will be upheld unless abuse of discretion clearly appears.—People v. Collins, 75 Cal. 412, 17 Pac. 430.

[c] A refusal to grant defendant a continuance was an abuse of discretion warranting a reversal where it appeared that the wife of defendant, who had been subpoenaed, was a material witness, and the only person who could and would testify to facts showing his innocence, and that she was temporarily sick, as shown by physicians' certificates, so that her attendance would endanger her life—all of which was not contradicted; nor was the error cured by a statement by the state in open court that they had authentic information that she was no longer ill, but about on the streets, and the court's offer to issue an attachment for her, which neither side then requested.—People v. Plyler, 121 Cal. 160, 53 Pac. 553.

[d] Application of defendant for continuance is addressed largely to the discretion of the trial court, and where the court refused a continuance, its decision will not be disturbed upon appeal, if the appellate court cannot say, in view of the facts and circumstances disclosed by the record, that the court below abused its discretion.—People v. Totman, 135 Cal. 133, 67 Pac. 51.

[e] It is only in plain case of abuse of discretion that appellate court will interfere with order denying continuance for absent witness—People v. Chutnacut, 141 Cal. 683, 75 Pac. 340.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 754. —— Discharge for Delay.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1382, requiring the court, unless good cause to the contrary is shown, to dismiss a prosecution not brought to trial within sixty days from the filing of the information, a judgment will not be reversed where it does not appear that the trial judge abused his discretion in refusing to so dismiss the prosecution.—People v. Henry, 77 Cal. 445, 19 Pac. 830.

[a] The allowance of time for defendant to prepare the order of his defense at the close of the state's evidence being a matter in the discretion of the trial court, the allowance of thirteen minutes for that purpose will not be reviewed, where no abuse of discretion was shown.—People v. Owens, 132 Cal. 469, 64 Pac. 770.

§ 756. —— Appointment of Interpreter.

[a] The action of trial court in allowing a challenge to a juror for implied bias is not open to review.—People v. Murphy, 45 Cal. 137; People v. Atherton, 51 Cal. 495; People v. Taing, 53 Cal. 602; People v. Riley, 65 Cal. 107, 3 Pac. 413; People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 346, 19 Pac. 161; People v. Ward, 77 Cal. 113, 19 Pac. 373; People v. Bemmerly, 87 Cal. 120, 25 Pac. 266.

[b] Appellate court will not overrule action of the court below in denying a challenge for implied bias made to a juror in a criminal case, even where the answers of the juror appear contradictory, unless it is apparent that the court below abused its discretion.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[c] The action of the court in sustaining the challenge to a juror, in a criminal case, on the ground of implied bias, cannot be excepted to, or reviewed by the appellate court.—People v. Colson, 49 Cal. 679.

[d] Where a challenge is taken to a juror, and there is no denial of the facts upon which it is made, and no exception, the decision of the court is not open to review.—(Per McKee, J.) People v. Cochran, 61 Cal. 548.

[e] The action of the court in sustaining a challenge to a juror, there being no exception to any ruling upon the admission or rejection of evidence, cannot be reviewed on appeal.—People v. Kunz, 73 Cal. 313, 14 Pac. 836.

[f] Penal Code, section 1170, subdivision 2, providing that exceptions may be taken by defendant in a criminal case to a decision of the court "in admitting or rejecting testimony on the trial of a challenge to a juror for actual bias," does not authorize an exception to a ruling on the challenge, or a review of such ruling.—People v. Wong Ark, 96 Cal. 125, 30 Pac. 1115.

[g] Disallowing a challenge to the panel returned under a special venire because that venire was rendered necessary on account of the depletion of the regular venire, due to the liberality on the part of the judge in allowing excuses to those summoned, is not ground for reversal, in the absence of a showing that the judge abused his discretion in the matter of allowing the excuses.—People v. Hickman, 113 Cal. 80, 45 Pac. 175.

[h] Where evidence is such as to be capable of only one construction, and plainly shows bias of juror, action of trial court disallowing challenge is reviewable.—People v. Chutnacut, 141 Cal. 684, 75 Pac. 340.

[i] Under Penal Code, section 1170, permitting exceptions to the decision of the court "in admitting or rejecting testimony on the trial of a challenge of a juror for actual bias," no exception lies to a ruling denying a challenge to a juror for actual cause.—People v. Brown, 13 Pac. 222.

§ 758. —— Excusing Jurors.

[a] A court has broad discretion in excusing jurymen, and a defendant tried by a competent jury cannot object that the judge excused certain of the venire for cause.—People v. Searcy, 121 Cal. 1, 53 Pac. 359.

[a] The refusal of the trial court to direct that a prisoner brought up in irons for trial should be set at liberty during the trial is reviewable on appeal, since it involves a substantial right.—People v. Harrington, 42 Cal. 165, 10 Am. Rep. 296.

[a] If the trial court admits in evidence a deposition on the ground that the deponent cannot, with reasonable and due diligence, be found in the state, so that he may be summoned as a witness, and there is evidence justifying the finding of the court, its action will not be revised on appeal.—People v. Gannon, 61 Cal. 476.

[b] It is common practice to illustrate upon the wall or upon a door in a courtroom, before the eyes of the jury, the location of a bullet mark; but such matters are largely within the discretion of the trial court, and, in the absence of an abuse of discretion, the appellate court will not interfere.—People v. Chia Hane, 108 Cal. 597, 41 Pac. 697.

[c] The discretion of the trial court in admitting an entry in a family Bible that appears to have been changed is not open to review unless it is made to appear that the discretion was abused.—People v. Mayne, 118 Cal. 516, 62 Am. St. Rep. 256, 50 Pac. 654.

[d] The court's determination that a witness could not be found within the state by due diligence, in order to permit his deposition to be used by the prosecution, under Penal Code, section 686, will not be set aside, in the absence of an abuse of discretion.—People v. Ballard, 1 Cal. App. 222, 81 Pac. 1040.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 761. —— Order of Proof.

[a] Reopening case to allow evidence in support of plea of once in jeopardy is in discretion of court, and refusal is not reviewable.—People v. Ross, 65 Cal. 104, 3 Pac. 491.

[b] Under section 1094 of the Penal Code, it is within the sound discretion of the court to depart from the order of evidence prescribed in section 1093 of the same code, and the action of the court will not be disturbed upon appeal unless there has been an abuse of discretion.—People v. Gordan, 103 Cal. 568, 37 Pac. 534.

[a] Whether the opinions of nonexpert witnesses as to the sanity of defendant are based on sufficient observation is for the trial court to determine, and its decision will not be questioned on appeal.—(Cal. 1887) People v. Levy, 71 Cal. 618, 12 Pac. 701.

[b] Whether a witness as to the sanity of defendant had such acquaintance with him and opportunity of observing him as to be qualified to express an opinion as to his sanity is a question to be determined by the trial court, and while its ruling may be reviewed upon appeal, it will not be held erroneous upon a mere difference of opinion as to the qualification of the witness, but it must clearly appear that the decision of the trial court was wrong.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[c] The court's ruling that witnesses were "intimate acquaintances" of defendant, so as to be competent, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, subdivision 10, to testify as to his sanity, will not be disturbed, unless abuse of discretion clearly appears.—People v. McCarthy, 115 Cal. 255, 46 Pac. 1073.

[d] The exclusion of expert evidence as to the mental soundness of an accused because the witness was not sufficiently qualified to give an expert opinion will not be disturbed on appeal, where the record does not disclose facts authorizing a holding that the trial court abused its discretion in rejecting the evidence. People v. Goldsworthy, 130 Cal. 600, 62 Pac. 1074.

[e] Whether witness is "intimate acquaintance" and qualified to express opinion as to sanity of accused is within discretion of trial court to determine.—People v. Manoogian, 141 Cal. 598, 75 Pac. 177.

[f] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1870, permitting an intimate acquaintance of a party to give in evidence his opinion of the party's sanity, a ruling of the trial court as to whether a witness is an intimate acquaintance of the party will not be disturbed unless clearly wrong.—People v. Suesser, 142 Cal. 354, 75 Pac. 1093.

[a] The matter of permitting a party who has cross-examined a witness to recall him, in order to make a further cross-examination, rests greatly in the discretion of the court, and it is not the practice of the appellate court to disturb the judgment for a refusal to permit a witness to be recalled, unless such discretion has been abused.—People v. Keith, 50 Cal. 137.

[b] Where a witness was on the stand, and the court, having asked whether the counsel desired to ask any further questions, received no answer and thereupon dismissed the witness, and refused to allow him to be recalled, held, that such matters rest in the discretion of the court, and, in the absence of a clear abuse of discretion, will not be interfered with on appeal.—People v. Moan, 65 Cal. 532, 4 Pac. 545.

[c] The allowance of leading questions will not be reviewed, except in a clear case of abuse or prejudice.—People v. Fong Ah Sing, 70 Cal. 8, 11 Pac. 323.

[e] Leave to re-examine a witness as to matters upon which he has already been examined, having been left by Code of Civil Procedure, section 2050, to the sound discretion of the court, cannot be assigned as error, although the examination is an unnecessary repetition, and tends only to emphasize a particular subject. People v. McNamara, 94 Cal. 509, 29 Pac. 953.

[f] On a trial for burglary, based on accused's entering a building with intent to commit arson, the motive for which was charged to have been to obtain the insurance, the permitting of a witness on cross-examination to state the aggregate of certain policies on the building over objection that it was not proper cross-examination is not reversible error, though the objection should have been sustained, since such evidence would have been competent if offered at the proper time, and the order of admitting competent evidence is largely discretionary with the trial court.—People v. Goldsworthy, 130 Cal. 600, 62 Pac. 1074.

[g] Exclusion of a question asked upon cross-examination, to show interest or bias of witness against defendant will not be reviewed where there is nothing in the record to indicate that testimony sought was material on question of the bias.—People v. Boren, 139 Cal. 210, 72 Pac. 899.

[h] The question of restricting the cross-examination of a witness with respect to questions as to whether or not he had previously talked with certain persons about his testimony is within the discretion of the trial court, not reviewable on appeal in the absence of a clear abuse thereof.—People v. Conness (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 821.

[a] It is discretionary to allow a view of a scene of a homicide by the jury, and error assigned thereon must be affirmatively shown to warrant a reversal.—People v. Southern, 120 Cal. 645, 53 Pac. 214.

§ 765. —— Taking Evidence to Jury-room.

[a] It cannot be assigned for error that, when the jury retired after the trial of a criminal case, they were not allowed, upon defendant's request, to take with them a diagram which had been used to explain certain testimony. The refusal was within the discretion of the court.—People v. Cochran, 61 Cal. 548.

[a] Action of court in discharging a jury in a criminal case, because of its inability to agree on a verdict, is subject to review by the appellate court.—McLaughlin, Ex parte, 41 Cal. 211, 10 Am. Rep. 272.

§ 767. —— New Trial.

[a] The grant of a new trial because the verdict was contrary to the evidence will not be disturbed on appeal, except for manifest abuse of discretion.—(1887) People v. Hotz, 73 Cal. 241, 14 Pac. 856; People v. Flood, 102 Cal. 330, 36 Pac. 663; People v. Knutte, 111 Cal. 453, 44 Pac. 166.

[b] A motion for a new trial, in a criminal case, on the ground of newly discovered evidence, is addressed to the discretion of the trial judge; and unless his discretion has been abused, or some rule of law violated, the appellate court will not interfere.—People v. Sutton, 73 Cal. 243, 15 Pac. 86.

[c] Grant of new trial sustained on any specified grounds will be reversed only for abuse of discretion.—People v. Lum Yit, 83 Cal. 131, 23 Pac. 228.

[d] Granting or refusing a new trial rests largely in discretion of trial court, and an order denying a new trial will not be reversed, where it appears that question presented by motion for a new trial necessarily involved a consideration of the credibility of the witnesses.—People v. Merkle, 89 Cal. 82, 26 Pac. 642.

[e] A motion for a new trial in a criminal case is largely addressed to the discretion of the trial court; and a motion granted upon the ground that the verdict is not sustained by the evidence will not be reversed, except where there is no evidence which conflicts with that upon which the verdict rests.—People v. Brooks, 90 Cal. 174, 27 Pac. 72.

[f] On appeal from an order granting a new trial, the action of the lower court will be affirmed, if there is any ground on which it can be sustained.—People v. Flood, 102 Cal. 330, 36 Pac. 663.

[g] On appeal from an order granting a new trial, an opinion of the trial court, giving his reasons therefor, cannot be reviewed.—People v. Flood, 102 Cal. 330, 36 Pac. 663.

[h] Where there is evidence to support a verdict of guilty in a criminal case, and the trial court has refused a new trial, its judgment will not be interfered with on appeal.—People v. Curry, 103 Cal. 548, 37 Pac. 503.

[i] Refusal of a new trial on newly discovered evidence that would serve the purpose only of impeaching a witness will not be disturbed, except on a very exceptional showing.—People v. Ah Noon, 116 Cal. 656, 48 Pac. 799.

[j] If, by failure of court to punish newspaper editors for contempt, defendant has failed to obtain fair and impartial trial, and he makes it appear on motion for new trial, question will be reviewed.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 209, 48 Pac. 75.

[k] When, upon motion for a new trial for misconduct of jury, the evidence is conflicting, the ruling of the court on the motion is conclusive on appeal.—People v. Kramer, 117 Cal. 647, 49 Pac. 842.

[l] When the trial judge refused a new trial, it will not be granted on appeal, when the verdict was on conflicting evidence.—People v. Soap, 127 Cal. 408, 59 Pac. 771.

[m] It is in the discretion of the court to allow or refuse to allow the cross-examination of witnesses who testify upon motion for new trial by affidavits or counter-affidavits on the question of misconduct.—People v. Sullivan, 129 Cal. 557, 62 Pac. 101.

[n] Where it does not appear that court abused its discretion in not granting a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, its order denying a new trial will not be disturbed on that ground.—People v. Mitchell, 129 Cal. 584, 62 Pac. 187.

[o] The affidavits for new trial on the ground of misconduct of the district attorney and the judge being contradicted as to all material matters by the affidavits for the prosecution, the denial of new trial will not be disturbed on appeal.—People v. Rushing, 130 Cal. 449, 80 Am. St. Rep. 141, 62 Pac. 742.

[p] Where a motion for a new trial for newly discovered evidence is based on accused's affidavit, stating that his evidence on the trial was false, and on affidavits of others setting out matters merely cumulative, its refusal will not be disturbed on appeal.—People v. Clarke, 130 Cal. 642, 63 Pac. 138.

[q] Order granting a new trial to a defendant convicted of rape will be affirmed upon appeal, if it was properly made on any ground raised in the defendant's motion.—People v. Castro, 133 Cal. 11, 65 Pac. 13.

[r] Where affidavits of defendant for new trial, on the ground of irregularity in action of the court, were disputed by counter-affidavits, determination made thereof by trial court will not be disturbed upon appeal, if no valid ground of complaint is disclosed by record.—People v. Wynn, 133 Cal. 72, 65 Pac. 126.

[s] The action of the trial court in denying a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, because of the insufficiency of the showing that the new evidence is sufficient to render a different result probable, will not be disturbed, except in case of manifest abuse of the court's discretion.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169.

[t] Where the evidence is conflicting, a new trial will not be ordered.—People v. Burt, 3 Pac. 653; (1885) People v. McGinn, 7 Pac. 762.

[a] Indictment and trial in the court of sessions in the city and county of San Francisco for larceny, charged to have been committed within said city and county. The evidence tended to show that the offense was there committed, and the verdict was "guilty as charged in the indictment." said court.—People v. Magallones, 15 Cal. 426.

[b] In a criminal case the supreme court will not deal with a question of the mere preponderance of evidence.—People v. Ashnauer, 47 Cal. 98.

[c] Verdict convicting defendant in criminal cases will not be reversed for insufficiency of evidence, if the evidence was prima facie sufficient. The weight to be accorded the evidence is a question for the jury.—People v. Mayes, 66 Cal. 597, 56 Am. Rep. 119, 6 Pac. 691.

[d] Where there is any evidence to support the verdict in a criminal case, it will not be reversed.—People v. Wilson, 66 Cal. 370, 5 Pac. 624; People v. McCurdy, 68 Cal. 576, 10 Pac. 207; People v. Nagle, 29 Pac. 640.

[e] New trial will not be ordered, on appeal, on ground of insufficiency of evidence, when there is some evidence of defendant's guilt.—People v. Doane, 77 Cal. 562, 20 Pac. 84.

[f] Jury may find verdict upon testimony of one witness against testimony of any greater number.—People v. Chun Heong, 86 Cal. 333, 24 Pac. 1021.

[g] Verdict will not be disturbed for insufficiency of evidence where evidence and circumstances are such as could be better observed and weighed by jury and trial court than in this court, and judge of trial court, who had advantage of observing witnesses and seeing whole trial, has denied a new trial.—People v. Neary, 104 Cal. 373, 37 Pac. 943.

[i] Decision of a jury in a criminal case, upon legal evidence, is absolutely final and not subject to review upon appeal.—People v. Maroney, 109 Cal. 277, 41 Pac. 1097.

[j] Appellate court has no jurisdiction in criminal cases to review the evidence, although questions of law often arise from the evidence of which the appellate court has jurisdiction.—People v. Lowen, 109 Cal. 381, 42 Pac. 32.

[k] Supreme court has no jurisdiction in criminal cases, except to determine questions of law, and it cannot pass upon the evidence, or look at it, except for purpose of considering question of law, and the only way it can correct error is by granting a new trial. People v. Marshall, 112 Cal. 422, 44 Pac. 718.

[m] If there be evidence adduced logically tending and legally sufficient to prove guilt of defendant, supreme court cannot disturb verdict.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 200, 48 Pac. 75.

[n] Where not clear that verdict is based on passion or prejudice, supreme court can only determine whether sufficient legal evidence was offered to sustain conviction. People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 201, 48 Pac. 75.

[o] That defendant does not testify in his own behalf cannot be considered by an appellate court on the question of sufficiency of the evidence to justify conviction.—People v. Page, 116 Cal. 386, 48 Pac. 326.

[p] Order granting new trial for insufficiency of evidence to sustain conviction will not be reversed.—People v. Chew Wing Gow, 120 Cal. 538, 65 Am. St. Rep. 197, 52 Pac. 846.

[q] Where the evidence makes a case proper to be submitted to the jury, its sufficiency and weight are solely for that body, and not for the court on appeal.—People v. Hough, 120 Cal. 538, 65 Am. St. Rep. 197, 52 Pac. 846.

[s] Where the only corroborating evidence given under Penal Code, section 1111, requiring the testimony of an accomplice to be corroborated, was by a witness claimed to be also an accomplice, the question whether he was such was for the jury, and its verdict, from which it must be assumed (defendant being found guilty) that he was found not to be an accomplice, is conclusive of that fact, if the evidence thereon was properly received.—People v. Creegan, 121 Cal. 554, 53 Pac. 1082.

[t] The supreme court's appellate jurisdiction is limited to matters of law alone, hence a verdict of guilty, supported by the evidence of the prosecuting witness, cannot be disturbed, unless such evidence is so incredible and false on its face that the court would deal with it as a matter of law.—People v. Logan, 123 Cal. 414, 56 Pac. 56.

[u] The weight and credibility of evidence showing defendant guilty of the offense charged is for the jury, and their conclusions thereon cannot be disturbed on appeal.—People v. Cummings, 123 Cal. 269, 55 Pac. 898.

[v] Where the testimony or defendant that his confession was not free and voluntary is contradicted, the jury, under proper instructions, are the sole judges of the credibility of the witnesses in regard to the matter, and their verdict will not be disturbed.—People v. Oliveria, 127 Cal. 376, 59 Pac. 772.

[vw] Where the prosecuting witness testified that he left a saloon in defendant's company, and that, soon after, the defendant seized and robbed him, while defendant testified that he remained in the saloon, which statement was corroborated by a woman who worked there, a verdict of guilty will not be set aside, the jury not being bound to decide in conformity with the testimony of the greater number of witnesses.—People v. Stegenberg, 127 Cal. 510, 59 Pac. 942.

[w] Where there is evidence tending to support the verdict of jury, though it may appear weak, and though it may seem to indicate that the law would have been satisfied with a verdict for an offense less in degree, this court cannot review or set aside the verdict.—People v. Sexton, 132 Cal. 37, 64 Pac. 107.

[x] Where defendant charged with murder is found guilty of murder in first degree, a claim that he should have been acquitted, on the ground of insanity, will not be allowed upon appeal, where there is not doubt of his guilt, if he were not insane at the time of the homicide, and the evidence as to his sanity was not so entirely insufficient as to warrant this court in disturbing the verdict. People v. Daily, 135 Cal. 104, 67 Pac. 16.

[y] Appellate jurisdiction of this court in criminal cases is limited to a review upon questions of law alone, and where there is some evidence tending to support a verdict of guilty upon a prosecution for murder, there can be no question of law as to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict.—People v. Fitzgerald, 138 Cal. 39, 70 Pac. 1014.

[z] It is only in extreme cases that supreme court will substitute its judgment for that of jury as to sufficiency of finding on controverted facts.—People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 246, 74 Pac. 745.

[aa] Where legal evidence was introduced to prove all the elements of a crime charged, the verdict of the jury is conclusive on appeal.—People v. Gonzales, 143 Cal. 605, 77 Pac. 448.

[bb] A verdict in a criminal case supported by sufficient evidence is conclusive in the supreme court.—People v. Donnolly, 143 Cal. 394, 77 Pac. 177.

[cc] Under the constitution, giving the court of appeals jurisdiction in criminal cases on questions of law alone, where there is some evidence to sustain the verdict, its sufficiency is not reviewable.—People v. Heart, 1 Cal. App. 166, 81 Pac. 1018.

[dd] The determination of a jury as to the credibility of testimony is not subject to review.—People v. Belardes (Cal.), 48 Pac. 624.

[ee] Where the record on appeal discloses sufficient evidence to uphold a conviction, the judgment will not be disturbed.—People v. Bennett, 50 Pac. 703.

[ff] A verdict of conviction cannot be disturbed on the ground of the insufficiency of evidence.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

See 17 L. R. A. 484, note. See, also, 12 Cyc. 906-910; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 853-872, §§ 3074-3084.

[a] Where, clearly, evidence does not warrant a conviction, the appellate court will reverse.—People v. San Martin, 2 Cal. 484; People v. Ah Loy, 10 Cal. 301; People v. Lewis, 36 Cal. 531.

[b] When it is manifest, from the testimony stated in the record, that the verdict of the jury must have been given under a state of great excitement, preventing a fair and just trial, and the court below has refused a new trial, this court will reverse the judgment and order a new trial.—People v. Acosta, 10 Cal. 195.

[c] A verdict not so contrary to the testimony as to impress the court with the belief that it is the result of passion or prejudice will not be disturbed.—People v. Vance, 21 Cal. 400.

[e] Court will not pass on sufficiency of the evidence unless there is an entire failure of proof, but where there is no evidence to sustain the verdict, it must be set aside.—People v. Smallman, 55 Cal. 185.

[f] When there is any evidence legally tending to sustain a fact, the question whether it amounts to proof of that fact is for the jury, and their finding will not be disturbed upon appeal, unless the evidence preponderates so greatly against the verdict as to make it manifest that the verdict is the result of passion or prejudice.—People v. Wong Chung Suey, 110 Cal. 117, 42 Pac. 420.

[g] When verdict and judgment are supported by legal and sufficient evidence, inquiry of supreme court ends except where evidence against defendant is so slight as to clearly show that jury must have been influenced by passion or prejudice.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 206, 207, 48 Pac. 75.

[h] To justify interference with verdict appellate court must be able to say that there was no evidence upon which verdict could be properly based.—People v. Wilson, 119 Cal. 387, 51 Pac. 639.

[i] In a criminal prosecution the supreme court is not authorized to set aside a conviction on the ground of insufficiency of evidence, unless there is a total absence of evidence on an essential point.—People v. Williams, 133 Cal. 165, 65 Pac. 323.

[j] A verdict approved by the judge can only be disturbed when the appellate court can say as a matter of law that there is no evidence to support it.—People v. Mahatch (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 779.

[a] Verdict of guilty will not be set aside by the appellate court on the ground that it is against the weight of conflicting evidence. There must, to authorize an interference by this court, be such overwhelming evidence against the verdict as to justify the inference that it was rendered under the influence of passion or prejudice, or bias of some kind.—People v. Vance, 21 Cal. 400.

[b] Where there is sufficient to sustain verdict on conflicting evidence, appellate court will not interfere.—People v. Brown, 27 Cal. 500; People v. Gill, 45 Cal. 285; People v. Simpson, 50 Cal. 304; People v. Dunne, 80 Cal. 34, 21 Pac. 1130; People v. Evans, 41 Pac. 444; People v. Donaldson, 70 Cal. 119, 11 Pac. 681; People v. Emerson, 130 Cal. 562, 62 Pac. 1069.

[c] Although it is the practice of appellate courts to refuse to disturb a verdict in a criminal case on the ground that it is not warranted by the evidence, when there is a substantial conflict in the evidence, yet there are exceptional cases, and one of these is where a rape is alleged to have been committed on a child under ten years of age, and a conviction is had on her uncorroborated testimony, and she makes no complaint for two years, sustains no physical injury, makes no outcry, and the defendant is her stepfather, and physicians testify that it was improbable that bleeding and great bodily pain would not have followed, and the defendant testifies in his own behalf, denying the commission of the offense.—People v. Hamilton, 46 Cal. 540.

[d] Unless evidence is so slight that court below would be justified in directing a verdict for defendant this court is not authorized to reverse the judgment upon the ground that the evidence does not sustain a verdict of guilty. If there is a conflict it is for the jury, under proper instructions, to determine the credibility of witnesses.—People v. Bird, 60 Cal. 7.

[e] Where evidence is conflicting, appellate court will not disturb the verdict, even though it may differ from jury as to preponderance of evidence.—People v. Levy, 71 Cal. 618, 12 Pac. 791; People v. Ah Jake, 91 Cal. 98, 27 Pac. 595.

[f] Where evidence is conflicting, verdict will not be set aside if there is sufficient evidence to support it though preponderance is against it.—People v. Chun Heong, 86 Cal. 331, 24 Pac. 1021.

[g] In prosecution for robbery, where there was positive evidence before the jury on the part of several witnesses that the defendant was the individual who committed the offense charged, a verdict of guilty must be deemed to have determined any conflict of evidence concerning the defense of alibi, or as to the identity of the robber with the person accused.—People v. Fice, 97 Cal. 459, 32 Pac. 531.

[h] Verdict of conviction upon conflicting evidence will not be disturbed for insufficiency of the evidence to support it, even though a portion of the evidence is calculated to cast discredit on the case of the prosecution.—People v. Un Dong, 106 Cal. 83, 39 Pac. 12.

[i] Rule applicable to conflicting evidence does not prevent the review of the sufficiency of evidence to show a case of embezzlement, where the conflicting evidence is as to facts, which, if taken as proven, do not make out a case of embezzlement.—People v. O'Brien, 106 Cal. 104, 39 Pac. 325.

[j] If there is evidence for prosecution sufficient to sustain a verdict against accused, jury is final arbiter of facts, and its determination will not be disturbed upon appeal by reason of conflicting evidence on behalf of the defendant.—People v. Roemer, 114 Cal. 51, 45 Pac. 1003.

[k] Upon a defense of insanity, where the evidence of the expert witnesses was conflicting, the finding of the jury as to the sanity or insanity of the defendant is conclusive. People v. Larrabee, 115 Cal. 158, 46 Pac. 922.

[m] Verdict for manslaughter will not be disturbed upon appeal, when evidence is conflicting as to whether homicide was or was not committed in self-defense, and there is enough evidence for the prosecution to warrant the verdict, and no such disparity appears in the statement of the witnesses for the prosecution as to render their evidence inherently improbable or necessarily unworthy of belief.—People v. Brittan, 118 Cal. 409, 50 Pac. 664.

[n] Where the evidence in a criminal case is squarely conflicting, and all of the direct evidence in the case comes from Chinese witnesses, whose interests were involved in the litigation, and who flatly contradicted each other, the verdict of the jury will not be disturbed on appeal.—People v. Lon Yeck, 123 Cal. 246, 55 Pac. 984.

[o] Upon appeal from conviction of manslaughter, where evidence conflicts, and there is evidence sufficient to sustain the verdict, the right and province of the jury to determine the credibility of the witnesses and to discredit evidence for the defendant contradictory to that for the prosecution, cannot be questioned in this court.—People v. Lewis, 124 Cal. 551, 57 Pac. 470.

[p] Where, in a criminal case, the evidence on the question of the guilt of the accused was conflicting, the supreme court will not interfere with the verdict of the jury, approved by the trial court.—People v. Buckley, 143 Cal. 375, 77 Pac. 169; People v. Bowers (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 553.

[q] Supreme court, under Constitution, article 6, section 4, has appellate jurisdiction in cases prosecuted by indictment in a court of record, in questions of law only, and cannot set a verdict aside where the evidence is conflicting.—People v. Bowers, 18 Pac. 660.

[a] Supreme court can only review order denying challenge of a juror upon the ground of actual bias, when the evidence upon the examination of the juror is so opposed to the decision of the trial court that the question becomes one of law, and where the evidence is conflicting, or shows a state of facts which might have justified the trial court in excluding the juror, the decision by the trial court as to the question of fact is conclusive.—People v. Fredericks, 106 Cal. 554, 39 Pac. 944.

[b] A challenge to a trial juror in a criminal case for actual bias can only be reviewed upon appeal when the question presented is one of law; and the action of the trial court upon such a challenge will not be reviewed where the question is one of fact, or of conflicting statements, or where the evidence would justify a finding either way. People v. Scott, 123 Cal. 434, 56 Pac. 102.

[c] Decision of challenges to jurors for actual bias in having opinion founded on rumors and newspaper statements is largely in the discretion of the court, and when the evidence on the subject presents a question of fact, and not of law, the decision will not be reviewed upon appeal.—People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 83, 60 Pac. 670.

[d] On contradictory testimony by a juror as to bias, the finding of the trial court as to competency is conclusive.—People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292, 78 Pac. 717.

§ 772. —— —— Ruling on Motion for New Trial.

[a] Action of the trial court in granting a new trial in a criminal case on the ground that the verdict was not supported by the evidence, which, though ample, was conflicting, will not be disturbed.—People v. Fugitt (Cal.), 46 Pac. 379.

[b] Determination of trial court on issue of fact raised on a motion for a new trial on the ground of the misconduct of a jury in a criminal case is conclusive on appeal.—People v. Feld (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 1100.

§ 773. Harmless and Prejudicial Error.

[a] Judgment on conviction for larceny will be reversed where the evidence, far from proving legal guilt, is not even sufficient to warrant an inference of moral culpability.—People v. Smyth, 11 Cal. 407.

[b] Appellate court will not reverse a judgment of conviction in a criminal case, by reason of alleged error in a proceeding had in course of the trial, by express agreement of the defendant and his counsel, unless bound to do so by some controlling rule of law.—People v. Henderson, 28 Cal. 465.

[c] Judgment of lower court will be reversed where the bill of exceptions shows that there was a total failure to prove the corpus delicti.—People v. Olivie, 60 Cal. 69.

[d] Variance in name of murdered man will not justify reversal when record does not show that there was no evidence as to identity.—People v. Leong Sing, 77 Cal. 119, 19 Pac. 254.

See 12 Cyc. 910-935; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 873-993, §§ 3085-3191.

[a] In a criminal case it would require the most conclusive showing that the error did not prejudice the party to induce this court to disregard it.—People v. Ybarra, 17 Cal. 166.

[b] Where instruction given could, under no circumstances, be correct the legal presumption is that the error was to the prejudice of the party against whom the error was committed.—People v. Ybarra, 17 Cal. 166.

[c] If the error be in a refusal to allow a question asked by the defense, although it may seem probable that the answer would have been of no material assistance to defendant, prejudice will be presumed.—People v. Williams, 18 Cal. 187.

[d] In criminal cases courts have no power to affirm judgments merely because the judges think that upon the merits the judgment is right. If there be error in the proceedings it is presumed to be injurious to the prisoner, and generally he is entitled to a reversal, having a constitutional right to stand upon strict law.—People v. Williams, 18 Cal. 187.

[e] Where illegal evidence has been admitted, a reversal must follow, unless the court can clearly see that the illegal evidence could not have prejudiced defendant.—People v. Stanley, 47 Cal. 113, 17 Am. Rep. 401.

[g] When reversal is sought for refusal of proper instruction, appellant must show that it was not given elsewhere or give respondent opportunity to show that it was.—People v. Von, 78 Cal. 3, 20 Pac. 35.

[h] The fact that a juror was engaged in an earnest conversation with the prosecuting witness, while inexcusable, is not sufficient to raise a presumption that the juror was improperly influenced thereby.—People v. Dunne, 80 Cal. 34, 21 Pac. 1130.

[j] It must be presumed that subsequent proof proposed to be given was given, if no motion was afterward made to strike out the evidence for want of offered proof.—People v. Bidleman, 104 Cal. 608, 38 Pac. 502.

[k] Upon the trial of a defendant accused of murder, whilst it is presumably injurious for the court to give, at the request of the district attorney, merely abstract propositions of law having no connection with the evidence, yet the presumption of injury is rebutted and overcome where the record shows affirmatively that the error was harmless.—People v. Smith, 105 Cal. 676, 39 Pac. 38.

[l] Prejudice is presumed from an erroneous instruction in a criminal case; and it cannot be rendered harmless by giving a contradictory instruction which is correct; but the giving of contradictory instructions is itself error, and it is usually impossible to tell whether the jury may not have followed the erroneous instruction.—People v. Marshall, 112 Cal. 422, 44 Pac. 718.

[m] It cannot be assumed that a jury were influenced by statements of the court as to evidence in ruling upon objections, when they were instructed to disregard them.—People v. Mayes, 113 Cal. 618, 45 Pac. 860.

[n] Where the record shows error, and does not show its effect, it is presumed to be prejudicial.—People v. Richards, 136 Cal. 127, 68 Pac. 477.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 912; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 876-888, §§ 3090-3099.

§ 775. —— Burden to Show Prejudice from Error.

[a] Not only error, but injury, must be shown to justify the reversal of a judgment of conviction.—People v. Moan, 65 Cal. 532, 4 Pac. 545; People v. Eppinger, 109 Cal. 294, 41 Pac. 1037.

[c] It being incumbent on appellant to show error affirmatively, where an instruction to the jury appears twice in the record—the form in one instance being unobjectionable; in another, erroneous—the former will be regarded as the instruction actually given.—People v. Gibson, 106 Cal. 458, 39 Pac. 864.

[d] Where the evidence supports the verdict, and proper instructions were given, and no exceptions were taken to the admission of evidence, error in procedure must be plainly shown to have been prejudicial, to justify a reversal of the judgment or the order denying a new trial.—People v. Molina, 126 Cal. 505, 59 Pac. 34.

[a] Defendant cannot complain of error favorable to him.—People v. Bush, 68 Cal. 628, 10 Pac. 169; People v. Lundin, 120 Cal. 310, 52 Pac. 807; People v. Walker, 140 Cal. 156, 73 Pac. 831.

[b] Where jurors in a criminal case were permitted to separate after the case had been submitted to them, and before they had arrived at a verdict of guilty subsequently rendered, prejudice will be presumed.—People v. Adams, 143 Cal. 208, 76 Pac. 954, 66 L. R. A. 247.

[c] Any error in the failure of the court on a prosecution for grand larceny to give the jury a form of verdict permitting them to find defendant guilty of petit larceny is favorable to the defendant, and is not cause for reversal on appeal from a conviction of grand larceny.—People v. Clark, 145 Cal. 727, 79 Pac. 434.

[a] That technical error was committed by court during criminal trial is not enough of itself to produce a reversal of the judgment, but it must be such an error as produced an injury to the substantial rights of the defendant, and upon him is cast the burden of showing it.—People v. Brotherton, 47 Cal. 388.

[b] On hearing appeal this court will give judgment without regard to technical errors or defects, or to exceptions which do not affect the substantial rights of a defendant.—People v. Sprague, 53 Cal. 491.

[a] Omission to ask witness, at preliminary examination, his business or profession is not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Rodrigo, 69 Cal. 602, 11 Pac. 481.

[b] Mere irregularity in preliminary hearing, not affecting substantial rights of defendant, will not justify setting aside conviction on appeal.—People v. Sehorn, 116 Cal. 505, 48 Pac. 495.

[c] Defects in preliminary examination and commitment not affecting substantial rights of accused are harmless.—People v. Van Horn, 119 Cal. 326, 51 Pac. 538.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 12 Cyc. 914-917; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 888-910, §§ 3100-3118.

§ 780. —— Defects, Indictment or Information.

[a] Mere formal defects in the indictment, by which no substantial right of the defendant could be affected, will not justify an arrest of the judgment. Thus, where, in an indictment for murder, the initial letters only of the Christian names of the deceased were prefixed to his surname, and it did not appear but that he was generally known, recognized and identified by the name as contained in the indictment this court will not reverse the order of the court below refusing to arrest the judgment.—People v. Dick, 37 Cal. 277.

[c] Where defect in indictment or information is merely technical, and does not affect the substantial rights of parties, a judgment of conviction will not be reversed by reason of such defect.—People v. Hitchcock, 104 Cal. 482, 38 Pac. 198.

[d] Failure of indictment to allege material fact is ground for reversal.—People v. Cohen, 118 Cal. 81, 50 Pac. 20.

[e] An irregularity in indorsing the mere surname of a witness upon the indictment, without giving his Christian name, is harmless. if the defendant, immediately after the finding of the indictment, knew the particular person so named upon the indictment. People v. Quinn, 127 Cal. 542, 59 Pac. 987.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 781. —— Drawing Jury.

[a] Since the only object of the statute in requiring that the clerk's certificate to the list of persons drawn for jurors shall state the date of the order directing drawing is to identify such order, in a case where the record sufficiently identified such order, the omission of the date from the clerk's certificate was an immaterial error.—People v. Iams, 57 Cal. 115.

§ 782. —— Informing Accused of Right to Challenge Juror.

[a] Where defendant had the benefit of all the peremptory challenges to which he was entitled, the omission of the court to inform him that, if he intends to challenge a juror, he must do so when the juror appears, and before he is sworn, as required by Penal Code, section 1066, is not prejudicial error.—People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

[b] Failure of the court to inform defendant, as provided by Penal Code, section 1066, that if he desires to challenge any particular juror he must do so before the juror is sworn, is not ground for reversing the judgment, if it appears that defendant and his counsel were fully aware of his rights, and defendant is not prejudiced thereby.—People v. Mortier, 58 Cal. 262; People v. O'Brien, 88 Cal. 483, 26 Pac. 362.

§ 783. —— Rulings on Challenge to Juror or Panel.

[a] Improper allowance of challenge by prosecution is sufficient to cause reversal of judgment on a verdict of guilty.—People v. Stewart, 7 Cal. 140.

[b] If a party attempt to challenge a juror for implied bias, and, the challenge being disallowed, he then challenge peremptorily, and, if it does not appear affirmatively that he had exhausted his peremptory challenges at the time a full panel was sworn, he is not prejudiced by the disallowance of his attempted challenge.—People v. McGungill, 41 Cal. 429.

[c] Where the prosecution in a criminal case passes the jury to the defendant, and the defendant exercises his right of peremptory challenge by objecting to one juror, the action of the court in permitting the prosecution to peremptorily challenge a juror is not ground for reversal.—People v. Majors, 65 Cal. 138.

[d] Where the court in a murder trial sustained an objection to a question asked a talesman during his examination on his voir dire as to his qualifications as a juror, and said talesman was peremptorily challenged by defendant, and the court subsequently permitted another peremptory challenge in addition to the number allowed by law, such ruling, if error, was harmless.—People v. Freeman, 92 Cal. 359, 28 Pac. 261.

[e] In impanelment of jury, where name of a juror has been passed by the people, and thereafter defendant has exercised right to challenge other jurors, peremptorily, it is not prejudicial error for the court to allow the prosecution further to examine the juror who has been passed, and to challenge him peremptorily, if such juror has not been sworn, and the panel is not completed, and the challenges on the part of the people have not been exhausted.—People v. Dolan, 96 Cal. 315, 31 Pac. 107.

[f] Error in disallowing challenge for cause is cured by exercise of peremptory challenge if jury is competent without exhausting all peremptory challenges.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 195, 196, 48 Pac. 75.

[g] When fair and impartial jury was obtained, error in allowing challenge will not be reviewed.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 199, 48 Pac. 75.

[h] Where challenges for actual bias are denied and appellant does not use his peremptory challenges and defendant had unused challenges when jury was completed, ruling will not be reviewed.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 88, 50 Pac. 390.

[i] Error in denying defendant's challenge to the panel of jurors, without permitting him to make proof, held cured by subsequent proceedings.—People v. Lee, 1 Cal. App. 169, 81 Pac. 969.

[a] Accused is not prejudiced by the excuse of a juror whom he has challenged, although the prosecution has concurred in the challenge.—People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546, 82 Pac. 196.

§ 785. —— Time of Trial.

ground for reversal.—People v. Fredericks, 106 Cal. 557, 39 Pac. 944.

[b] Where it does not appear that defendant's case was prejudiced by action of court in overruling his motion for a postponement, such action will not be reversed on appeal. People v. Puttman, 129 Cal. 258, 61 Pac. 961.

§ 786. —— Conduct of Trial in General.

[a] Temporary suspension of a trial of a criminal case, to dispose of a motion in another cause, is not an error or even an irregularity where the prisoner's rights do not appear to have been injuriously affected.—People v. Lafuente, 6 Cal. 202.

[b] An error in informing a witness for the prosecution that his testimony cannot be used against himself does not prejudice defendant, so as to be ground of reversal.—People v. Rodundo, 44 Cal. 538.

[c] It is error to read to jury portion of information relating to prior conviction where defendant has confessed it.—People v. Sansome, 84 Cal. 450, 24 Pac. 143.

[d] Defendant cannot complain of the court's refusal, during the district attorney's address to the jury, of his request that the stenographer's notes of a witness' evidence be read to the jury on account of an alleged misstatement of it by the district attorney, where the court subsequently offered to the jury, if any of them desired it, to have the notes read after such address.—People v. Faulke, 96 Cal. 17, 30 Pac. 837.

[e] Where, on defendant's challenge to the panel under a special venire, on the ground of bias on the part of the sheriff, testimony was taken, in the absence of all the jurors, which was embodied in an affidavit, whereupon the challenge was sustained, and a venire issued to the coroner, the filing of such affidavit, if irregular, was not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652, 49 Pac. 1049.

[f] Case will not be reversed for abuse of discretion in refusing to admit of experiments unless the evidence comes clearly within principles by which it is allowed.—People v. Woon Tuck Wo, 120 Cal. 296, 52 Pac. 833.

[a] Evidence that prisoner was a gambler, when gambling was licensed, is not prejudicial.—People v. Butler, 8 Cal. 435.

[b] Conviction will not be reversed for admission of improper evidence, unless defendant was prejudiced thereby.—People v. Plummer, 12 Cal. 256; People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 421, 24 Pac. 1006; People v. Garcia, 40 Pac. 114; People v. Evans, 41 Pac. 444; People v. Davis, 47 Cal. 93; People v. Lemperle, 94 Cal. 45, 29 Pac. 709; People v. Hawes, 98 Cal. 648, 33 Pac. 791; People v. Kilvington, 36 Pac. 13; People v. Donaldson, 70 Cal. 116, 11 Pac. 681; People v. Nelson, 85 Cal. 429, 24 Pac. 1006; People v. Daniels, 105 Cal. 262, 38 Pac. 720.

[c] Error in admission of evidence is cured by withdrawing such evidence, and directing the jury to disregard it.—People v. Bealoba, 17 Cal. 389; People v. French, 7 Pac. 822.

[d] Where question, the answer to which could not prejudice defendant, or one to which no answer is given, is objected to by defendant and improperly admitted by the court, the error is immaterial.—People v. Dennis, 39 Cal. 625.

[n] A witness on trial for robbery having testified that he did not know whether defendant knew that the person robbed had all his money together or not; that he might have seen it for all witness knew; that he might have seen more than ten dollars—the refusal to strike out what the witness testified that defendant "might have seen," if error at all, is harmless, as it was so uncertain as not to be likely to have injured defendant. People v. Ward, 77 Cal. 113, 19 Pac. 373.

[o] Where motion to strike out irrelevant evidence was temporarily denied on the district attorney's assurance that he would produce connecting evidence, and was granted on his failure to do so, there was no error. People v. McLean, 84 Cal. 480, 24 Pac. 32.

[op] Admission of opinion of witness upon facts to which he had testified is reversible error.—People v. Ah Own, 85 Cal. 584, 24 Pac. 780.

[p] Court cannot, on appeal, disregard evidence erroneously admitted, and look into the unobjectionable evidence to determine whether it is sufficient to sustain the verdict. People v. Wallace, 89 Cal. 158, 26 Pac. 650.

[q] Error in the court's refusal to strike out incompetent evidence of declarations is not cured by a subsequent instruction that defendant is not bound by anything said, not in his hearing or presence, by the person who made the remark, such instruction not being a plain and unequivocal direction to disregard the evidence.—People v. Wallace, 89 Cal. 158, 26 Pac. 650.

[r] The refusal of the court to strike out an answer of a witness for the prosecution, on his redirect examination, that he had known the defendant "since he was at San Quentin," is not a material error, where the witness had said the same thing in his cross-examination by the defendant's counsel, without any objection being made to it.—People v. Dollor, 89 Cal. 513, 26 Pac. 1086.

[t] Admission in evidence of declarations of defendant which do not constitute a confession is not a reversible error where there is nothing in the circumstances under which they were made which would justify their exclusion.—People v. Young, 102 Cal. 411, 36 Pac. 770.

[u] Where evidence has been already received without objection a repetition of it against objection is harmless.—People v. Chin Hane, 108 Cal. 597, 41 Pac. 697.

[v] A defendant who is convicted of burglary in the second degree, upon evidence which showed that the crime could only have been burglary in the first degree, is not prejudiced by such error, and cannot object thereto on appeal.—People v. Maroney, 109 Cal. 277, 41 Pac. 1097.

[w] One who lived with defendant testified for the state that on the night of the murder defendant, on coming home, told witness that he killed deceased, and warned witness to keep silence. Held, that error in admitting the confession without foundation having been laid therefore was harmless, as the confession was voluntary.—People v. Kamauna, 110 Cal. 609, 42 Pac. 1090.

[x] Error in admitting statements made by an alleged accomplice after the commission of the robbery, and not in defendant's presence, is not cured by the accomplice testifying to the same facts.—People v. Oldham, 111 Cal. 648, 44 Pac. 312.

[y] Error in admitting under objection and exception, statements made by an alleged accomplice, after the crime was committed, and in defendant's absence, is not cured by instructing the jury, after the case is argued, to disregard such evidence in making up their verdict.—People v. Oldham, 111 Cal. 648, 44 Pac. 312.

[z] Evidence of other acts of intercourse of the defendant with the prosecuting witness, besides the specific one charged, is harmless if erroneous, where the materially objectionable features of the evidence were not objected to or any exception reserved by the defendant, and where further evidence of a similar nature was stopped by the judge in a manner indicating to the jury that it should consider only the act charged, and where it further appears that the other evidence in the case was clearly sufficient to establish the act charged.—People v. Rangod, 112 Cal. 669, 44 Pac. 1071.

[dd] It is not error to overrule an objection to a question the answer to which may be relevant, though when given it proves not to be.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179, 48 Pac. 75.

[ee] Rule as to cure of error in a criminal case, where evidence is admitted and subsequently rejected, is different from that which applies where evidence is rejected and subsequently admitted; in the former case, injury may be done by allowing the incompetent evidence to go to the jury, which cannot be adequately cured by a subsequent ruling; but the reason of the rule is not the same in the latter case, and the error in rejecting the evidence is cured by its subsequent admission.—People v. Wong Chuey, 117 Cal. 624, 49 Pac. 833.

[ff] A prosecuting witness sought to identify defendant as his assailant, and gave a description of a pistol with which he was threatened, and, over objection, showed that defendant was in possession of a pistol two weeks thereafter, but did not identify it. Defendant showed that he bought it after the assault, whereupon the court struck out all evidence as to defendant's having a pistol after the assault. Held, that the injury resulting from the fact that the jury had heard the stricken testimony was not reversible error.—People v. Turner, 118 Cal. 324, 50 Pac. 537.

[gg] On a trial for rape, admission of a mother's entry in a family Bible of the date of her child's birth was prejudicial error, though the mother had testified as to such date.—People v. Mayne, 118 Cal. 516, 62 Am. St. Rep. 256, 50 Pac. 654.

[ii] It is error to order execution of defendant at a date within the time allowed by statute for an appeal from the order, and the time allowed for preparing and settling a bill of exceptions, preparatory to an application to the supreme court for a certificate of probable cause, in case such certificate should be refused by the trial court.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 201, 51 Pac. 185.

[jj] Under Penal Code, section 1227, as amended by Statutes of 1891, page 274, expressly providing for the execution of judgments of death by the warden of the state prison, there was no merit in a contention that such warden has no authority to execute such judgments.—People v. Ebanks, 120 Cal. 26, 52 Pac. 1078.

[kk] Error in permitting the prosecution to anticipate the defense and put in evidence out of order will not ordinarily justify reversal.—People v. Arrighini, 122 Cal. 121, 54 Pac. 591.

[ll] If it does not clearly appear that the defendant was prejudiced thereby, a ruling permitting the admission in evidence of the confessions of a defendant accused of arson, before proof of corpus delicti, will not justify reversal of the judgment.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

[mm] Where it was admitted that defendant got over a wire fence before striking deceased, and it appeared that one of the wires at the post where he got over was bent, the admission of evidence that a witness put his weight on the wire next to another post, to observe its effect, and that the wire was bent in the same manner, without showing the conditions to have been the same in both cases, while erroneous, was not prejudicial, since it was immaterial how defendant got over.—People v. Hill, 123 Cal. 571, 56 Pac. 443.

[nn] Where declarations made by defendant's confederate are purely hearsay, but in no way prejudicial to defendant, error in admitting such evidence is no ground for a new trial.—People v. Winters, 125 Cal. 325, 57 Pac. 1067.

[oo] Where defendant testified that he told the prosecuting witness that he did not have his pocketbook, and the latter testified that the defendant was the man who stole the money, the defendant cannot be prejudiced by evidence of any declaration made by the prosecuting witness at the time of or immediately after the theft.—People v. Piggott, 126 Cal. 509, 59 Pac. 31.

[pp] Where the court erroneously admits evidence of an immaterial fact, but it affirmatively appears that such evidence did not injure the defendant, and that, standing alone or in combination with the other evidence in the case, it could not have injured him, such error is harmless.—People v. Matthews, 126 Cal. xvii, 58 Pac. 371.

[rr] Where defendant brought out, on cross-examination of witnesses, the fact that he had been previously arrested, the admission of other testimony, tending to show such arrests, was not prejudicial.—People v. Piggott, 126 Cal. 509, 59 Pac. 31.

[ss] Any irregularity in admitting in evidence in a prosecution for murder the deposition of a deceased witness taken at the preliminary examination, where it was not shown that the reporter's stenographic notes had been filed with the county clerk, as required by Penal Code, section 869, subdivision 5, was without injury to the defendant, where the notes were actually so filed before the conclusion of the trial.—People v. Eslabe, 127 Cal. 243, 59 Pac. 577.

[tt] Where, in a prosecution for burglary, an officer testified that he had searched the prisoner's trunk, it was reversible error for the prosecution to ask him how he came to make the search, knowing that the answer would show that the prisoner was suspected of another theft, though the court sustained an objection to the question after the officer's answer to that effect had been given.—People v. Valliere, 127 Cal. 65, 59 Pac. 295.

[uu] Where, on a trial for murder, the court allowed a witness to answer, over defendant's objection, the question how many arms a Mr. C. had, and replied that he had only one arm, the error, if any, was harmless.—People v. Sullivan, 129 Cal. 557, 62 Pac. 101.

[vv] Defendant having testified that he did the killing with which he was charged in self-defense, that he had received a letter from friends warning him of the danger of arrest, and that upon such suggestion he had changed his residence, the admission of letters written by one secret society to another to warn defendant that the officers of the law were upon his track, and to advise him to change his residence, was error without prejudice.—People v. Lee Dick Lung, 129 Cal. 491, 62 Pac. 71.

[ww] Where the defendant in a murder prosecution concedes having fired the shot that killed deceased, a refusal of a motion to strike out testimony that deceased stated subsequent to the shooting, "I am shot to kill," is not reversible error, since such statement went no further than defendant's concession.—People v. Brown, 130 Cal. 591, 62 Pac. 1072.

[xx] Where, in a prosecution for the larceny of a cow, a witness testified, without objection, to the finding of the carcasses of two calves in a certain locality, a question calling for their condition, and the answer to the effect that they were very much decomposed, which was favorable to accused as showing that they could not have come from the stolen cow, was properly admitted. People v. Machado, 130 Cal. xviii, 63 Pac. 66.

[yy] On a trial for murder, the motive for which is assigned as robbery, the improper admission of evidence of accused's illicit relations with a certain woman is not reversible error, where evidence of the same general character was introduced by accused.—People v. Clarke, 130 Cal. 642, 63 Pac. 138.

[zz] In a prosecution for perjury in giving false testimony in a previous prosecution for larceny, error in admitting in evidence the verdict and judgment in the larceny case was cured by taking the evidence from the jury and instructing them not to consider it. People v. Prather, 134 Cal. 436, 66 Pac. 589, 863.

[aaa] Evidence of the chief of the fire department that a man was placed in charge of the building after the fire is harmless, even if erroneous, where the only issue in relation thereto is the acts of the man in charge.—People v. Bishop, 134 Cal. 682, 66 Pac. 976.

[bbb] Where evidence is admitted, over objection, in a prosecution for burning a dwelling-house to defraud the insurers, that clothing worn by defendant at the fire retained an odor of kerosene at the time of trial, and on cross-examination the court states that there is no use going on with such testimony, as the clothing has been accessible to persons going in and out of the courtroom, the admission of such evidence in the absence of a request to strike it out is harmless error.—People v. Bishop, 134 Cal. 682, 66 Pac. 976.

[bbc] Upon a prosecution for burglary, where it appeared that the defendant had pawned a stolen overcoat, taken from a lodging-house, it was prejudicial error to permit the pawnbroker to testify to a conversation with defendant's wife, who was not a witness at the trial, in which he stated to her that he was positive of the identity of the defendant, and she stated her opinion that her husband was innocent, but that everything was against him.—People v. Altmeyer, 135 Cal. 80, 66 Pac. 974.

[ccc] A judgment should not be reversed because of error in the admission of evidence merely cumulative to contradict a witness on an immaterial point.—People v. Chrisman, 135 Cal. 282, 67 Pac. 136.

[eee] Where, in a prosecution for homicide, it was proved that defendant struck deceased with an ax, and that, immediately thereafter, S. inflicted a mortal wound with a knife, which was conclusively proved to belong to S, and not to defendant, the admission of evidence against defendant that, on the day after the homicide, S. came to witness' store and purchased a pocketknife, was harmless.—People v. Morine, 138 Cal. 626, 72 Pac. 166.

[fff] Where, in a prosecution for homicide, there was no evidence contradicting proof that a wound in decedent's forehead was inflicted by defendant with an ax, the overruling of an objection to evidence of a witness, who had seen the wound, that the same could have been inflicted with an ax, on the ground that it was an opinion of the witness, was harmless.—People v. Morine, 138 Cal. 626, 72 Pac. 166.

[ggg] Code of Civil Procedure, section 2052, requires that, before a witness can be impeached by showing contradictory statements, such statements must be related to him, and he be asked if he made them, and, if he did, be permitted to explain them. Held that, while it was error to allow proof of a witness' statement to be made after her answer as to whether she made it had been prevented by objection, it was not ground for reversal; the statement itself relating to a matter of exceedingly slight importance, which, as shown by the verdict, did not prejudicially affect accused.—People v. Glaze, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

[hhh] On a prosecution for forgery of a check, reference in the evidence to another check was not prejudicial to defendant, where there was nothing to indicate that the latter check was forged, or that anyone had tried to pass it.—People v. Walker, 140 Cal. 153, 73 Pac. 831.

[iii] Where the jury on trial for murder saw the witness who was with deceased at the time of the killing, and could judge of his physical ability to intervene and stop the killing, the error, if any, in admitting evidence of the weight of the witness was not prejudicial.—People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 233, 74 Pac. 745.

[mmm] On a prosecution for assault with intent to commit rape, the father of prosecutrix testified that when he reached defendant's place of business, shortly after the time when it was claimed the assault was committed there, the defendant stated that prosecutrix had been there, but that he had done nothing to her, and defendant's motion to strike such testimony was denied. Held that, as the statement of defendant that he had done prosecutrix no harm was evidence in his favor, its retention in evidence was not prejudicial to him.—People v. Scalamiero, 143 Cal. 343, 76 Pac. 1098.

[ppp] In a prosecution for robbery, testimony of a witness that he made a visit to the place of the crime with a detective who stated the place where he understood the holdup occurred, followed by testimony as to the condition of the electric light at that point, was harmless in view of evidence that the place shown the witness was midway between two lights, prosecutor having testified that the place where the holdup occurred was an open space in the middle of the block, between certain trees, since, if the place was elsewhere than at the middle of the block, the light would have been stronger.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

[ttt] In a prosecution for murder, defendant held not prejudiced by the admission of the expert opinion of a witness that deceased's wounds were caused by some blunt instrument.—People v. Olsen, 1 Cal. App. 17, 81 Pac. 676.

[www] In a prosecution for homicide, evidence of a physician who performed the autopsy that he believed the wound on deceased's body was made by a 32-caliber pistol bullet held not prejudicial.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

[a] A prisoner convicted of manslaughter cannot be held to have been prejudiced by the rejection of evidence which, if admitted, would only have had the effect to reduce the offense from murder to manslaughter.—People v. Wyman, 15 Cal. 70.

[b] Where the court improperly rejects the testimony of a witness offered by defendant in a trial for murder to prove the testimony of a witness, since deceased, at a former trial, and afterward gives leave to introduce such evidence, and offers to give time to send for the witness, or to allow the minutes taken of the evidence at the former trial to be read to the jury, and such minutes are so read, a new trial will not be granted.—People v Henderson, 28 Cal. 465.

[c] The error of refusing to allow a witness to be asked on cross-examination whether he has not formerly made different statements is not cured by the fact that his testimony is corroborated by other witnesses.—People v. Robles, 29 Cal. 421.

[e] Where defendant's request, after the people have rested, to cross-examine the prosecutor on new matter, is denied, the error is harmless where defendant subsequently made the prosecutor his own witness, and it appeared that it was not on new matter that he desired to cross-examine, but on matter inquired into on the former examination. People v. Parton, 49 Cal. 632.

[f] If a magistrate, in taking a deposition, erroneously excludes a question asked of a witness, the error does no injury, if the testimony sought to be elicited was immaterial. People v. Keith, 50 Cal. 137.

[g] If a witness on behalf of the prosecution is erroneously permitted to testify to a part only of a conversation of defendant, the error does not prejudice defendant if he testifies to the remainder of the conversation.—People v. Keith, 50 Cal. 137.

[h] Exclusion of testimony as to fact which has been proved by the uncontradicted testimony of another witness is not a prejudicial error.—People v. Westlake, 62 Cal. 303.

[hi] Offer of evidence improperly rejected is ground of reversal, though ability to make the proof may be highly improbable if not manifestly impossible.—People v. Blake, 65 Cal. 279, 4 Pac. 1.

[i] Refusal to permit answer to proper question is immaterial where other portions of testimony fully answer it.—People v. Fong Ah Sing, 70 Cal. 13, 11 Pac. 323.

[j] Exclusion of evidence as to fact proved by other evidence is harmless.—People v. Kalkman, 72 Cal. 216.

[jk] Exclusion of evidence tending to explain intent in prosecution for larceny is reversible error.—People v. Eastman, 77 Cal. 172, 173, 19 Pac. 266.

[k] Defendant, on trial for assault with intent to kill, was not allowed to ask the prosecuting witness if he had not stated to various parties (naming them) that he (witness) would use his shotgun on defendant, or words to that effect. Subsequently defendant was allowed to prove by these "various parties" the statements made by the prosecuting witness. Held, that the refusal, if error, was harmless.—People v. Scott, 93 Cal. 516, 29 Pac. 123.

[l] Refusal to permit defendant to tell what he understood by prosecutor's threat a few days before the assault, to "fix" defendant, if error, was not prejudicial, where defendant testified that, immediately before that assault, prosecutor threatened to kill him, and made demonstrations as if to draw a weapon.—People v. Lynch, 101 Cal. 229, 35 Pac. 860.

[m] Where an objection to a question is erroneously sustained, and it appears that, notwithstanding the ruling, witness immediately went on, without further objection, and answered the question, the ruling is without prejudice.—People v. Shaw, 111 Cal. 171, 43 Pac. 593.

[n] A witness for the state, who was the first to find deceased's body, testified that a stone was lying near deceased's hand, and denied having made a statement to third persons that the stone was in his hand. There was no evidence that the stone was in deceased's hand after his death. Held, that the exclusion of testimony to impeach the witness—to show that he did make such statement—is not prejudicial, since, as it was inadmissible to prove that the stone was in deceased's hand, its only effect would be to eliminate the testimony as to the position of the stone near deceased's hand, which was favorable to defendant.—People v. Conkling, 111 Cal. 616, 44 Pac. 314.

[o] Any error committed in the sustaining of an objection to questions asked of a witness is cured, where the witness was subsequently recalled, and without objection testified fully in regard to the matter.—People v. Ross, 115 Cal. 233, 46 Pac. 1059.

[r] Error in limiting a question as to reputation of witness "for truth, honesty and integrity" to his reputation for truth and veracity is harmless, witness having given evidence of his dishonesty by testifying that with defendant he committed the larceny in question.—People v. Silva, 121 Cal. 668, 54 Pac. 146.

[s] There was evidence that accused confessed that his accomplice told him one H. procured the burning, and was to pay them one hundred dollars. Accused offered to prove by H. that this was not so, which was refused. Held, that since H.'s denial would not show that the accomplice had not so told accused, and his admitting it would tend to prove accused guilty, the latter was not injured by the ruling.—People v. Jones, 123 Cal. 65, 55 Pac. 698.

[t] Objection to an order striking out evidence is immaterial, where the same evidence is subsequently given by the witness without objection.—People v. Plyler, 126 Cal. 379, 58 Pac. 904.

[u] Where prosecutrix was asked why she did not say something to M., and, in the next succeeding question, why she did not make complaint to anybody at the "saloon where M. was," which latter question was answered, the exclusion of the first question was not error.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[v] Exclusion of evidence of defendant which did not operate to his injury, and had no bearing upon the material question in the case, is not material; and it is material whether an objection to a question was correctly sustained or not, where the ruling was disregarded and the evidence fully given by the defendant.—People v. Ochoa, 142 Cal. 268, 75 Pac. 847.

[w] Where, in the prosecution for wife murder, an objection by the people is sustained to a question asked defendant as to whether his wife stopped at a certain house with his consent, but defendant without further objection fully details the circumstances under which she went there, and the objections and remonstrances on his part, there is no ground for reversal.—People v. Ochoa, 142 Cal. 268, 75 Pac. 847.

[x] No prejudicial injury results from sustaining an objection to a proper question on cross-examination as to the manner of accused when intoxicated, where, by other questions to the same witness, the information sought is elicited, and the witness further testifies that accused was not intoxicated the day after the commission of the crime, when he confessed having committed it.—People v. Gilmore, 53 Pac. 806.

[y] Where the court had stricken all the evidence with reference to a witness' opinion that all the bullets introduced in evidence had been fired from the same pistol, it was immaterial that the court, in specifically designating the evidence, by oversight failed to note for elimination certain evidence touching a particular exhibit.—People v. Weber (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 671.

[a] When question, even if objectionable, is not answered, an objection to it becomes a mere abstraction, and no injury is done to the party excepting.—People v. Williams, 45 Cal. 25.

[e] Erroneously allowing impeachment of witness who had not testified favorably to appellant is harmless error.—People v. Murray, 85 Cal. 357, 24 Pac. 666.

[f] Cross-examination of defendant in criminal action, as to matters about which he was not examined in chief, is not prejudicial error where the matters were such as could not by any conceivable possibility have prejudiced the defendant.—People v. Winters, 93 Cal. 277, 28 Pac. 940.

[g] A conviction will not be reversed because the prosecuting officer asked an improper question, when an objection to the same was sustained, and the jury was instructed to give it no heed.—People v. Gordon, 103 Cal. 568, 37 Pac. 334.

[h] Whether the court erred or not in putting a leading question to a witness will not be considered upon appeal, where the answer was favorable to the appellant.—People v. Clark, 106 Cal. 32, 39 Pac. 53.

[i] Answer to question which is not proper subject of expert evidence is harmless when it supports only conclusion jury could have reached.—People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 217, 48 Pac. 75.

[j] Where scope of testimony given by defendant in his examination in chief shows that the questions propounded to him on cross-examination were within the rules enunciated by this court in previous decisions, or were unproductive of injury to the defendant, there is no ground of reversal therefor.—People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652, 49 Pac. 1049.

[k] It is reversible error to refuse witness' right to explain former testimony offered to impeach his present testimony.—People v. Lambert, 120 Cal. 175, 52 Pac. 307.

[m] A witness for defendant in a prosecution for seduction was asked on cross-examination if he ever knew of improper conduct on the part of the prosecutrix, and answered that he never had had improper relations with her, as he had testified on his examination in chief. Held that, if the question was improper cross-examination it was harmless error.—People v. Godwin, 123 Cal. 374, 55 Pac. 1059.

[n] One accused of robbery testified he lodged at a certain house, and was asked by the state, "When did you pay your rent there?" Objection was sustained. Held, that the mere asking of the question was not cause for reversal.—People v. Patterson, 124 Cal. 102, 56 Pac. 882.

[o] Where defendant was charged with an assault to commit rape in a room on the second floor, the mere asking the question in the presence of the jury, in order to get a ruling of the court on it, whether or not a friend of the defendant, on the approach of the marshal, rushed down the back stairs, and threw sticks against the window to warn the defendant, was not prejudicial to defendant. People v. Vann, 129 Cal. 118, 61 Pac. 776.

[q] Preliminary questions laying a foundation for the introduction of a dying declaration in a murder prosecution, which declaration was not introduced, will not be considered on appeal, since they are not prejudicial. People v. Brown, 130 Cal. 591, 62 Pac. 1072.

[r] On trial of defendant for assault with intent to commit rape, the fact that the district attorney was permitted to read certain questions and answers to two little girls, while on the witness-stand, from their testimony given on the preliminary examination of the defendant before the magistrate, over defendant's objection that the prosecution was trying to impeach their own witnesses, was not prejudicial error, since the girls were the only material witnesses against him, and he would have been benefited by any weakening of their testimony.—People v. Johnson, 131 Cal. 511, 63 Pac. 842.

[s] On a prosecution for seduction under promise of marriage, it was not error to ask the defendant, on cross-examination, if certain letters were in his handwriting, where the identity of the letters as those of the defendant were fully established before such questions were asked.—People v. Goodwin, 132 Cal. 368, 64 Pac. 561.

[t] It was not prejudicial to the defendant, on a prosecution for seduction under promise of marriage, to ask questions on cross-examination seeking to show that he began the correspondence between the prosecutrix and himself, where they had been answered in the negative.—People v. Goodwin, 132 Cal. 368, 64 Pac. 561.

[u] Where defendant, charged with the crime of rape, testified that he had kept up a course of drinking all during that day, but that he knew what he was doing, there was no prejudicial error in sustaining the objection to a question of defendant's counsel relating to whether or not he had been drinking just before getting into the buggy wherein the crime was committed.—People v. Harlan, 133 Cal. 16, 65 Pac. 9.

[v] Where, in a prosecution for burglary, a pawnbroker, to whom the stolen goods were alleged to have been sold, was asked on cross-examination if he had a conversation with defendant's wife after his arrest, and answered "Yes," but detailed none of it, the admission, on redirect examination, of testimony that defendant's wife had told witness that she thought the case against defendant was strong, and that witness then said that he could not be mistaken as to defendant's identity, was prejudicial error.—People v. Altmeyer, 135 Cal. 80, 66 Pac. 974.

[w] On a trial for manslaughter, a witness testified that after the homicide the defendant made a voluntary statement, without threats or offer of reward or immunity. Defendant's counsel requested leave to inquire as to the conditions under which the statement was made. The request was refused, and the witness testified that defendant was asked why he killed deceased, and answered "that he was on his row, and throwing clods at him, and he told him to get off, and he would not get off, and he got mad and shot him." On cross-examination the witness testified that defendant was under arrest at the time the statement was made, but no further facts were developed. Held, that, though it was error to refuse permission to cross-examine the witness, as the subsequent cross-examination showed that defendant was not prejudiced thereby, the judgment should not be reversed therefor.—People v. Miller, 135 Cal. 69, 67 Pac. 12.

[y] Conceding that objection to question by defendant's counsel on cross-examination of the prosecuting witness should have been overruled, defendants were not prejudiced, where evidence showed that particular fact testified to by witness about which question was asked was not within knowledge of the witness, but was fully proved by other witnesses.—People v. Brittain, 142 Cal. 8, 75 Pac. 314.

[z] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2048, providing that the opposite party may cross-examine the witness as to any facts stated in his direct examination or connected therewith, it is reversible error in a prosecution for homicide to permit the prosecution to bring out the account of the quarrel and affray in which the witnesses under cross-examination represented the defendant as the murderer and themselves as peacemakers, the witnesses and defendant all being under indictment for the offense, and defendant charging the witnesses with the killing and they charging him with it, where defendant's direct examination of the witnesses was restricted to showing the absence of a conspiracy to meet and overcome the theory of the prosecution of the existence of a conspiracy to waylay and rob the victim of the homicide. People v. Padilla, 143 Cal. 158, 76 Pac. 889.

[aa] Where, in a prosecution for robbery, a witness answered in the negative a question as to whether he had not stated that K., defendant, and himself came to L. together, defendant was not prejudiced thereby.—People v. Kelly, 146 Cal. 119, 79 Pac. 846.

[bb] Where questions put to defendant when on the witness stand elicited only favorable answers, and no attempt was made to contradict him, he could not have been prejudiced by such examination.—People v. Carleton, 4 Pac. 763.

[cc] A judgment will not be reversed because of questions allowed to be asked a witness on cross-examination where he testified to substantially the same things on his direct examination.—People v. Richards (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 691.

[dd] In a criminal prosecution, defendant held not prejudiced by a question asked of a witness as to whether his ill-feeling toward defendant had colored witness' testimony, which he answered in the affirmative.—People v. Zimmerman (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 446.

[a] Allowing counsel for prosecution to read law books to jury is not ground for reversal. People v. Treadwell, 69 Cal. 238, 10 Pac. 502.

[b] Admission of prosecuting attorney, in presence of jury that he was biased and prejudiced against accused, though disapproved is not ground for reversal.—People v. Hamberg, 84 Cal. 474, 24 Pac. 298.

[d] Statements, questions, and remarks by the district attorney, in the presence of the jury, in reference to incompetent proposed evidence of previous similar offenses of the defendant, not in issue, for the purpose of leading the jury to believe that the offense charged was committed with felonious intent, the contrary being claimed and testified to on behalf of the defendant, are calculated to prejudice the substantial rights of the defendant.—People v. Devine, 95 Cal. 227, 30 Pac. 378.

[e] District attorney is not guilty of misconduct prejudicial to defendant in asking the defendant on cross-examination if he had been in the prize ring, and withdrawing the question upon suggestion by court that it was not proper cross-examination.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 39 Pac. 33.

[f] District attorney is not guilty of misconduct prejudicial to defendant in offering in evidence, in rebuttal to proof of defendant's insanity, record of an investigation as to the sanity of defendant, and verdict of jury pronouncing him sane, which was refused by court, where circumstances are such as to devest offer of evidence of any apparent evil motive.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 39 Pac. 945.

[g] A statement by the prosecuting attorney that the court will instruct that, to acquit, the jury must find that defendant "is insane," is not ground for reversal, where, on objection being taken, the court, in its charge, stated that the issue was as to defendant's sanity at the time of the commission of the offense.—People v. Schmitt, 106 Cal. 48, 39 Pac. 204.

[h] Action of district attorney in offering to prove that defendant was drinking beer on day of homicide, which offer was excluded as not proper cross-examination, and in asking defendant how many times his attorneys had visited him, is not of sufficient importance to be seriously considered as a ground of reversal.—People v. Shaw, 111 Cal. 171, 43 Pac. 593.

[i] Misconduct of counsel in argument is not ground for reversal if jury are cautioned to disregard objectionable portions.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 16, 52 Pac. 112.

[j] Impertinent and objectionable questions by district attorney ruled out by court held harmless though censurable.—People v. Cokahnour, 120 Cal. 254, 52 Pac. 505.

[k] If the prosecuting attorney is guilty of misconduct in attempting to discredit a witness, and, from the circumstances, the jury must see it, the error is harmless.—People v. Phelan, 123 Cal. 551, 56 Pac. 424.

[l] The prosecuting attorney, in argument to the jury, said, speaking of accused's attorney: "Why, this child talks to you as if you were a band of idiots." Held, that, while it was not courteous language, it was not prejudicial to accused.—People v. Paterson, 124 Cal. 102, 56 Pac. 882.

[m] Where, in a prosecution of a witness to a will for perjury in swearing at the probate thereof that it was duly witnessed, when it was not witnessed until after testator's death, it was conceded that the will was bogus, and the evidence showed that the will was not valid, a remark of the district attorney to the jury that the jury in the will contest, within an hour after retiring, brought in a verdict that it was not a valid will, though improper, was not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Rodley, 131 Cal. 240, 63 Pac. 351.

[n] Defendant is not harmed by permission given to the prosecuting attorney to read questions and answers given by the prosecuting witnesses at the preliminary examination and to question the witnesses thereupon, against an objection that the prosecution was trying to impeach his own witnesses, when the statements about which the witnesses were questioned were substantially the same as those given at the trial.—People v. Johnson, 131 Cal. 511, 63 Pac. 842.

[o] In a prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder, the prosecuting witness testified to a difficulty at a dance on the night of the alleged assault, but defendant denied that any difficulty occurred, or that he spoke to witness, or that the witness spoke to him at the hall. On cross-examination defendant was asked if he had been married since the difficulty. An objection to the question was sustained. In his argument defendant's counsel said that no motive for the alleged crime had been shown, and that the affair in the dancehall was of no importance. The district attorney, in replying to the argument, said: "Now, I say this little affair about the woman in the dancehall is the only thing we have in the case that tends to show there was a feeling between these parties. We think it does show it, and we think the fact that the defense is so sensitive about it shows it. Else why wasn't the defendant willing to testify that he had been married since? Why withhold such testimony, if these things are not material?" Defendant simply reserved his exception to the argument, and assigned the action of the district attorney as misconduct. Held, that, as the court sustained the objection and excluded the proposed evidence as to defendant's marriage, it was improper for the district attorney to comment on the motive of defendant in excluding it; but, as the defendant's cause could not have been injuriously affected by the remarks, they were not cause for reversal.—People v. Romero, 143 Cal. 458, 77 Pac. 163.

[p] Under Penal Code, section 1258, certain comments of district attorney on testimony in homicide held not to require a reversal.—People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546, 82 Pac. 196.

[a] Where it is attempted on cross-examination of a witness to show a discrepancy between her testimony and that given by her at the preliminary examination, and there is no such discrepancy, a statement by the court to that effect is not a prejudicial error. People v. Elliott, 80 Cal. 296, 22 Pac. 207.

[b] Where record shows that defendant's counsel consumed time unnecessarily in the repetition of questions, a censure for such consumption of time by trial court is not prejudicial error, though language of censure employed by court is more harsh than can be commended.—People v. Baker, 100 Cal. 188, 38 Am. St. Rep. 276, 34 Pac. 649.

[c] A remark of the judge that it seemed to him that the evidence sought to be elicited by the defense from certain medical witnesses upon a material issue was immaterial, and that he would limit them to two expert witnesses, was not prejudicial error, the judge having correctly stated in what the materiality of the inquiry consisted.—People v. Yokum, 118 Cal. 515, 50 Pac. 686.

[d] Reproving remarks by the judge to defendant's counsel, though not courteously addressed, are not reversible error, where the manner of the counsel in asking and repeating many immaterial questions merited some rebuke, and tried the patience of the judge. People v. Oliveria, 127 Cal. 377, 59 Pac. 772.

[e] Suggestion by judge as to a permissible line of cross-examination of the defendant does not tend to show that the judge aided in the prosecution of the case; and where the counsel for the prosecution decided not to pursue such line, and the action of the judge was not excepted to, no error appears in that connection.—People v. Goodwin, 132 Cal. 368, 64 Pac. 561.

[f] Where court in sustaining an objection made by the defendant, remarked, "I don't propose to have this case go up there and be reversed again, if I can help it," the reasonable inference from the remarks is, that the court only desired to be right in his ruling and to avoid error or mistake therein, and though unnecessary, there is no prejudicial error in the remarks.—People v. Keith, 141 Cal. 686, 75 Pac. 304.

[g] Remark by court, "I don't propose to have case reversed again if I can help it," is not reversible error.—People v. Keith, 141 Cal. 691, 75 Pac. 304.

[h] A statement by the court to an expert that he need base his opinion only on the evidence he deemed true was harmless, where the answer was in fact based on the hypothesis that all the evidence was true.—People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292, 78 Pac. 717.

[i] In a criminal prosecution, alleged misconduct of the court in addressing defendant's counsel in an emphatic and abrupt manner, criticising him for alleged unnecessary repetition of questions propounded to the prosecuting witness, was not ground for reversal, where it did not appear that accused was prejudiced by such remarks.—People v. Modina, 146 Cal. 142, 79 Pac. 842.

[a] A judgment will not be disturbed because of an erroneous instruction not applicable to the facts of the case.—People v. March, 6 Cal. 543; People v. Walsh, 43 Cal. 447.

[b] Mere want of perspicuity in instruction which does not injure the prisoner, if erroneous, is not sufficient ground for reversal. The objection must go to this extent, that the instruction is wholly erroneous, or susceptible of different and doubtful constructions.—People v. Moore, 8 Cal. 90.

[d] An error of the judge in violating the provision of the constitution forbidding instructions with respect to matters of fact would not, under all circumstances, be sufficient cause for reversal. Prima facie it would be sufficient, but no more importance is to be attached to an error of this nature than any other. If no injury could possibly have resulted from it, it cannot vitiate the judgment.—People v. Ybarra, 17 Cal. 16.

[f] In a trial for murder a slight mistake of the judge in reading evidence to the jury, which cannot be conceived to have affected their verdict of guilty is no ground for setting it aside.—People v. Boggs, 20 Cal. 432.

[g] The supreme court will reverse a conviction of manslaughter, where an instruction to the jury containing a correct statement of the law has been partially nullified by a subsequent instruction.—People v. Campbell, 30 Cal. 312.

[h] Where defendant is convicted of the lower grade of the offense, refusal of instructions as to the higher grade is harmless. People v. Nichol, 34 Cal. 211.

[i] Where legal effect of evidence is misdirected by the court so as to confuse and mislead the jury, it is ground for new trial. People v. Taylor, 36 Cal. 255.

[j] Defendant is not prejudiced by instructions, some portions of which, taken by themselves, may be objectionable, but as subsequently qualified embrace a correct exposition of law upon points presented.—People v. Dennis, 39 Cal. 625.

[k] Where, on a trial for murder, two parts of the charge of the court to the jury are contradictory, and one is correct, and the other is erroneous, the judgment of the conviction will be reversed, even though the appellate court may be satisfied from the evidence that the jury ought to have found defendant guilty.—People v. Valencia, 43 Cal. 552.

[l] Rule is that judgments will be reversed for alleged errors in instructions, only when, looking at the testimony, we can see that the jury may have been misled by them to the prejudice of defendant, or when, in the absence of the testimony, it is apparent that the instructions would be improper under any possible condition of the evidence.—People v. Donahue, 45 Cal. 321.

[m] Although it is error, when there is evidence as to defendant's good character, to instruct the jury that evidence of character can only be considered in cases where the guilt of the accused is doubtful," yet, if the evidence so conclusively establishes the guilt of defendant that no amount of evidence of good character could have changed the result, such error does no injury, and the judgment will not be disturbed.—People v. Fenwick, 45 Cal. 287.

[n] Defendant cannot object to instructions which are more favorable to him than they should be, though erroneous.—People v. Ah Kong, 49 Cal. 6; People v. Wong Ah Foo, 69 Cal. 180, 10 Pac. 375.

[o] A conviction will not be reversed for error in an instruction which could not have prejudiced defendant.—People v. Ah Loy, 57 Cal. 566; People v. Smith, 59 Cal. 601.

[r] Where court, in charge to jury, reads whole of section of the code, a part only being relevant, the judgment will not be disturbed if it is not apparent that some substantial right of the accused was affected.—People v. Burns, 63 Cal. 614.

[s] Where a defendant is charged with and convicted of robbery, an erroneous instruction respecting the crime of larceny will not warrant a reversal.—People v. Riley, 65 Cal. 107.

[v] Errors in detached passages are immaterial if charge, as a whole, is correct.—People v. Huff, 72 Cal. 119, 13 Pac. 168.

[w] A deposition was read in which defendant was referred to by name, without further description. The court charged that "identity of person is presumed from identity of name." Held that, as no evidence was introduced to overcome the presumption, the instruction was error without prejudice.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 98, 16 Pac. 544.

[x] Appellant cannot complain of charge on higher offense than that for which he was convicted.—People v. Bentley, 75 Cal. 410, 411, 17 Pac. 436.

tion omittted did not affect or qualify charge taken down.—People v. Cox, 76 Cal. 283, 18 Pac. 332.

[z] A conviction will not be reversed for refusal of instruction, where verdict shows that defendant could not have been prejudiced by such refusal.—People v. Leong Yune Gun, 77 Cal. 636, 20 Pac. 27.

[ff] Where the undisputed evidence shows that defendant committted the burglarly in the night-time, a remark by the judge in charging the jury that the testimony showed the crime to have been committed at 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning could not have prejudiced defendant; and hence the supreme court will not determine whether this language was the mere exercise of the constitutional power of the judge to "state the testimony," or a violation of the mandate that "judges shall not charge juries with respect to matters of fact." Const. art. 6, sec. 19.—People v. McGregar, 88 Cal. 140, 26 Pac. 97.

[hh] Supreme court, cannot weigh the evidence to find that the judgment was warranted, notwithstanding an erroneous charge. People v. Chew Sing Wing, 88 Cal. 268, 25 Pac. 1099.

[ii] Error in instruction on higher offense is harmless if accused was convicted of lower offense.—People v. Gorden, 88 Cal. 425, 26 Pac. 502.

[jj] Where different instructions given, when taken together, must have tended to confuse and cloud minds of the jury, it is ground for reversal of a judgment convicting a defendant of crime.—People v. Elliott, 90 Cal. 586, 27 Pac. 433.

[kk] Although in some cases an inapplicable instruction which is correct as matter of law can do no harm, yet, when it is liable to mislead a jury to the prejudice of one of the parties, it becomes as grave an error as though it were not correct as an abstract proposition of law.—People v. Devine, 95 Cal. 227, 30 Pac. 378.

[nn] Words "a circumstance tending to show guilt" would be a more appropriate expression than the phrase "a guilty circumstance" as applied to the possession of stolen property, yet their manifest meaning is the same, and the use of the latter expression in an instruction is not ground for a reversal of a judgment of conviction.—People v. Abbott, 101 Cal. 645, 36 Pac. 129.

[oo] Inconsistency in instructions regarding the materiality of defendant's good or bad faith in trading for the cow after it had been stolen by another is ground for reversal.—People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 652, 39 Pac. 33.

[pp] While it is dangerous practice for court, in charge, to undertake to characterize effect of evidence, yet where there is in fact an irreconcilable conflict in evidence as between prosecution and defense, a charge stating that such conflict exists is not prejudicially erroneous.—People v. Un Dong, 106 Cal. 83, 39 Pac. 12.

[qq] Although charge of the court, taken as a whole, may be styled as argumentative, yet if there is nothing in it prejudicial to the appellant's rights judgment will not be reversed.—People v. Stanton, 106 Cal. 139, 39 Pac. 525.

[rr] When the charge, taken as a whole, states the law with sufficient fullness and clearness, it is not ground of reversal that there are verbal inaccuracies in the charge, or that isolated sentences and phrases are open to just criticism; but it is sufficient that the charge, regarded in its entirety, shows no substantial error.—People v. Gibson, 106 Cal. 458, 39 Pac. 864.

[ss] Defendant cannot complain that an instruction declaring that a certain person was an accomplice, and that, therefore, there could not be a conviction on his uncorroborated testimony, was error, as charging on facts; it not only having been invited by him, but also being harmless.—People v. Sternberg, 111 Cal. 3, 43 Pac. 198.

[tt] Where an instruction was given erroneously imposing on defendant the burden of proof on an issue, and there was evidence tending to support his defense on such issue, a reviewing court cannot weigh the evidence on the question, and determine therefrom that the error was not prejudicial.—People v. Marshall, 112 Cal. 422, 44 Pac. 718.

[uu] Defendant cannot be heard to complain upon appeal of error in instructions given at his request.—People v. Rangod, 112 Cal. 669, 44 Pac. 1071.

[vv] Instructions must be construed as a whole, and if, without straining any portion of the language, it harmonizes as a whole, and fairly and correctly presents the law bearing on the issues tried, the appellate court will not disturb the judgment, because a separate instruction does not contain all the conditions and limitations which are to be gathered from the entire text.—People v. Worden, 113 Cal. 569, 45 Pac. 844.

[ww] The use of the words "wholly satisfied," in defining reasonable doubt, is not ground for reversal, where they could not mislead the jury, when taken with the rest of the charge.—People v. Ross, 115 Cal. 233, 46 Pac. 1059.

[xx] There is no prejudicial error in instructing that on a former trial there was no evidence in support of a plea of former jeopardy urged on both trials; the state of the evidence at the former trial being immaterial.—People v. Tucker, 117 Cal. 229, 49 Pac. 134.

[bbb] Court charged in relation to testimony of certain medical experts that such testimony was to be reviewed with scrutiny, and received with great caution; and that the value of such testimony depended on the truth or falsity of the hypothetical facts on which they founded their opinions. Held, that the charge was only objectionable as an encroachment on the province of the jury, and was not prejudicial.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[ccc] In absence of evidence, refusal of abstractly correct instructions requested by defendant upon subject of insanity, and upon other subjects, must be presumed to have been upon the ground that they were not pertinent to any question of fact before the jury; and it cannot be said that their refusal was improper, or in any way prejudicial to the defendant's rights.—People v. Clark, 121 Cal. 633, 54 Pac. 147.

[eee] An instruction that the state was required to establish defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, but that defendant might establish any fact by a preponderance of evidence, though incorrect, inasmuch as a defendant is not required to so establish any fact except a claim of insanity, was not reversible error, as it was but an abstract proposition, and did not state that defendant must so establish any certain fact.—People v. Flannelly, 128 Cal. 83, 60 Pac. 670.

[fff] Where there was no evidence that defendant was drunk when he committed the murder, an instruction as to the effect of drunkenness, while unnecessary, was not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Methever, 132 Cal. 326, 64 Pac. 481.

[hhh] Where, on a trial for manslaughter, self-defense was no element in the case, an instruction that drawing and displaying an deadly weapon in a rude, angry and threatening manner in the presence of two or more persons is a criminal offense, without stating that the drawing and displaying must not be in necessary self-defense, was harmless error. People v. Smith, 134 Cal. 453, 66 Pac. 669.

[iii] In a prosecution for forging a note, an instruction not in the abstract erroneous, but so given that it may have been taken to intimate that defendant signed the note, which he denied, and leaving to the jury only the question whether or not he was authorized to do so, is prejudicial. Judgment (1901) 67 Pac. 14, reversed.—People v. Lapique, 136 Cal. 503, 69 Pac. 226.

[jjj] An instruction that a fraudulent intent is presumed from the deliberate commission of an unlawful act for the purpose of injuring another, while not true to all unlawful acts, is harmless where, on a prosecution for embezzlement, there is no evidence of acts of defendant from which to infer a criminal intent, except for the acts which went to make up the crime and were pertinent to establish it.—People v. Jackson, 138 Cal. 462, 71 Pac. 566.

[kkk] Improper instruction as to credibility of witnesses, which merely tells the jurors to do that which they evidently would do without being told, is not prejudicial error. People v. Nong Bin, 139 Cal. 60, 72 Pac. 505.

[lll] In a prosecution for robbery, where prosecuting witness testified directly to unmistakable robbery, and the defense was that defendant was free from all guilt, and defendant was convicted of robbery, instructions on larceny, the giving or refusing of them, and their correctness, were immaterial, and not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Stevens, 141 Cal. 488, 75 Pac. 62.

[nnn] An instruction on a trial for murder, that whether defendant does or does not act with malice aforethought is always to be inferred from the circumstances surrounding the case, is not prejudicial to defendant, for, if there are other rules for determining it, defendant cannot complain because the jury is restricted to one, such restriction being favorable to him.—People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 233, 74 Pac. 745.

[ooo] Fact that instruction announcing correct principle of law is not relevant to facts does not constitute reversible error.—People v. Glover, 141 Cal. 240, 74 Pac. 745.

[ppp] Where, in prosecution for burglary, the sole defense was that defendant did not commit or aid in the commission of the crime, or enter the room, the giving of an instruction to the effect that intoxication might be considered for the purpose of determining the degree of the crime was not prejudicial error.—People v. Dowell, 141 Cal. 493, 75 Pac. 45.

[qqq] Improper instruction often approved by supreme court will not be held prejudicially erroneous.—People v. Manoogian, 141 Cal. 598, 75 Pac. 177.

[sss] Where an indictment for perjury charged, not only that the testimony given was false, but that it was willfully given with knowledge on defendant's part that it was false, as provided by Penal Code, section 118, and the court charged in terms that all the allegations of the information except the falsity of the testimony were admitted, an instruction that if the jury believed beyond all reasonable doubt by the testimony of two witnesses, or by the testimony of one witness and corroborating circumstances, that the testimony in question was false, they should convict, did not constitute reversible error, on an appeal on the judgment-roll alone.—People v. Wong Fook Sam, 146 Cal. 114, 79 Pac. 848.

[ttt] The giving of a charge in a criminal case, that the jury might consider the manner of a witness, his relation to the controversy, etc., is not ground for reversal.—People v. Jailles, 146 Cal. 301, 79 Pac. 965.

[www] It was harmless error to charge that "where weaker evidence is produced, when in the power of the party to produce higher, it is presumed that the higher evidence would be adverse, if it had been produced," where the record did not show that defendant offered weaker evidence when it was in his power to produce higher.—People v. Dole, 51 Pac. 945.

[h] Where one charged with murdering his wife defended on the ground that he was possessed of an insane delusion that she was poisoning him, and it was taken for granted by everyone that the charge against her was groundless, a refusal to instruct that it must be presumed, in favor of innocence, that the wife did not attempt to poison the defendant, was harmless, as the delusion, if it existed, did not constitute a defense.—People v. Hubert, 119 Cal. 216, 63 Am. St. Rep. 72-n, 51 Pac. 329.

[i] Defendant requested a charge that if defendant was, at the time of the homicide, "although only momentarily," incapable, by reason of mental disease, of appreciating the nature of his act, or incapable of appreciating its wrongfulness, he must be acquitted. Held not prejudicial error to modify the instruction by striking out the quoted words, where the instructions on the subject of insanity fully stated the law on such subject.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[j] On a trial for murder, where the only defense was insanity, defendant was not prejudiced by a refusal to instruct that if the evidence "points to" two conclusions, one consistent with guilt, and the other with innocence, the jury were bound to adopt the latter, and acquit.—People v. Barthleman, 120 Cal. 7, 52 Pac. 112.

[m] Where court gave very full instructions as to what constituted embezzlement, and the defendant had requested an instruction to show that there might be an unlawful taking which would not be embezzlement, an instruction as to what constituted "larceny" could not have resulted to the defendant's injury though claimed by him to be inapplicable to the case.—People v. McMahan 133 Cal. 278, 65 Pac. 571.

[n] Where defendant requested instruction to acquit defendant, if jury should find that when defendant shot deceased he was in such a dazed and uncertain condition of mind, produced by a blow upon his head, that he was not capable of exercising ordinary judgment, or was not conscious of his acts, or in a state of mind to consider his acts, or consequences thereof, and judge at first decided to refuse it, but afterward gave it, pen and pencil marks constituting erasures with directions to jury not to consider therein, if it appears that such pen and pencil marks left the instruction legible and intelligible, defendant could not have been injured thereby.—People v. Shears, 133 Cal. 154, 65 Pac. 295.

[o] In a prosecution for murder, refusal of the court to instruct, as required by Code of Civil Procedure, section 2061, that the jury should receive with caution all evidence of oral admissions of defendant against himself, as it states a mere commonplace within the general knowledge of jurors, is not ground for a reversal.—People v. Deegan, 88 Cal. 602, 26 Pac. 500.

[d] After the submission of a criminal case to the jury, the officer in charge took the jurymen to a hotel for dinner, and two of them drank intoxicating liquor, but not sufficient to affect them. Nichols, 62 Cal. 518.

[d] The information, in a prosecution for sending a forged telegram, alleged that defendant had been convicted of a felony. On arraignment defendant pleaded not guilty as to the former conviction, but, after the jury had been impaneled and sworn, defendant, without the hearing of the jury, moved the court to allow him to withdraw his former plea of not guilty as to such conviction and permit him to plead guilty, which was done before the information was read to the jury. The allegations as to the prior conviction were not read to the jury, and no issue was presented thereon. Held, that the failure of the jury to find on the prior conviction was not prejudicial to defendant.—People v. Chadwick, 143 Cal. 116, 76 Pac. 884.

[e] A person convicted of burglary in the second degree cannot complain on appeal that the verdict was contrary to the evidence, because it showed without contradiction that defendant was guilty of burglary in the first degree.—People v. Coulter, 145 Cal. 66, 78 Pac. 348.

[a] Where the mistake in the entry of the statement by the court to defendant of the nature of the offense of which he has been convicted is merely clerical, and does not prejudice defendant in any substantial right (Pen. Code, sec. 1404), the judgment will not be reversed on appeal, though the mistake has not been corrected.—People v. Murback, 64 Cal. 369, 30 Pac. 608.

[b] Defendant was charged with burglary and a prior conviction of petit larceny, and was convicted of burglary in the first degree. Azoff, 105 Cal. 632, 39 Pac. 59.

[a] Where, in a prosecution for murder, the death penalty is not imposed, any error in refusing to allow counsel for accused to comment on the state's failure to call certain witnesses is waived by counsel's failure to point out portions of the record showing the materiality of such witnesses' testimony and the possibility of producing them.—People v. Glaze, 139 Cal. 154, 72 Pac. 965.

§ 801. Subsequent Appeal.

[a] A decision on appeal which involves only sufficiency of information, and jurisdiction of court, is not res judicata on appeal presenting question whether offense charged is within the statute under which the indictment was found.—People v. Hamilton, 103 Cal. 488, 37 Pac. 627.

[b] If defendant in case is convicted, and appeals, and asks for a reversal of the judgment, but does not move for a new trial, a reversal of the judgment and an order for a new trial take from him the right of setting up former trial and conviction in bar of another trial.—People v. Olwell, 28 Cal. 456.

[c] Reversal of judgment and of order denying a new trial, upon appeal of defendant, does not have the effect to arrest the judgment, but remits the defendant to his original position upon his plea of not guilty, and leaves the case as though a trial had never been had; and the court may proceed in any way authorized by the criminal law.—People v. Mooney, 132 Cal. 13, 63 Pac. 1070.

[d] Under a charge of assault with intent to commit murder, defendant was convicted of the lesser offense of assault with a deadly weapon, and a new trial was granted him, for insufficient evidence. On a second trial he was convicted of the higher offense, and on his motion a new trial was granted on the sole ground that he had been twice put in jeopardy for the same offense. On appeal by the people the judgment was reversed because he did not plead former jeopardy. The trial court, on return of remittitur, pronounced judgment on the verdict. Held, that the supreme court could not, on appeal by defendant from such judgment, review its former decision.—People v. Bennett, 50 Pac. 703.

[j] Where defendant in a criminal case, on appeal by him, files no brief, and no error is apparent of record, the judgment will be affirmed.—People v. Moran, 31 Pac. 853.

[k] On appeal from a conviction in a criminal case, where there has been no oral argument in the supreme court, and appellant has filed no points or authorities, and no error appears in the record, the judgment will be affirmed.—People v. Casteel, 34 Pac. 237.

[l] A judgment in a capital case will not be affirmed merely because no counsel has appeared to support the appeal by brief or oral argument.—People v. Morasco, 38 Pac. 423.

[m] Where no brief is filed, a conviction will be affirmed if it appears that the evidence sustains the verdict, and no exception was taken to any ruling of the court.—People v. Short, 41 Pac. 862.

[a] Where judgment imposes fine and imprisonment, and further imprisonment for nonpayment of fine, appellate court will strike out latter portion.—Lowrey v. Hogue, 85 Cal. 603, 24 Pac. 995.

[b] A judgment that a defendant convicted of kidnapping be imprisoned for a stated period, and directing that he also pay the district attorney a specified fee, is unauthorized as to the portion directing the payment of the fee, and will be modified upon appeal by striking out the latter portion, without remanding the case.—People v. Fick, 89 Cal. 144, 26 Pac. 759.

[a] Where, on appeal from a conviction for obtaining money under false pretenses, the state admits that, if defendant is guilty of any crime, it is that of larceny, and not of the crime charged, and it is evident that defendant will not again be tried upon the charge of which he was convicted, the court will not consider moot questions arising upon the evidence, but will reverse the case.—People v. Lewis, 127 Cal. 207, 59 Pac. 830.

§ 807. —— Ordering New Trial on Reversal.

[a] Where, on appeal by a defendant in a trial for murder for error of law occurring in the progress of the trial, the judgment is reversed, the court may order a new trial, although the defendant has not asked for one. People v. Olwell, 28 Cal. 456.

[b] Where a verdict in a criminal case is held on appeal to be a nullity, defendant is not entitled to be discharged, but the supreme court, on reversing the judgment, will order a new trial, and this though defendant did not move for a new trial, but merely for his discharge; since, under Penal Code, section 1260, the appellate court may reverse, affirm, or modify a judgment appealed from, "and may, if proper, order a new trial."—People v. Lee Yune Chong, 94 Cal. 379, 29 Pac. 776.

[b] Where judgment is not for the crime of which the defendant was convicted it should be reversed, with directions to the lower court to render a judgment for embezzlement.—People v. Johnson, 71 Cal. 384, 12 Pac. 261.

[c] That one of the pages of an information on which a conviction was had was missing and not proved at the trial held not to require the appellate court, on reversal, to require the information to be dismissed.—People v. Noon, 1 Cal. App. 44, 81 Pac. 746.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1262, providing that, if a judgment against a defendant is reversed without ordering a new trial, the appellate court must, if he is in custody, direct him to be discharged therefrom, on the reversal of a conviction for uttering a forged check, for insufficiency in the indictment, the defendant, who was in custody, was entitled to be discharged.—People v. Elphis, 139 Cal. xix, 72 Pac. 838.

[b] Penal Code, section 1262, providing that, if judgment against a defendant is reversed without ordering a new trial, the appellate court must direct defendant's discharge from the judgment against defendant, but also the custody, does not apply where not only denial of a new trial, was reversed.—People v. Lee Look, 143 Cal. 216, 76 Pac. 1028.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 810. Jurisdiction and Proceedings in Lower Court After Remand.

[a] Where an appeal is taken, the jurisdiction of the inferior court is only suspended, and, on the return of the remittitur from the appellate court, the latter loses its jurisdiction of the case, and the inferior court resumes its jurisdiction as fully and absolutely as though no suspension had ever occurred.—People v. Dick, 39 Cal. 102.

[b] Where an appeal is taken, and the order or judgment appealed from is simply affirmed, no order of the appellate court is necessary to reinvest the inferior court with jurisdiction.—People v. Dick, 39 Cal. 102.

[c] On reversal of order granting new trial, only duty to be performed by trial court is to render judgment and sentence on the verdict. People v. Woods, 84 Cal. 443, 23 Pac. 111.

[d] Penal Code, section 1262, only gives the appellate court to which an appeal has been taken jurisdiction to order a discharge of defendant, and does not authorize a discharge by any other court.—Ballard, Ex parte (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 833.

[e] Under Penal Code, section 1262, a defendant, where conviction has been reversed on an appeal, held not entitled to a discharge without a showing as to the disposition of appeal from the order denying a new trial.—Ballard, Ex parte (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 833.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 811. Jurisdiction and Proceedings in Appellate Court After Remand.

[a] Where a certified copy of a judgment in an appellate court is remitted to the court from which the appeal is taken, the appellate court loses all jurisdiction of the case; and all orders necessary to carry the judgment into effect must be made by the lower court.—Jones, Ex parte, 41 Cal. 209.

[b] When a certified copy of a judgment in an appellate court is remitted to the court from which the appeal is taken the appellate court loses all jurisdiction of the case; and all orders necessary to carry the judgment into effect must be made by the lower court. This provision of the statute is not confined to judgments in the supreme court, but is applicable to proceedings in the county court. Jones, Ex parte, 41 Cal. 209.

[c] When a remittitur has been regularly issued by supreme court, and filed, and there has been no violation of law or of the rules of this court in ordering the remittitur, and no mistake of facts, and no fraud or imposition practiced by the prevailing party upon the court or upon the losing party, the jurisdiction of the supreme court is at an end, and the judgment final.—People v. McDermott, 97 Cal. 247, 32 Pac. 7.

[a] The provision of the Penal Code, making a second offense of petit larceny a felony, the first being only a misdemeanor, applies where the first offense was committed prior to the taking effect of the code.—Gutierrez, Ex parte, 45 Cal. 429.

prior conviction, if it is charged in the "indictment," such prior conviction may be considered, though charged in an information.—People v. Carlton, 57 Cal. 559.

[c] Contention that it is a discrimination and destruction of the uniform operation of the general laws in the trial of a case, where a former conviction is relied on to increase the penalty for the offense for which defendant is being tried, that the jury is prejudiced in advance from the fact of the reading of the indictment charging him with the previous conviction, and that thereby defendant is compelled to be a witness against himself, is untenable.—People v. Coleman, 145 Cal. 609, 79 Pac. 283.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 813. Prosecutions for Second Offenses—In General.

[a] If the defendant pleads "guilty of the offense as charged in the indictment" and the indictment charges the offense of petit larceny committed after a previous conviction for petit larceny, the plea confesses the offense charged, which includes the previous conviction, and the defendant must be sentenced for a felony.—People v. Delany, 49 Cal. 394.

[b] Defendant admitting former conviction on arraignment cannot deny it on trial without first getting leave to withdraw admission. People v. Appleton, 120 Cal. 252, 52 Pac. 582.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Where a defendant, accused of burglary and of a prior convicton of burglary, pleads guilty to the prior conviction, and not guilty as to the offense charged, it is the intent of the code in such case to keep all information from the jury as to the previous conviction; and the plea of guilty thereof is only intended for the information of the court in determining the punishment to be imposed in case of conviction; and it is prejudicial error to admit evidence of declarations of the defendant that he had served a term in the state's prison under the prior conviction.—People v. Thomas, 110 Cal. 41, 42 Pac. 456.

[a] In view of code, section 1093, requiring the clerk to omit all that relates to a prior conviction in reading an indictment to the jury, if defendant confesses the same, it is not necessary for the jury to pass on the question of former conviction, if defendant makes such confession.—People v. Carlton, 57 Cal. 559.

[b] Penal Code, section 1025, provides that, where defendant is charged in the indictment with having suffered a previous conviction of felony, he must be asked, at the time of pleading, whether he has suffered such conviction, and that his affirmative answer shall be conclusive of that fact. Held, since the repeal of that section, that it is necessary that such previous conviction be charged, that defendant plead thereto, and that the plea be passed upon by the jury, notwithstanding an admission of such previous conviction by defendant when improperly asked by the clerk as to the fact.—People v. King, 64 Cal. 338, 30 Pac. 1028.

[c] Where an information charges a felony, together with a prior conviction, and defendant pleads not guilty of the offense charged, but voluntarily confesses the prior conviction, a general verdict that defendant is guilty as charged in the information is regular, and broad enough to cover all issues in the pleading, and it is not necessary that the jury should find specially as to the prior conviction.—People v. Brooks, 65 Cal. 295, 300, 4 Pac. 7, 11.

[e] On the trial of an indictment charging defendant with forgery, and with having suffered a prior conviction of larceny, a general verdict of "guilty as charged" will be treated as an acquittal of the charge of prior conviction.—People v. Eppinger, 109 Cal. 294, 41 Pac. 1037.

[a] A judgment of conviction of burglary and prior conviction, which recites that defendant, when called for sentence, was informed by the court of the information charging him with the crime of burglary and prior conviction of burglary, of his arraignment and pleas of not guilty as charged in the information, and guilty of the prior conviction, of the trial, and verdict of guilty of burglary, and that he was then asked if he had any legal cause to show why judgment should not be pronounced, is sufficient under Penal Code, section 1200, requiring that defendant, before judgment, must be informed of the nature of the charge, and of his plea, and the verdict, and must be asked whether he has any legal cause to show why judgment should not be pronounced against him; and section 1207, requiring the clerk to enter the judgment on the minutes, stating briefly the offense for which the conviction was had, and the fact of prior conviction, etc.—People v. Wheatley, 88 Cal. 114, 26 Pac. 95.

[b] Penal Code, section 461, declares that burglary in the second degree is punishable by imprisonment in the state prison for not more than five years, and section 666 provides, among other things, that one twice convicted of felony may be punished by ten years' imprisonment therein. Held that, where an indictment charged three former convictions, and these were admitted of record, a judgment reciting a conviction of burglary in the second, and affixing a sentence of ten years, was valid, without reciting the former convictions.—Williams, Ex parte, 89 Cal. 421, 26 Pac. 887.

[c] The only authority shown in a judgment roll for a conviction under Penal Code, section 666, giving the court the right to consider a former conviction without the jury finding a special verdict therefor, where, as provided by section 1158, "the answer of the defendant admits the charge," was a recital in the judgment that, subsequent to the time defendant was informed of the information against him, he "confesses the prior conviction." Held sufficient, in the absence of specific code requirements as to how the "answer" should be shown.—People v. McNeill, 118 Cal. 388, 50 Pac. 538.

[d] In reviewing a judgment of conviction and extended sentence on account of a prior conviction, the fact that the recital of a prior conviction does not appear as required in the entry of judgment, but is elsewhere stated in the record, may be regarded in determining the validity of the judgment.—People v. Kelley, 120 Cal. 271, 52 Pac. 587.

[a] One who pleads guilty of burglary and who has been twice convicted of same offense cannot be sentenced to imprisonment in house of correction.—Mon Fook, Ex parte, 72 Cal. 10-12, 12 Pac. 803.

[b] Assault with deadly weapon may be punished by imprisonment for ten years when there has been prior conviction for manslaughter.—People v. Douglas, 87 Cal. 287, 25 Pac. 417.

[c] One convicted of burglary and confessing prior conviction may be sentenced to ten years' imprisonment.—People v. Johnson, 88 Cal. 174, 25 Pac. 1116.

[d] Where defendant was convicted of a misdemeanor in a police court, and sentenced to imprisonment in the county jail, and before the expiration of his term of imprisonment he was convicted of felony in a superior court, and a certified copy of the latter judgment was given to the sheriff, under which it was his duty to deliver the prisoner forthwith to the warden of the state prison, it was immaterial, as affecting the defendant's right to be held only in proper custody, that the sheriff was at the same time ex-officio county jailer, and as such charged with the execution of the police court judgment.—McGuire, Ex parte, 135 Cal. 339, 67 Pac. 327.

[e] Defendant was not entitled to his liberty on habeas corpus, but only to be placed in the custody of the warden of the penitentiary.—McGuire, Ex parte, 135 Cal. 339, 67 Pac. 327,

[f] The superior court, having the power to bring the prisoner before it and sentence him for the felony, had necessarily the implied power to proceed to judgment and execution, and, the court not having stayed such execution, the sheriff was not warranted in returning the prisoner to the county jail until the expiration of the term there, but should have proceeded under Penal Code, section 1216, requiring him, on receipt of a certified copy of a judgment of imprisonment, to deliver the defendant to the warden of the state prison. McGuire, Ex parte, 135 Cal. 339, 67 Pac. 327.

[b] Penal Code, section 1446, relating to proceedings in police courts, provides that a judgment that defendant pay a fine may also direct that he be imprisoned until the fine is satisfied, in the proportion of one day's imprisonment for every dollar of the fine. Section 1205, which was a similar provision, till amended by Statutes of 1891, page 52, provides that the imprisonment "must not exceed one day for every two dollars of the fine." Held, that section 1446 was not affected by the amendment to section 1205, which is a limitation on the powers of superior courts.—Mulholland, In re, 97 Cal. 527, 32 Pac. 568.

[c] Penal Code, section 246, held not unconstitutional as depriving convicts to whom it applied of their life or liberty without due process of law.—Finley, Ex parte, 1 Cal. App. 198, 81 Pac. 1041.

§ 819. Effect of Repeal of Statute.

[a] Repeal of a penal statute without a saving clause has the effect to deprive the court in which a prosecution under the statute is pending of all power to proceed further in the matter.—Spears v. County of Modoc, 101 Cal. 303, 35 Pac. 869.

§ 820. Repeal of Indian Whipping Act.

[a] Act of April 22, 1850, conferring on justices of the peace the power to punish Indians convicted of larceny by whipping, is repealed by the act of 1856, which prescribes punishment for both grand and petit larceny. People v. Antonio, 27 Cal. 404.

[a] Legislature may prescribe different places of punishment for persons convicted in different parts of state or leave it to discretion of court.—Williams, Ex parte, 87 Cal. 80, 24 Pac. 602.

[b] Fact that under a law different degrees of punishment may be imposed by different courts for the same offense does not render it invalid, the degree of punishment within the limits prescribed by law being within the discretion of the court.—Mulholland, In re, 97 Cal. 527, 32 Pac. 568.

[c] Legislature has power to provide different places of punishment for the same offense, and may provide that when imprisonment is ordered by the police court of a city it may be suffered in the city prison or jail, although the same offense, when committed in a county outside of the limits of the city, is made punishable by imprisonment in the county jail.—Matter of Ambrosewf, 109 Cal. 264, 41 Pac. 1101.

[d] Act of March 11, 1889 (Stats. 1889, pp. 100-106), entitled "An act to establish a school of industry," and providing for the detention therein of minors guilty of criminal offenses until majority, which may be a longer period than the term of imprisonment in the county jail provided for such offenses, is not unconstitutional, as providing unequal punishments for the same offense.—Nichols, Ex parte, 110 Cal. 651, 43 Pac. 9.

[a] Section 669 of the Penal Code only allows successive and cumulative terms of imprisonment, where a person has been convicted of two or more crimes, before sentence has been pronounced upon him for either; which may be done in all cases where two separate crimes are charged against the same person, by postponing judgment on the first conviction until after the verdict in the second case. Morton, Ex parte, 132 Cal. 346, 64 Pac. 469.

[b] Penal Code, section 105, being limited to escapes, does not warrant imposing cumulative sentence on defendant for burglary after a sentence had already been pronounced on him under a former conviction for assault to commit murder.—Morton, Ex parte, 132 Cal. 346, 64 Pac. 469.

[c] Penal Code, section 670, provides that, when any person is convicted of two or more crimes before sentence has been pronounced on him for either, the imprisonment to which he is sentenced on the second must commence at the termination of the first term of imprisonment. Defendant was convicted of an assault with intent to kill, and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment on July 19, 1890, and in the following month was found guilty of burglary, and sentenced to five years' imprisonment, to commence at the expiration of the term under his former sentence. Held, that after a service of ten years in the state's prison defendant was entitled to his discharge, since the second sentence was invalid, because accused was not convicted before the sentence under the first conviction.—Morton, Ex parte, 132 Cal. 346, 64 Pac. 469.

[d] Where defendant has been already sentenced to the state's prison for a term of years for one crime, he cannot, upon subsequent conviction, upon a second charge, be sentenced to a second term of imprisonment to commence at the expiration of the first term of years, and such sentence is invalid and void, and after the expiration of the first term of imprisonment, the prisoner is entitled to be discharged upon habeas corpus.—Morton, Ex parte, 132 Cal. 346, 64 Pac. 469.

five hundred dollars, with alternative that in default of payment defendant be imprisoned one day for each dollar of fine.—Casey, Ex parte, 85 Cal. 36, 24 Pac. 599.

[c] Penal Code, section 496, prescribing the punishment for receiving stolen goods at imprisonment in the penitentiary not exceeding five years, or in the county jail not exceeding six months, or both, is not unconstitutional, in authorizing a double punishment.—People v. Perini, 94 Cal. 573, 29 Pac. 1027.

[d] There is no restriction on power of legislature to prescribe double, treble, or any number of punishments for same offense if not cruel and unusual.—People v. Durrant, 119 Cal. 208, 209, 51 Pac. 185.

[e] The increase in the penalty on subsequent convictions of the same person for crime, required by Penal Code, section 666, does not punish accused twice for the same offense.—People v. Coleman, 145 Cal. 609, 79 Pac. 283.

826. Cruel, Unusual or Excessive Punishment.

[b] Where defendant may be punished by imprisonment for ten years, or any other term less than ten years, a sentence for ten years is not greater than the law allows.—People v. Brooks, 65 Cal. 300, 4 Pac. 11.

[c] Where the punishment for a particular crime is imprisonment for a term not less than ten years, a sentence for thirty-five years is not greater than is allowed by law.—People v. Brooks, 65 Cal. 295, 300; 4 Pac. 7, 11.

[d] Under Penal Code, sections 264, 671, providing that the punishment for certain offenses may be by imprisonment for life, and section 664, providing that an attempt to commit an offense shall be punishable by not more than half the maximum punishment for the commission of the offense itself, a sentence for five years for an attempt to commit an offense punishable by imprisonment for life is within the statute, even assuming that imprisonment for life is a longer term than imprisonment for any stated number of years. People v. Gardner, 98 Cal. 127, 32 Pac. 880.

[e] Under Penal Code, sections 264, 671, rape may be punished by life imprisonment, or by not less than five years; and section 664 provides that an attempt to commit an offense may be punished by imprisonment not exceeding one-half the longest term of imprisonment prescribed upon a conviction of the offense. Held, that punishment for attempt to rape by imprisonment for five years cannot be objected to on the ground that the term of half a life cannot be calculated, and that the statute therefore prescribes no punishment for attempt to rape.—People v. Gardner, 98 Cal. 127, 32 Pac. 880.

[f] Under Penal Code, section 213, making robbery punishable by imprisonment in the state prison "not less than one year," a judgment for imprisonment for life may be imposed, any intent that the punishment must be limited to a definite term of years being negatived by section 671, which in terms declares what effect is to be given to section 213.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 85, 50 Pac. 390.

[g] When no limit to duration of imprisonment is declared, court may impose life sentence.—People v. Winthrop, 118 Cal. 93, 50 Pac. 390,

[h] Attempt to commit crime may be punished by imprisonment for a definite term of years, although the crime, if accomplished, is punishable for a term which may be for life. People v. Stouter, 142 Cal. 146, 75 Pac. 780.

§ 829. —— American Tables of Mortality as Basis.

[a] American Tables of Mortality cannot be taken as a basis from which to determine the length of a sentence to be imposed on a defendant in a criminal case.—People v. Burns, 138 Cal. 159, 70 Pac. 1087, 60 L. R. A. 270.

[a] Where one is convicted and sentenced in a lower court to a certain term of imprisonment, and is released on bail pending the decision on appeal, he is not, during such time, imprisoned within the meaning of the law, so as to be entitled to be discharged from execution of the sentence.—Jones, Ex parte, 41 Cal. 209.

[b] When appeal is taken after one day's imprisonment under sentence, term for balance of sentence begins to run on day of affirmance of judgment.—Green, Ex parte, 86 Cal. 429, 25 Pac. 21.

[c] Essential part of a sentence of imprisonment is not the time when it should be executed but the extent of the punishment fixed; and expiration of time, without imprisonment, is in no sense an execution of the sentence.—Vance, Ex parte, 90 Cal. 208, 27 Pac. 209.

§ 831. —— Concurrent or Cumulative Term Under Sentence for Several Offenses.

§ 832. —— Effect of Escape and Sentence Therefor.

[a] Term of imprisonment for escape commences to run from time prisoner would have been discharged had he not escaped.—Irwin, Ex parte, 88 Cal. 170, 25 Pac. 1118.

[b] Unauthorized release or departure of prisoner under sentence of imprisonment, without having been discharged in due course of law, is, in effect, a technical escape, from which he can derive no advantage, and the time of his absence cannot be computed as any part of the term of imprisonment.—Vance, Ex parte, 90 Cal. 208, 27 Pac. 209.

[a] A judgment upon a conviction of a misdemeanor only, which adjudges the defendant to be punished by imprisonment in the state prison, is absolutely void.—Ah Cha, Ex parte, 40 Cal. 426.

[b] Constitution of 1879, article 22, section 1, retains act of April 1, 1877, section 3, which provides that, in certain courts, persons who might be sentenced to state prison may be sentenced to the house of correction. Constitution, article 22, section 3, abolishes the courts named; and article 6 creates the superior court of San Francisco as their successor, with similar powers. Held, that under these provisions the superior court of San Francisco had jurisdiction to sentence a defendant to the house of correction, instead of to the state prison.—Flood, Ex parte, 64 Cal. 251, 30 Pac. 437.

[d] Court has no power to provide for imprisonment in state prison as means of enforcing payment of fine.—Arras, Ex parte, 78 Cal. 307, 20 Pac. 683.

[f] Statutes of 1877-78, page 953, relating to the house of correction in the city and county of San Francisco, provides that the criminal court of such city and county may sentence a prisoner on conviction to the house of correction in any case where he might be imprisoned in the county jail. Held, that this is not a special or local act relating to the punishment of crime, within the meaning of Constitution, article 4, section 25, as it does not change the punishment or degree of any crime under the existing uniform laws, but only provides a place where punishment may be inflicted.—Williams, Ex parte, 87 Cal. 78, 25 Pac. 248.

[g] Under Statutes of 1877-78, page 953, authorizing the city criminal court or the municipal criminal court of the city and county of San Francisco, in any case where a prisoner might be sentenced to the county jail or the state prison, instead thereof to commit the prisoner to the house of correction, such person not being over twenty-five years old, and Constitution, article 22, section 3, abolishing said courts, and article 6, section 5, vesting jurisdiction in cases amounting to felony, in the superior court, the latter court has authority to commit to the house of correction in felony cases.—Williams, Ex parte, 87 Cal. 78, 24 Pac. 602.

[h] Under charter of city of Santa Rosa, persons found guilty of violating city ordinances should be committed to the city prison, and those found guilty of violation of the criminal laws of the state, where imprisonment is ordered, should be committed to the county jail.—County of Sonoma v. City of Santa Rosa, 102 Cal. 426, 36 Pac. 810.

[j] Where defendant convicted of misdemeanor in a police court, and sentenced to imprisonment for six months in county jail, was, pending his imprisonment, sentenced to the state prison, upon conviction of a felony, on his plea of guilty, his imprisonment in the county jail more than forty days after latter sentence, is unlawful, and upon habeas corpus the prisoner will be remanded to the sheriff for imprisonment in the state prison forthwith.—McGuire, Ex parte, 135 Cal. 339, 87 Am. St. Rep. 105, 67 Pac. 327.

[c] Right to the fruits of land does not depend upon the amount of labor expended by occupant in their production, and it is immaterial whether hay cut from land was a volunteer crop, or had been sold under a cropping contract with the occupant, and the fruits gathered belong to him as fully as the crops.—Johnston v. Fish, 105 Cal. 420, 45 Am. St. Rep. 53, 38 Pac. 979.

[b] Action cannot be maintained to recover grain sown and harvested by defendant on land to which he claimed title, and of which he had actual and adverse possession.—Martin v. Thompson, 62 Cal. 618, 45 Am. Rep. 663.

[a] Where the owner of the soil conveys "all the hay now cut or that shall be cut this year on the range," such hay became personalty in the hands of the purchaser.—Allen v. Bryant (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 294.

§ 3. Effect of Transfer of Title to Land.

[a] Defendant contracted to exchange his fruit farm with plaintiff for certain real estate belonging to plaintiff, and deeds were made out and delivered in escrow, to be delivered to the parties when the title to the properties should be made satisfactory. Thereafter defendant recommended to plaintiff that the person then in charge of the orchard was a competent person to continue in charge thereof, and informed such person that thereafter he would be working for plaintiff instead of defendant; and bills for the expense of carrying on the orchard were sent to plaintiff directly or through defendant, the bills being paid by plaintiff. Thereafter, and prior to the delivery of the deeds, a crop of prunes growing on the orchard were prepared for market and sold by defendant, who refused to pay over the proceeds to plaintiff. Subsequently the deeds were delivered. Held that, the delivery of the deeds relating back to the date of their execution, and plaintiff having been put in possession of the premises and having defrayed the expense of the crop, he was entitled to the proceeds thereof.—Marr v. Rhodes, 131 Cal. 267, 63 Pac. 364.

[b] A grantee in a deed deposited in escrow, to be delivered on the grantor's death, held entitled to the share of the crops growing at grantor's death, to be delivered by a lessee as rent.—Wilhoit v. Salmon, 146 Cal. 444, 80 Pac. 705,

[a] One entitled to two-thirds of the crops and fruits under a cropping contract, and to the remaining one-third by purchase from the occupant in adverse possession, is not affected by a judgment in replevin brought against the occupant for the possession of the crops by the plaintiffs in the ejectment suit, to whom possession was delivered in the replevin suit, and such owner may recover damages from them for the conversion of the crops.—Johnston v. Fish, 105 Cal. 420, 45 Am. St. Rep. 53, 38 Pac. 979.

[b] Under a cropping contract by the terms of which the entire crop of grain raised was to belong to the owner of the land until division should be made, and one-half of the crop was to be segregated on the ground, to be given to the cropper at the conclusion of the threshing and sacking of the crop, where it appeared that all of the crop, excepting one sack, had been threshed and sacked, and one-half thereof delivered by the cropper to the order of the owner of the land, and the remaining half remained in the field, such remaining half of the threshed and sacked crop is to be deemed the property of the cropper, and is subject to attachment by his creditor. § 1. Application and Operation.

[a] A verdict of a jury will not be disturbed on the ground that evidence was offered and received at the trial, after objection, that a custom had prevailed in California, amongst Spanish and Mexican residents, before the acquisition of the country by the Americans, that no more than two witnesses were requisite to attest the execution of a will, when it appears from such evidence that the custom had prevailed generally and for a long time.—Panaud v. Jones, 1 Cal. 488; Tevis v. Pitcher, 10 Cal. 465.

[d] Landlord may show by parol evidence that "stubble" reserved in lease includes grain uncut after harvest, by custom of locality.—Callahan v. Stanley, 57 Cal. 476.

[e] Though evidence of usage is not admissible to relieve a party from his express stipulation or to vary a contract certain in its terms, it has a legitimate office in aiding to interpret the intention of the parties to a contract, the character of which is to be ascertained from general implications and presumptions.—Burns v. Sennett, 99 Cal. 363, 33 Pac. 916.

§ 2. Creation, Construction, Performance, and Breach of Contract.

[a] In an action concerning a disputed boundary between two mining claims, depending on an agreement between the parties, in which the word "north" was used, and parol evidence was admitted to prove that it was the custom of the locality to run boundary lines by the magnetic meridian, and that that was the understanding of the parties, such evidence was admissible, not to contradict or vary the term, but to ascertain the sense in which it was used.—Jenny Lind Co. v. Bower, 11 Cal. 194.

[b] Where a contract for the sale of wool warranted that it should be "in good order," evidence of a custom sought to be incorporated into the contract, the effect of which would be to nullify the legal effect of the warranty, was inadmissible.—Polhemus v. Heiman, 50 Cal, 438.

[c] Where a new and unusual word is used in a contract, or where a word is used in a technical or peculiar sense, as applicable to any trade, or branch of business, or to any particular class of people, it is proper to receive evidence of usage to explain and illustrate it.—Callahan v. Stanley, 57 Cal. 476.

[d] Where a person buys wool subject to "grader's rejection," which term had a well-understood meaning, defined by custom, he, having had the wool examined in another manner and having kept it, must pay for it, and it is no defense that afterwards he offered to have it properly examined.—Merehin v. Ball, 68 Cal. 205, 8 Pac. 886.

[e] A custom or usage cannot be proved to explain terms or provisions in contracts or instruments when the meaning of such terms is unambiguous and free from doubt.—Ah Tong v. Earle Fruit Co., 112 Cal. 679, 45 Pac. 7.

[f] Where a contract requires a party to plant "grape vines," and the word "vines" does not appear to have been used in any special or local sense expert evidence is not admissible to show its meaning, but it will be held to mean indifferently either cuttings or rooted plants, according to common usage.—Remy v. Olds, 34 Pac. 216, 21 L. R. A. 645.

§ 3. Varying Terms of Contract.

[b] Usage of trade cannot be proved contrary to plain meaning of unambiguous contract.—Holloway v. McNear, 81 Cal. 156, 22 Pac. 514.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 4. Contravention of Law.

[a] Under the Mexican law custom is sometimes allowed not only to control, limit, modify, and interpret the general rules of the system, but even to establish a rule in direct contravention of the positive written law. Thus, custom may attain the force of law, not only when there is no law to the contrary, but when the effect of it is to overturn the previous law which stands in opposition to it. (Per Bennett, J.)—Von Schmidt v. Huntington, 1 Cal. 55.

[c] Custom to pay more than legal rate of interest is not against law.—Auzerais v. Naglee, 74 Cal. 71, 72, 15 Pac. 371.

Admissibility of opinions of experts to prove custom or usage. See Evidence, § 484.

[a] Proof of custom in force in California previous to the formation of the state government is admissible.—Tevis v. Pitcher, 10 Cal. 465.

[b] Where a contract was made with reference to rules of a brokers' board, not usages of the trade in general, such rules become special terms of the contract, and must be specially pleaded.—Goldsmith v. Sawyer, 46 Cal. 209.

[c] In an action by a surgeon to recover for the value of services in attending persons wounded in a railroad collision, and placed in a private hospital, evidence for defendant of the usual and customary charge in this state for all necessary medical and other attendance on patients in hospitals received for treatment for wounds is irrelevant, since it did not relate to the value of services of the same character as those sued for.—Trenor v. Central Pac. R. Co., 50 Cal. 222.

[d] It was not error to exclude evidence of a local custom of real estate agents which was not material to the case, and could not have affected the conclusions reached by the court.—Lambert v. Gerner, 142 Cal. 399, 76 Pac. 63.

[e] Where the court holds that a contract has not been made with reference to a custom, evidence as to the existence of the custom is properly struck out as immaterial.—Withers v. Moore, 71 Pac. 697.

INJURIES FOR WHICH DAMAGES ARE RECOVERABLE—INEVITABLE ACCIDENT, § 3.
—— INJURY INCIDENT TO EXERCISE OF LAWFUL RIGHT, § 4.
PRESUMPTION AS TO DAMAGE FROM INJURY, § 5.
SEVERANCE OF DAMAGES, § 6.

§ 1. Object of Damages.

§ 2. Unliquidated Damages.

[a] Term "unliquidated damages" applies equally to cases of tort, as slander, assault, etc., and to cases upon quantum meruit, for goods sold or services rendered.—Cox v. McLaughlin, 76 Cal. 67, 9 Am. St. Rep. 164, 18 Pac. 100.

§ 3. Injuries for Which Damages are Recoverable—Inevitable Accident.

[a] For inevitable accident occurring when one with due care is engaged in lawful business, damages are not recoverable.—Niosi v. Empire Steam Laundry, 117 Cal. 261, 49 Pac. 185.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 13 Cyc. 13.

§ 4. —— Injury Incident to Exercise of Lawful Right.

[a] The increase in the rate of fire insurance upon plaintiff's property, and the depreciation of his property in market value, alleged to have been occasioned by the construction of a house by the defendant so that the second story thereof overhangs the sidewalk of a public street, are not such elements of special damage as will give a right of action to the plaintiff. They constitute a detriment incident to the right of owning and enjoying property in a city or town, and for which there is no redress.—Siskiyou Lumber etc. Co. v. Rostel, 121 Cal. 511, 53 Pac. 1118.

§ 5. Presumption as to Damage from Injury.

[b] Nominal damages are presumed to follow as a conclusion of law from proof of the breach of a contract.—Browner v. Davis, 15 Cal. 9.

[c] Law presumes damages from a trespass. Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37, 76 Am. Dec. 567.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 12, 13; 15 Cent. Dig., col. 1645, § 3.

[a] There can be no severing of damages against the several defendants in joint action. Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680, 39 Pac. 56.

II. NOMINAL DAMAGES.

AWARD IRRESPECTIVE OF ACTUAL DAMAGE, § 7.
—— BREACH OF CONTRACT, § 8.
—— TRESPASS, § 9.
—— OVERFLOWING LANDS, AND INJURIES TO RIPARIAN RIGHTS, § 10.
NOMINAL OR SUBSTANTIAL DAMAGES—BREACH OF CONTRACT, § 11.
—— OVERFLOWING LAND, § 12.
—— TAKING OR DETAINING PERSONAL PROPERTY, § 13.

§ 7. Award Irrespective of Actual Damage.

[a] Party who has suffered no actual damage is not entitled to nominal damages.—McAllister v. Clement, 75 Cal. 184, 16 Pac. 775.

[b] In actions ex delicto nominal damages are often given, though no actual damage has been suffered; but a judgment for nominal damage is justified only on the ground that it can conserve some right of the plaintiff which has been nominally infringed, and which might be lost by acquiescence and lapse of time, and such judgment is not required where no right or title of the plaintiff is jeopardized.—Stewart v. Sefton, 108 Cal. 197, 41 Pac. 293.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Nominal damages will be given for breach of a valid contract, although it does not appear that the plaintiff has sustained actual damage.—McCarty v. Beach, 10 Cal. 461; Browner v. Davis, 15 Cal. 9.

[b] Where a party to a contract of exchange is induced by fraud to substitute another agreement, and bring an action for damages upon the first contract, and the court instructed the jury that they could not find for the plaintiff unless he had proved by a preponderance of evidence that he was damaged by the agreement to take the lots last contracted for in lieu of those first contracted for, and the evidence does not show that he was damaged thereby in any appreciable sum, the damages allowed should at most be only nominal, and a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for damages in the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars is contrary to the instructions of the court and should be set aside for that reason.—Marriner v. Dennison, 91 Cal. 555, 27 Pac. 927, 1091.

[a] The measure of damages for the injury to a mining claim by wrongfully removing gold-bearing earth therefrom will be the value of the gold produced, less the necessary expense of extracting the gold, but defendant, who has committed a trespass, cannot obtain a verdict by showing the value of the property taken to be less than the expense of its severance from the realty, but nominal damages, at least, should be given.—Empire Gravel Min. Co. v. Bonanza Gravel Min. Co., 7 Pac. 810.

§ 11. Nominal or Substantial Damages—Breach of Contract.

[a] Where a vendor breaks a contract for the conveyance of land because it has depreciated in value since the making of the contract, more than nominal damages may be recovered by the purchaser.—Morgan v. Stearns, 40 Cal. 434.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 12. —— Overflowing Land.

[a] Where plaintiffs were largely and seriously damaged by water flowing on their land, a large part of which was caused to flow there by defendants, though a larger part came from other sources, a finding that plaintiffs' damage from the acts of defendants was but one dollar cannot be sustained.—Learned v. Castle, 78 Cal. 454, 21 Pac. 11.

§ 13. —— Taking or Detaining Personal Property.

[a] When property is delivered and accepted pending suit, that is, before verdict, the damages should be merely nominal.—Conroy v. Flint, 5 Cal. 327.

§ 14. Consequential Damages Defined.

[a] Consequential damages are such as are not proximately caused by breach of contract or would not likely result therefrom in ordinary course of things.—Savings Bank etc. v. Asbury, 117 Cal. 104, 48 Pac. 1081.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 22.

§ 15. Proximate Cause Defined.

[a] Proximate cause is the efficient cause; the one that necessarily sets the other cause in operation.—Hawthorne v. Siegel, 88 Cal. 165, 22 Am. St. Rep. 291, 25 Pac. 1114.

[b] Proximate cause is that which is actual cause of loss, whether operating directly or by putting intervening agencies in motion.—Hawthorne v. Siegel, 88 Cal. 166, 22 Am. St. Rep. 291, 25 Pac. 1114.

§ 16. Proximate or Remote Consequence.

[a] In actions for negligence, as here, damage to land from overflow of a ditch, only damages can be recovered of which the defendant's negligent act was the proximate cause.—Chidester v. Consolidated People's Ditch Co., 53 Cal. 56.

[b] Damages, to be recoverable, must be the natural and proximate consequence of the wrongful act complained of.—Anderson v. Taylor, 56 Cal. 131, 38 Am. Rep. 52.

[c] Damages in loss and destruction of materials, by reason of injunction against a street improvement, are proximate.—Dougherty v. Dore, 63 Cal. 170.

[d] Judgment was rendered against defendants for the amount of damages to his merchandise caused, as the court found, by the water being turned into plaintiff's premises by obstructions placed in the street and gutter by defendants, "together with other obstructions therein placed by other parties." Held error, within Civil Code, section 3333, which confines the measure of damages to compensation for detriment "proximately" caused by breach of an obligation not arising from contract.—Durgin v. Neal, 82 Cal. 595, 23 Pac. 133; Durgin v. McNally, 23 Pac. 375.

[e] Damages arising from the sacrifice of property, occasioned by the pressure of creditors, are too remote to be recovered against one who has bound himself to loan money, and failed to do it.—Savings Bank of Southern California v. Asbury, 117 Cal. 96, 48 Pac. 1081.

[f] Injury to trees and fruit crop resulting from failure to furnish water as agreed is not remote and speculative.—Roberts v. Krafts, 141 Cal. 29, 74 Pac. 281.

Proximate and remote, what are: 52 Am. Rep. 157, note.

Necessity that damages be natural and proximate result of act alleged to have caused injury: 69 Am. Dec. 725, note.

Consequential damages, liability for: 36 Am. Rep. 362, note.

Proximate and remote consequences, what are: 36 Am. St. Rep. 807, note; 45 L. R. A. 87, note.

§ 17. —— Consequences Flowing from Torts in General.

[a] Plaintiffs were in possession as lessees of a building which they used as a barber shop, when, by reason of defendants' trespass, the building was rendered unfit for such purpose, and they were compelled to move, losing thereby a hot-water privilege which they had purchased. Held, that they were entitled to damages for loss of the water privilege, the value of permanent improvements abandoned, expense of removal, and loss in their business, under Civil Code, section 3333, which gives the right to recover the amount that will compensate for the detriment "proximately caused" by the trespass. Hawthorne v. Siegel, 88 Cal. 159, 22 Am. St. Rep. 291, 25 Pac. 1114.

[b] In an action for deceit, in selling plaintiff glandered horses, special damages are recoverable for medical treatment of the horses, and for the value of the stable, which plaintiff had to burn, to prevent contagion.—Merguire v. O'Donnell, 103 Cal. 50, 36 Pac. 1033.

[a] Defendant was in possession of a partially inclosed piece of public land on which he was pasturing his cattle. Plaintiff drove his cattle through defendant's inclosure on to the same land for the purpose of pasturage, from which they were driven by defendant. They afterward roamed on land claimed by one G., who gave notice to plaintiff to come and take them, which he neglected to do, and many of them died from starvation. Held that, the loss of the cattle not being the proximate result of the defendant's trespass, he was not liable for damages.—Story v. Robinson, 32 Cal. 205.

[a] The loss of time, value of services, and wages of employees, caused by the failure of a party to perform his contract, are not remote, but strictly proximate and immediate damages, and ought to be allowed.—Kenyon v. Goodall, 3 Cal. 257.

[b] Person who contracts to deliver freight to a steamboat, and fails to do so, is liable in damages for the actual loss thereby sustained by the steamboat; but he does not become a guarantor against any further loss, such as the boat may sustain by reason of fruitless efforts to procure profitable employment.—Utter v. Chapman, 43 Cal. 279.

[c] In an action to recover the value of certain piles, defendant cannot show that, by reason of plaintiff's delay in furnishing such piles, he was prevented from completing a contract for so long a time that he failed to realize the money on such contract that he would otherwise have received.—Friend & Terry Lumber Co. v. Miller, 67 Cal. 464, 8 Pac. 40.

[d] Loss of the increase in value of land for which one was negotiating, but did not buy for want of money he could have borrowed on other land had the abstract of title been done at the time agreed, is too remote. Pendleton v. Cline, 85 Cal. 142, 24 Pac. 659.

[e] Under section 3300 of the Civil Code, an assessment upon stock agreed to be purchased which the vendor is compelled to pay as a consequence of the refusal of the defendants to take the stock at the time they had agreed to do so is a proximate result of their refusal.—Gay v. Dare, 103 Cal. 454, 37 Pac. 466.

[f] Appellant contracted to harvest respondent's grain, agreeing to commence not later than July 5th, and failed to commence until July 15th. A large amount of the grain shelled out before the harvesting was completed. Most of it would have been saved, had work been commenced on time. Held, that the damages were not too remote or speculative.—Holt Mfg. Co. v. Thornton, 136 Cal. 232, 68 Pac. 708.

[a] In an action for damages for failure of defendant to pay to a creditor of plaintiff money intrusted to him for that purpose, damages caused by the sale of plaintiff's property at a sacrifice, in an action against him by the creditor, cannot be shown, unless facts are alleged in the complaint showing that defendant knew that damages would probably flow from a breach of the contract by him greater than would follow from a breach of contract in the usual course of things.—Mitchell v. Clarke, 71 Cal. 163, 60 Am. Rep. 529, 11 Pac. 882.

[a] Whether the humiliation consequent on plaintiff's wrongful expulsion from defendant's car was the proximate cause of her subsequent nervous paroxysms is a question for the jury.—Sloane v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 668, 44 Pac. 320.

§ 22. Natural and Probable Consequences of Breaches of Contract—What are Natural or Probable Consequences of Breach of Contract.

[a] In an action for damages for failure of defendant to pay to a creditor of plaintiff money intrusted to him for that purpose, damages caused by the sale of plaintiff's property at a sacrifice, in an action against him by the creditor, cannot be shown, unless facts are alleged in the complaint showing that defendant knew that damages would probably flow from a breach of contract, in the usual course of things.—Mitchell v. Clarke, 71 Cal. 163, 60 Am. Rep. 529, 11 Pac. 882.

[b] Damages which accrue subsequent to tort, but of which it is primary cause, are parts of tort itself.—Hawthorne v. Siegel, 83 Cal. 166, 22 Am. St. Rep. 291, 25 Pac. 1114.

[a] All physical suffering and injury caused by violence to the person, including the aggravation or hastening of the development of a pre-existing disease, are the natural and direct consequences of the wrong, and may be recovered as general damages, without special pleading.—Campbell v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 137 Cal. 565, 70 Pac. 624.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 25. Speculative Consequences.

[a] Damage for cutting down growing trees should be estimated by all the circumstances, and the purposes for which such trees were used or designed, and not according to the speculative or fancied ideas of the jury.—Chipman v. Hibberd, 6 Cal. 162.

§ 26. Pecuniary Loss.

[a] Evidence that the hearing in one of plaintiff's ears had been permanently destroyed, that the sight of one eye had been seriously impaired, and that his nervous system had received a shock from which he might never recover, and which at the time of the trial impaired his faculty for transacting his former business, warrants the granting of substantial damages, though the wages of plaintiff were not cut off or diminished by the injury, and he has not been subjected to any pecuniary loss.—Clare v. Sacramento Electric Power etc. Co., 122 Cal. 504, 55 Pac. 326.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

62 C. C. A. 612, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 46-63; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 1720-1745, §§ 72-88.

§ 27. Impairment of Business Ability or Personal Accomplishments.

[a] Instruction requested, to the effect that the jury could not award any damages for loss which the plaintiff might have suffered because of inability to attend to his business after the accident, was properly refused.—Storrs v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 134 Cal. 91, 66 Pac. 72.

[b] Where a complaint in an action for injuries to a passenger charged that by reason of her injuries plaintiff became sick, sore, lame, and disordered, and that her spine, brain, and nervous system were seriously injured, and evidence that plaintiff's musical abilities had been impaired was admitted without objection, an instruction authorizing the jury, in considering plaintiff's damages, to consider the impairment of her accomplishments, if any, and her ability to play musical instruments and sing, by reason of the accident, was not error.—Doolin v. Omnibus Cable Co., 140 Cal. 369, 73 Pac. 1060.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 28. Loss of Profits.

[a] Measure of damages for goods fraudulently obtained is value of goods, and not profits which might have been made upon sales.—Butler v. Collins, 12 Cal. 457.

[b] Damages may sometimes be recovered on account of loss of anticipated profits, but only when there are proper data for the calculation.—Nightingale v. Scannell, 18 Cal. 315.

[c] In an action for damages for destroying an inclosure on plaintiff's farm, whereby his grass was destroyed, plaintiff cannot recover profits he might have made from cattle which he did not have, and had made no arrangement to procure.—Giaccomini v. Bulkeley, 51 Cal. 260.

[d] Owner of established business wrongfully injured or destroyed may recover damage sustained by loss of profits.—Hawthorne v. Siegel, 88 Cal. 167, 22 Am. St. Rep. 291, 25 Pac. 1114.

[e] Damages for unlawful withholding of real estate may not include profits which might have accrued from its use in conjunction with personalty.—Johnson v. Levy (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 810.

[a] In an arbitration of matters arising from a violation of a lease of land, contemplated and contingent profits cannot be allowed as damages.—Muldrow v. Norris, 2 Cal. 74, 56 Am. Dec. 313.

[b] In an action for a breach of contract for the construction of levees, the probable profits on crops which were not planted, but might have been had the contract been fulfilled, and which were to be raised by a tenant who went into possession under a lease at thirds, executed subsequently to the breach of the contract for the levees, are too remote to form a ground for damages.—Wallace v. Ah Sam, 71 Cal. 197, 60 Am. Rep. 534, 12 Pac. 46.

[c] In an action for damages against a director of a corporation for the prevention of a directors' meeting, whereby the operation of its sawmill was prevented, it is error to consider as damages the prospective profits on the amount of lumber which could have been cut, as they are too remote.—Martin v. Deetz, 102 Cal. 55, 41 Am. St. Rep. 151, 36 Pac. 368.

[d] Prospective profits are recoverable as damages for breach of a partly executed contract, whereby plaintiff was to plant and cultivate an orchard for five years, and share in the profits.—Shoemaker v. Acker, 116 Cal. 239, 48 Pac. 62.

[e] Loss of profits is proper element of damages in an action for a breach of contract to furnish and remodel an ice plant.—Bryson v. McCone, 121 Cal. 153, 53 Pac. 637.

§ 30. Prospective Profits.

[a] Prospective damages can be allowed only when it appears that the party will be subjected to the particular loss or injury for which he demands compensation.—De Costa v. Massachusetts Min. Co., 17 Cal. 613.

[b] Loss of prospective profits from probable sale of land is to remote.—Pendleton v. Cline, 85 Cal. 143, 24 Pac. 659.

[c] Prospective profits are sometimes allowed as damages for breach of contract or tort; but they must be the clear, proximate, and natural results of the wrong, and must be confined to the principal thing complained of, and to its naturally attendant consequences.—Martin v. Deetz, 102 Cal. 55, 41 Am. St. Rep. 151, 36 Pac. 368.

[d] Prospective profits which are natural and direct consequences of breach of contract may be recovered.—Shoemaker v. Acker, 116 Cal. 245, 48 Pac. 62.

[e] Damages may be recovered for destruction of growing crops, though there is no absolute certainty that they will mature.—Shoemaker v. Acker, 116 Cal. 246, 48 Pac. 62.

[f] In action for breach of contract contemplating long period of time for performance, if trial be delayed, conditions existing at time of trial, as affecting prospective profits, may be shown.—Shoemaker v. Acker, 116 Cal. 246, 247, 48 Pac. 62.

§ 31. Expenses Incurred—In Reliance upon Contract.

[a] Where plaintiffs employed another to furnish a portion of the material called for in a contract, the fact that they paid him for work done and damages sustained for failure of defendant to allow them to continue the work, after suit was brought, does not bar a right of recovery for the amount so paid, especially where it appears that the settlement was advantageous to defendant.—O'Connell v. Main & Tenth St. Hotel Co., 90 Cal. 515, 27 Pac. 373.

§ 32. —— Nurse Hire and Medical Treatment.

[a] Plaintiff may recover amount incurred for nurse hire, medicines and doctor bills though not actually paid.—Donnelly v. Hufschmidt, 79 Cal. 76, 21 Pac. 546.

See 13 Cyc. 63-66.

§ 33. Mental Suffering.

[a] In suits against common carriers, damages for pain of mind are recoverable where there has been actual injury.—Fairchild v. California Stage Co., 13 Cal. 599.

[b] A shock or injury to the nervous system occasioned by a tort must be regarded as a physical injury producing suffering to the body rather than to the mind, though the mind may be at the same time injuriously affected.—Sloane v. S. Cal. Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 668, 44 Pac. 320.

[c] Although mental suffering alone will not support an action for damages, yet it constitutes an aggravation of damages when it naturally ensues from the act complained of.—Sloane v. S. Cal. Ry. Co., 111 Cal. 668, 44 Pac. 320.

[d] Charge that plaintiff could not recover for his injured feelings and mental anguish was properly refused.—Trabing v. California Nav. etc. Co., 133 Cal. xx, 65 Pac. 478.

[a] Any personal injury sustained by the plaintiff in the nature of fear and timidity would not be an element of damage done to her property.—Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680, 39 Pac. 56.

§ 35. Matter Going to Mitigate or Reduce Damages in General.

[a] Suit was brought by one of two partners to recover his interest in property taken wrongfully on an execution against the firm. The other partner, refusing to join plaintiff, was joined as a defendant. Held, that a recaption of the goods, whether before or after suit brought, by defendant partner, was, in legal effect, a recaption on joint account of himself and plaintiff, and to this extent would reduce the damages.—Nightingale v. Scannell, 18 Cal. 315.

[a] Fact that vessel lost while being towed out to sea is insured does not devest the owner of the right of action for damages for her loss, especially in the case of a mere partial insurance, for in such a case the abandonment by the owner only transfers his interest so far as that interest is covered by the policy.—White v. Steam-tug Mary Ann, 6 Cal. 462, 65 Am. Dec. 523.

§ 37. —— Benefits Resulting from Injury.

[a] In an action for damages benefits received by plaintiff from the act causing the damage should be deducted from the damages. Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305, 49 Pac. 189.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 38. Duty of Person Injured to Prevent or Reduce Damage.

[a] Evidence of professional reputation of physician who was employed by plaintiff to dress his wounds and effect a cure is inadmissible, but it would be competent to prove that plaintiff's injuries were wholly or partially the result of improper treatment on the part of the physician.—Thorne v. California Stage Co., 6 Cal. 232.

[b] In an action for injuries plaintiff may state that he was attended by a certain physician, whose reputation as a physician was good, as showing due care in employing a reputable physician to treat his wounds.—Baker v. Borello, 136 Cal. 160, 68 Pac. 591.

[c] Where plaintiff in an action for injuries employed a physician to treat his wounds, the striking out of testimony by a physician introduced by defendant that the treatment might have been better and that it was probably not the treatment a skillful physician would have administered in 1897 (the time of injury), is not erroneous, as it was of no value as evidence against the exercise of ordinary care in employing medical aid.—Baker v. Borello, 136 Cal. 160, 68 Pac. 591.

[d] Plaintiff held charged with knowledge that defendant's act in directing a water company to withhold water from plaintiff was based on her refusal to pay assessments, and she could not claim that she believed it was on some other ground, and so recover enhanced damages which she might have obviated.—Mabb v. Stewart, 147 Cal. 413, 81 Pac. 1073.

[e] Owner of land and water right could not, in mortgagee's wrongful action in directing the water company to withhold the water from her, recover as damages the full amount of injury to her crops, where she took no steps to secure the necessary water by paying assessments or otherwise.—Mabb v. Stewart, 147 Cal. 363, 81 Pac. 1073.

[a] Though interest is, as general rule, not recoverable except by virtue of statutory regulations, a small rate may be allowed in some cases by way of damages. So held, where a referee, to whom a cause had been referred by consent of parties, had allowed the plaintiff interest at the rate of six per cent per annum on the balance of an account found due to him.—Davis v. Greely, 1 Cal. 422.

[b] Civil Code, section 3287, providing that every person who is entitled to recover damages certain on a certain day is entitled to interest thereon from that day does not apply to a claim against a county.—Hopkins v. Contra Costa County, 106 Cal. 566, 39 Pac. 933.

§ 41. —— Recovery on Unliquidated Damages in General.

[a] When plaintiff's claim is an uncertain and unliquidated demand, and the amount due cannot be ascertained from the face of the contract in suit, but has to be settled by process of law, he is not entitled to interest, eo nomine, under Civil Code, section 3287.—Coburn v. Goodall, 72 Cal. 498, 1 Am. St. Rep. 75, 14 Pac. 190.

[b] In an action upon an implied promise of the defendant to recover the reasonable value of services performed by plaintiffs, the amount, character and value of which can only be established by evidence in court, or by an accord between the parties and which are not susceptible of ascertainment by computation or by reference to market rates, the plaintiff is not entitled to interest prior to verdict or judgment.—Swinnerton v. A. L. & D. Co., 112 Cal. 375, 44 Pac. 719.

[c] It is error to allow interest on damages from the date of filing the complaint, when such damages are unliquidated and uncertain until settled by process of law or by the parties.—Hooper v. Patterson, 32 Pac. 514.

§ 42. —— In Actions for Breach of Contract.

[a] Interest can be had, under Civil Code, section 3288, only for the breach of an obligation not arising from contract. Where, therefore, the court finds that plaintiff's case is for a breach of an obligation arising from contract, he is not entitled to interest under that section.—Coburn v. Goodall, 72 Cal. 498, 1 Am. St. Rep. 75, 14 Pac. 190.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 3287, making interest allowable on damages certain, or those capable of being made certain by calculation, in the absence of a well-known market price on which to calculate the damages, the seller of fruit is not entitled to interest before suit for a breach of contract by the buyer.—Hewes v. Germania Fruit Co., 106 Cal. 441, 39 Pac. 853.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 3287, in an action for breach of contract, the court properly allowed interest from the filing of the complaint on the amount of damages found. Cutting Fruit Packing Co. v. Canty, 141 Cal. 692, 75 Pac. 564.

[d] Under Civil Code, section 3287, interest held properly allowed on account for services from last day of employment.—Mullenary v. Burton (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 159.

§ 43. Attorney's Fees, Costs, and Expenses of Litigation—Expense of Prosecution of Pending Suit.

[a] If a lessor breaks a covenant for quiet enjoyment by suing lessee to recover possession, lessee's costs and counsel fees are properly allowed as damages in an action for a breach.—Levitzky v. Canning, 33 Cal. 299.

[b] In estimating damages in an action for trespass committed by breaking into plaintiff's rooms and destroying property, plaintiff's attorney's fees and other expenses of litigation cannot be included.—Falk v. Waterman, 49 Cal. 224.

Attorneys' fees, when allowable as elements of damages: 8 Am. St. Rep. 153, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 79-83; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 1817-1826, §§ 146-153.

[a] Defendant, who had purchased plaintiff's land at tax sale, agreed to give plaintiff a certain time within which to redeem the land, but instead assigned his tax certificate to a third person, who thereby obtained a tax deed on the land, caused the same to be recorded, and subsequently brought an action against plaintiff to quiet title to the lands in question. Held, in an action by plaintiff against defendant for breach of contract, that the action to quiet title was not a proximate or necessary result of the breach, and, no special damages being pleaded, evidence of expenses and attorney's fees in that case is inadmissible.—Hancock v. Hubbell, 71 Cal. 537, 12 Pac. 618.

§ 45. In General.

[a] In general a sum to be paid in gross for nonperformance of an agreement is penalty unless shown to be otherwise considered.—Nash v. Hermosilla, 9 Cal. 588.

[b] Parties may fix by agreement on any mode to liquidate damages. May agree to submit them to arbitration for ascertainment.—Old Saucelito Land etc. Co. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 66 Cal. 253, 5 Pac. 232.

[c] Amount mentioned in act granting aid to railroad to be paid by company on failure to perform conditions imposed by act is a penalty and not liquidated damages.—People v. Central Pac. R. Co., 76 Cal. 38, 18 Pac. 90.

[e] Parties may stipulate in advance amount to be paid as damages.—People v. Central etc. Co., 76 Cal. 35, 18 Pac. 90.

[f] Under Civil Code, sections 3387, 3389, which provide that a contract otherwise proper may be specifically enforced, though a penalty is imposed, or the damages are liquidated for its breach, as it is presumed that the breach of an agreement to transfer real property cannot be adequately relieved by pecuniary compensation, the parties may agree to stipulated damages in contracts for the purchase of land.—Aikman v. Sanborn, 52 Pac. 729; Aikman v. Murphy, 55 Pac. 1099.

[a] Whether sum to be paid when violation is penalty or liquidated damages must be determined from contract as a whole.—Nash v. Hermosilla, 9 Cal. 587, 25 Cal. 71.

[b] Where a building contract contains a number of stipulations, the breach of any one of which would constitute a breach of the contract, and a sum is stipulated to be paid in case of breach of the contract, it will be construed as a penalty, not as liquidated damages.—Nash v. Hermosilla, 9 Cal. 584, 70 Am. Dec. 676.

[c] Where property sold is to be paid for partly in other specific property, the amount fixed in the agreement of sale, in lieu of which the specific property was to be delivered, should be treated as liquidated damages, where no time was fixed for delivery, and no specified property was agreed on.—Cummings v. Dudley, 60 Cal. 383, 44 Am. Rep. 58.

[d] Sum fixed in an agreement of sale, in lieu of which horses are to be delivered, is liquidated damages.—Cummings v. Dudley 60 Cal. 384, 44 Am. Rep. 58.

[f] A provision in a contract that, if defendant failed to divert from a river a certain amount of water through a certain uncompleted ditch, which it agreed to complete within a specified time, and to continuously deliver such amount of water, it would surrender to plaintiff all rights which it had acquired through deeds of rights of way or water rights executed by plaintiff to its predecessor, was in the nature of liquidated damages, and not a penalty, within Civil Code, section 3369.—Pogue v. Kaweah Power etc. Co., 138 Cal. 664, 72 Pac. 144.

[g] Where it does not clearly appear that the penalty inserted in a contract for the sale of a business and the goodwill thereof was intended as security for the payment of actual damages in case of breach of contract, the court will regard the amount as liquidated damages.—Shafer v. Sloan (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 162.

§ 47. Intent of Parties.

[a] Where the sum of fifteen thousand dollars was paid by the plaintiff as the consideration for a contract not to run boats on a certain line of travel, and the same amount was agreed by the defendant to be paid by him on failure to comply with its conditions, held, that the sum thus agreed to be paid was intended by the parties as liquidated damages. California Steam Nav. Co. v. Wright, 6 Cal. 258.

[b] A debtor, through plaintiff, his agent, conveyed land to defendant, partly to pay his debt and partly to be sold by defendant, to whom plaintiff made an absolute deed, taking back a bond to himself in the penalty of thirty-two thousand dollars, binding defendant to pay plaintiff sixteen thousand one hundred and sixty-eight dollars and one-half of the profits arising from the sale of the land, if made, and, if the land was not sold, to reconvey to plaintiff within a year from date. Held, that, on failure of defendant to sell or reconvey after expiration of the year, plaintiff was not entitled to recover the sixteen thousand one hundred and sixty-eight dollars as liquidated damages, since it was the intent of the parties that defendant was to sell the land for not less than sixteen thousand one hundred and sixty-eight dollars within a year, and that defendant was to divide any sum in excess of sixteen thousand one hundred and sixty-eight dollars with the debtor if sold within such time; otherwise he was to reconvey the property; but only for damages sustained by the breach.—Ricketson v. Richardson, 19 Cal. 330.

[c] Question whether a specified sum mentioned in a contract, to be paid by either party in the event of its violation, is liquidated damages or a penalty must be determined by the intention of the parties, to be ascertained from a consideration of the whole contract.—Streeter v. Rush, 25 Cal. 67.

[d] Penalty is not converted into liquidated damages by intention that it shall be paid.—Muldoon v. Lynch, 66 Cal. 540, 6 Pac. 417.

[e] A sum fixed as security for the performance of a contract containing a number of stipulations of widely different importance, breaches of some of which are capable of accurate valuation, for any of which the stipulated sum is an excessive compensation, is a penalty; and the application of this rule does not always depend upon the intention of the parties.—Wilmington Transportation Co. v. O'Neil, 98 Cal. 1, 32 Pac. 705.

[f] A contract for the sale of a business and goodwill, containing a covenant of the vendors not to engage in a like business in the same city, may properly stipulate a specified sum as liquidated damages for breach of the covenant, and such stipulation is not to be construed as a penalty, but the evident intention of the parties must control, and the plaintiff is not required to prove anything more than a breach of the contract in order to recover the stipulated damages.—Potter v. Ahern, 110 Cal. 674, 43 Pac. 388.

See 1 Cent. Dig., cols. 1829-1833, § 156.

§ 48. —— Express Declarations as to Nature of Provision.

[a] Agreement that on breach of a contract "damages shall be liquidated" at a certain sum must be considered as treating that sum as liquidated damages, and not as penalty.—Potter v. Ahrens, 110 Cal. 674, 43 Pac. 388.

[a] On the sale and delivery of a ship, the vendor agreed to deliver a good title and register, within a time certain under a penalty of two thousand dollars. Held, that the two thousand dollars were liquidated damages, since the amount of actual damages was difficult to ascertain.—Fisk v. Fowler, 10 Cal. 512.

[b] Where a contract is by its terms incapable of apportionment, the measure of damages fixed by the contract will apply.—McCauley v. Brooks, 16 Cal. 11.

[c] B. entered into an agreement with C., by which he sold to the latter his butcher shop, and bound himself, in the sum of four hundred dollars to him, not to go into the butchering business in the same place, without his consent, in any manner whatever. Held, that the sum of money expressed in the agreement is to be regarded as liquidated damages, and not as a penalty, since the amount of actual damage was uncertain.—Streeter v. Rush, 25 Cal. 67.

[f] Measure of damages for breach of warranty of fitness of harvesting machine is not impracticable or extremely difficult to fix rendering agreement for liquidated damages valid.—Greenleaf v. Stockton C. H. & A. Wks., 78 Cal. 610, 21 Pac. 369.

[g] Stipulation for liquidated damages in contract to purchase land is void. Damages in such case are ascertainable by rule prescribed in section 3307, Civil Code.—Drew v. Pedlar, 87 Cal. 450, 22 Am. St. Rep. 257, 25 Pac. 749.

[h] A contract for the sale of grain bags, which provides that the vendor shall pay the vendee three cents for each bag which he refuses or neglects to deliver, as liquidated damages, is void, although it recites that, from the nature of the case, it will be extremely difficult to determine the damages. Pacific Factor Co. v. Adler, 90 Cal. 110, 27 Pac. 36.

[i] Whether contract is such that "from the nature of the case" it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damage, is a question of fact to be determined in each particular case by the court, and not by the arbitrary agreement of the parties.—Pacific Factor Co. v. Adler, 90 Cal. 110, 27 Pac. 36.

[j] The stipulation in a contract for the hiring of a lighter that, in case the lighter should be lost or damaged to the extent that it could not be put in the same good condition as when received, the hirer should pay a specified sum for the lighter is a "contract by which the amount of damages to be paid, or other compensation to be made for a breach of the obligation, is determined in anticipation thereof," in the sense of section 1670 of the Civil Code; and such a case not being one in which "it would be impracticable or extremely difficult to fix the actual damage," in the sense of section 1671 of the same code, the stipulation is void, and the owner is entitled to recover only his actual damage proximately resulting from the loss of the lighter, which must be averred and proved.—Wilmington Transportation Co. v. O'Neil, 98 Cal. 1, 32 Pac. 705.

[k] Under Civil Code, sections 1670, 1671, a clause in a lease binding the lessee to pay one thousand dollars penalty in case of breach of his contract is void.—Jack v. Sinsheimer, 125 Cal. 563, 58 Pac. 130.

[l] In applying the well-settled rule of construction for the determination of liquidated damages, as against the penalty, where the damages are uncertain and not measurable by any exact pecuniary standard, there is no difference between agreeing to pay a stipulated sum of money, and agreeing to do any other act, such as giving a piece of property for a breach of contract, with respect to which the resulting damages are uncertain and not susceptible of computation and compensation in an action therefor.—Pogue v. Kaweah Power and Water Company, 138 Cal. 664, 72 Pac. 144.

§ 50. —— Proportion of Sum Stipulated to Actual Damage.

[a] Where defendant agreed to build a brick building, and to occupy such portion of the lot as would be satisfactory to plaintiff, and give him possession in three weeks, and a lease for six months, with the privilege of a twelve months' lease, and failing to do so to pay certain damages, the damages were not liquidated, but merely a penalty to secure the performance of the contract, there being no proportionment of the sum stipulated to the actual damage.—Nash v. Hermosilla, 9 Cal. 584, 70 Am. Dec. 676.

[c] A clause in a contract for the erection of a marble tomb, requiring its completion by the contractor within a stated time, under forfeiture of ten dollars per day for each and every day's delay beyond such time, provides for the payment of a penalty, and not liquidated damages, since it was evidently intended as a spur, there being no actual damage.—Muldoon v. Lynch, 66 Cal. 536, 6 Pac. 417.

[a] If a contract provides that either party shall forfeit to the other a certain amount for a failure to comply with its terms, and that such sum shall be considered as liquidated damages, the damages are limited to that amount.—Lightner v. Menzel, 35 Cal. 452.

[b] Where a contract for the alteration of a courthouse, and the making of improvements and walks around it, provides for liquidated damages in case of delay in finishing the courthouse, such damages cannot be recovered when the courthouse is finished in time, but the walks are not completed.—McGowan v. Ford, 107 Cal. 177, 40 Pac. 231.

[c] The entire amount provided as liquidated damages for a person engaging in business within a certain territory, embracing parts of several counties, is recoverable for engaging in business in the part of the county within which is the place where he formerly conducted business, though the agreement is void as to the other counties. —— MALICIOUS, FRAUDULENT, OR OPPRESSIVE ACTS, § 53.
—— NEGLIGENT ACTS, § 54.

For wrongful conversion. See Trover and Conversion, § 23.

[a] Exemplary damages cannot be recovered, in the absence of a showing of actual damages.—Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680, 39 Pac. 56.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Exemplary damages, rules respecting the allowance of: 50 Am. Dec. 767, note.

Exemplary damages, liability of principal or master for the act of his servant or agent: 62 Am. Dec. 379, note.

Exemplary or punitive damages, when allowable: 27 Am. Dec. 684, note.

Exemplary damages, when may be recovered: 28 Am. St. Rep. 870, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 105-109; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 1888-1924, §§ 188-205.

[c] Where the trespass is committed from wanton or malicious motives, or a reckless disregard of the rights of others, or under circumstances of great hardship and oppression, the rule of mere compensation is not enforced, and the measure and amount of damages are matters for the jury alone, and they may award punitive or exemplary damages.—Dorsey v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 553.

[d] Execution having issued on a void judgment, the party in whose favor it issued, not suspecting its validity, and acting under advice of counsel, caused a seizure of property to be made under it in the ordinary manner. Held that, in the absence of any apparent malice, a refusal to allow exemplary damages was proper.—Selden v. Cashman, 20 Cal. 56, 81 Am. Dec. 93.

pears.—St. Ores v. McGlashen, 74 Cal. 150, 15 Pac. 452.

[g] Under section 3294, Civil Code, exemplary damages may be allowed for malicious and wanton trespass.—Mitchell v. Canal etc. Co., 75 Cal. 566, 17 Pac. 246.

[h] Circumstances related herein held to show such oppression as to justify award of exemplary damages.—Arzaga v. Villalba, 85 Cal. 192, 24 Pac. 656.

[i] A judgment for punitive damages, in an action for the malicious conversion of certain wheat, peaceably taken by defendant under a bona fide claim of title, and by the advice of reputable counsel, will be set aside, where the only evidence of malice is a statement made by defendant at the time,—that it was too rich for plaintiff to litigate with. Abbott v. 76 Land etc. Co., 103 Cal. 607, 37 Pac. 527.

[j] In section 3294 of the Civil Code, which allows the recovery of exemplary damages where the defendant has been guilty of malice, actual or presumed, the presumed malice spoken of is a disputable presumption of fact establishing prima facie the right of plaintiff to exemplary damages for a publication libelous per se, but this presumption may be overcome by other evidence that there was no malice in fact.—Childers v. San Jose Mercury Printing etc. Co., 105 Cal. 284, 45 Am. St. Rep. 40, 38 Pac. 903.

[k] If a trespass was in fact committed, the actual damage which was caused thereby could not be diminished or increased by the character of the motives which actuated the trespassers; but, for the purpose of determining whether punitory damages should be allowed, the motive or intention with which the act was done is important.—Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680, 39 Pac. 56.

[m] In action for tort where defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, actual or presumed, jury may award exemplary damages.—Lyles v. Perrin, 119 Cal. 266, 51 Pac. 332.

[b] Gross negligence is not ground for award of exemplary damages unless defendant was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice. Yerian v. Linkletter, 80 Cal. 137, 22 Pac. 70.

§ 55. —— Acts Punishable as Crimes.

[a] Vindictive damages may be given for a personal injury, though punishable criminally. Wilson v. Middleton, 2 Cal. 54.

[b] Exemplary damages may be allowed for a malicious or wanton assault.—Wilson v. Middleton, 2 Cal. 54.

§ 57. Persons Liable—Carrier for Acts of Servant.

[a] Carrier is not liable to exemplary damages for negligence of servant.—Ward v. California Stage Co., 7 Cal. 119, 68 Am. Dec. 231.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 58. —— Liability as Between Joint Defendants.

[a] In a suit against two defendants claiming vindictive damages by reason of malice, which is proved, however, only against one, the rule that damages are to be estimated according to the amount which should be paid by the most culpable does not apply.—Nightingale v. Scannell, 18 Cal. 315.

§ 59. —— Public Officials.

[a] Though there be malice on the part of the party putting an execution into the hands of an officer, yet, if the acts of the officer be honest and bona fide, he is not liable to vindictive or exemplary damages.—Nightingale v. Scannell, 18 Cal. 315.

[b] Rule giving vindictive or exemplary damages in cases of malicious trespass applies as well to officers of the law, acting under color of process, as to private persons. Nightingale v. Scannell, 18 Cal. 315.

[a] The fact that plaintiff obtained possession of the property pending the proceedings for its conversion does not affect the question of allowing exemplary damages, but only the amount.—Arzaga v. Villalba, 85 Cal. 191, 24 Pac. 656.

[a] Person injured is entitled to compensation commensurate with injury and no more. Parke v. Frank, 75 Cal. 370, 17 Pac. 427.

[b] In an action to recover damages for personal injuries, caused by the negligence of the defendant, it was proper to instruct the jury that the measure of recovery was compensatory damages, the elements of which were expenses paid by plaintiff for care and nursing while disabled, and the value of the time lost while disabled, to be determined from direct evidence before the jury, and such reasonable compensation for impairment of his earning power, and for his pain and anxiety, as the jury might, in their sound discretion, determine, not exceeding, in all, the amount alleged.—Storrs v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 134 Cal. 91, 66 Pac. 72.

§ 63. —— Injury to Child.

[a] Father of child, injured by a vicious animal, and thereby deformed, can recover from the owner of the animal only for such expenses as he incurred in healing the original wound, and not for any expense incurred in removing the deformity, since there would be practically no limit to the liability of defendant, if the father could sue at pleasure for serious and expensive operations for the purpose of removing every trace of the injury, and charge defendant with the entire cost. Karr v. Parks, 44 Cal. 46.

§ 64. Discretion of Jury as to Amount.

[b] In actions to recover for personal injuries, the judgment of the jury, and not the opinion of the court as to the amount of damages, is to govern, unless the damages are so excessive as to warrant the belief that the jury must have been influenced by partiality or prejudice.—Boyce v. California Stage Co., 25 Cal. 460.

[c] Amount of recovery for breach of contract is not to be left to discretion of jury. Parke v. Frank, 75 Cal. 369, 17 Pac. 427.

[b] Father of a child, which has been injured by a vicious animal, and thereby deformed, can recover from the owner of the animal only for such expenses as he incurred in healing the original wound, and not for any expense incurred in removing the deformity, since there would be practically no limit to the liability of defendant if the father could sue at pleasure for serious and expensive operations for the purpose of removing every trace of the injury, and charge defendant with the entire cost.—Karr v. Parks, 44 Cal. 46.

[a] In an action to recover damages for breach of a contract whereby defendant agreed to furnish plaintiff a certain amount of wheat for transportation, and to pay him a certain price therefor, plaintiff cannot recover more than his actual loss after deducting the amount earned from others during the time he would otherwise have been engaged in the performance of the contract with defendant.—Utter v. Held, that the land owner was entitled to recover from the company the amount it would cost to place his land in the same condition as before entry by the company.—Smith v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 98 Cal. 210, 33 Pac. 53; Patton v. Los Angeles etc. Ry. Co., 33 Pac. 55.

[a] In an action to recover for breach of a contract, under which plaintiff agreed to manufacture lumber by means of certain machinery to be furnished by defendant, which machinery when furnished was inadequate, and by reason whereof plaintiff was not enabled to manufacture as much lumber as he could have done with proper machinery, the measure of damages was the contract price for the lumber which the plaintiff was so prevented from manufacturing, less the expense in manufacturing the same.—Winans v. Sierra Lumber Co., 66 Cal. 61, 4 Pac. 952.

[a] Where a contractor agreed to perform certain work and furnish certain materials for the construction of a building, and, after furnishing a portion of the materials, the owners of the building failed to resume work upon the building, or to receive any further material from the contractor, the latter may recover not only the profits he would have made by performance, but is also entitled to recover for expenditures made in preparing to do the work.—O'Connell v. Main etc. Hotel Co., 90 Cal. 515, 27 Pac. 373.

§ 85. Failure to Pay Money.

[a] The theory of the law is not that the party recovers the particular note or chose in action, as is commonly imagined, but that he recovers damages for the nonperformance of the contract; and, in case of failure to pay money due, the true measure of damages is the amount of money owing and the interest which was agreed upon.—Guy v. Franklin, 5 Cal. 416.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 86. Failure to Deliver or Convey Property.

[a] Plaintiffs conveyed certain land to defendants, and took from them an undertaking conditioned that they should by a certain time furnish plaintiffs with Texas land warrants for thirty-two hundred acres of land. In an action on the undertaking for defendants' failure to furnish the warrants, the court found that, at and after the time for their delivery warrants could have been readily obtained for forty-seven dollars and fifty cents each, locatable on six hundred and forty acres. Held, that the measure of damages was the value of the warrants (two hundred and thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents), and not the difference between the value of the land conveyed by plaintiffs to defendants, and the liens thereon, assumed by defendants as part of the purchase money. Rayner v. Jones, 90 Cal. 78, 27 Pac. 24.

[b] In an action to recover damages for the failure of the defendants to deliver land warrants to the plaintiffs at the time and place specified in a bond of the defendant, conditioned for the due delivery of the warrants, the measure of damages is the market value of the warrants at the time specified for their delivery, with legal interest from that date, less the amount due upon the purchase price. Rayner v. Jones, 90 Cal. 78, 27 Pac. 24.

§ 88. In General.

[a] Where all the evidence as to the damages suffered by plaintiff was given by his witnesses, and defendant made no effort to controvert it, and plaintiff, after giving an estimate of particular items of damage, stated that he suffered twice as much damage as he claimed in the complaint, which was five hundred dollars, a judgment for three hundred and twenty-five dollars will not be reversed because the damages found were excessive, or not in accordance with the evidence.—Pereira v. Smith, 79 Cal. 232, 21 Pac. 739.

[b] Five hundred dollars is not excessive for forcible trespass accompanied by insult and fright to plaintiff's wife, causing prolonged illness.—Razzo v. Varni, 81 Cal. 289, 22 Pac. 848.

[a] Eleven hundred dollars for wanton attack on aged cripple is not excessive.—St. Ores v. McGlashen, 74 Cal. 151, 15 Pac. 452.

[b] In an action for personal injuries there was evidence that plaintiff's right arm and shoulder were greatly injured; that the internal ligaments of the shoulder joint were ruptured; that she suffered great pain, and at the time of the trial, two years after the injury, still suffered great pain in the shoulder, in the back of the head and neck, and in the chest; that her memory was impaired; that she was unable to do any work of value; that but little progress had been made toward recovery; and that her injuries would probably be permanent. Held, that a verdict of fifteen thousand dollars should not be disturbed as excessive.—Morgan v. Southern Pac. Co., 85 Cal. 501, 30 Pac. 601.

[c] Two thousand five hundred dollars is not excessive for wanton assault on old and infirm man.—Chapell v. Schmidt, 104 Cal. 511, 38 Pac. 892.

[d] In an action by a passenger of a street railway company for injuries, where it appeared that plaintiff was pregnant at the time of the accident, and that a miscarriage resulted, and that her eyesight and the action of her heart were impaired, a verdict of ten thousand dollars was not excessive.—Howland v. Oakland Consol. St. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 513, 42 Pac. 983.

[e] Where there was conflicting evidence as to the nature and permanence of the injuries received by plaintiff from the attack of a vicious bull, for which defendant is liable, but, on the part of plaintiff, it was shown that the coccyx was fractured, the muscles of the region atrophied, the sciatic nerve made tender and painful to pressure, and that there were other symptoms of spinal injury, upholding a finding that plaintiff's health was seriously impaired, if not positively wrecked, it may not be said that a verdict for the plaintiff for damages in the sum of five thousand five hundred dollars was excessive.—Clowdis v. Flume etc. Co., 118 Cal. 315, 62 Am. St. Rep. 238, 50 Pac. 373.

[f] From evidence showing that plaintiff was horribly injured, and nearly flayed by the escaping steam from the exploded boiler, it may not be said that a verdict for damages in the sum of five thousand dollars is excessive.—Nofsinger v. Goldman, 122 Cal. 609, 55 Pac. 425.

[g] A verdict for two thousand dollars for injuries to hearing, sight, and nervous system, held not excessive though wages of plaintiff were not cut off or diminished, and he suffered no pecuniary loss.—Clare v. Sacramento Electric Power etc. Co., 122 Cal. 504, 55 Pac. 326.

[h] A verdict for one thousand dollars for an injury resulting in a broken arm, which prevented plaintiff from working for three months, and gave her more or less trouble thereafter, is not excessive—(1900) Wahlgren v. Market St. Ry. Co., 132 Cal. 656, 62 Pac. 308, judgment affirmed on rehearing (1901) 64 Pac. 993.

[j] A passenger, injured by a carrier's negligence, was seventy-five years old, and up to the time of the injury had been active and in good health, and engaged in his own business, which was extensive. He had held positions of trust in several financial institutions. As a result of the injury he became afflicted with heart disease, by which his capacity to transact his business was seriously impaired. Held, that a verdict for $2,000 was not excessive.—Sterrs v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 134 Cal. 91, 66 Pac. 72.

[k] Where plaintiff was confined with a badly injured knee and under the constant care of physicians for two months, and had not fully recovered nearly a year later, a verdict of three hundred dollars was not excessive.—Sheyer v. Lowell, 134 Cal. 357, 66 Pac. 307.

[m] Plaintiff was injured about the head, and was unconscious for ten or twelve days after the injury, and was suffering therefrom at the time of the trial, and there was evidence to show that the injury was permanent. Held, that a verdict for seven thousand dollars was not excessive.—Dolan v. Sierra Ry. Co. of California, 135 Cal. 435, 67 Pac. 686.

[n] In an action for injuries to a passenger, a verdict for two thousand dollars held not excessive.—Wood v. Los Angeles Traction Co. (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 547.

§ 90. —— Loss of Arm.

[a] A verdict for $30,000, in an action for personal injuries occasioned by the fall of an elevator, will not be set aside as excessive where it appears that plaintiff was a man 36 years of age, in good health, and engaged in an extensive business requiring great physical activity, and that he was so affected by several bad fractures, concussion of the spine producing permanent partial paralysis, and other serious injuries, as to render him scarcely able to walk, and prevent him ever after from resuming his business, or engaging in any other active pursuit.—Smith v. Whittier, 95 Cal. 279, 30 Pac. 529.

[b] Where plaintiff, who was employed as a street sweeper, had his leg broken by a collision with defendant's buggy, and a permanent shortening of the leg resulted, rendering his less able to earn a living, a verdict for four thousand dollars is not so large that it will be set aside.—Roche v. Redington, 125 Cal. 174, 57 Pac. 890.

See 13 Cyc. 132-134; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2123-2127, § 368; cols. 2156-2178, §§ 386-394.

§ 92. Injuries by Trespassing Cattle.

[a] Where, in an action for damage done by trespassing cattle, the evidence as to the number of the cattle, and the amount of damage, is conflicting, it cannot be said that a judgment for three hundred and twenty-five dollars is excessive, though the cattle were on the land only at times during two months, and plaintiff paid only one thousand dollars rent for the land for the whole year, and, after the trespass subleased it for fifteen hundred dollars.—Brumley v. Flint, 87 Cal. 471, 25 Pac. 683.

[a] Evidence that from two hundred and fifty to three hundred cattle, worth thirty dollars per head, died by reason of diversion of water from a stream running through plaintiffs' land, supports a finding of the amount of damages at one thousand dollars.—Heilbron v. Kings River etc. Canal Co., 76 Cal. 11, 17 Pac. 933.

§ 94. Breach of Contract.

[a] In an action for breach of a contract whereby plaintiff was to harvest defendant's grain, it appeared that plaintiff had spent several days in preparing to perform, hauling horse feed and provisions for his men, with two four-horse teams and men in charge; that he was discharged the third day of harvesting; that he was using twenty-four horses, six of them hired, and his own machine, worth two thousand dollars; that after said discharge his men, teams, and machine lay idle a week before he could obtain other work for them. Held, that a verdict for four hundred dollars actual damages was sustained by the evidence.—Cederberg v. Robison, 100 Cal. 93, 34 Pac. 625.

§ 95. Sufficiency of Allegations in General.

[a] Where a complaint contains no prayer for damages, and does not state the amount of damages, a judgment on default awarding damages is erroneous, although the complaint state facts sufficient to sustain such a judgment.—Pittsburgh Coal Min. Co. v. Greenwood, 39 Cal. 71.

[b] In an action of damages by the vendor of land for the failure of the purchaser to comply with his part of the contract, the plaintiff must allege, in his complaint, that he has sustained damages, in order to sustain a judgment for damages.—Bohall v. Diller, 41 Cal. 532.

[f] Allegation of damages which cannot be recovered is surplusage.—Newman v. Smith, 77 Cal. 27, 18 Pac. 791.

[g] A complaint, alleging mistake in the transmission of a telegram, so that plaintiffs were prevented from buying certain goods, and asked a certain sum as special damage, without alleging any facts going to show such damage, will sustain a judgment only for nominal damages.—Acheson v. Western Union Tel. Co., 96 Cal. 641, 31 Pac. 583.

[h] Complaint for trespass to real property must contain a specific and certain averment of the actual damage done to the property, even though exemplary damages may be claimed for injuries thereto under circumstances of aggravation, and if the actual damage to the property is not averred with certainty, a demurrer for uncertainty on that ground should be sustained.—Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680, 39 Pac. 56.

See, also, 13 Cyc. 173; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2192-2202, §§ 406-419.

§ 96. —— In Action for Breach of Contract.

[a] Allegation of facts which, if proved, would entitle plaintiff to recover sum demanded by him for breach of contract is sufficient allegation of damages.—Bartlett v. Odd Fellows' S. B., 79 Cal. 223, 12 Am. St. Rep. 139, 21 Pac. 743.

[b] Answer alleging that, if a street railroad had been completed as provided by the contract of plaintiff's assignor, defendant would have been able to sell his property for a greater price than it was "then worth without said railroad," or "is now worth with said railroad," and that defendant could, before making the contract for construction of the road, have sold his land at a greater price than he could when the road was completed, or at any time since, does not show any damages from delay in the construction of the road.—Witmer Bros. Co. v. Weid, 108 Cal. 569, 41 Pac. 491.

[a] Special damages must be specially pleaded.—Cole v. Swanston, 1 Cal. 51; MacDougall v. Maguire, 35 Cal. 279, 95 Am. Dec. 98.

[b] Damages which do not legally result from the breach of the contract cannot be recovered, unless they are specially claimed and set forth in the pleading; thus, damages sustained by a vendee of goods by reason of his inability to comply with a contract made by him with a third person do not legally result from a breach of a contract of his vendor to deliver the good to him, and, in an action by his vendor against him, cannot be recouped from the plaintiff's claim, unless such damages are specially alleged and set forth in the answer.—Cole v. Swanston, 1 Cal. 51, 52 Am. Dec. 288.

[c] Averment of special damage is only necessary where right of action depends upon special injury received.—McCarty v. Beach, 10 Cal. 461.

[d] In answer for the breach of a contract, want of any averment of special damage cannot be reached by demurrer.—McCarty v. Beach, 10 Cal. 461.

[e] Special damages which do not necessarily accrue from a ground of complaint cannot be recovered unless the facts out of which they arise are especially averred in the complaint.—Stevenson v. Smith, 28 Cal. 102, 87 Am. Dec. 107.

[f] In an action to recover damages for the destruction of a book containing the subscription list of a newspaper, plaintiff cannot recover, in the absence of any allegation of special damages, the full subscription price of each subscriber whose name is contained in the book. He can only recover for the value of the book.—Nunan v. City and County of San Francisco, 38 Cal. 689.

[h] Where special damages have been sustained from the destruction of property which do not all flow from the same facts, or constitute the natural consequence of the act constituting the right of recovery, but depend upon the proof of different circumstances, such special damages, as well as the circumstances justifying their recovery, should be alleged.—Mallory v. Thomas, 98 Cal. 644, 33 Pac. 757.

[i] Increased injury sustained by plaintiff by reason of her diseased condition at the time of the accident, occurring from defendant's negligence, does not constitute special damage, which must be pleaded in order to be recovered.—Campbell v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 137 Cal. 565, 70 Pac. 624.

See 13 Cyc. 175, 176, 179; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2192, 2193, § 406; col. 2200, § 413.

[a] Where contract provides for penalty, complaint must specifically allege facts constituting breach and amount of damages sustained as result thereof.—People v. Central Pac. R. R. Co., 76 Cal. 38, 40, 18 Pac. 90.

[b] The stipulation in the contract for the hiring of the lighter for the payment of a fixed sum in case of loss or irreparable damage to the lighter must be construed as a penalty within which the actual damages for the loss or injury might be assessed, and not as fixed liquidated damages; and the plaintiff, in suing upon the contract, should have alleged and proved the actual damage.—Wilmington Transporation Co. v. O'Neil, 98 Cal. 1, 32 Pac. 705.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 177.

§ 100. Allegations as to Amount of Damages.

[a] It is sufficient if amount of damages is stated in prayer for judgment.—Riser v. Walton, 78 Cal. 491, 21 Pac. 362.

[b] Where the complaint prayed damages for injuries occasioned to plaintiff's person and property, real and personal, but did not specify the particular amount of damages sustained as to each, a demurrer to the complaint for ambiguity and uncertainty was improperly overruled.—Foerst v. Kelso, 131 Cal. 376, 63 Pac. 681.

[c] In ordinary actions of tort, it is unnecessary to state specifically, and in amounts, the different statements or items which go to make up the sum total of the damages. It is enough to state the facts constituting the cause of action, and claim so much in gross, as damage for the wrong done.—Montgomery v. Locke, 11 Pac. 874.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 101. In Action to Recover Treble Damages.

[a] When treble damages are given by statute, the demand for such damages must be expressly inserted in the declaration, which must either recite the statute or conclude to the damage of the plaintiff against the form of the statute.—Chipman v. Emeric, 5 Cal. 239.

§ 102. Damages Accruing After Commencement of Suit.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 3283, providing that damages may be awarded for detriment resulting after suit brought, a supplemental pleading is not necessary for a recovery for damages accruing after the commencement of the action.—Halts v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305, 49 Pac. 189.

§ 103. Defenses—Incidental Benefits.

[a] It is not necessary for defendant to plead incidental benefits received by plaintiff from the act complained of to entitle him to have them deducted from the damages shown to have resulted from such act.—Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305, 49 Pac. 189.

§ 104. Issues, Proof, and Variance.

[a] Where a merchant employs a manager at a stated salary, and the latter brings an action on the contract for wages, defendant may, on the trial, introduce evidence of a loss of his profits, and diminution of his business, caused by the manager's neglect, under an answer setting up a counterclaim for damages growing out of the neglect of such manager to attend to the business.—Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 294.

[b] In absence of allegation in complaint that plaintiff has lost possession of the land, it is improper to show the value of rents and profits of such land as a foundation for judgment against defendant for the loss of its possession.—Hancock v. Hubbell, 71 Cal. 537, 12 Pac. 618.

[c] Where there is no denial of damages alleged in complaint, judgment may award them without taking proofs as to amount.—Johnson v. Vance, 86 Cal. 114, 24 Pac. 862.

[d] Under an allegation, in a complaint to recover damages for personal injuries, that plaintiff has "necessarily expended in doctor's bills" a stated sum, evidence is not admissible to show the amount of liabilities he has incurred for such bills, but has not paid.—McLaughlin v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 113 Cal. 590, 45 Pac. 839.

[e] Evidences of uterine trouble brought upon the injured plaintiff by the accident is admissible under the general averments of bodily injury of a continued and permanent nature, and resulting damage.—Samuels v. California Street Cable Ry. Co., 124 Cal. 294, 56 Pac. 1115.

[f] A complaint which alleged that certain grading rendered a street and alley useless and impassable, made access to plaintiff's property by said street and alley impossible, and utterly destroyed the value thereof, to the damage of plaintiff, is sufficient to warrant evidence proving damages to the lot from other causes than by simply cutting off access thereto.—Eachus v. City of Los Angeles, 130 Cal. 492, 80 Am. St. Rep. 147, 62 Pac. 829.

[g] A physician, sued for injuries sustained by a wife in health and constitution, and for pain and mental anguish by reason of his abandoning her at the time of her confinement, is not liable in that action to damages for the death of plaintiff's child, proximately caused by such abandonment. Judgment and order (1901), 63 Pac. 1007, reversed.—Lathrope v. Flood, 135 Cal. 458, 67 Pac. 683.

[h] Where the complaint, in addition to the common-law cause of action, prayed for treble damages, under the provisions of section 3344 of the Political Code, which are penal in their nature, and must be strictly construed, the fact that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain a recovery under that section would not justify an instruction for a verdict for the defendant, where there was sufficient evidence to sustain a recovery under the common-law cause of action for the actual damage alleged.—Clark v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 142 Cal. 614, 76 Pac. 507.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 105. —— Special Damages not Pleaded.

[a] Damages sustained by the vendee of goods because he cannot fulfill a contract with a third person, on account of their non-delivery, do not legally result from the vendor's breach of contract to deliver; therefore, in an action for that portion of the goods actually delivered, the defendant cannot recoup such damages, unless they are specially set forth and claimed in his answer.—Cole v. Swanston, 1 Cal. 51, 52 Am. Dec. 288.

[b] Jury cannot give compensation for loss of time, remuneration for wages paid, etc., unless there is an allegation in the complaint as to these matters.—Dabovich v. Emeric, 12 Cal. 171.

[d] In an action for damages occasioned by the pollution of water running through plaintiff's land, special damages cannot be proved, unless they are alleged in the complaint.—Potter v. Froment, 47 Cal. 165.

[e] If special damages are claimed, the facts establishing such special damages must be stated with particularity, in order that the defendant may be enabled to meet the charge if it be false, and, if not so stated, cannot be given in evidence.—Montgomery v. Locke, 11 Pac. 874.

[a] In a suit for damages for personal injuries, where the complaint alleges the nature of the injuries received and their permanent character, evidence of damages through inability to attend to business, necessarily resulting from such injuries, can be introduced without such damages being specially pleaded. Treadwell v. Whittier, 80 Cal. 574, 13 Am. St. Rep. 175, 22 Pac. 266, 5 L. R. A. 498.

[b] In an action for malicious prosecution, damages for injury to plaintiff's feelings, caused by the arrest, are recoverable under a general allegation of damages.—Shatto v. Crocker, 87 Cal. 629, 25 Pac. 921.

[c] In an action for a personal injury, the loss of profits in conducting a business involving the labor of others is not a necessary consequence of the personal injury to the plaintiff; and the extent of his recovery would be the worth of his services in the conduct of the business.—Lombardi v. California St. Ry. Co., 124 Cal. 311, 57 Pac. 66.

§ 108. —— Pleading and Proof as to Amount of Damages.

[a] Where the damages were laid at one thousand dollars, judgment for fifteen hundred dollars was reversed on appeal.—Palmer v. Reynolds, 3 Cal. 396.

[b] Suit was brought for damages, laid at fifteen hundred dollars. Defendant with other matter in defense averred that plaintiff was not damaged "in the sum of fifteen hundred dollars." A verdict for six hundred dollars was found in plaintiff's favor; but, on the ground that the answer admitted damages in any sum less than fifteen hundred, judgment was entered for fourteen hundred and ninety dollars. Held that, after plaintiff had gone into proof as to damages, and the jury had returned a verdict on the facts in evidence, this judgment was improper, since defendant might well have been taken by surprise.—Reniff v. The Cynthia, 18 Cal. 669.

[a] In questions of damages for taking gold from a mining claim, plaintiff must necessarily find great difficulty in showing the amount taken, and therefore defendants cannot complain of excessive damages, if they do not show the correct amount of gold taken out by them.—Antoine Co. v. Ridge Co., 23 Cal. 219.

[b] In an action for breach of contract to furnish freight to a steamboat, plaintiff is entitled to recover only the actual loss suffered from the breach; but to show that such loss was less than the profits that would have been made under the contract, the burden of proof is on the defendant.—Utter v. Chapman, 43 Cal. 279.

[c] In an action to recover damages for the diversion of a watercourse, plaintiff is not bound to prove affirmatively what expense should be deducted in computing the loss in the value of his crop from want of irrigation. Ellis v. Tone, 58 Cal. 289.

[f] General damages may be recovered in the absence of actual proof; and an instruction importing that direct evidence must be offered establishing actual damages before a verdict may be given therefor, is not a correct statement of the law.—Hearne v. De Young, 132 Cal. 357, 64 Pac. 576.

[g] Under the general provisions of section 1670 of the Civil Code making all contracts for liquidated damages void, except as expressly provided in section 1671, it must be presumed, in the absence of a showing that the case is within the exception that the contract for liquidated damages is invalid and the exception must be both pleaded and proved to overcome that presumption.—Long Beach City School Dist. v. Dodge, 135 Cal. 401, 67 Pac. 499.

[h] A vendor who, after receiving money on the contract, rescinds it for the vendee's breach, has the burden to show, as against the vendee's claim for return of the money, what damages he has sustained by the breach. Green v. Barney, 36 Pac. 1026.

[a] The court is entitled to be put in possession of all pertinent facts and circumstances from the consideration of all of which the ultimate fact of the quantum of damages is to be deduced.—Coburn v. Goodall, 72 Cal. 498, 1 Am. St. Rep. 75, 14 Pac. 190.

[b] Evidence of the expense of digging a ditch in a manner materially different from the mode provided as a test of value in the contract alleged by plaintiff is irrelevant.—Biggerstaff v. Briggs, 4 Pac. 371.

§ 111. —— In an Action for Loss of or Damage to Property.

[a] In an action to recover damages for interfering with the regularity of the flow of water into plaintiff's ditch, proof that, in consequence of the irregularity of the flow of the water into the ditch, plaintiff has lost his customers, is competent evidence.—Natoma Water etc. Co. v. McCoy, 23 Cal. 490.

[b] In an action for the negligent burning of a forest of timber, evidence of the character of the timber for milling purposes is admissible on the question of damages.—Cleland v. Thornton, 43 Cal. 437.

[c] Where defendant claimed damages on the ground that plaintiff, who had leased a dairy ranch from him, had refused to execute a lease and had abandoned the premises, evidence as to which were the most profitable months for dairying, offered to show that the premises were abandoned at the close of a profitable season, and defendant, being compelled to rent them then, suffered a detriment, was properly excluded, as not being on the measure of damages, which was the difference in rentals.—Silva v. Bair, 141 Cal. 599, 75 Pac. 162.

traction engine, plaintiff held entitled to prove the market value of wheat at the time of the fire.—Quint v. Dimond, 147 Cal. 707, 82 Pac. 310.

[a] In an action for failure to deliver goods according to contract, the contract was for the cargo, or all the goods of a given description in a given vessel, and there were no other like goods in the market. Held, that the admission of evidence to show what they were worth in broken parcels was error.—Tobin v. Post, 3 Cal. 373.

[b] In an action for services by plaintiff in constructing an electric railroad for defendant, and for damages by defendant's failure to perform its part of the contract, defendant set up by way of counterclaim that plaintiff had abandoned the contract before completing the road, and it appeared that the road had been sold in an uncompleted state. Held, that evidence of the price for which it was sold was inadmissible, since such evidence would not affect the amount of damages defendant would be entitled to by reason of plaintiff's failure to complete the road.—Electric Imp. Co. v. San Jose etc. R. Co., 31 Pac. 455.

[a] If circumstances of aggravation be shown, in order to increase the damages, then defendant may show all circumstances connected with his acts and explanatory of his motives and intentions.—Dorsey v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 553.

[b] A complaint alleged a breach of contract by defendants, a steamship company, to convey plaintiffs. Held, that plaintiffs could show fraud at the inception of the contract, in a predetermination of defendants not to carry it out, which was a proper subject to be considered by the jury, in connection with the tortious acts subsequently done. Jones v. The Cortes, 17 Cal. 487.

§ 114. —— Health and Physical Condition of Injured Party.

[a] Testimony that before the accident plaintiff was able to do her own housework, but since the accident she had not been able to do it, is competent to show the extent of the injury.—Healy v. Visalia etc. R. Co., 101 Cal. 585, 36 Pac. 125.

[b] In action by a married woman to which husband is not party, for trespass upon her separate property, evidence as to condition of her health and strength subsequent to date of trespass, is inadmissible, and should be excluded.—Lamb v. Harbaugh, 105 Cal. 680, 39 Pac. 56.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 115. —— Testimony of Physician.

[a] Defendant should be allowed to ask plaintiff's physician, on cross-examination, what he considered the serious ailment at the time he was called to see her, and what treatment was advised.—McFadden v. Santa Ana etc. Ry. Co., 87 Cal. 464, 25 Pac. 681, 11 L. R. A. 252.

§ 116. —— Pecuniary Condition of Person Injured.

[a] In an action for damages caused by injury to the person, the jury, in estimating them, cannot take into consideration the fact that plaintiff is a man who has to depend on his manual labor for a living. The damages in such actions are not dependent on the wealth or poverty of plaintiff.—Shea v. Potrero etc. R. Co., 44 Cal. 414.

[b] In assessing damages for injuries to an employee, caused by his employer's negligence, plaintiff's "condition in life" or pecuniary condition, as rich or poor, cannot be considered.—Malone v. Hawley, 46 Cal. 409.

[c] Where the evidence in an action for injuries to a passenger showed that the plaintiff was seventy-five years old, and up to the time of the injury had been active and in good health, and engaged in business of his own, which was somewhat extensive and diversified, and that he had held positions of trust in several financial and other corporations, which capacity to transact business was seriously impaired, an instruction as to compensation for the value of his time during the period of disability and for the impairment to his ability to make money was justified, and was properly given, though there was no evidence that he was actually earning anything at the time of the injury.—Storrs v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 134 Cal. 91, 66 Pac. 72.

[a] Where punitive damages are claimed in the case, evidence of the wealth of the defendant is admissible for the purpose of graduating the amount which it is proper to award.—Greenberg v. Western Turf Assn., 140 Cal. 357, 73 Pac. 1050.

[a] In an action for personal injuries, evidence as to the character, continuance, and extent of plaintiff's business after the injury held admissible.—Burns v. Dunham, Carrigan & Hayden Co. (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 959.

§ 119. —— Reputation of Physician Employed by Injured Plaintiff.

[a] In an action for personal injuries, evidence of the professional reputation of the physician employed by plaintiff to dress his wounds is admissible.—Thorne v. California Stage Co., 6 Cal. 232.

[a] In an action for breach of a contract of agency, plaintiff failed to prove as a fact the amount of damages actually sustained, leaving its determination to the direction of the jury. Held sufficient ground for a new trial.—Parke v. Frank, 75 Cal. 364, 17 Pac. 427.

[b] Evidence as to the cost of constructing a new staircase held insufficient to sustain a recovery for a breach of specifications in the staircase constructed.—Carpenter v. Ibbetson, 1 Cal. App. 272, 81 Pac. 1114.

[c] In an action for a breach of contract to organize a corporation and issue stock, the estimated value of the stock if issued held not the measure of damages within Civil Code, section 3300.—Eisenmayer v. Leonardt (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 43.

[d] In an action for breach of contract to organize a corporation and issue stock, a recovery for the value of the stock held not authorized under the evidence.—Eisenmayer v. Leonardt (Cal. Sup.), 84 Pac. 43.

[f] Evidence examined and held insufficient to authorize finding of damages.—Calkins v. Sorosis Fruit Co., 88 Pac. 1094.

—— UNCERTAINTY, § 128.
FINDINGS OF COURT, § 129.
DEFAULT JUDGMENT—NECESSITY FOR WRIT OF INQUIRY, § 130.

§ 121. Questions for Jury.

[c] In suit for damages for an entry upon mining claims, and for perpetual injunction, etc., held, that it was error for the court below to charge the jury that if they believed no injury or damage was done by defendants to plaintiffs, they would find for defendants; that such charge was calculated to mislead, inasmuch as the law presumes damages from a trespass, and under the charge the jury might have decided the case upon this want of proof of plaintiffs' damages, instead of absence of proof of their title.—Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37, 76 Am. Dec. 567.

[f] Where a trespass is committed from wanton or malicious motives, or a reckless disregard of the rights of others, or under circumstances of great hardship and oppression, the measure and amount of damages are matters for the jury alone.—Gorman v. Southern Pac. Co., 97 Cal. 1, 33 Am. St. Rep. 157, 31 Pac. 1112.

[g] In an action for negligence causing the destruction of plaintiff's property by fire, the question of interest upon the damages allowed must be left to the discretion of the jury; and an instruction is erroneous which arbitrarily requires the jury to add interest from the date of the fire, to such sum as they might find to be the amount of the damage caused.—King v. Southern Pac. Co., 109 Cal. 96, 41 Pac. 786.

[h] Where, in an action to recover for wrongfully diverting water from plaintiff's land, the complaint asked for punitive damages, and several instructions given at plaintiff's request contain intimations looking toward punitive damages, but the case did not justify such allowance, it was error to refuse to charge expressly that such damages could not be allowed, and the error was not cured by a charge that only compensatory damages should be awarded.—Mabb v. Stewart, 133 Cal. 556, 65 Pac. 1085.

[i] An instruction that plaintiff was entitled to recover only the actual damages proven, as distinguished from mere imaginary or exemplary damages, was properly refused, as tending to mislead the jury as to the character of proof necessary.—Trabing v. California Nav. etc. Co., 133 Cal. xx, 65 Pac. 478.

[j] Civil Code, section 3333, declares that for the breacn of an obligation not arising from contract the measure of damages is the amount which will compensate for the detriment proximately caused thereby. Held, that an instruction in an action for injuries to a servant that plaintiff should recover such damages as the jury should "feel" plaintiff entitled to was erroneous.—Fries v. American Lead Pencil Co., 141 Cal. 610, 75 Pac. 164.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] In an action for personal injuries an instruction to the jury that "money is an inadequate recompense for pain," though not an appropriate expression in a charge to the jury upon the question of compensatory damage, does not constitute a reversible error where the jury are also instructed that resulting pain is an element of damage to be compensated, and that if the plaintiff was entitled to recover, "the measure of her recovery is what is called compensatory damages—that is, such sum as will compensate her for the injury she has sustained"; that "the determination of the amount is committed to the judgment and sound discretion of the jury"; and that it should be "in such measure as a jury, dispassionately considering all the circumstances of the case, will allow."—Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 501, 30 Pac. 603.

[b] An instruction that, in cases of injuries for which a criminal prosecution might be brought, exemplary damages may be recovered in a civil action, is improper, as eliminating the question of mitigating circumstances.—Badostain v. Grazide, 115 Cal. 425, 47 Pac. 118.

[c] Instructing that the jury should render a verdict for such damages as appeared from all the evidence to be just is too general in an action against a principal for the malicious acts of its agent done in the course of his duty.—Trabing v. California Nav. etc. Co., 121 Cal. 137, 53 Pac. 644.

[d] An instruction purporting to limit the recovery of actual damages, in the absence of malice in fact, to the pecuniary loss of the plaintiff, is erroneous.—Hearne v. De Young, 132 Cal. 357, 64 Pac. 576.

[e] Instruction that jury may award such damages as they "feel" plaintiff is entitled to is in derogation of section 3333, Code of Civil Procedure, and erroneous.—Fries v. American etc. Co., 141 Cal. 613, 614, 75 Pac. 164.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Under Civil Code, section 3294, providing that in any action of tort where defendant has been guilty of oppression or malice the jury may give exemplary damages, a charge that plaintiff could recover only actual damages was properly refused, where there was evidence of a wanton, aggravated, and malicious trespass by defendant.—Waters v. Dumas, 75 Cal. 563, 17 Pac. 685.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 3294, authorizing the recovery of punitive damages "in any action for the breach or an obligation not arising from contract, where defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, actual or presumed," it is error to charge that if plaintiff was injured by defendant's act, and "in doing such act defendant was grossly careless," punitive damages might be awarded, as it cannot be said that an act of gross carelessness is always an act done through oppression, fraud, or malice.—Yerian v. Linkletter, 80 Cal. 135, 22 Pac. 70.

[c] In an action in which punitive damages were asked the court instructed that "in any action for the breach of an obligation not arising upon contract, where the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, actual or presumed, the jury, in addition to the actual damages, may give damages for the sake of example, and by way of punishing the defendant." Held, that, after such instruction had been given, defendant was entitled to an instruction that "a tort committed by mistake in the assertion of a supposed right, or without any actual wrong intention, and without such recklessness or negligence as evinces malice or conscious disregard of the rights of others, will not warrant the giving of punitive damages."—Lyles v. Perrin, 119 Cal. 264, 51 Pac. 332.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 124. —— Measure of Damages for Injury to Person.

[a] In an action by a husband for loss of his wife's services, there being evidence that before the injury she had cared for their children, refusal of an instruction that the jury could not consider the loss of service or of protection which plaintiff's children suffered by reason of the injury is not error; it being misleading, and instructions having been given clearly limiting recovery to damages suffered by plaintiff.—Redfield v. Oakland Consol. St. Ry. Co., 112 Cal. 220, 43 Pac. 1117.

[b] Where the jury were instructed that they might deduct from the amount of damages for personal injuries any money given to plaintiff by defendant by way of an alleged settlement, defendant cannot complain that it was injured by such payment.—Abrahams v. Los Angeles Traction Co., 124 Cal. 411, 57 Pac. 216.

[c] In an action for damages for personal injuries, causing plaintiff to have a miscarriage, an instruction that if the jury shall find that defendant wrongfully inflicted injuries on the person of plaintiff, and that she suffered pain in consequence thereof, and that she was at the time pregnant, and the injury caused her to have a miscarriage, and that her health has been impaired by reason thereof, or if they find that any of said alleged facts have been proved, the amount of damages to which plaintiff is entitled is such sum as shall appear reasonable and just, provided, however, that a greater amount of damages than is alleged in the complaint cannot be given, is proper.—Thomas v. Gates, 126 Cal. 1, 58 Pac. 315.

[d] In an action for damages for personal injuries causing plaintiff to have a miscarriage, an instruction by the court, after giving the rule as to the detriment proximately caused by the act of defendant, to the effect that this will include compensation for the pain resulting from the corporal hurt, if it produced pain; for mental suffering, if any, naturally resulting to plaintiff from the injury or wrong, if any; for wounded sensibility or affection, and for sense of wrong and insult, by reason of the malice or oppression of defendant, if he was guilty of malice or oppression,—states the correct rule of damages.—Thomas v. Gates, 126 Cal. 1, 58 Pac. 315.

§ 125. —— Measure of Damages for Injury to Property.

[a] In an action to recover for the diversion of a watercourse, the court need not instruct as to the rule of damages, otherwise than in a general way, unless requested.—Ellis v. Tone, 58 Cal. 289.

[b] In an action for injuries to a growing crop, instructions, in the same paragraph, that the verdict should be for the value of the crop at the time it was injured, with interest, and that it should be for the difference between the values immediately before and after the injury, with interest on that difference, are so contradictory as to constitute reversible error.—Harrison v. Spring Valley Gold Co., 65 Cal. 376, 4 Pac. 381.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 126. —— Measure of Damages for Breach of Contract.

[a] In an action for breach of contract to lease, where plaintiff alleges that he owned all the necessary teams, etc., for cultivating the premises, and had begun to prepare to move on them when defendant refused to perform, instructions that plaintiff was entitled to recover all that he could have made on the premises during the year; that he was entitled to the value of the crop that an average farmer would have raised, less the cost of raising and harvesting, to be determined by the evidence; that, if plaintiff had the stock and utensils, etc., to cultivate the premises, or any portion thereof, without hiring, the jury may consider that,—are not in conflict with an instruction that they are not to assess any damages resulting to plaintiff from the loss of his labor or the use of his teams.—Rice v. Whitmore, 74 Cal. 619, 5 Am. St. Rep. 479, 16 Pac. 501.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 127. Verdict and Findings of Jury.

[a] When verdict finds actual and exemplary damages separately, the latter should be disregarded if not allowable.—Moody v. McDonald, 4 Cal. 297.

[b] Finding of jury, based upon an admission of the parties by the pleadings or otherwise, is not less an assessment of damages than if the findings were made upon conflicting evidence.—Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 248-252; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2422-2438, §§ 563-566.

§ 128. —— Uncertainty.

[a] A judgment for one cent damages entered upon a special verdict in favor of the plaintiff for "nominal damages," if in other respects proper, will not be set aside for uncertainty in the verdict.—Davidson v. Devine, 70 Cal. 519, 11 Pac. 664.

§ 129. Findings of Court.

[a] Where an action against a sheriff for abuse of process was tried by the court, it was not necessary for the court to segregate in its findings the amount of actual damages from the amount given as exemplary damages, in the absence of a request.—Foley v. Martin, 142 Cal. 256, 71 Pac. 165.

§ 130. Default Judgment—Necessity for Writ of Inquiry.

[a] A final judgment on default may be rendered upon an unliquidated demand, the defendant being notified in the summons of the amount for which the plaintiff will take judgment; and it is not necessary to resort to a writ of inquiry.—Hartman v. Williams, 4 Cal. 254.

§ 131. Damage Accruing After Suit Brought.

[a] In actions for damages the rule is, that the proof of damage may extend up to the time of verdict as to all facts which flow as a natural result from the injury for which suit is brought.—Hicks v. Herring, 17 Cal. 566.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 3283, plaintiff is entitled to damages resulting after commencement of suit.—McLennan v. Ohmen, 75 Cal. 563, 17 Pac. 687.

[c] Parties are entitled to benefit of any facts occurring after suit brought which show clearly gains prevented by breach of contract complained of.—Shoemaker v. Acker, 116 Cal. 247, 48 Pac. 62.

[d] Where damages complained of are continuous, evidence of injury resulting after commencement of action is admissible.—Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 314, 49 Pac. 189.

[e] A statement by plaintiff's counsel that he desires to limit the proof to damage before the filing of the complaint is not a disclaimer of damages down to the trial, where questions by him as to such subsequent damages are thereafter excluded, because not confined to a time prior to the filing of the complaint, and without reference to the alleged disclaimer.—Hicks v. Drew, 117 Cal. 305, 49 Pac. 189.

[f] Plaintiff was entitled to recover damages accruing after suit brought upon a cause of action which was complete when the suit was begun, where the damages proved were the natural and necessary consequences of the wrong.—Bryson v. McCone, 121 Cal. 153, 53 Pac. 637.

§ 132. Computation of Amount Generally.

[a] Where plaintiff's testimony showed that the loss sustained was the amount claimed in the complaint, and defendant's counsel admitted the value of the property as alleged, it was error for the jury to assess damages in a less amount.—Koebig v. Southern Pac. Co., 108 Cal. 235, 41 Pac. 469.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 133. Computing Interest as Damages.

[a] Interest may be allowed as damages in the absence of statute.—Davis v. Greely, 1 Cal. 422.

[b] Where a statute is passed changing the legal rate of interest, recovery on a claim may be had under the old rate of interest up to the time of the passage of the act, and the new rate after that time.—White v. Lyons, 42 Cal. 279.

§ 134. Double and Treble Damages.

[a] Since Political Code, section 3344, providing for treble damages to the party injured by the negligent setting out of fires, is silent as to whether the jury shall find such damages, or whether they shall find the actual damage, and the court shall enter judgment for three times such amount, it is immaterial which course is pursued, provided absolute certainty is attained, and this can be secured by preparing the form of verdict.—Galvin v. Gualala Mill Co., 33 Pac. 94.

§ 135. Remission of Excess.

[a] Where a jury has passed upon a question of unliquidated damages the court below has no right to direct the plaintiff to remit a part of the verdict. In case, however, the plaintiff does enter into a stipulation to remit part of the damages found by the jury he will be held to his stipulation.—George v. Law, 1 Cal. 363.

[b] If, of two distinct items of damages, one is incorrectly allowed by the jury, the other may stand, if it is correct and the plaintiff is willing to remit the improper damages.—Butler v. Collins, 12 Cal. 457.

[c] Where, in ejectment against several defendants, the judgment for damages is several, instead of joint, the damages may be remitted, and the judgment for the land stand.—Curtis v. Herrick, 14 Cal. 117, 73 Am. Dec. 632.

[d] If plaintiff recovers a verdict for too large a sum, he may enter a remittitur for the excess.—Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 175.

[e] Plaintiff asked for an injunction against a diversion of water, claiming five hundred inches. He asked also for damages. A jury found him entitled to eight hundred inches, and to one thousand dollars damages. Held, that the verdict for damages could not stand, even by plaintiff remitting the three hundred inches over the amount claimed; that there must be a new trial.—Dougherty v. Haggin, 61 Cal. 305.

[f] Where a verdict is rendered in excess of the amount demanded by the complaint, the court may, before the entry of the judgment, allow plaintiff to remit the excess and to take judgment for the amount demanded. Clanton v. Coward, 67 Cal. 373, 7 Pac. 787.

[a] Neither the probate court nor the personal representative of a decedent has any right to his body, nor any right to control the manner of disposing of the same, as against the wife of decedent.—O'Donnell v. Slack, 123 Cal. 285, 55 Pac. 906.

[b] The superior court has no jurisdiction to award the custody of a body of a decedent to a stranger to his blood, to the exclusion of the surviving wife, with directions to such stranger to transport the body to another place for interment.—O'Donnell v. Slack, 123 Cal. 285, 55 Pac. 906.

[c] If a decedent makes a testamentary disposition of his body, the court in probate and his personal representative have jurisdiction to execute the will in that regard; but if the will is silent the court has no power to dispose of the remains, or to fix the place of the interment, or to commit the interment to a stranger; but the right to dispose of the body for interment in such case belongs to the widow or next of kin of the decedent.—O'Donnell v. Slack, 123 Cal. 285, 55 Pac. 906.

[d] In the absence of statute, the custody of the corpse and the right of burial belong to the next of kin, and not to the executor or administrator.—Enos v. Snyder, 131 Cal. 68, 63 Pac. 170.

[e] The executor or administrator, though required by law to pay the funeral expenses, is not entitled as such to the custody of the body, and has no right of burial against the objection of the persons entitled by law.—Enos v. Snyder, 131 Cal. 68, 82 Am. St. Rep. 330, 63 Pac. 170.

[f] The provisions of section 294 of the Penal Code, in so far as defining the persons entitled to the custody of a dead body, and charging them with the duty of burial, if possessed of sufficient means, are regulative of rights which may be considered and protected in a civil action.—Enos v. Snyder, 131 Cal. 68, 82 Am. St. Rep. 330, 63 Pac. 170.

[g] Penal Code, section 292, declaring on whom devolves the duty of burying the body of a deceased person, is to be considered in a civil case as determining who has the right to bury the body, and to have the possession thereof for that purpose.—Enos v. Snyder, 131 Cal. 68, 63 Pac. 170.

[a] The present case is decided upon the authority of People v. Baumgartner, 135 Cal. 72, to the effect that section 290 of the Penal Code requires the removal of a dead body from the grave in order to constitute the offense of disinterment thereof.—People v. Rhew, 135 Cal. 75, 66 Pac. 1081.

[b] "Disinter," as used in Penal Code, section 290, providing that every person who disinters or removes from the place of sepulture the dead body of a human being without authority of law is guilty of a felony, means to exhume, take out of the grave, or disentomb; and a person who merely dug down to a coffin to search the body for valuables, without removing the body, is not guilty of a violation of the section.—People v. Baumgartner, 135 Cal. 72, 66 Pac. 974.

[a] An indictment for "violating sepulture" is sufficient, where the legal appellation of the offense was given, and the defendant was accused of having "disinterred and removed" the dead body of a human being without authority of law, not being a friend or relative of the deceased removing the body for reinterment.—People v. Dalton, 58 Cal. 226.

§ 1. Presumption of Death from Absence.

[a] In the case of an absent person, from whom no tidings are received, the presumption of life ceases at the end of seven years. Ashbury v. Sanders, 8 Cal. 62, 68 Am. Dec. 300.

[b] To shorten the time when presumption of life ceases from absence there must be evidence of some specific peril to the life of the individual.—Ashbury v. Sanders, 8 Cal. 62, 68 Am. Dec. 300.

[c] Law presumes that a person once shown to be alive continues to live until his death is proved or he has not been heard from for seven years.—People v. Feinlen, 58 Cal. 224, 41 Am. Rep. 258.

[d] On the issue whether a son of a testator was dead October 27, 1898, at the time of the making of the will, it was shown that the son left his home in California, and went to Washington, in 1888, in ill-health. The last letter received from him was in July, 1889. During this period he repeatedly wrote to his wife, discussing his ill-health, and promising to write again. No one ever heard from him after July, 1889. There were rumors that he had moved to Illinois, but on investigation it appeared that another person was commonly known in Illinois by the name of this testator's son. Held, to prove the son's death before the making of the will.—Ross' Estate, In re, 140 Cal. 282, 73 Pac. 976; Frear v. Ross, 140 Cal. 282, 73 Pac. 976.

[e] It is the duty of the husband absent from his wife to keep her advised of his whereabouts, and, when he fails to do so for ten years, she has the right to believe that he is dead, though she has made no attempt to find him.—Harrington's Estate, In re, 140 Cal. 244, 73 Pac. 1000; Harrington v. Union Trust Co., 140 Cal. 244, 73 Pac. 1000; rehearing denied, 140 Cal. 294, 74 Pac. 136.

[f] It was the duty of the former husband to keep his wife advised as to his whereabouts. The wife was not required to endeavor to ascertain his whereabouts; but she had the right to believe, from his silence for ten years prior to the second marriage, that he was dead.—Harrington, Estate of, 140 Cal. 244, 98 Am. St. Rep. 51, 73 Pac. 1000.

[a] Presumption of survivorship of husband over second wife and children perishing in same calamity will prevail over presumption of revocation of former will by second marriage.—Sanders v. Simcich, 65 Cal. 50, 52, 54, 2 Pac. 741.

[b] Where husband and wife perish in common calamity, husband is presumed to survive. Hollister v. Cordero, 76 Cal. 652, 18 Pac. 855.

[d] Where a husband and wife were both murdered, and their house and bodies burned, in absence of any proof as to which survived, the husband will be presumed to be the survivor, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, subdivision 40, providing that, where two persons of different sex perish in the same calamity, both being over fifteen and under sixty years, the male will be presumed to have survived.—Hollister v. Cordero, 76 Cal. 649, 18 Pac. 855.

§ 3. Admissibility and Sufficiency of Evidence of Death or Survivorship.

[a] Hearsay information of death of the ancestor of plaintiff derived from the immediate family of the deceased is sufficient, prima facie, to establish the fact.—Anderson v. Parker, 6 Cal. 197.

[b] The fact that a fugitive from justice had not been heard of for sixteen months, and that he was a passenger on a particular vessel bound for a specified port, and that neither the vessel nor crew had ever been heard from, is not sufficient to raise a legal presumption of his death.—Ashbury v. Sanders, 8 Cal. 62, 68 Am. Dec. 300.

[c] The testimony of a wife that she had not heard from her husband for seventeen years, during which she was absent from his last known place of residence, living under various assumed names, and never bearing that of her husband, thereby suggesting the probability that she had endeavored to conceal herself from him, is insufficient to justify the presumption of his death.—Garwood v. Hastings, 38 Cal. 216.

[d] When both husband and wife perish in the same calamity, no presumption of survivorship of the wife arises from the fact that an order of a probate court granting letters of administration upon her estate recites that she was "the surviving wife" of her husband. In a proceeding by administrator to set aside the probate of her husband's will, it is error to refuse evidence aliunde upon the question of survivorship.—Sanders v. Simcich, 65 Cal. 50, 2 Pac. 741.

[e] Order granting letters upon wife's estate cannot by recital conclude the fact that she survived husband perishing in same calamity.—Sanders v. Simcich, 65 Cal. 50, 2 Pac. 741.

[f] Verdict of coroner's jury is not admissible to prove time and manner of death. It is matter of mere opinion and hearsay.—Hollister v. Cordero, 76 Cal. 653, 18 Pac. 855 .

[fg] Evidence recited herein held not to prove that wife murdered at same time as husband survived him.—Hollister v. Cordero, 76 Cal. 651, 18 Pac. 855.

[g] Where testator devised property to his two brothers, evidence of the declarations of one of the devisees that the other enlisted in the army and was believed by the family to have been killed, and that he was never married, was sufficient to support a finding that such devisee was dead, and to entitle the heirs of the declarant to the entire devise.—Woolsey v. Williams, 128 Cal. 552, 61 Pac. 670.

Held, that where a wife procured a divorce from her husband on the ground of extreme cruelty, consisting of threatening her life and driving her and her infant child from the home, and since the divorce he had not contributed to the support of either his wife or child, such facts constituted a desertion of the family, within such section, authorizing the wife to maintain an action for the child's death.—Delatour v. § 16. —— Posthumous Child, Born After Recovery by Mother.

[b] A complaint in an action for the negligent killing of plaintiff's child need not specially aver the loss of the services of the child. Morgan v. Southern Pac. Co., 95 Cal. 510, 29 Am. St. Rep. 143, 30 Pac. 603, 17 L. R. A. 71.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 377, providing that action for death by wrongful act may be brought by the heirs of deceased or his personal representatives, the existence of such heirs must be pleaded and proved, as the administrator can sue therefor only where there are heirs.—Webster v. § 24. —— Variance.

[a] In an action under the statute authorizing the recovery of compensation for causing death by wrongful act, etc. (Stats. 1862, p. 447), the allegation of the complaint was that defendants owned, as tenants in common, the entire block in front of which the accident occurred, and the proof was that they owned such block in distinct parcels in severalty. Held, that the variance was immaterial.—Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 153.

[b] A variance between the allegations of the petition and the proof as to the sex of the minor children, brothers and sisters of deceased, is not material.—O'Callaghan v. Bode, 84 Cal. 489, 24 Pac. 269.

§ 29. —— Character, Habits, and Domestic Relations of Deceased.

[a] In an action to recover for the death of one killed, by defendant's negligence, evidence is admissible to show him to have been a kind and good husband and father.—Cook v. Clay St. Hill R. Co., 60 Cal. 604.

[b] In an action for wrongful death, evidence that decedent's family relations were most pleasant held to justify an inference that decedent supported his family.—Evarts v. Santa Barbara Consol. Ry. Co. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 830.

[a] Suffering borne by deceased may be shown as part of circumstances attending injury, but it seems not as ground of damage.—Cork v. Clay Street Hill R. R. Co., 60 Cal. 605.

[b] In an action for wrongful death, evidence of complaints made by deceased of suffering and pain were admissible.—Evarts v. Santa Barbara Consol. Ry. Co. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 830.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2602, § 82.

[b] In an action for the death of defendant's servant the declarations of the deceased made to third parties after the accident, constituting no part of the res gestae, are not admissible against the plaintiff.—Hedge v. Williams, 131

§ 33. —— Expectancy of Life According to Carlisle Tables.

[a] Decedent's expectancy of life according to mortality tables is not a certainty, but mere probability.—Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 164, 47 Pac. 1019.

[b] Expectancy or probable lease of life may be shown by Carlisle mortality tables.—Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 163, 168, 47 Pac. 1019.

[c] In determining probable length of life of deceased, court may consider Carlisle or other mortality or expectancy tables as tending to show ordinary experience in like cases.—Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 168, 47 Pac. 1019.

§ 34. —— Earning Capacity of Deceased.

[a] In an action by minors for the death of their father through the alleged negligence of defendant, it was proper to permit the mother and guardian of plaintiffs to testify as to deceased's average monthly contribution to plaintiffs' support at the time of his death.—Powley v. Swensen, 146 Cal. 471, 80 Pac. 722.

[b] In an action for wrongful death the question of decedent's earning capacity held not determinative of the amount of the verdict.—Evarts v. Santa Barbara Consol. Ry. Co. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 830.

§ 35. —— Poverty or Ill-health of Plaintiff.

[a] In an action by widow and children for death of their husband and father, it is error to allow plaintiffs to prove that the children are without means.—Mahoney v. San Francisco etc. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 471, 42 Pac. 968.

[b] Fact that daughter of deceased, who was living with him, was of full age, does not entitle her to prove her lack of means of support, as against the defendant, against whom the action is prosecuted by her solely as one of the heirs at law of the deceased.—Green v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Cal. 563, 55 Pac. 577.

[c] In an action for death by negligence, evidence of poverty of one of plaintiffs, a daughter of the deceased, who was living with him at his death, is not competent, and its admission is prejudicial error.—Green v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Cal. 563, 55 Pac. 577.

[d] In an action by a child against a railroad company for negligently causing her father's death, evidence that she has no property is inadmissible, though she is an adult.—Green v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Cal. 563, 55 Pac. 577.

[e] In an action for wrongful death of plaintiff's husband, evidence as to plaintiff's ill-health was admissible as tending to establish pecuniary loss.—Evarts v. Santa Barbara Consol. Ry. Co. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 830.

§ 36. In General.

[a] In an action for wrongful death damages to which children are entitled are not to be arrived at by determining, first, what would have been a just compensation to the widow and children, and subtracting from this the sum to which the widow would have been entitled had she lived, but the fact that there had been a surviving widow is to be left entirely out of the case.—Taylor v. Western Pacific R. R. Co., 45 Cal. 323.

§ 37. Compensation for Injury to Deceased.

[a] Plaintiff does not represent the right of action which the deceased would have had if the latter had survived the injury, but can recover only for the pecuniary loss suffered by the plaintiff on account of the death of the relative. Sorrow and mental anguish caused by the death are not elements of damage in such a case, and nothing can be recovered as a solatium for wounded feelings; and the loss of society can only be considered for the purpose of estimating the pecuniary loss.—Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510, 29 Am. St. Rep. 143, 30 Pac. 603.

[b] Recovery in action for death is for injuries inflicted upon plaintiffs and not for injuries inflicted upon deceased.—Redfield v. Oakland Con. St. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277, 42 Pac. 822.

§ 38. Nominal Damages—Death of Brother.

[a] In an action for damages for the death of plaintiff's brother, only nominal damages can be recovered where it does not appear that plaintiff derived, or could reasonably expect to derive, pecuniary benefit from deceased, nor that deceased was accumulating, or was likely to accumulate, any estate, so that plaintiff, as his heir, would suffer pecuniary loss.—Burk v. Arcata etc. R. R. Co., 125 Cal. 364, 57 Pac. 1065.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 39. Elements of Compensation.

[a] Under act of April 26, 1862, section 3, relative to compensation for death by wrongful act, such damages should be assessed as will be just compensation to the surviving widow and children for the death of the husband and parent.—Taylor v. Western Pac. R. Co., 45 Cal. 323.

[b] Damages must be estimated by way of compensation, and not by way of solace.—Beeson v. Green Mountain etc. Co., 57 Cal. 39.

[c] Jury should estimate amount deceased would in all reasonable probability have earned in years yet remaining to him, deduct amount reasonably required for his personal use and maintenance, and give verdict that would pecuniarily compensate his heirs.—Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 163, 47 Pac. 1019.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 40. —— Death of Child.

[a] A parent whose children are killed by the negligence of a railroad corporation is not limited in his demand for damages to the actual pecuniary injury sustained by reason of the loss of the services of the children.—Nehrbas v. Central Pac. R. Co., 62 Cal. 320.

[b] Parent may recover such damages for negligent killing of child as are reasonable and just under all the circumstances.—Cleary v. City Ry. Co., 76 Cal. 241, 18 Pac. 269.

[c] In action by personal representative under Code of Civil Procedure, section 377, mother of deceased is entitled to compensation for pecuniary loss sustained by her on account of death of her son.—Munro v. Pacific Coast Dredging etc. Co., 84 Cal. 515, 18 Am. St. Rep. 248, 24 Pac. 303.

[d] In an action for the death of a child, the amount of plaintiff's recovery is limited to the actual pecuniary injury sustained by her by reason of the death of her child.—Morgan v. Southern Pac. Co., 95 Cal. 510, 29 Am. St. Rep. 143, 30 Pac. 603, 17 L. R. A. 71.

[e] Jury can award nothing in the way of penalty for death, nor for sorrow or grief of parents, but must confine verdict to probable value of child's services until his majority, less cost of his support.—Fox v. Oakland etc. Ry., 118 Cal. 67, 62 Am. St. Rep. 216, 50 Pac. 25.

[f] In considering probable character of occupation of deceased child to determine his probable earning capacity, it is proper to regard the calling of his father.—Fox v. Oakland etc. Ry., 118 Cal. 68, 62 Am. St. Rep. 216, 50 Pac. 25.

[g] In an action to recover for the death of plaintiff's son, an instruction that plaintiff was entitled to compensatory damages for the loss of her son's society was erroneous, since she is only entitled to recover for pecuniary loss occasioned by her son's death.—Wales v. Pacific Electric Motor Co., 130 Cal. 521, 62 Pac. 932.

[h] In an action for negligent death of a minor daughter it was error to limit the consideration of the pecuniary loss suffered by reason of plaintiff's deprivation of the comfort and society of the deceased "for the remainder of her minority," since a parent may enjoy the comfort and society of a child after minority.—Quill v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 Cal. 265, 73 Pac. 991.

§ 41. ——, Pecuniary Loss to Plaintiff.

[a] Pecuniary loss sustained by heirs is recoverable in action for death brought by representatives.—Munro v. Pacific etc. Co., 84 Cal. 522, 18 Am. St. Rep. 248, 24 Pac. 303.

[b] In an action for death only such damages can be recovered as the statute authorizes, and, in the absence of a different rule, the only damage allowed is the probable pecuniary value of the life of the deceased to the relatives in whose behalf the action is brought.—Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388, 47 Pac. 139.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 377, the amount of recovery in actions for wrongful death is limited to the value of the pecuniary interest of plaintiff in the life of the person killed; but such interest need not be measured by the evidence as a precise sum of money.—Ruppel v. United Railroads of San Francisco (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1073.

§ 42. —— Loss of Prospective Pecuniary Benefits.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 377, allowing heirs to recover for the death of an adult killed by wrongful act, in an action by minors for the death of their mother, loss of benefits of a pecuniary value, which plaintiffs would probably have received from their mother, had she lived after their arrival at majority, could be considered in determining the damages. Redfield v. Oakland Consol. St. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277, 42 Pac. 822.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2648-2653, § 112.

§ 43. —— Funeral Expenses.

[a] In an action under the statute for causing by wrongful act the death of a person, funeral expenses are not recoverable, except as special damages, if recoverable at all, and must be specially pleaded.—Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 153.

§ 44. —— Loss of Services of Wife.

[a] Husband may recover expense incurred by him for necessary labor and services substituted for ordinary services of wife.—Martin v. Southern Pacific Co., 130 Cal. 285, 52 Pac. 515.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 45. —— Loss of Society and Protection.

[a] In an action, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 377, by a widow to recover for the wrongful death of her husband, the jury may consider the relations existing between plaintiff and deceased at the time of his death, and the injuries sustained by her in the loss of his society.—Beeson v. Green Mountain Gold Min. Co., 57 Cal. 20.

[b] Loss of comfort, society and protection of deceased are proper elements of damage. Munro v. Pacific etc. Co., 84 Cal. 525, 18 Am. St. Rep. 248, 24 Pac. 515.

[c] Where deceased was of mature age, and had a legal right to change his residence, and was not living with his father when killed, the case is not like that of husband and wife, or parent and minor child, and it seems that the jury ought not in such case to be instructed in relation to compensation to the father for the deprivation of the comfort, society, and protection of the deceased.—Pepper v. S. P. Co., 105 Cal. 389, 38 Pac. 974.

[d] Jury may consider loss suffered by widow in being deprived of comfort, society and protection of husband, but only for purpose of fixing pecuniary value of his life. Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 169, 47 Pac. 1019.

[e] Loss of society, comfort and protection of deceased can only be considered in estimating value of services.—Fox v. Oakland etc. Ry., 118 Cal. 68, 62 Am. St. Rep. 216, 50 Pac. 25.

[f] It was proper to instruct the jury that in estimating the pecuniary loss of the plaintiffs the jury had a right to take into consideration the loss of society, comfort, and care suffered by them in the death of the husband and father.—Dyas v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 Cal. 296, 73 Pac. 972.

[g] In determining the measure of damages in an action by a father for the death of his minor daughter, the loss of the comfort and society of the deceased should not be limited to the minority or marriage of the daughter; but, independently of the probable value of the services of the daughter during minority or until marriage, nothing further should be allowed for "protection and support" of the parent by the daughter.—Quill v. Southern Pac. Co., 140 Cal. 268, 73 Pac. 991.

[h] In an action for the death of a married woman her husband and children were entitled to recover as damages all pecuniary loss suffered by them from the loss of society and protection of the deceased.—Green v. Southern California Ry. Co., 67 Pac. 4.

[i] In an action for death of plaintiff's husband, plaintiff is entitled to recover for loss of decedent's society.—Evarts v. Santa Barbara Consol. Ry. Co. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 830.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 371; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2657, 2658, § 116.

§ 46. —— Mental Suffering of Plaintiff or Beneficiaries.

[a] Damages for distress of mind and loss of society are recoverable in action for death caused by negligence.—Beeson v. Green Mountain etc. Co., 57 Cal. 20.

[b] Mental anguish is an element of damages for wrongful death of child.—Cleary v. City Ry. Co., 76 Cal. 241, 18 Pac. 269.

[c] Sorrow, grief or mental suffering of surviving mother or wife cannot be considered in estimating damages.—Munro v. Pacific etc. Co., 84 Cal. 524, 527, 18 Am. St. Rep. 248, 24 Pac. 303.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 373; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2660-2663, § 118.

§ 47. Exemplary Damages.

[a] Under act of April 22, 1862, providing a jury may award exemplary damages for the death of a wife by the negligence of another. Myers v. City and County of San Francisco, 42 Cal. 215.

[b] Under the act of April 26, 1862, exemplary damages may be awarded in an action for the death of an infant caused by negligence.—Myers v. City and County of San Francisco, 42 Cal. 215.

cific etc. Co., 84 Cal. 526, 527, 18 Am. St. Rep. 248, 24 Pac. 303.

[d] In an action for the death of plaintiff's son, the grievance to be redressed is that of plaintiff as a relative of the deceased, and not that of the deceased; and it is error in such action to instruct the jury that they may allow exemplary damages if the act causing death was wanton, cruel, and malicious.—Lange v. Schoettler, 115 Cal. 388, 47 Pac. 139.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

44 C. C. A. 259, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 363; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2626-2628, § 98.

§ 48. Measure and Amount of Award.

[a] Damages for wrongful death are in their nature unliquidated, to be estimated from the evidence without specific testimony as to the amount.—Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 162, 47 Pac. 1019.

[b] The measure of damages for the death of a relative is the pecuniary loss suffered by plaintiff, and not the loss of society, comfort and care, regardless of pecuniary loss. Green v. Southern Pac. Co., 122 Cal. 563, 55 Pac. 577.

[c] In an action for damages for the death of a person, more than nominal damages were recoverable, where it appeared that the heirs of the person killed were her parents, and there was evidence that, in addition to the wages she was receiving at the time of her death, she assisted her parents in other ways. Hillebrand v. Standard Biscuit Co., 139 Cal. 233, 73 Pac. 163.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Measure of damages for causing death of a human being: 12 Am. St. Rep. 375. See, also, 13 Cyc. 365-380; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2664-2686, §§ 120-131.

[a] Although there are statutory restrictions in other states limiting the amount of recovery in an action for death, such restrictions cannot be considered in this state; but section 377 of the Code of Civil Procedure, having been enacted after such statutes were in existence, is a direct determination of the legislature of this state that the policy adopted by other states should not exist here.—Redfield v. Oakland Con. St. Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277, 41 Pac. 822.

[b] The legislature has not declared the money value of a life annuity in favor of the deceased to be the measure of damages in an action for death, but has determined to leave the subject of the amount of damages at large, to be determined by the jury, with the single restriction that the damage allowed should be just, under all the circumstances of the case.—Redfield v. Oakland Con. Street Ry. Co., 110 Cal. 277, 42 Pac. 822.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 377, the restriction as to the amount of damages in an action for death held to consist only in the limitation that the same must be just.—Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 1010.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 50. —— Discretion of Jury.

[a] Discretion of jury in fixing amount of damages for death of infant should not be interfered with by court, except in cases of the most papable abuse.—Myers v. San Francisco, 42 Cal. 215.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 375; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2667-2670, § 123.

§ 51. —— Inadequate Damages.

[a] In an action to recover damages caused by the reckless taking of human life, a verdict for two hundred dollars is not a just and fair compensation, and justifies the court in granting the plaintiff a new trial.—Mariani v. Dougherty, 46 Cal. 26.

[b] In an action for death by wrongful act, when the only issues are defendant's negligence, and contributory negligence of the deceased, a verdict for plaintiff, assessing his damages at one dollar, will be set aside as inadequate.—Wolford v. Lyon Gravel Gold Min. Co., 63 Cal. 483.

§ 52. —— Adequate and Excessive Damages.

[a] In an action against a city to recover for the death of an infant, a verdict for five thousand dollars is not so excessive as to justify a presumption that the jury were misled by passion, prejudice, or ignorance. Myers v. City and County of San Francisco, 42 Cal. 215.

[b] A verdict for eight thousand dollars damages is not excessive in a suit against a street railway company for negligence whereby plaintiff's husband was killed, she being an invalid with a daughter.—Cook v. Clay St. Hill R. Co., 60 Cal. 604.

[c] Where plaintiff's five children, ranging from five to sixteen years of age, were killed at a railway crossing because of the company's negligence, a verdict in an action by the father against the company, for ten thousand five hundred dollars, was not excessive, in view of Code of Civil Procedure, sections 276, 277, authorizing the jury to give the next of kin, in actions for death resulting from negligence, such damages as might seem reasonable and just under all the circumstances.—Nehrbas v. Central Pac. R. Co., 62 Cal. 320.

[d] Three thousand dollars is not excessive for death of man twenty-three years old, who is sole support of widowed mother and minor children.—O'Callaghan v. Bode, 84 Cal. 497, 24 Pac. 269.

[e] Since, in an action for the death of a child, the amount of plaintiff's recovery is limited to the actual pecuniary injury sustained by her by reason of the death of her child, a verdict for twenty thousand dollars is excessive, where the child was a daughter only two years old.—Morgan v. Southern Pacific Co., 95 Cal. 510, 29 Am. St. Rep. 143, 30 Pac. 603, 17 L. R. A. 71.

[f] In an action for damages for the death of a wife and mother, prosecuted by her husband and minor children, a recovery of fourteen thousand dollars damage will not be disturbed upon appeal as excessive, where, after a careful review of the testimony, it cannot be said that the damage awarded by the jury appears to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice.—Redfield v. Oakland Consolidated Street Railway Co., 110 Cal. 277, 42 Pac. 822.

[g] Order setting aside, as excessive, a verdict of eight thousand dollars for death of man sixty-nine years old, earning one hundred and ten dollars per month, affirmed.—Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 163, 164, 47 Pac. 1019.

[h] Verdict of six thousand dollars for death of boy four years old held grossly excessive. Fox v. Oakland etc. Ry., 118 Cal. 67, 68, 62 Am. St. Rep. 216, 50 Pac. 25.

[i] In an action for death, a verdict for five thousand dollars held not excessive, so as to require the setting aside of the verdict, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 667.—Bowen v. Sierra Lumber Co. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 1010.

[j] In an action for the wrongful death of a regular practicing physician forty-four years of age, a verdict in favor of plaintiff for twelve thousand dollars, held not excessive.—Evarts v. Santa Barbara Consol. Ry. Co. (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 830.

D. TRIAL.

§ 53. Questions for Jury.

[a] If the plaintiff makes a case which does not charge the deceased or the person injured with negligence, the case should be permitted to go to the jury, under appropriate instructions.—Gay v. Winter, 34 Cal. 153.

[b] Contributory negligence of deceased is a question of fact.—McKeever v. Market St. R. R. Co., 59 Cal. 309.

[c] Jury should not consider that decedent's expectancy of life would be fully realized and that he would continue to the end with same earning capacity he had at time of death.—Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 164, 47 Pac. 1019.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] In an action by the heirs of a decedent, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 377, to recover for his death, the jury were instructed that the measure of damages is the pecuniary loss suffered by plaintiff, without any allowance for distress of mind, and the loss which they are entitled to recover is what deceased would probably have earned in his business or calling during the rest of his life, and which would have gone to the benefit of his heirs and personal representatives, taking into consideration his age, ability and disposition to labor, and his habits of life. Held, that the instruction was more favorable to defendant than was justifiable, inasmuch as the statute gives the jury the power to assess such damages "as under all the circumstances of the case may be just."—McKeever v. Market St. R. Co., 59 Cal. 294.

[b] In an action by the widow and administratrix of a deceased person for damages for the death of the intestate alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendant, the jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiff. Held, the question of evidence was submitted to the jury under instructions as favorable to the defendant as it could ask, and under instructions it did ask for, and, as there was evidence from which negligence might be inferred, the verdict should not be disturbed.—Cook v. Clay Street Hill R. R. Co., 60 Cal. 604.

[c] A charge that the measure of damages was the amount which deceased would probably have earned in the nine years "which it appears he had yet to live," according to mortality tables in evidence, which the jury might take "into consideration, as they are part of the proof that he might have lived that long," did not virtually tell the jury that the tables established that deceased would have lived nine years.—Harrison v. Sutter St. Ry. Co., 116 Cal. 156, 47 Pac. 1019.

[e] Where an action for the death of plaintiff's son was brought to compensate plaintiff alone, and the court so instructed the jury, it was not error to refuse to instruct that the law did not contemplate that any damages awarded plaintiff should be a compensation to any other person or persons.—Murphy v. Coppiotors, 136 Cal. 317, 68 Pac. 970.

[f] An instruction, in action by heirs for death of deceased, that such damages may be given as, under the circumstances, may be just, and in determining the amount of such damages the jury may consider the pecuniary loss, if any, suffered by plaintiffs in the death of deceased, by being deprived of his support; also the relations proved as existing between them and deceased at time of his death, and the injury, if any, sustained by them in the loss of his society, does not authorize the inclusion of anything besides pecuniary loss.—Keast v. Santa Ysabel Gold Min. Co., 136 Cal. 256, 68 Pac. 771.

[g] In an action against a railroad for the death of plaintiff's husband, an employee, an instruction that the jury might consider the fact that deceased was the sole support of the plaintiff was improper, though not ground for reversal.—Kerrigan v. Market St. Ry. Co., 138 Cal. 506, 71 Pac. 621.

[h] Where, in an action for the death of an employee resulting from the negligence of the employer, the heirs of the decedent were her father and mother, an instruction that "the pecuniary loss in such case" was "the value in money, if any, of the life of the deceased to her father and mother," was not erroneous as allowing the father and mother more than the actual pecuniary loss sustained.—Hillebrand v. Standard Biscuit Co., 139 Cal. 233, 73 Pac. 163.

[a] An action for death is statutory. The statute of this state contemplates but one action and one recovery. A judgment in favor of a widow for the death of her husband, she being the only heir then capable of maintaining an action therefor, exhausts the right given by the statute, and precludes a subsequent action for the same death by a posthumous child, whose existence in its mother's womb was unknown to the defendant at the time of the previous action, trial, and judgment. (Beatty, C. J., dissenting.) Daubert v. Western Meat Co., 139 Cal. 480, 96 Am. St. Rep. 154, 69 Pac. 297, 73 Pac. 244.

[b] When a statute casts upon a party an obligation to pay money to particular persons, without providing a remedy for its recovery, an action of debt will lie.—State of California v. Poulterer, 16 Cal. 514.

[c] Duty imposed by revenue act of 1857, section 49, for selling goods at public auction, may be collected by an action of debt by the state against the auctioneer, the penal remedy afforded by section 52 not being exclusive.—State v. Poulterer, 16 Cal. 514.

NECESSITY THAT GRANT BE TO PUBLIC, § 8.
LIMITATION AS TO DURATION, § 9.

§ 1. Nature of Dedication.

[a] A common-law dedication is the setting apart of land for public use, and to constitute it, there must be an intention by the owner clearly indicating by his words or acts to dedicate the land to public use, and an acceptance by the public of the dedication.—People ex rel. Howland v. Dreher, 101 Cal. 271, 35 Pac. 467.

[b] Dedication is but a phase of estoppel in pais.—Prescott v. Edwards, 117 Cal. 303, 304, 59 Am. St. Rep. 186, 49 Pac. 178.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 2. Purposes or Objects of Dedication.

[a] Dedication of property to a corporation of limited membership, formed purely for scientific purposes, is not for a "public use," and, therefore, a dedication to such a corporation of unoccupied city land by a board of supervisors, authorized to dedicate such land for a "public use" only under Statutes of 1868, page 379, is invalid.—California Academy of Sciences v. City and County of San Francisco, 107 Cal. 334, 40 Pac. 426.

[b] Board of supervisors cannot dedicate land except for public use.—Home for Inebriates v. San Francisco, 119 Cal. 537, 51 Pac. 950.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 444-450; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2765-2768, §§ 1, 2.

§ 3. —— Necessity.

[a] Accepted dedication makes a street though roadway was not required as necessity.—Brown v. Stark, 83 Cal. 641, 24 Pac. 162.

§ 4. Property Subject to Dedication.

[a] A mere cul de sac may, like a thoroughfare, be dedicated to public use as a street, etc.—Stone v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 489.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 5. Capacity or Authority to Dedicate.

[a] A finding of fact that the president and other members of a corporation, individually, but not in their corporate capacity, had given their consent to the use of land claimed by the corporation, for a bridge constructed by a city under a legislative act, and thus dedicated it to the use of the same, does not establish a dedication by the corporation.—Pacific Bridge Co. v. Kirkham, 54 Cal. 558.

[b] The acts of one of two joint owners of land, tending to show the dedication of a strip thereof to public use as a street, cannot be considered in an action brought by a grantee of such joint owners against a city to restrain it from working such strip as a public street.—Niles v. City of Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 572, 58 Pac. 150.

[c] Dedication must be made by the owner of the land, and his intention to dedicate it must be made to appear in the facts or circumstances of the particular case; and it cannot be inferred from any unauthorized acts or declarations of an agent in charge of the land.—California Nav. etc. Co. v. Union Transp. Co., 126 Cal. 433, 58 Pac. 936.

[d] Appointment by owner of an agent to carry out the reclamation of land, and to manage the same, does not imply any authority to the agent to dedicate any portion of the land to the public for wharves or landings.—California N. & I. Co. v. Union Transp. Co., 126 Cal. 433, 58 Pac. 936.

[e] Where, in a suit to restrain defendants from obstructing a strip of land alleged to have been dedicated to public use as a road, and to have it declared a road, it appeared that one of defendants had conveyed a strip of land to be used by the grantee in reaching the alleged road, such conveyance was not binding on the other defendant. Judgment (1902) 70 Pac. 273, reversed.—Hartley v. Vermillion, 141 Cal. 399, 74 Pac. 987.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 6. —— Occupant of Public Land.

[a] Knowledge by the owner that the public traveled over uninclosed waste land does not show a dedication, where the land was claimed by many to be public land, and the owner was then proceeding to obtain his patent, as, under the act of Congress, claimants were not obliged to sue until their right to a patent had been determined.—Harding v. Jasper, 14 Cal. 642.

[a] Dedication of land for public or charitable use is good without donee to take; and the legislature, as well as chancery, may appoint trustees who may maintain actions in regard to the land. Held, accordingly, in an action to quiet title, where it appeared that land adjoining the school premises of the plaintiff had been dedicated for public use for school purposes by the defendant, that the dedication was valid, and that the action was properly brought by the plaintiff.—Carpenteria School Dist. v. Heath, 56 Cal. 478.

[b] Where the owner of land, in laying out a town, makes a map, marking off certain land as a public square, and sells lots with reference to such map, the fact that the town is not yet organized does not affect the validity of the dedication.—Town of San Leandro v. Le Breton, 72 Cal. 170, 13 Pac. 405.

§ 8. Necessity that Grant be to Public.

[a] In its strictly legal sense "dedication" is matter purely between owner and public. There is no such thing as dedication between owner and individuals. Public must be party to every dedication.—Prescott v. Edwards, 117 Cal. 301, 59 Am. St. Rep. 186, 49 Pac. 178.

[b] Dedication is matter purely between owner and public. There is no such thing as dedication between owner and individuals. Sacramento v. Clunie, 120 Cal. 32, 52 Pac. 44.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 9. Limitation as to Duration.

[a] It is essential to a dedication of property to public use that it is to be forever, and irrevocable. A reservation of the right to revoke defeats the dedication.—City of San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541.

—— MAINTENANCE OF BUILDING FENCE OR GATE, § 35.

§ 10. General Requisites.

[a] A deed or writing is not necessary to prove a dedication of land to the public use. Harding v. Jasper, 14 Cal. 642.

[b] To constitute valid and complete dedication there must be an intention by the owner, clearly indicated by his words or acts, to dedicate the land to public use, and an acceptance by the public of the dedication.—San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541.

[c] It is essential to a dedication that there should be an offer to dedicate and an acceptance on the part of the public.—City of Anaheim v. Langenberger, 134 Cal. 608, 66 Pac. 855.

§ 11. —— Dedication of Streets or Highway.

[a] A street may be dedicated by legislative grant or enactment.—Breed v. Cunningham, 2 Cal. 361.

[b] A dedication of land to the public use as a street or highway may be made by deed or other overt act, or may be presumed from the lapse of time or acquiescence of the party. San Francisco v. Scott, 4 Cal. 114.

[c] To constitute a dedication of land for the purposes of a rural highway no particular formality is necessary. The intention on the part of the owner to so dedicate evidenced by acts and declarations is the vital question.—Harding v. Jasper, 14 Cal. 642.

[d] East street, in San Francisco, between Market and Folsom streets has been duly dedicated as a public street.—People ex rel. Alvord v. Pope, 53 Cal. 437.

[e] Dedication of highway is insufficient, without assent to its use by public sufficient to show intention to dedicate property to such use.—Hope v. Barnett, 78 Cal. 14, 20 Pac. 245.

[f] To constitute a dedication of land for a street there must be a manifestation of the owner's intent to dedicate it to a public use, and an acceptance and use by the public for the purpose intended and manifested by the owner.—Spaulding v. Bradley, 79 Cal. 449, 21 Pac. 47.

[g] Possession of a proposed public street by a trespasser not in privity with the pueblo does not affect the dedication of the street if it is laid out as such on the official map of the pueblo.—Mills v. City of Los Angeles, 90 Cal. 522, 27 Pac. 354.

[h] Evidence in this case reviewed and held to show act of dedication of land to public use for street purposes.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 463, 30 Pac. 591.

[i] To constitute a dedication of land to public use as a highway no particular formality of either word or act is required. It may be made either with or without writing, by any act of the owner, such as throwing open his land to public travel or platting it and selling lots bounded by streets designated in the plat, thereby indicating a clear intention to dedicate or an acquiescence in the use of his land for a highway, or his declared assent to such use. The vital principle of the dedication is the intention to dedicate, and, whenever this is unequivocally manifested, the dedication, so far as the owner of the soil is concerned, has been made.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 463, 30 Pac. 591.

[j] Dedication exists only where the owner of the land has manifested some intention to make the dedication; and where the dedication of a highway is sought to be established by user, it must appear that such user was with the knowledge of the owner, and with his consent, or without objection on his part. Huffman v. Hall, 102 Cal. 26, 36 Pac. 417.

[k] Circumstances must clearly show an unequivocal intention manifested by the owner to devote his land to wayfaring uses; and the public must accept the proffered dedication in accordance with the apparent offer of the owner. Such acceptance may be signified by public user.—Helm v. McClure, 107 Cal. 199, 40 Pac. 437.

[a] Dedication may be express, and completed by a single act or deed, or it may be implied from a series of acts.—Archer v. Salinas City, 93 Cal. 43, 28 Pac. 839.

[b] Question of intent to make a common-law dedication of land for a public highway is paramount, but the dedication may be express or implied, and if the donor's acts are such as indicate an intention to appropriate the land to the public use, upon acceptance by the public the dedication becomes complete.—People v. County of Marin, 103 Cal. 223, 37 Pac. 203.

[a] Whole question, as against owner of soil, is whether there is sufficient evidence of an intention to dedicate.—People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 77, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22-n, 22 Pac. 474.

[e] To constitute a sufficient dedication there must be an intention to make it.—City of Monterey v. Malarin, 99 Cal. 290, 33 Pac. 840.

[g] In an action by the owner of land to restrain a city from working a strip thereof as a public street, findings of fact that for about twelve years prior to the commencement of the action the strip has been open to public travel without protest from plaintiffs, and that it has been continuously used as a public way; that a few years prior to the commencement of the action the owner thereof caused a plat of his land adjacent to the strip to be made, dividing the same into lots facing on the strip, which plat, however, did not include the strip, nor refer to it in any way—are insufficient to support a conclusion of law that such strip is a public street, as there is no finding of an intention to dedicate.—Niles v. City of Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 572, 58 Pac. 190.

[h] The public used as a landing a part of the shore of navigable waters for a long period of years, with the consent of an agent of the owners, but it did not appear that he was authorized to dedicate the same to the use of the public further than that he was authorized to manage and reclaim for its owners a large area of swamp land, of which it was a part, and his testimony showed that it was their intention to retain control thereof. Held not to justify a finding that the landing had been dedicated to the public, conceding that such a dedication may be made.—California Nav. etc. Co. v. Union Transp. Co., 126 Cal. 433, 58 Pac. 936, 46 L. R. A. 825.

§ 14. Acts Constituting Dedication in General.

[a] An order of the board of supervisors of a county that "all roads now traveled by teams and packmules within the limits of the county be and the same are hereby declared public highways," though not valid as transferring the title of the land to the public, still may be good evidence, in connection with other proof, to show a control on the part of the country over a road as a public highway, and a knowledge of such control on the part of the owners of the land, and thus to furnish a circumstance from which a dedication may be inferred.—Harding v. Jasper, 14 Cal. 642.

[b] Where the owner of land has dedicated a road as a public highway, and the dedication has been accepted by the public or constituted authorities of the county, the dedication is complete.—People v. County of Marin, 103 Cal. 223, 37 Pac. 203.

[c] Where the evidence shows that an avenue, in the form of a cul de sac, was opened by the owner of land, and that, from time to time, he sold parcels of land abutting on both sides of the avenue, which opened into the public street of a town, and declared to lot owners that the avenue was intended as a street for their benefit, and the avenue was used by the owners of the lots and by many other persons as a public passage for many years, to the knowledge of the original owner, and without objection from him, the court is justified in finding the dedication of the avenue as a highway, notwithstanding a denial by the original owner of the land that he had dedicated the land for highway purposes, or had any intention of doing so, and notwithstanding other conflicting evidence of acts and declarations on his part inconsistent with such intention.—Helm v. McClure, 107 Cal. 199, 40 Pac. 437.

[d] Where offer of dedication and acceptance by public use are clearly shown, dedication becomes complete and irrevocable, and length of user is immaterial.—People v. Sperry, 116 Cal. 595, 48 Pac. 723.

[e] Statutes of 1856, page 103, incorporates the town of Eureka, describing its boundaries as commencing at a certain point north of A street, and running south to its corner, and thence southerly along A street to a certain point. A street had previously been designated as such on a map of Eureka, and the land occupied by it was owned by the state. Held, that the land occupied by A street was not dedicated as a street by the act incorporating the town.—City of Eureka v. McKay & Co., 123 Cal. 666, 56 Pac. 439.

[f] A reservation in a deed, in form, "reserving from this grant the right of way over a strip of land thirty feet wide on the westerly line of said tract of land for canal or road purposes, both or either," does not operate of itself as a dedication to the public, and thereby conclude the owner from using such strip for the purposes mentioned in the reservation.—Taft v. Tarpey, 125 Cal. 376, 58 Pac. 24.

[g] A county highway terminated at the western boundary of certain land, the terminal being marked by stone monuments sixty feet apart. The owner of the land employed a surveyor, who surveyed a strip sixty feet in width from the terminal of the highway to the eastern boundary of the land, and there placed a post at the northern and southern boundaries of the strip; and a map was made, showing the strip surveyed, with the eastern end closed, and filed for record in the county. At the time of the survey the owner of the land informed the surveyor and his children that his purpose was that a map might be made of the road, in order that, in dividing his land among his children, reference might be made to the map, to insure certainty of description, and that the county could not have the strip as a highway unless it paid for it. He told the children to farm up to the center of the road, which they did. The strip surveyed was never recorded or platted as a county road, and no highway connected the strip on the east. Held, that there was no dedication of it for use as a highway.—Smith v. Glenn, 129 Cal. xviii, 62 Pac. 180.

§ 15. —— Construction of Improvements Public in Their Nature.

[a] The construction of an irrigation ditch by several persons for the benefit of their several tracts of land, though the irrigators be numerous, does not operate as a dedication to the public. Accordingly, such ditch is within the exception in section 6 of the Los Nietos irrigation law (Stats. 1877, p. 374), relating to the control of irrigation ditches by commissioners.—Cate v. Sanford, 54 Cal. 24.

[a] Strip of land in the city of Los Angeles originally forming part of a public plaza, as laid out by the authorities of the pueblo, and subsequently declared to be part of a public square by an ordinance of the city, does not cease to be a part of the square and become a public street by being excluded from an inclosure erected about the rest of the square, and used by the public for the purposes of a street.—Cohn v. Parcels, 72 Cal. 368, 14 Pac. 26.

§ 17. —— Opening Ways.

[a] One who lays out a road over his land, and permits the public to use it on payment of tolls thereby, dedicates it as a public highway.—People v. Davidson, 79 Cal. 166, 21 Pac. 538.

[b] Where the owners of a block, by mutual agreement, opened an alley, and the same was recognized as an alley for more than thirty years, such dedication is sufficient to maintain an action to abate a private nuisance in obstructing the same.—Hargro v. Hodgdon, 89 Cal. 623, 26 Pac. 1106.

[c] A public highway laid out or erected as such by the public, or if laid out or erected by others, dedicated or abandoned to the public, continues to exist until it is vacated or abandoned by order of the board of supervisors of the county in which it is situated, or by operation of law, or judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction.—Plummer v. Sheldon, 94 Cal. 533, 29 Pac. 947.

[d] The act of a land owner in building a fence on each side of a strip of land, leaving it open at each end to the access of the public, the strip having been used for fifteen years prior thereto without objection, and traveled over by a large number of persons, the act of building such fence being both preceded and followed by expressed statements of the land owner showing his intention to dedicate the land as a public street, shows such a dedication.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 463, 30 Pac. 591.

[e] One who, without authority, lays out a road, and permits the public to use it on payment of tolls, thereby dedicates it as a public road; and the portion used by those who, not going so far as the toll-house, do not pay tolls, becomes a free public road, the use of which is not subject to the payment of tolls.—Blood v. Woods, 95 Cal. 78, 30 Pac. 129.

[f] Defendant, for the purpose of changing the course of a highway, opened a road through his land, fenced it on both sides, allowed it to be used by the public, and to be worked and controlled by the public authorities. Held, that the road was dedicated to the public.—McKenzie v. Gilmore, 33 Pac. 262.

§ 18. Abandonment to or Acquiescence in Public Use.

[a] Where the owner of land, without consent or objection, allowed it to be used eight years as a street, and permitted a house owned by her, but built by another, fronting on the street and extending into it, to remain there while she owned the land, there was no dedication to public use.—City and County of San Francisco v. Grote, 120 Cal. 59, 65 Am. St. Rep. 155, 52 Pac. 127.

[b] Where the dedication of a highway is sought to be established by user by the public, it must be shown that the user was adverse with the knowledge of the owner; and the user must be of such duration that the public interest and private right would be materially impaired if the dedication were revoked and the use by the public discontinued.—Niles v. City of Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 572, 58 Pac. 190.

[c] The intention of the owner of land to dedicate part thereof as a public street is essential to a dedication; and findings of mere probative facts, without the finding of a dedication or of an intent to dedicate, and which are not inconsistent with the absence of such intention, and may indicate a mere license to the public to use an open passageway for travel, without adverse user thereof by the public, are insufficient to establish the dedication of the way as a public street.—Niles v. City of Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 572, 58 Pac. 190.

[d] Where a corporation told purchasers of its lots in a certain town and others that it would construct a bridge and open a public highway, and then subsequently constructed the bridge and opened the road, the court is justified in finding that there was a dedication of such bridge and road.—Sussman v. County of San Luis Obispo, 126 Cal. 536, 59 Pac. 24.

[e] Political Code, section 2618, declares that a public highway is a road, street, etc., laid out by the public, or dedicated or abandoned to the public. In a suit to declare a strip of land a public highway and to restrain the obstruction thereof, evidence considered, and held to show that the land over which the road ran had been by the owners thereof dedicated and abandoned to the public. Judgment (1902) 70 Pac. 273, reversed.—Hartley v. Vermillion, 141 Cal. 339, 74 Pac. 987.

[g] In an action for trespass, where defendant alleged that the land entered on was a public highway, a question, "For the last ten or fifteen years, how many people have used that road or traveled it?" was properly excluded, since its answer would not have shown an intention of the owners to dedicate the road to the public.—Hibberd v. Mellville, 33 Pac. 201.

[h] Use by the public generally of a road for fifteen years, to the knowledge and with the acquiescence of the owner of the land on which it is located, does not show a dedication.—Hartley v. Vermillion, 70 Pac. 273.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 19. —— Knowledge and Consent of Owner and Nature of Use in General.

[a] To establish dedication of highway by user, it must appear that such user was with knowledge and consent of owner.—Hope v. Barnett, 78 Cal. 14, 20 Pac. 245.

[b] Where the owner of a strip of land never acquiesced in or assented to the use of it by the public as a highway, and had no knowledge that the same was being used, there can be no dedication.—City of Monterey v. Malarin, 99 Cal. 290, 33 Pac. 840.

[c] The fact that a strip of land has been continuously traveled and used by the general public as a highway for twenty years, with the knowledge of the owner of the fee, and without objection by him, does not justify a finding that the strip "is a public highway," since such facts are consistent with an absence of intention to dedicate, and may indicate merely a license.—Cooper v. Monterey County, 104 Cal. 437, 38 Pac. 106.

[a] Where there is no abandonment or dedication of the land the user for a limited time by the public cannot fairly raise the presumption of a dedication.—San Francisco v. Scott, 4 Cal. 114.

[b] The owner of a city lot divided a portion of it into smaller lots, bounded at one end by a street, and leaving at the other an alleyway ten feet wide, upon which all the lots abutted, and conveyed said lots to different persons, including in each deed the right of way over the alley, which was a cul-de-sac eighty-seven feet long, and opening on a street. For about twenty years the alley was used by the owners of the lots and their employees, and persons visiting them. The alley was marked on the map of the city engineer, but not on the official map of the city. Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to establish a dedication, and consequently the alley was a private way, and not a public highway. Stallard v. Cushing, 76 Cal. 472, 18 Pac. 427.

[c] Adverse user of land as a highway by the public for thirty years establishes the presumption of a dedication.—Schwerdtle v. Placer County, 108 Cal. 589, 41 Pac. 448.

§ 21. —— Use of Vacant or Uninclosed Lands.

[a] Land within the limits of the pueblo of Los Angeles was granted by the ayuntamiento to a private person, who was put in possession by the alcalde. Before the grant, the land was vacant, and was used by adjoining lot owners in passing to and fro, and sometimes for public celebrations and amusements. Held, that this was not sufficient evidence of a dedication to the public to overcome the presumption that the authorities acted within their powers, and conveyed a good title by the grant.—Latham v. City of Los Angeles, 87 Cal. 514, 25 Pac. 673.

§ 22. —— Public Use of Private Ways and Improvements.

[a] The fact that a strip of land, over which a private right of way had been granted by the owner to two other land owners, to enable them to reach a highway from their land, is used, without objection, by others, going to and from their own lands, or the places of the two grantees, does not establish a dedication to the public.—Silva v. Spangler, 43 Pac. 617.

§ 23. Express Conveyance, Agreement, or Declaration.

[a] Dedication may be made by deed.—San Francisco v. Scott, 4 Cal. 114.

[b] A deed which conveys to the present and future owners of town lots in a city certain streets and public squares in such city, "for the public use of the inhabitants of such city, to be applied to such public purposes as the future incorporated authorities of said city from time to time declare and determine," dedicates the land to public use, and contains a sufficient designation of the grantees to make it operative as a conveyance.—Mayo v. Wood, 50 Cal. 171.

[c] That a subsequent owner petitioned the city council for an "exchange or indemnification for certain lands belonging to her, and now occupied by the public" (being the lot in question), and that the council passed a resolution directing a concession of other land to be made to her, in pursuance of which a deed was drawn up and signed by the mayor, is not an admission of dedication, when there was no proof that the deed was delivered, and it appeared that the city subsequently granted the lot to another.—Latham v. City of Los Angeles, 87 Cal. 514, 25 Pac. 673.

[d] Conveyances of lots adjoining the cul-de-sac by the original owner, which expressly provided for an extinction of the cul-de-sac, by agreement in writing of the owners of the adjoining allotments, show no conclusive intention to dedicate a public highway, but show the contrary.—Gilfillan v. Shattuck, 142 Cal. 27, 75 Pac. 646.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 24. —— Sales and Descriptions of Property with Reference to Streets.

[a] Where lots are sold as fronting on or bounded by a street, such acts constitute a dedication.—Breed v. Cunningham, 2 Cal. 361; People v. Pope, 53 Cal. 437.

[b] Street may be dedicated by platting and selling lots bounded by it.—Breed v. Cunningham, 2 Cal. 361.

[c] Defendants quitclaimed to the city of San Francisco certain strips of land to be used as highways, and subsequently, said strips not having been used or opened as highways, executed a mortgage of adjoining premises, describing them as running to said streets. Said mortgages were foreclosed, and the plaintiffs, being purchasers, sought to enjoin defendants from building upon said strips of land. Held, that defendants' mortgage deed was a dedication of said strips as highways, as to the mortgagees and those claiming under them, and vested in them a right of way.—Kittle v. Pfeiffer, 22 Cal. 484.

[f] Where owner declared to purchasers that certain strips outlined upon the ground were streets, and purchasers acted on such declaration, as to them those parcels are streets, though not as to the public.—Prescott v. Edwards, 117 Cal. 304, 59 Am. St. Rep. 186, 49 Pac. 178.

[g] Under act of Congress of 1876, extending Lyon street, bounding the Presidio military reservation, and dedicating it to the public, and Statutes of 1867-68, page 379, making the grant to the city for the benefit of persons who, if the land had not been reserved for public use, would have been entitled thereto under ordinance No. 800 of the city of San Francisco, a party receiving conveyances from the city under such ordinance must take the property charged with the dedication.—Wheeler v. Benjamin, 136 Cal. 51, 68 Pac. 313.

[h] Where the owner of a tract of land in a city, through which a street and alley are platted, conveys land on both sides of the street, describing the tracts as bounded by such street and alley, such conveyance is an offer to dedicate, and is sufficiently accepted by an ordinance accepting, and declaring to be public streets all streets and alleys which have been dedicated by the owners thereof.—City of Eureka v. Gates, 137 Cal. 89, 69 Pac. 850.

[i] Where the owner of a lot subdivided it, and left a strip of land between the subdivisions, which was a mere cul-de-sac, the fact that in his conveyances thereof were references in the description to such strip of land did not constitute a conclusive dedication of such strip to the public as a highway. Gilfillan v. Shattuck, 142 Cal. 27, 75 Pac. 646.

[a] Where one subdivided and sold absolutely, at public sale, the middle one of three adjoining lots, making a part of the land on the sale map as an extension of a cul-de-sac to a street, with sublots fronting on such extension, it was held to be a dedication to public use, and to subject the extension and cul-de-sac to the jurisdiction of the board.—Stone v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 489.

[c] Where it appeared that part of the demanded premises was in the tract conveyed by R. to the maker of the plat and map, and after the death of the grantee was conveyed by the administrator of his estate to another, as described in the map, and subsequently, in selling some of them, such other designated them by the numbers thereon, and that in one sale, prior to the passage of the ordinance accepting land dedicated to the city, he referred to the lot as bounded on the street in question, the acts of both constituted a dedication of that part, and the administrator's deed is competent evidence of the fact.—City of Eureka v. Fay, 107 Cal. 166, 40 Pac. 235.

§ 26. —— Sale of Lands Bounded by Unopened Streets.

[a] A deed given by defendant to a third person, wherein the description recites that the boundary lines of the property conveyed were to run "to and along Twelfth street," which was then an open public street to the east of, but not extended westerly through, defendant's property, constitutes a dedication of, or an offer by defendant to dedicate, land for the purpose of a street.—City of Eureka v. Armstrong, 83 Cal. 623, 22 Pac. 928, affirmed in (1890) 23 Pac. 1085.

[b] Where a street has not been opened, a conveyance of land therein, by deed describing it as part of the street, does not constitute a dedication thereof.—Cerf v. Pfleging, 94 Cal. 131, 29 Pac. 417.

§ 27. Maps and Plats in General.

[a] Where land owner maps it out into streets and lots and sells with reference to such map, he makes an irrevocable dedication of streets, squares, or plazas represented on it.—San Leandro v. Le Breton, 72 Cal. 174, 175, 13 Pac. 405.

[b] Mere making of map with streets is not offer of dedication until filed for record.—People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 77, 78, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22-n, 22 Pac. 474.

[e] Where a survey and map of an addition to a city, showing public streets, included a tract of land owned by one who had no connection with, and did not authorize, the survey or map, and who protested against the map, and prevented the recording of it, a finding that he dedicated, or offered to dedicate, any part of street designated thereon, and extending through his land, is against the evidence, notwithstanding the fact that in two conveyances of portions of his land he referred to the unrecorded map for a description of the lots conveyed, neither of which adjoined or referred to the street.—City of Eureka v. Fay, 107 Cal. 166, 40 Pac. 235.

[f] Mere marking of streets on unrecorded map and sale of lots with declaration that streets were not for public use, does not constitute dedication.—People v. Sperry, 116 Cal. 595, 48 Pac. 723.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Dedication by maps and plats: 10 Am. St. Rep. 189, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 455; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2828-2864, §§ 34-47.

§ 28. —— Designation of Use or Purpose—Parks.

[a] Act of legislature of March 11, 1858, ratifying and confirming an ordinance of the city and county of San Francisco, which approved a map showing the location of streets and squares in that city, operated as a selection and dedication to public use of the tracts marked as public squares on the map approved by the ordinance, and the act of Congress of July 1, 1864, relinquishing and granting to the city the title to such land for the uses and purposes specified in the ordinance, had the effect to confirm such dedication, and make it operative upon the legal title, as well as upon such title as the city held prior thereto.—People ex rel. Bryant v. Holladay, 93 Cal. 241, 27 Am. St. Rep. 86, 29 Pac. 54.

[c] Defendant contracted with a railway company to sell it certain land, and the railway company took joint possession of the property under the contract. It divided the land into lots and blocks, and placed them upon the market for sale, and filed a map in the recorder's office showing the subdivisions, and having a tract marked off and labeled as "Central Park." Subsequently defendant and the railroad company contracted to sell the park to one G. in consideration that he would keep it open as a public park for twenty-five years. This agreement was canceled. Subsequently the railroad company quitclaimed to defendant. Defendant had sold many lots to purchasers with reference to this map. During all this time the park was open to the public. Held, that these facts are sufficient to support a finding that the park was not dedicated and accepted by the public.—City of Los Angeles v. Kysor, 125 Cal. 463, 58 Pac. 90.

[d] Statutes of 1867-68, page 692, section 5, provides that "all streets, roads, alleys," etc., "marked and platted on the map of the townsite," dedicated under Revised Statutes of the United States, section 2387 et seq., "shall be deemed and considered and are hereby declared to be dedicated to public use by the filing of such town plat," etc. Land which constituted part of the plaza was defined on the map by the boundaries of a street, of which it formed a part. The other boundaries were marked by clearly defined lines. The map showed the entrance of intersecting streets into the plaza. Held, that the plaza was designated as a part of the street, whose boundaries were coincident with it, and hence that a deed thereto by a judge of the superior court was void.—Amador County v. Gilbert, 133 Cal. 51, 65 Pac. 130.

[e] Where land in a city is platted by the owner, the plat or map being filed in the county recorder's office, and on the map a certain tract is marked as a plaza, such action shows an intention to dedicate the tract.—City of Anaheim v. Langenberger, 134 Cal. 608, 66 Pac. 855.

§ 29. —— Avenues and Streets.

[b] In an action for trespass, it appeared that the owner of certain land had it surveyed and platted with a street fifty feet wide running north from a highway, which street was marked on the plat "Hester Avenue." This plat was shown to purchasers, and a copy thereof posted on the premises. The lots sold to defendant were described as bounded on one side by this avenue. Prior to this sale the avenue was thrown open to public travel, and the deed to defendant was recorded before the balance of the property was sold to plaintiff. Held, that defendant had a right to remove a fence in said avenue, and that there was no need of showing that the avenue was a necessity.—Brown v. Stark, 83 Cal. 636, 24 Pac. 162.

[a] The drawing of side lines through a block in a plat of land, indicating that it may be intended for a street, but not designating it by name as such, is merely an offer to dedicate.—Schmitt v. City and County of San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

[b] Where a plat of land is recorded, and land appears thereon not numbered as a lot, nor corresponding in size or shape to one, but bounded by lines clearly intended to represent the lines of a street, and lots are sold as being bounded on such street, such land is dedicated for a public street, though not named as such on the plat.—City and County of San Francisco v. Burr, 36 Pac. 771.

[a] A map, which was not made, by the owner of land alleged to have been dedicated for the purposes of a street, and not shown to have been made with his consent or by his authority, and to which no reference is made for description in the deed containing the alleged offer to dedicate, is of no effect on the question of dedication.—City of Eureka v. Croghan, 81 Cal. 524, 22 Pac. 693.

[b] The fact that a certain street is marked as a public street on the "engineer's map." and on "Humphrey's Map of the City and County of San Francisco," is not conclusive evidence that the street has been dedicated to the public.—Whelan v. Boyd, 93 Cal. 500, 29 Pac. 69.

§ 32. —— Adoption of Map or Plat by Reference Thereto.

[a] The acceptance by a general ordinance of all offers to dedicate streets not passed in reliance upon any representation by word or act of the owner of the land in question, and not referring nor applying to that land by description, cannot estop the owner from claiming his ownership of the land which he had not offered or intended to dedicate before the passage of the ordinance, merely because he had described lots by reference to an unrecorded map of which the city had no constructive notice at the date of the ordinance.—Eureka v. Fay, 107 Cal. 166, 40 Pac. 235.

[b] Statutes of 1857, page 76, grants to the town of Eureka the lands within its limits owned by the state, including what is known as the "water front," extending from high-water mark into the bay to a point where the water is not over six feet at low tide, the trustees of the town being required to plat the water front into lots, and to sell such of them at a certain price to persons who were bona fide occupants thereof at the time the act was passed. Thereafter the trustees passed an ordinance employing a surveyor "to run off and set stakes at the corners of all the blocks lying between A and N streets and the bay." Pursuant thereto, a map was made of a part of the town, including A street, which was placed in the recorder's office. This map contained no names of streets. Thereafter an occupant of part of the water front applied for a deed, and the town conveyed to his successor, the deed including a part of A street; and in another street, which was also conveyed, a right of way to the bay was reserved for the original occupant. Held, that the municipal authorities had not dedicated as a street the part of A street conveyed by them.—City of Eureka v. McKay & Co., 123 Cal. 666, 56 Pac. 439.

[c] It appeared that in 1855 and 1856, under certain ordinances, a land owner had a tract subdivided into blocks and lots, with streets delineated thereon, among which was Union street, and a map was made and approved, showing such survey. In 1861 the then owner of defendant's lot made a declaration of homestead upon it, showing it to be bounded on the north by Union street. The conveyance of said lot to defendant, and a declaration of homestead and mortgage executed by him, all described the lot in a similar manner. When Union street was graded, defendant made no objection thereto. After the grading was finished the fences were adjusted to Union street as thus laid out, the street was sewered and paved, and a street railroad was placed thereon, without objection by defendant. Held, that Union street was dedicated to public use as a street, and accepted as such. Spaulding v. Wesson (Cal.), 45 Pac. 807.

[a] The platting of land, and the sale of lots with reference thereto, by the owner, do not constitute a dedication of land as a street as to the public, where such land is never opened as a street, and the owner keeps it inclosed, and uses it for more than twenty years before an attempt to accept it by the public.—People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 70, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22, 22 Pac. 474.

[d] A town authorized by act of Congress of March 2, 1867, and act of March 23, 1868 (Stats. 1867-68, p. 245), to enter lands within its limits "in trust for the several use and benefit of the occupants," and, after determining conflicting claims, to make deeds to the proper parties, caused a map of the town to be made and adopted as official which embraced and showed a certain tract in the possession of one M. to be laid off in blocks and lots, with streets extending through it, though in fact there were at the time no such divisions thereof. Thereafter it received a patent embracing the tract, and on petition of the assignees of M., who referred for description to the map, executed to them a deed of the land. Held, that the town could not be regarded as having asserted a claim to the streets, and as having deeded the land subject to the recognition of such claim by the grantees.—Cerf v. Pfleging, 94 Cal. 131, 29 Pac. 417.

[e] Reference to the unrecorded map for mere purpose of describing lots sold by owner who had not authorized the map, while expressly repudiating it for all other purposes, and preventing the recordation thereof, has no tendency to prove that he intended to dedicate to the public any part of a street defined on such map, not adjacent to the lots sold, nor referred to in the description thereof.—Eureka v. Fay, 107 Cal. 166, 40 Pac. 235.

[f] Purchaser of land is bound by maps filed by him in county recorder's office designating certain portions of land surveyed as streets.—King v. Dugan, 88 Pac. 925.

§ 34. Acts or Declarations to Prevent Implied Dedication.

[a] Declarations of agent in control, claiming compensation for use, will rebut a dedication.—San Francisco v. Scott, 4 Cal. 116.

[b] Where the intention of a land owner to dedicate part of the land for street purposes has been shown by specific acts, and it does not appear but that the entire tract, including the street has been assessed as a whole, the payment of the tax thereon by the owner cannot be held to rebut his intention of dedication so shown by his specific acts.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 463, 30 Pac. 591.

§ 35. —— Maintenance of Building Fence or Gate.

[a] The erection and maintenance of gates or other obstructions over a road is strong evidence in support of a mere license to the public to pass over it, and in rebuttal of its dedication to public use.—Quinn v. Anderson, 70 Cal. 454, 11 Pac. 746.

[b] Where no offer to dedicate land as a public street is made or intended by the owner, but fences are maintained, and an attempt to open it as a street is resisted, a public map made by the city, on which the land is laid down as a street, is not of itself evidence of dedication or user, nor is a private map, which has never been filed.—People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 70, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22, 22 Pac. 474; Cook v. Sudden, 94 Cal. 443, 29 Pac. 949.

[c] Where the owner of land opens a road thereon, and the public use it uninterruptedly for some five years, the placing of a gate across it at one end, which is left open during the day and closed only at night, and which was placed there to prevent injury to those using the road, or to prevent the public from driving on the owner's wharf, is not inconsistent with an intention to dedicate the road to public use.—People v. Eel River etc. R. Co., 98 Cal. 665, 33 Pac. 728.

[d] The fact that land is inclosed is strong evidence to show that any use of it by the public was only permissive.—Huffman v. Hall, 102 Cal. 26, 36 Pac. 417.

[e] The owner of a tract of land caused it to be surveyed and platted. Part of one of the streets marked on the plat was never opened or used as a public street, and for more than twenty years the owner had a barn and shed on it. Held, that the intention to dedicate was not sufficiently indicated.—People v. Reed, 20 Pac. 708.

[f] In an action for trespass, where defendant alleged that the land entered on was a public highway, it appeared that the line of the road for nearly its whole length had been changed from time to time by the owner of the land; that during all the time the public had been permitted to use the road it had been barred by several gates, to be opened and closed by persons passing over it; that for twelve years no work had been done or public money expended thereon by the road overseers; and it did not appear that there had been before that time. Held, that the road had not become a highway by dedication.—Hibberd v. Mellville, 33 Pac. 201.

—— OCCASIONAL USE, § 44.
—— IMPROVING AND REPAIRING PROPERTY DEDICATED, § 45.
—— ACCEPTANCE OR USE OF PART OF PROPERTY, § 46.

[a] The ordinance of 1852, passed by the city council of San Francisco, setting apart one of its water lots to the public as a free dock, was not a dedication, but an offer to dedicate; and by it the city lost, and the people gained, no rights until the lots were accepted by user.—City and County of San Francisco v. Calderwood, 31 Cal. 585, 91 Am. Dec. 542.

[b] Mere dedication of land to public use as a street, etc., makes it a public street, subject to the jurisdiction of the board of supervisors, without any formal acceptance by them.—Stone v. Brooks, 35 Cal. 489.

[c] The recording of a map of a town is merely an offer to dedicate to the public the streets appearing on it, which offer does not become effectual as an irrevocable dedication until its acceptance by the public.—Hayward v, Manzer, 70 Cal. 476, 13 Pac. 141.

[d] No formal acceptance is necessary to complete a dedication of streets and squares represented on maps of townsite.—San Leandro v. Le Breton, 72 Cal. 175, 13 Pac. 405.

[f] Filing and recording of map is but offer of dedication of streets and highways delineated incomplete until accepted by user or formal act.—Wolfskill v. Los Angeles, 86 Cal. 412, 24 Pac. 1094.

[g] In order to constitute a dedication for a public highway, there must be an acceptance by the public.—City of Monterey v. Malarin, 99 Cal. 290, 33 Pac. 840.

[h] Where the owner of land in a city offered to dedicate the same, but the city did nothing for twenty years to show an acceptance, when it commenced suit to establish title to the land, no dedication took place.—City of Anaheim v. Langenberger, 134 Cal. 608, 66 Pac. 855.

[i] Conveyance of land within the corporate limits of a town, by deed describing the land as bounded by the lines of certain streets, if projected, and as being the northwest quarter of a certain block, as laid down on the official map of said town, together with five years' use of the projected streets by the public, constitutes a complete dedication of the streets to public use, without a formal acceptance.—City of Eureka v. Croghan, 19 Pac. 485.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 37. —— Intervening Private Rights.

[a] Where the owner of land platted a town thereon, and recorded the plat, and subsequently conveyed a tract of the land embracing part of one of the streets, there is no valid dedication, in absence of an acceptance by the public.—Hayward v. Manzer, 70 Cal. 476, 13 Pac. 141.

§ 38. Authority to Accept.

[b] Common council is proper body to accept dedication of street.—Eureka v. Armstrong, 83 Cal. 625, 22 Pac. 928; affirmed in (1890) 23 Pac. 1085.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 39. Time for Acceptance.

[a] Time, though often a material ingredient in the evidence, is not an indispensable ingredient in the act of dedication. If the soil be accepted and used by the public in the manner intended by the owner the dedication is complete, precluding the owner and all claiming in his right from asserting any ownership inconsistent with such use.—Harding v. Jasper, 14 Cal. 642.

[e] Where the owners of a tract of land made and recorded a map of the tract, by which it was subdivided and laid out in streets and lots, and marked the location of the streets upon the ground, and united in a deed to the county by which they conveyed the roads so laid out, upon the express consideration that the county should "accept, declare, duly establish, and use the same as public highways," and the terms were never accepted or complied with until after the lapse of ten years and after the offer had been effectually revoked, a dedication of the land to the public as a highway is not shown. Forsyth v. Dunnagan, 94 Cal. 438, 29 Pac. 770.

[f] The owner of a tract of land caused it to be surveyed and platted. Part of one of the streets marked on the plat was never opened or used as a public street, and for more than twenty years the owner had a barn and shed on it. Subsequently a city ordinance was passed directing the street commissioners to command possession of the part so occupied. Held, that there was not a sufficient acceptance to make a valid dedication.—People v. Reed, 20 Pac. 708.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 40. Sufficiency—Legislative Acts, Ordinances and Resolutions.

[a] An act of the legislature, ratifying and confirming a void ordinance of a municipality providing for laying out public squares on pueblo lands within its limits, and a void order made by the municipal authorities adopting a plan, survey, and map of such public squares, reported by commissioners appointed for that purpose, operate as a selection and dedication of the squares to public use, and no other or further acceptance by the public is needed in order to make the dedication complete.—Hoadley v. City and County of San Francisco, 50 Cal. 265.

[b] Dedication of pueblo lands as public square made by San Francisco prior to 1864 was perfected by act of Congress of that year. People v. Holladay, 68 Cal. 444, 9 Pac. 655.

[c] Act of March 11, 1858, ratifying and confirming Ordinances 822 and 845 of the common council of the city of San Francisco, providing for laying out public squares on pueblo lands within its limits, and the order made by the municipal authorities adopting them, operated as a selection and dedication to the public use of such squares, and no other further acceptance by the public than was afforded by the act was needed in order to make the dedication complete.—Hoadley v. City and County of San Francisco, 70 Cal. 320, 12 Pac. 125.

[d] An ordinance by the city council declaring that certain land, alleged to have been dedicated by the owner for a street, "be, and the same is hereby, dedicated and set apart to public use as a public street," without referring to the owner or his alleged dedication, is not an acceptance thereof.—People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 70, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22, 22 Pac. 474.

[e] General order of council accepting all dedicated streets is sufficient acceptance though it does not name any street.—Eureka v. Armstrong, 83 Cal. 625, 22 Pac. 928, 23 Pac. 1085.

[f] Acceptance of one or more streets shown upon recorded map is not acceptance of all or any other of those delineated.—Wolfskill v. Los Angeles, 86 Cal. 412, 24 Pac. 1094.

[g] A city ordinance adopting an official map of the city in which a certain street is clearly marked out and defined through land owned by the city is sufficient evidence of the dedication of such street as a public highway, in the absence of a contrary showing, though it was not actually constructed and made ready for travel at the time.—People v. Beaudry, 91 Cal. 213, 27 Pac. 610.

§ 41. —— Maps or Plats, and Recognition Thereof.

[a] The owner of a city lot divided a portion of it into smaller lots, bounded at one end by a street, and leaving at the other an alleyway ten feet wide, upon which all the lots abutted, and conveyed said lots to different persons, including in each deed the right of way over the alley, which was a cul-de-sac eighty-seven feet long, and opening on a street. For about twenty years the alley was used by the owners of the lots and their employees, and persons visiting them. The alley was marked on the map of the city engineer, but not on the official map of the city. Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to establish an acceptance of a dedication, and consequently the alley was a private way, and not a public highway.—Stallard v. Cushing, 76 Cal. 472, 18 Pac. 427.

§ 42. —— Compliance with Conditions.

[a] The resolution, pursuant to which plaintiff cemetery association conveyed a strip of land to defendant city, provided that the same be "granted for a public road and highway, on the condition that the fence be removed and reset on the line of the road, said work to be done at the expense of the city, and also that the street be graded at the city's expense." Defendant accepted the grant, removed the fence, and placed the street in a condition for travel, but no grading was done. Held, that defendant did not forfeit the grant because it did not grade the street when required to do so by plaintiff; but when it is apparent that defendant will not grade the street at its own expense, or at all, plaintiff may demand a reconveyance.—Los Angeles Cemetery Assn. v. City of Los Angeles, 95 Cal. 420, 30 Pac. 523.

§ 43. —— User by Public in General.

[a] The public use necessary to constitute an acceptance of a dedication must be of such duration that the public interest and private rights would be materially impaired if the dedication were revoked, and the use by the public discontinued.—San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541.

[b] Acceptance of dedication is generally established by use by public of the land for the purpose to which it had been dedicated. Until accepted, the dedication, whether made by deed or otherwise, may be revoked by the owner of the land.—San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541.

[d] Casual public user of uninclosed land by temporary license of owner, the same after as before alleged dedication, is not acceptance.—Eureka v. Croghan, 81 Cal. 527, 22 Pac. 693.

[e] The use of land as a street by the public, for a reasonable length of time, where the intention of the owner to dedicate is clearly shown, is sufficient to perfect the dedication, without any specific action by the municipal authorities, either by resolution or by repairs or improvements.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 463, 30 Pac. 591.

[f] User by the public of a strip of land as a street for four years is sufficient to show acceptance of a previous offer to dedicate the land for street purposes.—Los Angeles Cemetery Assn. v. City of Los Angeles, 32 Pac. 240.

§ 44. —— Occasional Use.

[a] Where there was no evidence of any act of acceptance of the park by the city, the mere occasional use of a portion of the grounds for picnics and other pleasure purposes, being consistent with private ownership, which was in fact exercised over the tract, cannot establish an acceptance of the park as such by the public, against a finding of "no dedication."—City of Los Angeles v. Kysor, 125 Cal. 463, 58 Pac. 90.

[b] Where a land owner petitioned county supervisors to declare a road over his land a highway, the facts that they did so, though without following the statutory requirements, and that the road was used and worked by the public for twenty-five years as a public highway, are sufficient to show an acceptance.—People v. Marin County, 103 Cal. 223, 37 Pac. 203.

§ 46. —— Acceptance or Use of Part of Property.

[a] User by public of part of width of dedicated street makes dedication complete at least to extent of such user.—Logan v. Rose, 88 Cal. 266, 26 Pac. 106.

D. REVOCATION AND ESTOPPEL.

GROUNDS, § 47.
REVOCATION BEFORE ACCEPTANCE, § 48.
—— EFFECT, § 49.
REVOCATION AFTER ACCEPTANCE, § 50.
ESTOPPEL TO CLAIM DEDICATED PROPERTY, § 51.
ESTOPPEL TO DENY DEDICATION, § 52.

§ 47. Grounds.

[a] Where a person dedicates land for a public highway, he cannot afterward reclaim the same by showing that he was induced to make such dedication by the promise of a neighbor to give him the use of other lands, and that he had ceased to use such lands.—McKenzie v. Gilmore, 33 Pac. 262.

§ 48. Revocation Before Acceptance.

[a] A statute dedicating to a city a portion of the navigable waters of the harbor for the purpose of deepening and improving them does not, per se, operate as a dedication or surrender. It contains an offer of dedication, which only becomes complete upon its acceptance by the city and the completion of the improvements. There being no acceptance, the state can withdraw the offer in whole or in part.—People v. Williams, 64 Cal. 498, 2 Pac. 393.

[b] Where the owner of land has platted a town, and has recorded the plat, a subsequent conveyance of a tract of the land embracing part of one of the streets revokes the dedication of such street, if made before the dedication has been accepted.—Hayward v. Manzer, 70 Cal. 476, 13 Pac. 141.

[c] Owner may withdraw offer of dedication at any time before it accepted.—People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 78, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22-a, 22 Pac. 474.

[e] Offer to dedicate is revoked by sale of property before acceptance of dedication.—Phillips v. Day, 82 Cal. 29, 22 Pac. 976.

[f] Where the owner of land dedicated a part as an avenue, and it was accepted and used, not only by defendant, but by the public, a deed to plaintiff conveying said avenue could not operate as a revocation of the dedication.—Brown v. Stark, 83 Cal. 636, 24 Pac. 162.

[g] Dedication of street is not revoked by failure to include it in deed in which its mention was not necessary.—People v. Hibernia etc. Soc., 84 Cal. 637, 24 Pac. 295.

[h] A deed of the entire block by the owner, describing it by metes and bounds, without reference to the alleged street delineated on the plat; and conveying it as part of the land sold, operates as a revocation of the offer to dedicate.—Schmitt v. City and County of San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

[i] The drawing of side lines through a block in a plat of land, indicating that it may be intended for a street, but not designating it by name as such, is merely an offer to dedicate; and where the land so designated is not a continuation of any existing street, and has not been accepted or used by the public, and no one has acted on the offer by purchasing lots on the faith of the delineation of the land as a street, the owner may revoke the offer.—Schmitt v. City and County of San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

[j] Where the dedication of a street or part of a street has not been accepted, or the property used by the public, it is purely a question of estoppel in pais whether it can be revoked or not. If no one has acted upon the offer in such a mode as to be injured by the revocation the owner may revoke the dedication, even though it be an actual dedication, and not a mere offer.—Schmitt v. San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

[k] Offer to dedicate land may be revoked by the owner at any time before it has been accepted by the public.—People ex rel. Howland v. Dreher, 101 Cal. 271, 35 Pac. 867.

[n] The owner of a tract of land caused it to be surveyed and platted. Part of one of the streets marked on the plat was never opened or used as a public street, and for more than twenty years the owner had a barn and shed on it. Subsequently a city ordinance was passed directing the street commissioners to command possession of the part so occupied. Held that, if there had been a dedication, it was revoked before acceptance.—People v. Reed, 20 Pac. 708.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 49. —— Effect.

[a] The fact that, after the revocation of an offer to dedicate a street, the city attempted to accept the offer by delineating the street on the official city maps, is immaterial, since, after the revocation of the offer, the land became private property.—Schmitt v. City and County of San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

[a] Grantor cannot so sell or dispose of dedicated property as to alter or defeat dedication.—Breed v. Cunningham, 2 Cal. 361.

[b] Dedication cannot be revoked after acceptance and public user.—Brown v. Stark, 83 Cal. 642, 24 Pac. 162; People v. Sperry, 116 Cal. 595, 48 Pac. 723.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 489; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2922-2925, §§ 77, 78.

§ 51. Estoppel to Claim Dedicated Property.

[a] City is not estopped to claim public square was dedicated to public by unauthorized act of its officers by assessing it for taxation.—San Leandro v. Le Breton, 72 Cal. 177, 13 Pac. 405.

[b] General public are not estopped from claiming that land has been dedicated as a public street by the act or omission of the city assessor in assessing the land to the dedicator and his successors in interest.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 453, 30 Pac. 591.

[c] A conveyance by a municipality included a portion of a street which was not being used as such; and the grantee and his successors took possession, and paid taxes thereon, and inclosed it with a substantial fence. Held, that the city was not equitably estopped from claiming the land as a street. City of Eureka v. McKay & Co., 123 Cal. 666, 56 Pac. 439.

[a] As a dedication is a conclusion of fact to be drawn from the circumstances of each case, a corporation as well as an individual may be bound by its acts so as to be estopped from disputing or denying the fact of dedication, and no formal act of dedication passed by its proper officers is necessary.—Sussman v. County of San Luis Obispo, 126 Cal. 536, 59 Pac. 24.

[b] Purchaser of land filing maps in county recorder's office designating certain portions of land surveyed as streets is estopped to deny their dedication as such.—King v. Dugan, 88 Pac. 925.

PRESUMPTION AS TO ACCEPTANCE, § 54.
BURDEN OF PROOF, § 55.
ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE, § 56.
—— TO SHOW DONOR'S INTENTION, § 57.
WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY, § 58.
QUESTIONS FOR JURY, § 59.

§ 53. Presumption as to Dedication.

[a] Dedication will be inferred where the necessary elements are manifest—namely, an intention by the owner, clearly indicated by his words or acts, to dedicate to public use, and an acceptance by the public, as shown by its use for the purpose for which the dedication was made.—People v. Blake, 60 Cal. 497.

[b] Dedication of road as public highway is conclusion of fact to be drawn from all the circumstances of each particular case, and cannot be presumed without evidence of an unequivocal intention on the part of the owner to make the dedication.—Quinn v. Anderson, 70 Cal. 454, 11 Pac. 746.

[c] In absence of any statute the common-law rule as to the presumption of a dedication of land as a public highway by adverse user applies in this state.—Schwardtle v. Placer Co., 108 Cal. 589, 41 Pac. 448.

[d] Where claim of public rests upon long-continued, adverse use, that use for the period of time for the acquisition of title to land by adverse possession establishes against the owner the conclusive presumption of consent, and so of dedication. It affords the conclusive presumption of knowledge and acquiescence, and, at the same time, negatives the idea of a mere license.—Schwerdtle v. Placer Co., 108 Cal. 589, 41 Pac. 448.

[e] Dedication is presumed from long-continued use as road or highway.—Hartley v. Vermillion, 141 Cal. 349, 74 Pac. 987.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 54. Presumption as to Acceptance.

[a] Where a land owner files a map of a number of blocks owned by him, on which one block is marked "Central Park," circulates copies of the map, and states in an advertisement, and announces through an auctioneer, while selling the adjacent blocks, that such a block is reserved for a park, actual acceptance is not requisite to complete the dedication, since acceptance will be presumed from the benefit arising from the dedication. Archer v. Salinas City, 93 Cal. 43, 28 Pac. 839, 16 L. R. A. 145; distinguishing People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 70, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22, 22 Pac. 474.

[b] An acceptance of an offer to dedicate will be presumed or implied in many cases; yet a finding of fact that there never was an acceptance will rarely be set aside by an appellate court, where the claim of acceptance is based upon presumption or implication alone.—City of Los Angeles v. Kysor, 125 Cal. 463, 58 Pac. 90.

Dedication of lands to a public use, acceptance, when inferable: 58 Am. Rep. 146, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 475, 476; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2929, 2930, § 81.

§ 55. Burden of Proof.

[a] Burden of proof is on public authorities to show that land in possession of another has been dedicated as a street, to justify removal of buildings.—Tate v. Sacramento, 50 Cal. 242.

[a] Where land was used in San Francisco as a cemetery, and was so marked upon the Van Ness map, and where the legislature subsequently authorized the removal of the dead bodies and the dedication of the land to such public use as the board might deem proper, and the board undertook to dedicate it as a park, held, that the map was not evidence tending to prove a dedication as a public park.—San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541.

[b] In an action against Sonoma county to recover land claimed by the county to have been dedicated to public use, the plaintiffs offered to prove that C. had been employed by the board of supervisors to look after the fences and keep them in repair, and was so engaged at the commencement of the action, and that, in performing this service, he was acting as the servant of the county, employed for that purpose. Held, that the evidence was admissible, as tending to establish the possession of the county.—Barry v. Sonoma County, 43 Cal. 217.

[e] Evidence of an agreement between a railroad company and its grantor that part of the land conveyed should be used as a public highway is not inadmissible as contradictory of the instrument of conveyance, where it is not offered for such purpose, but to show the intention of the company to dedicate the road to the public.—People v. Eel River etc. R. Co., 98 Cal. 665, 33 Pac. 726.

[f] Offer to dedicate may be shown by deeds of owners referring for description to map made by agent.—Koshland v. Spring, 116 Cal. 696, 48 Pac. 58.

[g] In an action to restrain defendant from entering upon plaintiff's land to open a highway by virtue of a clause in plaintiff's deed reserving a certain strip for a right of way for ditch and road purposes, evidence that the grantor of plaintiff's grantor had made a reservation similar to that in plaintiff's deed in the sale of land to witness, and evidence of what he had told witness concerning it, is incompetent to show dedication, where such witness bought his land a year before plaintiff's grantor made his purchase. Taft v. Tarpey, 125 Cal. 376, 58 Pac. 24.

[h] While it is competent to prove the use made of the road, and the extent of the use or travel over the road, for the purpose of showing a dedication or adverse user of the road under a claim of right, it is not competent to prove such user by the declarations of third parties.—Shepherd v. Turner, 129 Cal. 530, 62 Pac. 106.

§ 57. —— To Show Donor's Intention.

[a] Court properly refused to allow the owner of the land to state whether she intended to dedicate any street when she sold the lots.—Brown v. Stark, 83 Cal. 636, 24 Pac. 162.

[a] Stronger proof of dedication is required in cases of roads in country than in cases of streets or lands in a town or city.—Harding v. Jasper, 14 Cal. 642.

[b] Dedication is a conclusion of fact to be drawn by the jury from the circumstances of each case. And the quantum and kind of evidence of the intention to dedicate depends somewhat on the peculiar circumstances of the country.—Harding v. Jasper, 14 Cal. 642.

[c] Stronger evidence is required to establish dedication of neighborhood or timber road than of a thoroughfare, and in case of a county road than of a street in a town or city. Quinn v. Anderson, 70 Cal. 454, 11 Pac. 746.

[d] Finding herein that there had been no dedication was supported by the evidence.—Spaulding v. Bradley, 79 Cal. 449, 22 Pac. 47.

[f] Where one holds land by a deed absolute, and sells part thereof with reference to a recorded plat with streets marked upon it, parol evidence that he took the land subject to a trust, but not showing the nature thereof, is insufficient to rebut the presumption that he had authority to thus dedicate the streets to the public.—Logan v. Rose, 88 Cal. 263, 26 Pac. 106.

[g] Where the complaint alleges and the court finds the alley dedicated extends along the entire rear or south line of plaintiff's lot, and there is a substantial conflict in the evidence as to whether the alley extended only from the street to the rear of the lot, or extended across the entire rear of the lot, and there is evidence sufficient to show that the alley in rear of the lot was fenced on the south side of the lot by the original owner of the land, and had been used as a passageway by the persons living along it, the finding will not be disturbed, although the testimony in the case is more than usually indefinite and unsatisfactory as to dates.—Currier v. Howes, 103 Cal. 431, 37 Pac. 521.

[h] Testimony of owner of land as to his intention not to dedicate it to public use is relevant, but not conclusive, evidence upon the subject of his actual purpose.—Helm v. McClure, 107 Cal. 199, 40 Pac. 437.

[i] Evidence considered and held sufficient to support findings that street was not dedicated to the public.—People v. Sperry, 116 Cal. 594, 595, 48 Pac. 723.

[j] Sale including dedicated streets before their acceptance is evidence of intent to revoke offer of dedication.—Sacramento v. Clunie, 120 Cal. 31, 32, 52 Pac. 44.

[k] The dedication of a public street is a question of intent, and the acts of the owner of property are sufficient to prove a dedication only when they are evincive of such intent or are such as to estop him from denying that such was his intent.—City of Eureka v. McKay, 123 Cal. 666, 56 Pac. 439.

[l] Evidence showing that since the opening by adjoining owners of a strip used as a passageway, it was cultivated by the owners almost every year, that fruit and other trees were placed thereon by them, that taxes were paid by them to the city upon the land, that on an assessment map of another street the strip was shown to be private land, and not a street, and was assessed to the owners thereof, and that the strip had never been improved, graded, or accepted as a street by the public authorities, is wholly insufficient to support a finding that the strip was dedicated or abandoned to the public as a street. Niles v. City of Los Angeles, 125 Cal. 572, 58 Pac. 190.

§ 59. Questions for Jury.

[a] Dedication is question of fact to be drawn from circumstances of each particular case.—People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 77, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22-n, 22 Pac. 474.

[b] Dedication is ultimate fact dependent upon establishment of other facts, and is to be found from the evidence presented to the court.—Archer v. Salinas City, 93 Cal. 43, 28 Pac. 839.

[c] Dedication is a question of fact to be determined by a jury, or by the court sitting as such.—People ex rel. Howland v. Dreher, 101 Cal. 271, 35 Pac. 867.

[d] Whether a dedication of land for highway purposes has occurred in any instance is a conclusion of fact to be drawn from the circumstances of the particular case.—Helm v. McClure, 107 Cal. 199, 40 Pac. 437.

[e] Whether owner has made offer of dedication of other streets than those by which lots are bounded is question of fact.—Koshland v. Springs, 116 Cal. 697, 698, 48 Pac. 58.

[f] The dedication in pais of a public park, or of land to any public use, can never be a matter of law. The owner's intention is the all-important element in creating a dedication, and is a question of fact; and a finding of "no dedication" cannot be disturbed where the evidence is conflicting, though the preponderance of the evidence may be in favor of the dedication.—City of Los Angeles v. Kysor, 125 Cal. 463, 58 Pac. 90.

[g] The record of a map, with the designation of streets and parks thereon, and the sale of lots by such map, whatever effect it may have upon the individual rights of the lot owners, cannot conclusively establish the dedication of a park designated thereon to public use; but, treating it as an offer of dedication thereof, a finding of "no dedication" will be sustained, where no public acceptance of the offer is established, and the evidence tends to show a revocation of the offer.—City of Los Angeles v. Kysor, 125 Cal. 463, 58 Pac. 90.

§ 60. In General.

[a] Land purchased by a county, on which is erected a hospital, as provided by Political Code, section 4046, subdivision 9, authorizing counties to build hospitals and "other public buildings," is dedicated to a public use, though, under the succeeding subdivision, the land may be sold; and, while owned by the county, the statute of limitations does not run in favor of one taking possession of it. § 61. Construction of Dedication as to Use.

[a] In ejectment by a city for land claimed to have been dedicated as a levee and street, a finding that land was dedicated as "a public levee" is supported by evidence of dedication as a "public landing"; the word "levee," as applied to land such as that in question along a navigable stream, having the same meaning as "landing."—City of Napa v. Howland, 87 Cal. 84, 25 Pac. 247.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 62. Persons Entitled to Benefit of Dedication.

[a] State has no proprietary interest in the streets of a city dedicated to the public use, and, when it grants a private corporation an easement over the same not common to the public, it merely grants, in its sovereign capacity, a franchise, and not a proprietary interest therein.—City and County of San Francisco v. Spring Valley Waterworks, 48 Cal. 493.

[b] A common-law dedication operates against the dedicator by estoppel, and this estoppel may be invoked by or on behalf of the public at large as well as by the municipal authorities of a city.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 463, 34 Pac. 591.

[c] A street when dedicated becomes the property of the whole state, which by its legislature can deal with or dispose of it at its pleasure, and may revoke it in part or in whole.—City and County of San Francisco v. Burr, 108 Cal. 460, 41 Pac. 482.

[d] Private corporation known as "Home for Inebriates" without any elements of public agency had no right to lot dedicated by San Francisco for a home for inebriates.—Home for Inebriates v. San Francisco, 119 Cal. 536, 51 Pac. 950.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2977, 2978, § 113.

§ 63. Extent of Dedication.

[a] Offer to dedicate street is construed to extend to whole block, as it is not presumed that owner intended to make cul de sac.—Eureka v. Armstrong, 83 Cal. 625, 22 Pac. 928; affirmed in (1890) 23 Pac. 1085.

§ 64. Title Acquired.

[a] Dedication by a city of one of its water lots to the public, to be used as a free dock, is merely the grant of an easement; and the fee of the soil and the right of entry and possession remain in the city, and the public takes no estate.—City and County of San Francisco v. Calderwood, 31 Cal. 585, 91 Am. Dec. 542.

[b] Where a city lays out and dedicates public squares on the pueblo lands within its limits, and the dedication is ratified by an act of the legislature, and Congress afterward relinquishes to the city the title of the United States to the lands, for the uses and purposes mentioned in the ratifying act, the act of Congress confirms the dedication, and makes it operative on the legal title, as well as on such title as the city held prior to the act of Congress.—Hoadley v. City and County of San Francisco, 50 Cal. 265.

[c] Van Ness ordinance granted only such title to possessors as the city was permitted by Congress and the state to convey; and it did not operate as a contract of the city with the possessors of land reserved as a public square, and so create an obligation beyond legislative impairment. Compensation was not required to be made to adverse possessors of part of such square; nor could title be acquired thereto by adverse possession.—Holladay v. San Francisco, 124 Cal. 352, 57 Pac. 146.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 65. Use of Property.

[a] Dedication of street to public use authorizes any ordinary use for street purposes such as street-cars.—Finch v. Riverside etc. Co., 87 Cal. 398.

[b] The dedication of a country highway along the shore of navigable waters does not carry with it the right to use it as a public landing place to discharge and receive freight and passengers.—California Nav. etc. Co. v. Union Transp. Co., 126 Cal. 433, 58 Pac. 936, 46 L. R. A. 825.

§ 66. —— Change of Use.

[a] Legislature may, after dedication, change conditions upon which it was made from time to time.—Harter v. San Jose, 141 Cal. 663, 75 Pac. 344.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2959-2961, § 100.

§ 67. Abandonment or Nonuser.

[a] Recognition by legislature of prior official map not containing dedicated street is not a rejection or discontinuance of it.—People v. Hibernia etc. Soc., 84 Cal. 637, 638, 24 Pac. 295.

[b] Where a land owner files a map of a number of blocks owned by him, on which one block is marked "Central Park," circulates copies of the map, and states in an advertisement, and announces through an auctioneer, while selling the adjacent blocks, that such a block is reserved for a park, failure of the public to use the dedicated land for the purpose intended does not impair the dedication, nor authorize the prior owner to resume possession.—Archer v. City of Salinas City, 93 Cal. 43, 28 Pac. 839, 16 L. R. A. 145.

[c] Grantees of lots may lose or surrender the easement created for them, and the public can also abandon or discontinue a highway after its dedication has become complete.—City and County of San Francisco v. Burr, 108 Cal. 460, 41 Pac. 482.

[d] A city cannot abandon a street which has been dedicated to, and accepted by, the public, by adopting a map on which the street is not shown.—City of Eureka v. Gates, 137 Cal. 89, 69 Pac. 850.

§ 1. Nature of Conveyance.

[a] A deed is not merely evidence of a gift or other grant, but is the gift or grant itself, and ipso facto operates to transfer the title of the property described to the grantee.—Hamilton v. Hubbard, 134 Cal. 603, 65 Pac. 321, judgment affirmed 66 Pac. 860.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 11-15, §§ 1-5.

§ 2. Property Subject to Conveyance.

[a] Thing granted must have actual or potential existence.—Mitchell v. Amador Canal etc. Co., 75 Cal. 488, 17 Pac. 246.

[b] The patentees of certain land, with their husbands, conveyed it, reserving a certain number of square miles, to be afterward located and selected by the grantors. The husband of one of the patentees gave a power of attorney to convey any portion of the lands, and under such power a conveyance was made, under which plaintiff in ejectment claimed title. No selection was made by the grantors nor by the husband, who gave the power of attorney. Held insufficient to show title or right to possession in plaintiff, as the power of attorney did not authorize the location and selection of the portion reserved to the grantors, and the conveyance of a tract of land which had not been located and selected, and which was greater in extent than that reserved, could not operate as a selection of any portion of the tract.—Butler v. Gosling, 130 Cal. 422, 62 Pac. 596.

§ 4. Conveyances Distinguished from Other Transactions—Deed or Executory Contract.

[a] An instrument setting forth that A "has this day sold" a piece of land to B for a sum of money then paid, and a further consideration agreed to be paid; and further providing that, on payment of said further agreed consideration, the said A "binds himself, his heirs, etc., to make a general warranty deed of said land free and clear from all persons claiming through or under him," held, to be an executory contract for a deed, and not a present conveyance.—Ellis v. Jeans, Cal. 409.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 521; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 15-19, § 6.

§ 5. —— Distinction Between Sealed and Unsealed Instruments.

[a] The difference between instruments sealed and unsealed is, at this day, a mere unmeaning and arbitrary distinction made by technical law, unsustained by reason.—Ortman v. Dixon, 13 Cal. 33.

§ 6. Time of Taking Effect.

[a] A conveyance of a freehold to commence in futuro is void.—Hawes v. Stebbins, 49 Cal. 369.

Deeds to take effect after grantor's death: 49 Am. St. Rep. 219, note. See, also, 16 Cent. Dig., cols, 15, § 5; cols. 23-25, § 16.

§ 7. Title or Interest of Grantor—Necessity of Title in Grantor.

[a] Bare right of possession, without claim or color of title, cannot be transferred by deed, nor otherwise than by the former possessor yielding up or abandoning the possession and permitting a new possession to be taken by another.—Daubenbiss v. White, 31 Pac. 360.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 527, 528; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 21-25, §§ 13-18.

§ 8. —— Conveyance by Heir Before Death of Ancestor.

[a] Conveyance by heir-apparent made before death of ancestor does not convey legal title.—Ryder, Estate of, 119 Cal. 370, 74 Pac. 993.

[b] Deed held to have passed no title because not naming grantee capable of taking. Rixford v. Ziegler, 88 Pac. 1092.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Deeds to persons not in being: 84 Am. St. Rep. 236, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 527, 528; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 25, 26, §§ 19-22.

§ 10. —— Necessity for Grantees in Esse.

[a] Deed is void for want of competent parties where, at the time of the sale, there was no person, natural or artificial, in esse capable of taking it.—Phelan v. San Francisco, 6 Cal. 531.

[b] A deed to a dead man and his heirs is a nullity, for "heirs" is not a word of purchase, but limits and defines what estate passes to the grantee.—Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 363, 73 Am. Dec. 543.

[c] A deed to J. C. B., when there is no such person in existence, does not transfer title of the property to any one.—Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609.

[a] It is essential to validity of deed that there should be legal capacity in the grantor to convey and in the grantee to receive; and, if either be wanting, the instrument is invalid.—Suñol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 254.

[b] To set aside a deed on the ground of insanity of the grantor, it is sufficient to prove that he was incapacitated from a rational care of his property by reason of mental delusion at the time of its execution. Crowther v. Rowlandson, 27 Cal. 376.

[c] Imposition or undue influence will be inferred when consideration of deed from one in great weakness of mind is grossly inadequate.—Moore v. Moore, 56 Cal. 89.

[d] A party under an insane delusion may execute an instrument if done with understanding, and not as result of insanity.—Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414.

[e] Deed of gift of one's entire property made while in condition of great mental weakness without understanding nature and effect of his act will be set aside.—Richards v. Donner, 72 Cal. 210, 13 Pac. 584.

[f] Where the court finds that the grantor of a deed was, at the time, of unsound mind, and incapable of making a deed, and that the deed was without consideration, a judgment for cancellation will be sustained, though the court also found that there was no unfair advantage taken, or undue influence used.—Maggini v. Pezzoni, 76 Cal. 631, 18 Pac. 687.

[g] Facts examined and held to sustain judgment canceling deeds on ground of mental incapacity and undue influence.—Moore v. Moore, 81 Cal. 195, 22 Pac. 589.

[h] A person of perfect mental capacity, acting freely and voluntarily, who is sick with mortal illness, is as competent to make a voluntary conveyance of his property as when in perfect health, even though such conveyance might seem unreasonable, unjust, and unnatural.—Carty v. Connolly, 91 Cal. 15, 27 Pac. 599.

[i] After executing the conveyance, the grantor engaged in business for eleven years before he was committed to an asylum. During such period he was rash in some of his speculations, erratic in conduct, and irascible in temper. Held not sufficient to establish the insanity of the grantor at the time of the conveyance.—Falk v. Wittram, 120 Cal. 479, 52 Pac. 707.

[a] Deed imports consideration.—McDonald v. McCoy, 121 Cal. 70, 53 Pac. 421.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Consideration necessary to sustain covenant to stand seised: 8 Am. Dec. 366, note.

§ 13. —— Necessity.

[a] Nothing passes under a deed without consideration, the grantor having previously executed and delivered a deed of the property to another.—Stephenson v. Deuel, 125 Cal. 656, 28 Am. St. Rep. 151-n, 58 Pac. 258.

[b] Under the express provisions of Civil Code, section 1040, a voluntary transfer of property is valid, though there is no consideration.—Driscoll v. Driscoll, 143 Cal. 528, 77 Pac. 471.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 529; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 26-29, §§ 23-25.

§ 14. —— Sufficiency and Adequacy in General.

[a] Term "valuable consideration," as used in the twenty-sixth section of the conveyancing act, means a pecuniary consideration, or its equivalent, as distinguished from a good consideration, and has no reference to the adequacy of the price to the value of the property conveyed.—Clark v. Troy, 20 Cal. 219.

[b] P, while a visitor in the house of D's mother, received a severe paralytic stroke, and, while suffering from it, and believing that he was in imminent danger of death, deeded his property to D on the representation of W, an intimate friend of D's family, that the deed would be the same as a will, and more convenient. After his recovery, P requested a reconveyance, tendering a sum to cover expenses, and D refused. There was no valuable consideration. Held, that P was entitled to the property.—Richards v. Donner, 72 Cal. 207, 13 Pac. 584.

[c] Finding that the grantees named in a deed paid no consideration for the transfer of the premises is not sustained by the evidence if it appears that they paid for it by becoming sureties on a note for more than one thousand dollars. This is a valuable consideration, which is paid by executing the note, whether the grantees paid the money or not.—Grigsby v. Shwarz, 82 Cal. 278, 22 Pac. 1041.

grantor to a third party, is a valuable consideration for the conveyance.—Carty v. Connolly, 91 Cal. 15, 27 Pac. 599.

[e] Love and affection is a sufficient consideration for a deed from a husband to his wife.—Tillaux v. Tillaux, 115 Cal. 663, 47 Pac. 691.

[f] Love and affection is a good consideration for a conveyance of land by a husband to his wife, and will support the conveyance.—Springer v. Springer, 132 Cal. xviii, 64 Pac. 470.

[g] A deed conveying land to a city, reciting that the grantors and their assigns reserve "free access or right of way to or from any lots adjoining either line of" a certain street "to and over any wharf which may be upon said street," is supported by a valuable consideration.—Aden v. City of Vallejo, 139 Cal. 165, 72 Pac. 905.

[h] In the absence of any imputation of fraud, the amount of the consideration for a deed is immaterial.—Driscoll v. Driscoll, 143 Cal. 528, 77 Pac. 471.

[i] A deed executed in consideration of the grantee's promise to furnish support, etc., to the grantor for life, held based on a sufficient consideration.—Norris v. Lilly, 147 Cal. 754, 82 Pac. 425.

[j] Facts held to show consideration for a deed.—Clint v. Eureka Crude Oil Co. (Cal App.), 86 Pac. 817.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 15. Particular Modes of Conveyance.

[a] In United States conveyances by feoffment, fine, or common recovery are not in use, and no greater effect is given to a grant or a conveyance, by bargain and sale, or lease and release, unaccompanied with covenants of warranty, than at the common law under the statute of uses.—Clark v. Baker, 14 Cal. 612, 76 Am. Dec. 449.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 16. —— Release.

[a] Unless there be a prior estate and possession in a releasee, a release cannot take effect.—Branham v. City of San Jose, 24 Cal. 585.

[b] The words in a deed, "grant, bargain, sell, and convey," operate, not merely to release, but to transfer, any interest which the grantor had in the granted premises, at the date of the deed.—Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 175.

[c] Covenant to give up all right and title to second story of a building and stairway operates as a conveyance.—Thompson v. McKay, 41 Cal. 221.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 525; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 46, 47, §§ 43, 44.

§ 17. —— Assignment of Deed.

[a] Assignment of a deed does not convey title.—Dupont v. Wetherman, 10 Cal. 354, 70 Am. Dec. 725.

§ 18. —— Quitclaim.

[a] Conveyance or right, title and interest of grantor only amounts to a quitclaim.—Gee v. Moore, 14 Cal. 472.

[b] The operative words of release in a simple quitclaim deed are "remise, release, and quitclaim." Where the words "bargain, sell, and quitclaim" are employed they operate not merely to release, but to transfer any interest which the grantor possesses at the execution of the deed.—Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150, 81 Am. Dec. 108.

[c] Words "release and forever quitclaim" are sufficient to constitute a quitclaim deed. Wholey v. Cavanaugh, 88 Cal. 135, 25 Pac. 1112.

all, plaintiff may demand a reconveyance.—Los Angeles Cemetery Assn. v. City of Los Angeles, 95 Cal. 420, 30 Pac. 523.

§ 43. —— User by Public in General.

[a] The public use necessary to constitute an acceptance of a dedication must be of such duration that the public interest and private rights would be materially impaired if the dedication were revoked, and the use by the public discontinued.—San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541.

[b] Acceptance of dedication is generally established by use by public of the land for the purpose to which it had been dedicated. Until accepted, the dedication, whether made by deed or otherwise, may be revoked by the owner of the land.—San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541.

[c] Use of land by public for purpose to which it was dedicated is sufficient to show an acceptance.—People v. Davidson, 79 Cal. 166, 21 Pac. 538; People v. O'Keefe, 79 Cal. 171, 21 Pac. 539; Hall v. Kauffman, 106 Cal. 451, 39 Pac. 756.

[d] Casual public user of uninclosed land by temporary license of owner, the same after as before alleged dedication, is not acceptance.—Eureka v. Croghan, 81 Cal. 527, 22 Pac. 693.

[e] The use of land as a street by the public, for a reasonable length of time, where the intention of the owner to dedicate is clearly shown, is sufficient to perfect the dedication, without any specific action by the municipal authorities, either by resolution or by repairs or improvements.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 463, 30 Pac. 591.

[f] User by the public of a strip of land as a street for four years is sufficient to show acceptance of a previous offer to dedicate the land for street purposes.—Los Angeles Cemetery Assn. v. City of Los Angeles, 32 Pac. 240.

§ 44. —— Occasional Use.

[a] Where there was no evidence of any act of acceptance of the park by the city, the mere occasional use of a portion of the grounds for picnics and other pleasure purposes, being consistent with private ownership, which was in fact exercised over the tract, cannot establish an acceptance of the park as such by the public, against a finding of "no dedication."—City of Los Angeles v. Kysor, 125 Cal. 463, 58 Pac. 90.

[b] Where a land owner petitioned county supervisors to declare a road over his land a highway, the facts that they did so, though without following the statutory requirements, and that the road was used and worked by the public for twenty-five years as a public highway, are sufficient to show an acceptance.—People v. Marin County, 103 Cal. 223, 37 Pac. 203.

§ 46. —— Acceptance or Use of Part of Property.

[a] User by public of part of width of dedicated street makes dedication complete at least to extent of such user.—Logan v. Rose, 88 Cal. 266, 26 Pac. 106.

D. REVOCATION AND ESTOPPEL.

GROUNDS, § 47.
REVOCATION BEFORE ACCEPTANCE, § 48.
—— EFFECT, § 49.
REVOCATION AFTER ACCEPTANCE, § 50.
ESTOPPEL TO CLAIM DEDICATED PROPERTY, § 51.
ESTOPPEL TO DENY DEDICATION, § 52.

§ 47. Grounds.

[a] Where a person dedicates land for a public highway, he cannot afterward reclaim the same by showing that he was induced to make such dedication by the promise of a neighbor to give him the use of other lands, and that he had ceased to use such lands.—McKenzie v. Gilmore, 33 Pac. 262.

§ 48. Revocation Before Acceptance.

[a] A statute dedicating to a city a portion of the navigable waters of the harbor for the purpose of deepening and improving them does not, per se, operate as a dedication or surrender. It contains an offer of dedication, which only becomes complete upon its acceptance by the city and the completion of the improvements. There being no acceptance, the state can withdraw the offer in whole or in part.—People v. Williams, 64 Cal. 498, 2 Pac. 393.

[b] Where the owner of land has platted a town, and has recorded the plat, a subsequent conveyance of a tract of the land embracing part of one of the streets revokes the dedication of such street, if made before the dedication has been accepted.—Hayward v. Manzer, 70 Cal. 476, 13 Pac. 141.

[c] Owner may withdraw offer of dedication at any time before it accepted.—People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 78, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22-n, 22 Pac. 474.

[e] Offer to dedicate is revoked by sale of property before acceptance of dedication.—Phillips v. Day, 82 Cal. 29, 22 Pac. 976.

[f] Where the owner of land dedicated a part as an avenue, and it was accepted and used, not only by defendant, but by the public, a deed to plaintiff conveying said avenue could not operate as a revocation of the dedication.—Brown v. Stark, 83 Cal. 636, 24 Pac. 162.

[g] Dedication of street is not revoked by failure to include it in deed in which its mention was not necessary.—People v. Hibernia etc. Soc., 84 Cal. 637, 24 Pac. 295.

[h] A deed of the entire block by the owner, describing it by metes and bounds, without reference to the alleged street delineated on the plat; and conveying it as part of the land sold, operates as a revocation of the offer to dedicate.—Schmitt v. City and County of San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

[i] The drawing of side lines through a block in a plat of land, indicating that it may be intended for a street, but not designating it by name as such, is merely an offer to dedicate; and where the land so designated is not a continuation of any existing street, and has not been accepted or used by the public, and no one has acted on the offer by purchasing lots on the faith of the delineation of the land as a street, the owner may revoke the offer.—Schmitt v. City and County of San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

[j] Where the dedication of a street or part of a street has not been accepted, or the property used by the public, it is purely a question of estoppel in pais whether it can be revoked or not. If no one has acted upon the offer in such a mode as to be injured by the revocation the owner may revoke the dedication, even though it be an actual dedication, and not a mere offer.—Schmitt v. San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

[k] Offer to dedicate land may be revoked by the owner at any time before it has been accepted by the public.—People ex rel. Howland v. Dreher, 101 Cal. 271, 35 Pac. 867.

[n] The owner of a tract of land caused it to be surveyed and platted. Part of one of the streets marked on the plat was never opened or used as a public street, and for more than twenty years the owner had a barn and shed on it. Subsequently a city ordinance was passed directing the street commissioners to command possession of the part so occupied. Held that, if there had been a dedication, it was revoked before acceptance.—People v. Reed, 20 Pac. 708.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 49. —— Effect.

[a] The fact that, after the revocation of an offer to dedicate a street, the city attempted to accept the offer by delineating the street on the official city maps, is immaterial, since, after the revocation of the offer, the land became private property.—Schmitt v. City and County of San Francisco, 100 Cal. 302, 34 Pac. 961.

§ 50. Revocation After Acceptance.

[a] Grantor cannot so sell or dispose of dedicated property as to alter or defeat dedication.—Breed v. Cunningham, 2 Cal. 361.

[b] Dedication cannot be revoked after acceptance and public user.—Brown v. Stark, 83 Cal. 642, 24 Pac. 162; People v. Sperry, 116 Cal. 595, 48 Pac. 723.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 489; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2922-2925, §§ 77, 78.

§ 51. Estoppel to Claim Dedicated Property.

[a] City is not estopped to claim public square was dedicated to public by unauthorized act of its officers by assessing it for taxation.—San Leandro v. Le Breton, 72 Cal. 177, 13 Pac. 405.

[b] General public are not estopped from claiming that land has been dedicated as a public street by the act or omission of the city assessor in assessing the land to the dedicator and his successors in interest.—Smith v. City of San Luis Obispo, 95 Cal. 453, 30 Pac. 591.

[c] A conveyance by a municipality included a portion of a street which was not being used as such; and the grantee and his successors took possession, and paid taxes thereon, and inclosed it with a substantial fence. Held, that the city was not equitably estopped from claiming the land as a street. City of Eureka v. McKay & Co., 123 Cal. 666, 56 Pac. 439.

[a] As a dedication is a conclusion of fact to be drawn from the circumstances of each case, a corporation as well as an individual may be bound by its acts so as to be estopped from disputing or denying the fact of dedication, and no formal act of dedication passed by its proper officers is necessary.—Sussman v. County of San Luis Obispo, 126 Cal. 536, 59 Pac. 24.

[b] Purchaser of land filing maps in county recorder's office designating certain portions of land surveyed as streets is estopped to deny their dedication as such.—King v. Dugan, 88 Pac. 925.

—— TO SHOW DONOR'S INTENTION, § 57.
WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY, § 58.
QUESTIONS FOR JURY, § 59.

§ 53. Presumption as to Dedication.

[a] Dedication will be inferred where the necessary elements are manifest—namely, an intention by the owner, clearly indicated by his words or acts, to dedicate to public use, and an acceptance by the public, as shown by its use for the purpose for which the dedication was made.—People v. Blake, 60 Cal. 497.

[b] Dedication of road as public highway is conclusion of fact to be drawn from all the circumstances of each particular case, and cannot be presumed without evidence of an unequivocal intention on the part of the owner to make the dedication.—Quinn v. Anderson, 70 Cal. 454, 11 Pac. 746.

[c] In absence of any statute the common-law rule as to the presumption of a dedication of land as a public highway by adverse user applies in this state.—Schwardtle v. Placer Co., 108 Cal. 589, 41 Pac. 448.

[d] Where claim of public rests upon long-continued, adverse use, that use for the period of time for the acquisition of title to land by adverse possession establishes against the owner the conclusive presumption of consent, and so of dedication. It affords the conclusive presumption of knowledge and acquiescence, and, at the same time, negatives the idea of a mere license.—Schwerdtle v. Placer Co., 108 Cal. 589, 41 Pac. 448.

[e] Dedication is presumed from long-continued use as road or highway.—Hartley v. Vermillion, 141 Cal. 349, 74 Pac. 987.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 475; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2928, 2929, § 80.

§ 54. Presumption as to Acceptance.

[a] Where a land owner files a map of a number of blocks owned by him, on which one block is marked "Central Park," circulates copies of the map, and states in an advertisement, and announces through an auctioneer, while selling the adjacent blocks, that such a block is reserved for a park, actual acceptance is not requisite to complete the dedication, since acceptance will be presumed from the benefit arising from the dedication. Archer v. Salinas City, 93 Cal. 43, 28 Pac. 839, 16 L. R. A. 145; distinguishing People v. Reed, 81 Cal. 70, 15 Am. St. Rep. 22, 22 Pac. 474.

[b] An acceptance of an offer to dedicate will be presumed or implied in many cases; yet a finding of fact that there never was an acceptance will rarely be set aside by an appellate court, where the claim of acceptance is based upon presumption or implication alone.—City of Los Angeles v. Kysor, 125 Cal. 463, 58 Pac. 90.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Dedication of lands to a public use, acceptance, when inferable: 58 Am. Rep. 146, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 475, 476; 15 Cent. Dig., cols. 2929, 2930, § 81.

§ 55. Burden of Proof.

[a] Burden of proof is on public authorities to show that land in possession of another has been dedicated as a street, to justify removal of buildings.—Tate v. Sacramento, 50 Cal. 242.

[a] Where land was used in San Francisco as a cemetery, and was so marked upon the Van Ness map, and where the legislature subsequently authorized the removal of the dead bodies and the dedication of the land to such public use as the board might deem proper, and the board undertook to dedicate it as a park, held, that the map was not evidence tending to prove a dedication as a public park.—San Francisco v. Canavan, 42 Cal. 541.

[b] In an action against Sonoma county to recover land claimed by the county to have been dedicated to public use, the plaintiffs offered to prove that C. had been employed by the board of supervisors to look after the fences and keep them in repair, and was so engaged at the commencement of the action, and that, in performing this service, he was acting as the servant of the county, employed for that purpose. Held, that the evidence was admissible, as tending to establish the possession of the county.—Barry v. Sonoma County, 43 Cal. 217.

[d] Map showing existence of public alley and street assessment for its improvement are admissible in evidence on the question of dedication, as tending to show general knowledge of the existence of the alley.—Hargro v. Hodgdon, 89 Cal. 623, 26 Pac. 1106.

[e] Evidence of an agreement between a railroad company and its grantor that part of the land conveyed should be used as a public highway is not inadmissible as contradictory of the instrument of conveyance, where it is not offered for such purpose, but to show the intention of the company to dedicate the road to the public.—People v. Eel River etc. R. Co., 98 Cal. 665, 33 Pac. 725.

§ 33. —— Designation of Property by Name of Tract.

[a] In the description of the land conveyed by deed, designation of the tract by a particular name or number is sufficient; and, if it can be rendered certain by extrinsic evidence, this is as good a description as one by metes and bounds.—Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148.

[b] A deed conveying a certain quantity of land, lying between certain rivers, "containing, more or less, one square mile of land, in the place known as Rincon de los Cameros, commencing at the wagon road, and ending at the point of the hill on the east," is not void for uncertainty of the description, where the term "Rincon de los Cameros" designates a strip of land embraced between the two streams, which formed two sides of a triangle, and the road, which sufficiently indicated the third side.—Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148.

[c] Where the description was that "certain tract or parcel of land situated in said county of Napa, consisting of a pre-emption claim of one hundred and sixty acres, and commonly known as the 'Soda Springs,' and embracing the said springs, and the improvements thereunto belonging, and being about five miles from Napa City, in a northerly direction, together with all and singular the tenements," etc., held, to be prima facie sufficient.—Whitney v. Buckman, 13 Cal. 536.

[d] A deed reciting the grantor as the owner of a certain rancho, and describing the land as "the land between the creek of the P. N. and the creek of the A., without embracing my said rancho, as shown by the plat accompanying," is not invalid for defective description of the premises. Havens v. Dale, 18 Cal. 359.

[e] Description by name is sufficient if boundaries so known are well defined.—Banks v. Mareno, 39 Cal. 239.

[f] A description in a deed as follows: "All my right, title, and interest in and to a parcel of land situate in the town of San Francisco, being block No. 9, the same on which I now reside. The part thus donated commences at the northeast corner of said block running twenty-five varas west from said corner; thence back one hundred varas,"—is a sufficient description.—De Levillain v. Evans, 39 Cal. 120.

[g] A tract of land having a well-known name may be described thereby in a deed. Haley v. Amestoy, 44 Cal. 132.

[h] A quitclaim deed of "all my right, title, and interest in Sacramento city, upper California, consisting of town lots and buildings thereupon," passes the grantor's interest in his lots at Sacramento.—Frey v. Clifford, 44 Cal. 335.

[i] Description of land by name is, or may be, sufficient if boundaries are known and well defined.—Burnett v. Kullark, 76 Cal. 536, 18 Pac. 401.

[j] When property has a descriptive name it may be conveyed by that name, and defects in other parts of description may be disregarded.—Murray v. Tulare Irr. Co., 120 Cal. 315, 49 Pac. 563, 52 Pac. 586.

[k] Conveyance of "Watson ditch" sufficiently describes property, there being but one ditch in the county generally known and spoken of as "Watson ditch."—Murray v. Tulare Irr. Co., 120 Cal. 315, 49 Pac. 563, 52 Pac. 586.

§ 34. —— Reference to Maps or Plats.

[a] A deed describing the premises conveyed as a lot of land one hundred yards square, bounded on three sides by certain streets on the plat of a city, and on the other by certain unsurveyed land, is not void for insufficient description.—Garwood v. Hastings, 38 Cal. 216.

[b] Where a deed described town lands as "lot 62, containing 50 52/100 acres," numbered and marked on the official map or plan made by a named person of outside lands of the town, it was not void, for uncertainty, as a matter of law.—Thompson v. Thompson, 52 Cal. 154.

[d] If town has declared by ordinance what map is the official map of the same, deeds of property which refer to the official map, and are made after such declaration, refer to such map.—Penry v. Richards, 52 Cal. 496.

[e] A map of a tract of land having lines drawn upon it marking the boundaries and the natural objects upon its surface delineated, which is referred to in a deed containing a description of the premises therein conveyed, is to be regarded as giving the true description of the land conveyed as much as if it was expressly recited and marked down in the deed itself.—Chapman v. Polack, 70 Cal. 487, 11 Pac. 764; Vance v. Fore, 24 Cal. 435.

[f] Where deed refers to map or other instrument, latter is regarded as part of deed. Cadwalader v. Nash, 73 Cal. 45, 14 Pac. 385.

[g] Deed describing property by reference to map must clearly identify map referred to. Cadwalader v. Nash, 73 Cal. 45, 14 Pac. 385.

[h] Deed is void for uncertainty when reference to it is equally applicable to two different maps.—Cadwalader v. Nash, 73 Cal. 47, 48, 14 Pac. 385.

[i] Where deed refers to map officially filed, map need not be recorded with it.—Napa v. Easterby, 76 Cal. 227, 18 Pac. 253.

[j] It is only where map can be used in aid of description that it is considered part of deed.—Cleveland v. Choate, 77 Cal. 78, 18 Pac. 875.

[k] In a suit to quiet title, a deed was offered in evidence in which the land was "bounded and particularly described as follows, to wit: On the N., 240 feet on Mill street; on the E., 110 feet on a 30-foot alley; on the S., 240 feet on an alley; on the W., 110 feet by a 30-foot alley; and being all of lots Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4, all of block No. 8, as per plat of Johnson & Murry's addition to the town of P.; being all of said block No. 8 in said addition to P., Tulare county, Cal." Counsel offering to follow it with a plat of the addition referred to, held, that an objection to the deed, because it described nothing, was properly overruled.—Redd v. Murry, 95 Cal. 48, 24 Pac. 841.

[m] There is no objection in a deed to the phrase, "the south one-fourth," or "the south ten acres," of a government subdivision.—McCartney v. Dennison, 101 Cal. 252, 35 Pac. 766.

[n] When a tract of land has been subdivided into blocks or lots, and a map thereof made on which the blocks or lots are designated by numbers, a description of the blocks or lots in a deed by the numbers so designated is sufficient, provided the map can be produced and identified.—McCullough v. Olds, 108 Cal. 529, 41 Pac. 420.

[o] A description of the property conveyed by a deed as "lots numbers 3 and 4, containing ten acres each, in Reiner's subdivision of lot 1103, ... said subdivision recorded in book 1, page 184, records of San Diego county," when taken in connection with the map referred to, is sufficient.—McCullough v. Olds, 108 Cal. 529, 41 Pac. 420.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 35. —— Reference to Other Instruments or Records.

[a] Although the parties to a deed may describe the property therein conveyed by a reference therein to another deed or map which contains a description, yet the deed and the instrument referred to, when taken together, must be as certain in respect to the description as a description contained in the deed itself.—Caldwell v. Centter, 30 Cal. 539, 89 Am. Dec. 131.

[b] If a conveyance of a large number of lots in a city states about the number of lots sold, and refers to another deed, given to the grantor, for a particular description of the lots, giving the date of such other deed and the names of the parties thereto, it is a sufficient identification of the deed referred to to incorporate the particular description therein contained into the deed given; and the description in the deed given is not vitiated by the fact that the deed referred to is also falsely stated to be recorded in the county where the property lies.—Saunders v. Schmaelzle, 49 Cal. 59.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 548; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 103-105, § 84.

§ 36. —— Erroneous Description.

[a] If, by rejecting that part of the description which is false, enough remains to locate the land, the deed is effective.—Irving v. Cunningham, 66 Cal. 15, 14 Pac. 766.

[b] It is not error to refuse to nonsuit plaintiff because his deed by mistake recites that the land is in the southeast one-fourth, instead of the southwest one-quarter, of the quarter section named, where the land intended can be identified by monuments.—Helm v. Wilson, 76 Cal. 476, 18 Pac. 604.

[c] Where, in a deed, the land is fully and correctly described, except the number of the township is given as "45" instead of "4," and the land can be identified by the rest of the description, such mistake will not vitiate the conveyance.—Borchard v. Eastwood, 133 Cal. xix, 65 Pac. 1047.

[a] A deed executed by only a few, and not all of the grantors named in it, is good as to those who did execute and deliver it, and sufficient to convey their interest in the property.—Colton v. Seavey, 22 Cal. 496; Tustin v. Faught, 23 Cal. 237.

ence, and at the request, of the grantor, the deed is as binding as if he had personally affixed his signature.—Jansen v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 563, 83 Am. Dec. 84.

[b] The fact that a grantor signs a deed by a wrong name does not render the conveyance invalid, if he is designated by his true name in the body of the deed, and in the certificate of proof of execution.—Middleton v. Findla, 25 Cal. 7.

[c] Where there are two grantors and one of them acts as attorney in fact of the other he must subscribe his name twice, once as attorney in fact for the other, and once for himself. One signature and a second seal is not equal to a second subscription.—Meagher v. Thompson, 49 Cal. 189.

§ 40. Curative Statute.

[a] A deed executed by the president and the secretary of a corporation did not have the corporate seal attached, and contained no recital showing any authority from the directors to convey. Held, that the flaw in the deed relates directly to the authority of the officers to act, and is not a defect which can be cured by Civil Code, section 1207, which provides that any instrument affecting real property, recorded prior to January 30, 1873, shall be deemed to impart "notice of its contents to subsequent purchasers and encumbrancers, notwithstanding any defect, omission, or informality in the execution of the instrument, or in the certificate of acknowledgment thereof, or in the absence of any such certificate."—McCloskey v. [b] Agent of grantor cannot insert name of grantee in absence of grantor unless authorized in writing.—Upton v. Archer, 41 Cal. 85, 10 Am. Rep. 266-n.

[c] Deed executed in blank and filled without authority and never acknowledged is void.—Vaca Valley etc. R. R. v. Mansfield, 84 Cal. 566, 24 Pac. 145.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 553; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 118, 119, § 96.

§ 41½. Seal—Necessity.

[a] Prior to code, conveyance without seal conveyed only an equity, and not legal title. McCarron v. O'Connell, 7 Cal. 152.

[b] No seal to a deed of conveyance was requisite under the civil law. Any instrument which contained the names of the parties, a designation or description of the property sold, the date of the transfer, and the price paid, was sufficient to pass the title. Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148.

§ 42. —— Sufficiency.

[a] A contemporaneous writing, though not under seal, showing that a party has adopted a seal instrument as his own, is as good as setting the party's hand and seal to a deed.—Ingoldsby v. Juan, 12 Cal. 564.

[b] Where no words appear in the body of an instrument expressive of the intent to make it a sealed instrument it will not be such, even though the characters (L. S.) are added to the signature.—McDonald v. Bear River etc. Co., 13 Cal. 220.

§ 43. —— Attestation—Competency of Witnesses.

[b] Without the delivery of a deed it is void.—Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609.

[c] A deed takes effect from its delivery, and if delivery is wanting, it is void ab initio.—Bank of Healdsburg v. Bailhache, 65 Cal. 327, 4 Pac. 106.

[d] A written instrument in the form of a conveyance of land does not take effect as a deed until it is delivered with the intent that it shall so operate.—Hibberd v. Smith, 67 Cal. 547, 4 Pac. 473, 8 Pac. 46.

[e] Deed only takes effect upon delivery; hence deed not delivered has no validity. Ward v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 242, 7 Am. St. Rep. 151, 17 Pac. 193.

[f] Delivery is the force that vitalizes an instrument; and a deed can take no effect until delivery, which is dependent upon the assent of the grantor.—Gould v. Wise, 97 Cal. 532, 32 Pac. 576, 33 Pac. 323.

[g] A notary's record, showing the acknowledgment before him of a deed by a husband to his wife, is inadmissible to prove conveyance of title from the husband, in the absence of proof that the deed had been delivered.—Lewis v. Burns, 122 Cal. 358, 55 Pac. 132.

§ 45. Sufficiency.

[a] Redelivery of deed to fraudulent vendor will not revest title, though intended to cancel the deed.—Davis v. Mitchell, 34 Cal. 81.

[b] The elements of delivery are, that the writing must be meant by the maker to take immediate effect; and be presumably, or in fact, accepted by the other party.—Harris v. Harris, 59 Cal. 620.

[c] Deed from father to son recorded at request of grantor, and produced on trial by grantee, is sufficiently delivered.—Wedel v. Herman, 59 Cal. 507.

[d] A finding that certain deed under which the plaintiffs claim were never delivered, held, supported by the evidence.—Burroughs v. De Couts, 70 Cal. 361, 11 Pac. 734.

[e] Where grantee obtains possession of deed surreptitiously there is no delivery. Haskell v. Doty, 78 Cal. 426, 21 Pac. 10.

[g] Intent of grantor is main thing to be discovered in determining delivery.—Huse v. Den, 85 Cal. 399, 20 Am. St. Rep. 232, 24 Pac. 790.

[h] Where a grantee named in a deed secures possession thereof clandestinely, or in any manner without a fulfillment of the agreed conditions, or consent of the grantor to a delivery, there is no delivery of the deed, and no title passes to the grantee.—Gould v. Wise, 97 Cal. 532, 32 Pac. 576, 33 Pac. 323.

[i] Defendant agreed with A. to sell him certain land, part cash, and balance secured by mortgage. Defendant went with A. to a notary's office, where deed was executed. While the mortgage was being prepared, A. said, "Let me see that deed," and took it from the table, and went, without defendant's knowledge, to plaintiff, from whom he negotiated a loan. A. then returned to defendant, paid him the money, and executed the mortgage, which defendant at once recorded. Prior to this time plaintiff had the deed and A.'s mortgage to her recorded. Held, that defendant's mortgage was entitled to priority, as there had been no delivery of the deed to A. at the time he negotiated the loan from plaintiff.—Gould v. Wise, 97 Cal. 532, 32 Pac. 576, 33 Pac. 323.

[j] When defendant, then an unmarried woman, was living with her father, and keeping house for him, he executed a deed to her conveying the home place. She testified that he handed her the deed, telling her it would secure a home for her if anything should happen to him; that she placed it with other papers, both of her father's and her own, and afterward it could not be found. After her father's death it was found by a third person in a place containing papers of both father and daughter. Held, that such evidence warranted a finding that the deed had been delivered.—Reed v. Smith, 125 Cal. 491, 58 Pac. 139.

[k] Where a wife executed two deeds to her husband, and on his representation that they would not have any validity until recorded, and on his promise that he would not have them recorded unless he survived her, placed them in his possession, there was no delivery of the deeds, as there was no intent that they should become operative as such. Kenney v. Parks, 137 Cal. 527, 70 Pac. 556.

[l] Placing deed where it may be subsequently taken away by grantor does not affect prior delivery.—Kenniff v. Caulfield, 140 Cal. 40, 73 Pac. 703.

[m] Sufficient delivery is accomplished when there is complete delivery in fact. Kenniff v. Caulfield, 140 Cal. 40, 73 Pac. 803.

[n] Valid delivery is accomplished when acts and conduct of grantor manifest present intent to dispose of title conveyed.—Kenniff v. Caulfield, 140 Cal. 40, 73 Pac. 803.

[o] No particular form of delivery is necessary. Any act or thing manifesting intent to dispose of title is sufficient.—Kenniff v. Caulfield, 140 Cal. 40, 73 Pac. 803.

[p] In an action to establish a lost deed, evidence that the grantor obtained plaintiff's daughter to read it to her, and then took the deed from the daughter's hand, and requested plaintiff to hold out her hand, when the grantor placed the deed in plaintiff's hand, and said: "This house and lot is yours and everything there is on the place. Now go and put it in the bureau drawe"—which plaintiff did, was sufficient to show a valid delivery.—Kenniff v. Caulfield, 140 Cal. 34, 73 Pac. 803.

[q] When wife authorizes husband to deliver deed after exacting promise from grantee, delivery is complete though husband fails to exact the promise.—Alexander v. Welcker, 141 Cal. 303, 74 Pac. 845.

[a] Delivery of a deed to one of two joint purchasers is a delivery to both.—Eshleman v. Henrietta Vineyard Co., 102 Cal. 199, 36 Pac. 579; Eshleman v. Malter, 102 Cal. 199, 36 Pac. 579; Henrietta Vineyard Co. v. Eshleman, 102 Cal. 199, 36 Pac. 579.

See 13 Cyc. 565; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 156, 157, § 126.

[a] Delivery of conveyance is a question of fact to be determined by the jury, and depends more upon the intention of the parties, than upon the mode of fulfilling the intention.—Hastings v. Vaughn, 5 Cal. 315.

[b] Where a deed executed and recorded on the same day is introduced on the issue of its delivery, it is for the jury to say whether the grantee knew of the deed, and assented thereto.—Bensley v. Atwill, 12 Cal. 231.

[c] The delivery of a deed is a question of fact, depending more upon the intention of the parties than upon the mode of fulfilling the intention. The intention both of the grantor and of the grantee that the deed shall operate as a delivered instrument is essential to a delivery thereof.—Whitney v. American Ins. Co., 127 Cal. 464, 59 Pac. 897.

§ 48. —— Ratification of Undelivered Deed.

[a] A deed that was void for want of delivery cannot be validated by a subsequent deed given for that purpose.—Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 49. Necessity that Grantor Part with All Control Over Deed.

[a] Where the grantor deposits a deed with a third person to be by him delivered to the grantee on the order of grantor's agent, and, before the agent gives the order, the grantor directs such third person not to deliver it, his authority to deliver ceases, and a delivery is inoperative.—Fitch v. Bunch, 30 Cal. 208.

[b] What constitutes delivery is chiefly a question of fact, but a delivery is not complete until the grantor has so dealt with the instrument as to lose all control over it; and whether he has done so depends upon the intent to be deduced from all the surrounding circumstances.—Hibberd v. Smith, 67 Cal. 547, 4 Pac. 473, 8 Pac. 46.

[c] To constitute delivery of a deed, the grantor must devest himself of all power and dominion over it.—Denis v. Velati, 96 Cal. 223, 31 Pac. 1.

[d] The essential requisite to a valid delivery is that when placed in the hands of the third party it has passed beyond the control of the grantor for all time.—Bury v. Young, 98 Cal. 446, 35 Am. St. Rep. 186, 33 Pac. 338.

[e] In a suit to quiet title it was found that the trustee of a townsite platted on public lands of the United States executed deeds to persons whose names appeared on the official map as being entitled thereto, who had not previously obtained conveyances, and, among others to defendant's predecessor; and that the trustee left "all of said deeds so executed" with one T. Held, that this was sufficient to show delivery, since, if not to be regarded as express finding thereof, delivery was not inferred therefrom.—Callahan v. James, 71 Pac. 104.

§ 50. Record, or Delivery for Record.

[a] The recording of a deed is not a delivery by the grantor to the grantee, unless the deed comes from the hand of the grantor, or some one claiming through or under him. Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609.

§ 51. Deposit for Delivery After Grantor's Death.

[a] Where the grantor executes a deed of his land, and delivers it to another, with instructions only to hold without recording until his death, and then to deliver it to the grantee, the grantor cannot recall the deed, nor alter its provisions, and he has no interest in the land, except a life estate.—Bury v. Young, 98 Cal. 446, 35 Am. St. Rep. 186, 33 Pac. 338.

[b] The delivery to a third person of a deed made to the child of the grantor with instructions to such third person to hold it without recording until the death of the grantor, who thereby parted with all control over it, is valid.—Wittenbrock v. Cass, 110 Cal. 1, 42 Pac. 300.

[c] A grantor's deposit of a deed with a bank cashier, to be filed for record if the grantor died during the life of the grantee, and otherwise to be returned, is not a sufficient delivery to vest title in the grantee. Judgment (1898) 54 Pac. 251, reversed on rehearing.—Kenney v. Parks, 125 Cal. 146, 28 Am. St. Rep. 106, 57 Pac. 772.

[d] The delivery of a deed in escrow, to be delivered to the grantee on the grantor's death, vests the title in the grantee, subject to life estate of the grantor.—Wilhoit v. Salmon, 146 Cal. 444, 80 Pac. 705.

[e] A deed delivered in escrow to be delivered after the grantor's death, but with the condition that the grantor might be entitled to the same on payment of certain advances, held ineffectual to pass title to the grantee.—Keyes v. Meyers, 147 Cal. 702, 82 Pac. 304.

[f] A deed cannot be executed as a testamentary disposition to be delivered after the grantor's death.—Hayden v. Collins, 1 Cal. App. 259, 81 Pac. 1120.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 569; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 174-178, §§ 140, 141.

§ 52. Acceptance.

[a] It is scarcely to be presumed that one man will execute to another a deed without the assent of that other.—Bensley v. Atwill, 12 Cal. 231.

[b] In such case, it is for the jury to say whether the grantee had knowledge of the execution of the deed, or had given his assent thereto.—Bensley v. Atwill, 12 Cal. 231.

[c] To constitute delivery of deed there must be acceptance by the grantee.—Bank of Healdsburg v. Bailhache, 65 Cal. 327, 4 Pac. 106.

[d] Delivery of deed to stranger for benefit of grantee is deemed to be a constructive delivery to the latter only when his assent thereto or facts which authorize a presumption of such assent are shown.—Hibberd v. Smith, 67 Cal. 547, 4 Pac. 473, 8 Pac. 46.

[e] Assent of grantee to deed expressing a money consideration will not be presumed, as against third person acquiring a lien before acceptance of deed in fact.—Hibberd v. Smith, 67 Cal. 547, 4 Pac. 473; 8 Pac. 46.

[f] Acceptance of deed will not relate to delivery to third person as against intervening judgment lien.—Hibberd v. Smith, 67 Cal. 558, 561, 4 Pac. 473, 8 Pac. 46.

[g] A husband, pending a suit for divorce, agreed to convey to his wife a life estate in certain property if a decree was granted, but conveyed her a fee instead, and she accepted the deed, and retained it until her death, with full opportunity to know its contents. Held, that the agreement being executory in its nature, and subject to change, under Civil Code, section 1698, it would be assumed that he intended to convey a fee, and that she was satisfied therewith.—Hochstein v. Berghauser, 123 Cal. 681 56 Pac. 574.

[i] Grantee is not required to make any explicit declaration of acceptance.—Kenniff v. Caulfield, 140 Cal. 41, 73 Pac. 803.

[j] One accepting deed in silence is deemed to have agreed to whatever conditions accompanied delivery.—Becker v. Schwerdtle, 141 Cal. 391, 392, 74 Pac. 1029.

§ 54. —— As to Identity of Property Conveyed.

[a] Where the grantor supposed she was selling a different tract of land, but the grantees thought they were purchasing the tract actually conveyed, there was a mutual mistake as to the subject matter of the contract, and the minds of the parties never having met, there was no contract of sale, and the deed was made under a mutual mistake of both parties. Under such circumstances, the court might order a rescission of the sale altogether, but could not compel grantees to retain and pay for a tract of land they have never contracted for. In such case grantor should tender the whole amount of purchase money, and ask for an entire rescission of the contract.—Barfield v. Price, 40 Cal. 535.

§ 55. Misrepresentation and Fraud.

[a] Where husband and wife execute a conveyance of their homestead, which the husband delivers to the purchaser before the purchase money therefor is paid, which is afterwards fraudulently attached in a suit brought by the real though not ostensible purchaser, against the husband alone, equity will compel a cancellation of the deed so obtained.—Still v. Saunders, 8 Cal. 281.

[b] Deed procured by fraud conveys legal title.—Hewlett v. Pilcher, 85 Cal. 544, 24 Pac. 781.

[c] When a wife conveys land to her husband, without consideration, for the purpose of a suit, for her benefit, to oust a tenant—she being advised that such conveyance is necessary for the suit—and he afterward, without consideration, conveys the land to a third person, who has notice of the trust, a repudiation of the implied promise to reconvey by such third person, and an attempt to hold the property as though conveyed absolutely, constitute constructive fraud, and entitle the wife to a reconveyance.—Jones v. Jones, 140 Cal. 587, 74 Pac. 143.

[d] A deed untainted by fraud is not impeachable for fraud committed afterward in the obtaining of another deed between the same parties for different premises.—Gutierrez v. Brinkerhoff, 1 Pac. 482.

[e] A complaint to cancel a deed alleged that defendant, without plaintiff's consent, abstracted the deed from a safe where it had been deposited by the plaintiff in escrow pending the completion of a proposed sale to defendant of land therein described; that defendant after thus obtaining the deed caused it to be recorded; that no money was ever paid for the land; and defendant refused to pay the consideration or reconvey to plaintiff. Held, that the complaint showed a good cause of action.—Rising v. Gibbs, 30 Pac. 589.

§ 56. —— Reliance on Representations and Equal Means of Knowledge.

[a] Where a board of commissioners, holding a tract of land in trust for sale, establish a rule for their own government to the effect that where land is occupied they will sell only to the actual occupant thereof, and for no sum less than one dollar and twenty-five cents an acre, and a party, knowing of such rule, and occupying seventy-two acres of the land, makes application to them in writing for a conveyance of a tract which he describes by metes and bounds and courses and distances, and states as containing about seventy-two acres, and the board execute a deed to him of the land described in the petition upon his payment of the sum which they ask for it, but the deed in fact conveys one hundred and fifty-four acres, a part of which is occupied by a third party, and the price paid is the same as for seventy-two acres, a court of equity will not compel the grantee to reconvey all but the seventy-two acres occupied by him to the board, where the latter had the means of ascertaining all the facts in the case.—Funded Debt Commrs. of City of San Jose v. Younger, 29 Cal. 172.

§ 57. —— Representations as to Future Events or Actions.

[a] If by means of a parol promise to reconvey a party obtains an absolute deed, without consideration, from one to whom he stands in a fiduciary relation, the violation of the promise is constructive fraud, although, at the time it was made, there was no intention not to perform.—Alaniz v. Casenave, 91 Cal. 41, 27 Pac. 521; Brison v. Brison, 75 Cal. 525, 17 Pac. 689.

§ 58. —— Inadequacy of Consideration.

[a] There is no conclusion of fraud, springing from want of consideration, in a deed which will enable a stranger to attack it, though it is a circumstance, among others, from which fraud may be inferred.—Gillan v. Metcalf, 7 Cal. 137.

§ 59. —— Inducing Hasty Transfer of Property.

[a] In a suit to set aside a deed as obtained by fraud, it was shown that the grantor, an old man of weak mind, was falsely advised by his attending physician, the grantee's father in law, that he was about to die, and that, in order not to delay certain transactions in connection with the land, he had better convey his interest therein to the grantee; but the instrument was to contain a clause by which it should not go into effect unless he died of that illness. The deed was drawn without any such clause, however, and the grantee got possession thereof without the consent of the grantor, had it placed on record, and thereafter claimed title under it. Held, that the evidence warranted a judgment setting aside the deed.—Klose v. Hillenbrand, 88 Cal. 473, 26 Pac. 352.

§ 60. —— Duress—Suit or Threat of Suit.

[a] A transfer of property, sought to be rescinded, and for which a valuable consideration was falsely recited, was executed by plaintiff to defendant, her husband, to induce him to withdraw a divorce suit instituted by him for the purpose of forcing plaintiff, who was suffering from nervous prostration, to surrender part of her property. The transfer was executed in the presence of defendant and his attorney, and plaintiff had no independent advice to the effect thereof. Held, that the transfer was executed under undue influence, within Civil Code, section 1575, and should be rescinded.—Dolliver v. Dolliver, 94 Cal. 642, 30 Pac. 4.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 61. Undue Influence and Confidential Relations—Deed to Relatives in General.

[a] Where the grantor, at the time of executing a deed to her brother, was in full possession of her faculties, understood what she was doing, made the deed voluntarily and without persuasion or coercion, and because of her uninfluenced desire to do so, the deed will not be deemed constructively fraudulent as to other brothers and sisters because the grantor was in a weak physical condition, and the deed transferred all of her property to the brother then living with her, to the injury of the others, who resided at a distance.—Carty v. Connolly, 91 Cal. 15, 27 Pac. 599.

[b] A deed, made by an elderly woman voluntarily, and without undue influence, conveying to her nephew and his wife all her realty with the exception of a life estate, in consideration of an agreement on their part to make their home with her, repair and improve her house, and care for her during life, will not be set aside, where it appears that the deed was understandingly made, and that the grantees had expended several hundred dollars in coming from their home in a distant state, and several hundred more in repairing the house, and were ready to perform further when interrupted by the grantor.—Creswell v. Welchman, 95 Cal. 359, 30 Pac. 553.

[c] Defendant executed a deed and power of attorney to his sister, and thereafter executed to her another deed, accompanied by an agreement for a reconveyance, if defendant should repay to plaintiff all taxes, assessments, and advances made by her. Defendant stated he had deeded his property to plaintiff, and that she was going to support him, and the sister of plaintiff testified that plaintiff told her that she intended to take care of the defendant, and look after his property. It also appeared that plaintiff had stated on the witness stand in a partition suit that she held the interest in trust for defendant. There was no evidence of consideration save the expectation of future support, and it was shown that for some time prior to the execution of the deeds, defendant's capacity to take care of himself and his property had been more or less impaired. Held, that owing to the relationship of the parties, and the fact that defendant had parted with his property on an understanding unenforceable, under Civil Code, section 1624, subdivision 1, declaring that an agreement not to be performed within a year shall be invalid unless in writing, the conveyance should be regarded as having been secured by fraud and undue influence. Odell v. Moss, 130 Cal. 352, 62 Pac. 555.

Undue influence of spiritualistic mediums, presumption of: 1 Am. St. Rep. 88, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 585-590; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 250-277, §§ 190-199.

§ 62. —— Deed to Persons in Loco Parentis.

[a] Where plaintiff, a girl of nineteen, who has resided with her grandparents as their ward since she was nine, conveyed to her grandmother all of her property, on the representations of her grandmother that the property really belonged to her grandfather, and that she (the grandmother) would devise it to plaintiff, the conveyance will be set aside for fraud and undue influence.—Brown v. Burbank, 64 Cal. 99, 27 Pac. 940.

§ 63. —— Deed to Spiritual Adviser.

[a] In a suit to annul a trust deed, made by a woman but a few days before her death, for the benfit of her spiritual adviser, on the ground of undue influence, a finding that the grantor had no independent advice on making the deed is sustained by the evidence that the scrivener was employed and introduced to her by the cestui que trust at a hospital where no one else was present; that her last will was destroyed, and the deed made, at the suggestion of the cestui que trust, who was present, with the exception of a few minutes, while directions for the deed were given.—Ross v. Conway, 92 Cal. 632, 28 Pac. 785.

[b] A trust deed by one in weak mind and a dying condition, made principally for the benefit of one in whom the grantor had for many years imposed great confidence as her spiritual adviser, and for which there was no consideration, will be canceled, on the ground of undue influence.—Ross v. Conway, 92 Cal. 632, 28 Pac. 785.

[a] A bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration from the vendee in a deed obtained by a fraud will hold the property conveyed, for a deed obtained by fraud is only voidable.—Deputy v. Stapleford, 19 Cal. 302.

§ 65. Ratification of Voidable Deed.

[a] Defendant by fraud and undue influence procured a deed from his brother, who was then incompetent to transact business, giving a note as part consideration, and afterward, without payment, had possession of the note. The brother assigned the note to his wife, who obtained a judgment for recovery thereof. Her husband also executed a deed to her of the land covered by the deed to defendant, and she sued to recover the land from defendant. Held, that she was not estopped by the judgment in her action to recover the note, since she was entitled to possession of the note, until she received the relief due to her, and her recovery of the note was not a ratification of the deed.—More v. More, 133 Cal. 489, 65 Pac. 1044.

[b] Where a person sick in the hospital makes a deed to it for a certain sum paid and an agreement for further care, and recovers, and for several weeks is able to transact business, and up to the day of his death is satisfied with the transaction, it amounts to a ratification hereof.—Barry v. St. Joseph's Hospital & Sanitarium of the Sisters of Mercy, 48 Pac. 68.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 67. —— Actions.

[a] A complaint in an action by a foster child of deceased to set aside certain deeds by deceased to his wife, as obtained by fraud and undue influence, and to recover an interest in the property, was not demurrable for failure to allege that deceased died intestate, there being no presumption that the deceased left a will devising the property to persons other than plaintiff. Judgment (1902) 70 Pac. 1024, reversed.—Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141, 73 Pac. 820.

[b] A bill to set aside certain conveyances on the ground of undue influence and mental incapacity was not demurrable on the ground that it was impossible to ascertain therefrom on which ground plaintiff would rely to establish her cause of action. Judgment (1902) 70 Pac. 1024, reversed.—Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 141, 73 Pac. 820.

[c] A wife was advised that it was necessary to transfer the legal title to certain land to another, in order that a suit to oust a tenant might be maintained, and accordingly transferred it, without consideration, to her husband, for that purpose. He thereupon conveyed it, without consideration, to a third person, for the purpose for which the first conveyance was made. Afterward this third person repudiated the trust, and claimed to hold the land absolutely. Held, in an action by the wife to have her title established and the deeds declared void, that a decree declaring her the owner was substantially correct and without prejudicial error, though the decree might have ordered a cancellation or reconveyance.—Jones v. Jones, 140 Cal. 587, 74 Pac. 143.

[d] In an action to set aside a conveyance because obtained by fraud and undue influence, the objection of the testimony as to the habits and condition of the grantor at periods from seventeen to twelve years prior to the date of the transaction goes to the weight of the evidence rather than to its admissibility.—Donnelly v. Rees, 141 Cal. 56, 74 Pac. 433.

[e] The failure of a grantor to promptly rescind a conveyance because procured by fraud and undue influence is not a bar to a suit by the heir of the grantor to set aside the conveyance.—Donnelly v. Rees, 141 Cal. 56, 74 Pac. 433.

§ 73. In General.

[a] In construing a deed covenants cannot be resorted to, to extend premises granted or to aid a defective description in the habendum.—Mesick v. Sunderland, 6 Cal. 313.

[b] Mere matter of convenience or taste cannot be allowed to overrule express language of a deed.—Fratt v. Woodward, 32 Cal. 219, 91 Am. Dec. 573.

[c] That construction which satisfies the calls of a deed is to be preferred.—Lake etc. Co. v. San Gabriel etc. Co., 58 Cal. 51.

[d] Ambiguity in deed held to be latent not patent.—Spreckles v. Ord, 72 Cal. 88, 13 Pac. 160.

§ 74. Construction Giving Effect.

[a] To arrive at intention situation of parties and subject matter at time of contracting should be considered; whole deed should be taken together, and, if possible effect should be given to all its parts, although the immediate object of inquiry be the meaning of an isolated clause.—Brannan v. Mesick, 10 Cal. 95.

[b] Courts give effect to every part of the description of land in a deed or patent if possible, but if this cannot be done, they reject that which is repugnant to the general intent of the instrument.—More v. Massini, 37 Cal. 432.

[c] Grants must be made effective if possible.—Cullen v. Spriggs, 83 Cal. 62, 23 Pac. 222.

[d] It is impossible to lay down an invariable and universal rule of construction of deeds. The tendency of modern decisions is to uphold conveyances and give effect to the intention of the parties, regardless of technical rules of construction.—Faivre v. Daley, 93 Cal. 664, 29 Pac. 256.

§ 75. General Terms Limited by Particular Terms.

[a] Particular recital followed by general words will qualify them.—Hayes v. Wetherbee, 60 Cal. 396.

[b] Distinct limitation in grant is not controlled by other words less distinct.—Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 522, 24 Pac. 172, 25 Pac. 64.

[c] A conveyance is to be construed in view of all the facts, and general language in the first part of the instrument is limited and qualified by subsequent terms designed solely to define what interest is possessed and granted.—Vance, In re, 100 Cal. 425, 34 Pac. 1087.

§ 76. Intention of Parties.

[a] If, when the intention is ascertained, it is found that the words will fairly bear a construction which makes them express this intention, then the words will be so construed, and the contract, with this interpretation, enforced as to the contract of the parties.—Brannan v. Mesick, 10 Cal. 95.

[b] The court, to give the proper construction to the description of land conveyed by deed, will place itself in the position of the contracting parties, and their intent will be ascertained as in other contracts; and, if such intent is not apparent from the deed, it may be sought by resort to the general rules of construction.—Kimball v. Semple, 25 Cal. 440.

[c] Intentions of parties, when ascertained, must govern, and the entire description contained in the deed should be resorted to for their discovery.—Piercy v. Crandall, 34 Cal. 334.

[d] Of two descriptions in the same deed, the one applying to land owned by the grantor should be taken as true, rather than the one applying to land of which he had not a good title.—Piper v. True, 36 Cal. 606.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 601, 602, 626, note; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 311-314, §§ 231, 232.

§ 77. Construction by Parties.

[a] In the construction of a deed, it is competent for the court to inquire into the intent of the parties, and, in determining such intent, to look at their acts under the deed. Mulford v. Le France, 26 Cal. 88.

[b] The conduct of the parties subsequent to the making of a deed is competent, and often very material, evidence in determining, in case of an ambiguity, what was determined to be conveyed.—Vejar v. Mound City Land etc. Assn., 97 Cal. 659, 32 Pac. 713.

[c] If the deed is open to construction as to the extent of the grant, the most reliable circumstances in aid of such construction is the practical construction given it by the acts of the parties during the years immediately following its execution.—Yocco v. Conroy, 104 Cal. 468, 38 Pac. 107.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Description, construction of by subsequent acts of the parties: 35 Am. Dec. 373, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 608; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 314, 315, § 233.

§ 78. Strict Construction Against Grantor.

[a] Grants are to be construed most strongly against grantor.—Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291.

]b] Deeds are always to be construed most strongly against grantor when there is any uncertainty or ambiguity in their terms. Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224; Piper v. True, 36 Cal. 606.

[c] The description of boundaries in a deed is to be taken most strongly against the grantor.—(Cal. 1864) Vance v. Fore, 25 Cal. 435.

[d] If a deed will admit of two constructions, it should be construed most strongly against the grantor.—(Cal. 1871) Salmon v. Wilson, 41 Cal. 595.

[e] If there be conflicting descriptions in a deed, that which is most strongly against the grantor will be adopted.—Hager v. Spect, 52 Cal. 579.

[f] A grant is to be interpreted in favor of the grantee.—Freeman v. Bellegarde, 108 Cal. 179, 49 Am. St. Rep. 76, 41 Pac. 289.

§ 79. —— Grants by Public Bodies.

[a] Grants of land by public bodies to private parties are to be interpreted in favor of the grantor.—Hostetter v. Los Angeles Terminal Ry. Co., 108 Cal. 38, 4 Pac. 330.

§ 80. Extrinsic Circumstances.

[a] In the construction of a grant, the court will take into consideration the circumstances attending the transaction, and the particular situation of the parties, the state of the country, and of the thing granted, at the time, in order to ascertain the intent of the parties.—Stanley v. Green, 12 Cal. 148; Sprague v. Edwards, 48 Cal. 239; Grennan v. McGregor, 78 Cal. 258, 20 Pac. 559.

[b] In construing a deed, the court must place itself as near as possible in the place occupied by the parties when the instrument was executed, then, taking it by its four corners, read it.—Walsh v. Hill, 38 Cal. 481.

[c] In construing doubtful clauses it is important to ascertain all attendant circumstances to arrive at intention of parties.—Altchul v. S. F. C. P. H. A., 43 Cal. 171.

[d] In construing a deed all its parts must be consulted, and it must be read in the light of surrounding circumstances and the intention the parties arrived at in this way.—Pico v. Coleman, 47 Cal. 65.

[e] Intention of the parties as to the lands intended to be conveyed should be gathered from the deed itself rather than by resorting to extrinsic evidence; if the lands are capable of being identified by a construction of the deeds themselves evidence aliunde will not be resorted to.—Pulliam v. Bennett, 55 Cal. 368.

[f] In construing a doubtful description in a grant the court must assume, as nearly as possible, the position of the contracting parties, and consider the circumstances of the transaction between them, and then read and interpret the words used in the light of those circumstances.—Truett v. Adams, 66 Cal. 218, 5 Pac. 96.

[g] In construing deed court must consider position of parties and circumstances of transaction.—Thompson v. Motor Road Co., 82 Cal. 501.

[h] Circumstances of parties and their knowledge of state of title should be considered in arriving at their intent.—Watson v. Sutro, 86 Cal. 522, 24 Pac. 172, 25 Pac. 64.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 607; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 318-320, § 239.

§ 81. Adherence to Grammatical Sense.

[a] A grammatical construction should never be allowed to interfere with the intention of an instrument.—Hancock v. Watson, 18 Cal. 137.

§ 82. Insertion of Right for Wrong Word.

[a] Where, from a deed, it is apparent that a wrong word has been inserted by clerical error, it will be read, in an action at law, as though the right word was in its place.—Sprague v. Edwards, 48 Cal. 239.

§ 83. Interpretation by Subsequent Events.

[a] The rule that events transpiring subsequent to the execution of a deed are not to be considered in its construing applies to unknown facts, not to an expected confirmation of a survey.—Piper v. True, 36 Cal. 606.

§ 84. Construction of Particular Words or Terms.

[a] Whenever it is apparent that a grantor has used a technical word to express an idea different from its technical signification, a court will construe it according to the intention of the grantor.—Central Pac. R. C. v. Beal, 47 Cal. 151.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 85. —— "Purchase" Defined.

[a] The word "purchase" includes every mode of acquiring an estate, except by inheritance.—Greer v. Blanchar, 40 Cal. 194.

§ 86. —— "Proviso" Defined.

[a] A "proviso" in deeds and laws is a limitation or exception to the grant made or authority conferred, the effect of which is to declare that the one shall not operate or the other be exercised unless in the case provided. It always implies a condition, unless subsequent words change it into a covenant.—Stockton v. Weber, 98 Cal. 433, 33 Pac. 332.

§ 87. —— "Grant" Defined.

[a] The word "grant," as used in deeds, has a well-known signification, but the parties may limit or qualify its meaning, and, if they choose to do so, the court should not hesitate to carry out their expressed intention. Faivre v. Daley, 93 Cal. 664, 29 Cal. 256.

§ 88. —— "Heirs" Defined.

[a] Word "heirs" in conveyance is not a word of purchase, carrying title to the heirs, but only qualifying the title of the grantee.—Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 363, 73 Am. Dec. 543.

[b] Word "heir" is not limited to one who takes by descent from an immediate ancestor.—Castro v. Tennent, 44 Cal. 253.

[c] A limitation in a deed of part of a remainder to the "heirs" of deceased children is to be construed as meaning persons who would succeed to their estate in case of intestacy, and as including the surviving husband of a deceased daughter.—Hochstein v. Berghauser, 123 Cal. 681, 56 Pac. 547.

§ 89. —— Questions for Court or Jury.

[a] The legal sufficiency of the execution of certain conveyances, offered in evidence and proved by notarial certificates of acknowledgment, is a question solely for the court.—Starr v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361.

[a] If a second deed recites that it is given to confirm a former one in which mistakes had occurred, and the first deed was void, rendering confirmation impossible, the recitals in the second deed may be regarded as surplus, and it will be sufficient in law to pass the title. Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609.

[b] Recital that conveyance was made in pursuance of a void judgment may be disregarded, if deed can otherwise pass title.—Ryan v. Tomlinson, 39 Cal. 639.

§ 91. —— Recitals as Evidence.

[a] The words, "has executed unto," when used in an instrument of writing, import both a making and delivery.—Bagley v. McMickle's Admr., 9 Cal. 430.

[b] The recital in a deed of a valuable consideration paid by the grantee for the property thereby conveyed is not evidence of the payment of a valuable consideration, as against strangers, or against one claiming under the grantor by a conveyance prior to the deed in which the recitals are made, or against one claiming adversely to the grantor, but such recital is evidence of the payment of a valuable consideration only against those claiming under the grantor by conveyance subsequent to the same.—Galland v. Jackman, 26 Cal. 79, 85 Am. Dec. 172.

[c] A deed reciting that the grantor has sold to the grantee certain premises implies a price paid as a consideration for the transfer.—Merle v. Mathews, 26 Cal. 455.

[d] A recital in a deed that the grantor is a corporation does not prove such corporate existence, as against one claiming the property through another source of title.—Sonoma County Water Co. v. Lynch, 50 Cal. 503.

§ 92. Construing Instruments Together.

[a] An owner of land gave a power of attorney, authorizing his agent to convey certain lots, confirming by the instruments any sale he might make. The agent, after receiving the power, conveyed the premises by his own deed, without reference to the owner; and subsequently, while the power was in force, he indorsed on the deed a writing specifying that the premises were intended to be sold under the power of attorney, that he executed the deed only as the attorney for the owner, and as such attorney he bound the owner, which indorsement he signed as attorney for the owner. Held that, to ascertain the intent of the parties, all such instruments should be construed together. Gerdes v. Moody, 41 Cal. 335.

[b] Where the owner of realty conveys portions of it to several grantees by deeds executed on the same day, and the descriptions in the deeds are apparently conflicting as to the premises conveyed, they may be construed together as being parts of the same transaction. Pulliam v. Bennett, 55 Cal. 368.

[c] Where a deed of land is made, and by a contemporaneous instrument the grantee is to perform certain conditions, the two instruments are parts of the same transaction, and are to be considered together.—Janes v. Throckmorton, 57 Cal. 368, 380

§ 93. Merger of Previous Agreements.

[a] All previous representations pending the negotiation for the purchase are merged in the conveyance. The instrument contains the final agreement of the parties, and by it, in the absence of fraud, their rights and liabilities are to be determined.—Peabody v. Phelps, 9 Cal. 213.

[b] Where the owner agrees to sell land to another and to convey a good title, and afterwards makes a deed which is accepted by the vendee as a performance of the contract, the vendee's rights depend on the deed, and not on the previous contract; the latter being merged in and extinguished by the former.—Bryan v. Swain, 56 Cal. 616.

Merger of contract of sale in deed: 16 Am. St. Rep. 622, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 616; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 338-345, § 266.

§ 94. Repugnant or Conflicting Parts or Clauses.

[a] If a deed contains conflicting descriptions, that description is to be adopted which is the least likely to be affected with mistakes. Vance v. Fore, 24 Cal. 435.

[b] In construing a deed containing conflicting clauses, all its parts must be consulted, in arriving at the intention of the parties, to ascertain what land is conveyed.—Pico v. Coleman, 47 Cal. 65.

[c] A grant, bargain, and sale deed of certain land contained the following clause: "This conveyance is intended to reconvey and release only such title as the parties of the first part obtained to such premises by virtue of a deed from the parties of the second part to the parties of the first part." Held, that such clause should not be construed to be repugnant to the grant, and therefore void, as the manifest intention of the parties would thereby be defeated.—Faivre v. Daley, 93 Cal. 664, 29 Pac. 256.

[d] Premises of deed herein were not in irreconcilable conflict with subsequent clauses, but were limited by reserving a contingent estate in the grantor with a restriction for its benefit.—Pavkovich v. Southern Pac. Ry. Co., 87 Pac. 1097.

§ 95. —— Control of Subsequent by Earlier Clauses.

[a] Later words in a deed, which contradict the premises, are to be rejected if they cannot be reconciled with the obvious intent of the instrument.—Havens v. Dale, 18 Cal. 359.

[b] If two parts of a grant are irreconcilable, the first prevails.—Martin v. Lloyd, 94 Cal. 195, 29 Pac. 491.

[c] The principle declared in section 1070 of the Civil Code that if several parts of a grant are irreconcilable, the former part prevails, has no application where the grant has but one part, which is essentially the grant for a use.—Pellissier v. Croker, 103 Cal. 516, 35 Pac. 465.

§ 96. —— Repugnancy Between Habendum and Prior Parts.

[a] Where the purpose of a grant can be clearly ascertained from the premises of a deed, and the premises contain proper words of limitation, and the habendum is repugnant to the grant, the habendum will be controlled by the manifest intent and terms of the grant.—(Cal. 1860) Eldredge v. See Yup Co., 17 Cal. 44.

[b] Where, from the whole deed, it appears that the grantor intended by the habendum clause to restrain, limit, or enlarge the estate named in the granting clause, the habendum prevails over the granting clause.—Barnett v. Barnett, 104 Cal. 298, 37 Pac. 1049.

§ 97. Construction as to Parties.

[a] A conveyance of land to B. & Co. passes the title to B. alone, and a deed of the premises signed by B. will give a valid title.—Winter v. Stock, 29 Cal. 407, 89 Am. Dec. 57.

[b] A husband's deed to his wife provided that the property should, on her death, go to their children then living, equally, "and, in the case of the death of any such children, then to their heir or heirs." Held, that the words "heir or heirs" did not refer to children, but included all the heirs of such children as the law appointed to succeed to their estates.—Hochstein v. Berghauser, 123 Cal. 681, 56 Pac. 547.

§ 98. Time of Taking Effect.

[a] When the authorities of a town make a grant of a pueblo lot, and afterwards execute a deed, the deed takes effect by relation as of the date of the grant.—Thompson v. Spencer, 50 Cal. 532.

[b] The fact that a deed to a corporation was dated four days before its articles were filed did not invalidate the conveyance, where the delivery and acceptance occurred after the incorporation.—San Diego Gas Co. v. Frane, 137 Cal. 441, 70 Pac. 295.

§ 99. Inconsistent Descriptions.

[a] When, in a deed, there are two descriptions of the premises conveyed, and there is a clear repugnance between these descriptions, the court will look into the surrounding facts, and give effect to the description which is the most definite and certain, and which will carry out the evident intention of the parties.—(Cal. 1875) Wade v. Deray, 50 Cal. 376.

§ 100. Property Included in Description in General.

[a] A deed conveying all that portion of certain land lying south of two designated trees on the north boundary line passes only that portion of the realty lying south of a line running through the trees, and not that south of the line running through the trees and extending through the whole tract.—Chapman v. Excelsior Canal Co., 17 Cal. 231.

[b] The description of land conveyed by a deed "as all the land appertaining to a certain rancho granted to the grantor by the Mexican government, which has not been before the date of this instrument sold and conveyed" by the grantor, includes land in the rancho which had been conveyed by the grantor, and afterwards reconveyed to him.—Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 175.

[c] A description in a deed as follows: "All my right, title, and interest in and to a parcel of land situate in the town of San Francisco, being block No. 9, the same on which I now reside. The part thus donated commences at the northeast corner of said block, running 25 varas west from said corner; thence back 100 varas,"—conveys a strip off of the easterly side of the block twenty-five varas wide and one hundred varas deep.—De Levillain v. Evans, 39 Cal. 120.

[d] Where a deed from C. and wife described the premises as "all the undivided half of the right, title, and interest of the said parties of the first part of, in, and to that certain tract," etc., "the interest therein conveyed being the same acquired by the parties of the first part as heirs of Jose Joaquin Bernal and his wife, Josefa Sanchez de Bernal, deceased," held, that there was no repugnancy in the descriptive clause, and that the deed conveyed the separate interest which the wife of one of the grantors owned as the heir of Bernal and wife, and not his interest by purchase.—Castro v. Tennent, 44 Cal. 253.

[e] Where the description in a deed is all "the lands owned by the grantor" in a certain county, with certain exceptions, it is sufficient to convey all his lands in such county not included within the exceptions.—Borchard v. Eastwood, 133 Cal. xix, 65 Pac. 1047.

[f] Plaintiff conveyed one-half of her interest in an estate, the deed reciting an intention to convey such interest in the portion of the estate as should finally be distributed and allotted to plaintiff. In an accompanying contract the grantee agreed to use his best endeavors to secure a proper monthly allowance to be made to plaintiff out of the estate for her support during the administration thereof. Held, that such allowance was not within the description of the deed.—De Leonis v. Walsh, 145 Cal. 199, 78 Pac. 637.

Construction of deeds when lands are bounded by streets or highways: 23 Am. Rep. 233, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 628-639; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 382-431, §§ 316-335.

§ 101. Limitations Following Other Description.

[a] Particular will not restrict general descriptions in a deed, if the former follow in the sense of reiteration or affirmation.—Piper v. True, 36 Cal. 606.

[b] A deed granting "all that beach and water property" lying within certain described boundaries, and "known" on a map referred to in the deed "as blocks Nos. 1 to 32, inclusive," includes a block, numbered 33, within the boundaries defined.—Friedman v. Nelson, 53 Cal. 589.

§ 102. —— Reference to Other Instruments or Records in General.

[a] Where one deed refers to another for description of the granted premises, reference may be had to the description in the latter.—(Cal. 1864) Vance v. Fore, 24 Cal. 436.

[b] M. deeded to F. certain lots, and described them as the lots "described in and conveyed by" a former deed from S. to M. The former deed described the lot, but did not convey it, as S. had then no title; but M. had, after the former deed was given, acquired title from B. Held, that by the words, "described in and conveyed by," the grantor meant to convey to F. the lands which he then owned, and which the former deed described and purported to convey.—Central Pac. R. Co. v. Beal, 47 Cal. 151.

§ 103. Reference to Surveys, Maps, and Plats and Records Thereof.

[a] Where, in a conveyance, a reference is made to a map of the premises conveyed, the map and the deed are to be construed together. Seaward v. Malotte, 15 Cal. 304; Vance v. Fore, 24 Cal. 435; Powers v. Jackson, 50 Cal. 429; Penry v. Richards, 52 Cal. 496; Chapman v. Polack, 70 Cal. 487, 11 Pac. 764.

[b] Where land intended to be conveyed is described by reference to certain degrees of latitude, and also a certain map therein specifically described, the degrees of latitude and other imaginary lines will be discarded, as less certain and reliable than the map.—Mayo v. Mazeaux, 38 Cal. 442.

[c] The owner of land held under a Mexican grant made conveyance of a portion, and in the deed described one boundary of the land conveyed as running parallel with the southern line of the ranch, "according to the survey of the same made by the United States surveyor general of said state." At the time the deed was delivered no survey had been made and approved by the surveyor general, but an experimental survey had been made by the deputy of the surveyor general, who had the field-notes in his possession. The grantees in the deed, however, had no knowledge of this experimental survey. Held, that the description in the deed should be held to refer to the final survey of the ranch, to be thereafter determined by the federal authorities.—Fratt v. Toomes, 48 Cal. 28.

[d] When a tract of land comprising a subdivision according to the United States survey is conveyed by deed, and described in the deed only by the name of the township or subdivision of the township, the line of survey made by the United States, and the monuments then placed, are considered as referred to on the face of the deed.—Powers v. Jackson, 50 Cal. 429.

[e] If a party purchases a numbered block of land according to the official map of a city, and his purchase is so described in the deed, a further description of the block by metes and bounds, or courses and distances, is subordinate to the description of the block by its number upon the map, and must give way to the number in case of conflict.—Masterson v. Munro, 105 Cal. 431, 45 Am. St. Rep. 57, 38 Pac. 1106.

[f] A deed of lots in a certain tract, as per map thereof, does not carry any part of what was at the date of the map a highway, on which the tract and lots abutted, though in the meantime the highway had been vacated, and the land conveyed to the grantor of the lots; he not having owned the fee in any part of the highway before its vacation.—Sanchez v. Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, 114 Cal. 295, 46 Pac. 2.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 632, 633; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 402-410, §§ 323, 324.

§ 104. Erroneous Description.

[a] Where one part of the description in a deed is false and impossible, but, by rejecting that, a perfect description remains, the false part should be rejected, and the deed held good. Reed v. Spicer, 27 Cal. 57.

[b] Where, in an action of ejectment, the plaintiff claimed under a deed which described the land by name, as "all the undivided two-thirds of all the lands known by the name of 'Rancho de San Vicente,' situate in the county of Los Angeles and state of California," and added a particular description, which was erroneous, held, that the deed was intended to convey two-thirds of the whole rancho, however erroneous the particular description might be. Haley v. Amestoy, 44 Cal. 132.

[c] If the granting clause in a deed conveys all the interest of the grantor, and a clause is also inserted, stating that the interest conveyed is only that acquired by the grantor, B., and the grantor has not acquired any interest from B., but owns an interest acquired from another person, the interest of the grantor passes by the deed. This is upon the principle that a deed is to be so construed as, if possible, to give effect to it as a conveyance, and if it contains a clause which is repugnant to the general intention of the deed this clause is void.—Wilcoxson v. Sprague, 51 Cal. 640.

[d] The owner of two lots, one of which was inclosed, sold the latter, the deed describing its north line as being fifty-seven and five-twelfths feet from a certain street; but it was understood between the parties that the description was of the inclosed lot, which was never denied by the owner. Thereafter the other lot, lying north of the inclosed lot, was sold; the description reciting that it extended fifty-seven and five-twelfths feet south of the street, and to the other lot. Held, that the reference in the latter deed to the lot first sold was controlling, and the grantee could not claim a strip from the inclosed lot, though subsequent surveys might show that it was located less than fifty-seven and five-twelfths feet from the street.—Powers v. Bank of Oroville, 136 Cal. 486, 69 Pac. 151.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 630; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 410-415, § 325.

§ 105. Quantity of Interest Conveyed.

[a] A deed for "one-half of my lot" conveys only an undivided one-half interest in the lot.—Lick v. O'Donnell, 3 Cal. 59, 58 Am. Dec. 383.

[b] Where a deed conveys a given quantity of land, a parcel of a larger tract, and fails to locate the quantity by a sufficient description, the grantee has no right to locate it on any portion of the larger area against the will of his grantor, since the grantee merely acquires an undivided interest in the entire tract.—Schenk v. Evoy, 24 Cal. 104.

[c] A. owned a one-half interest in an undivided tenth part of a tract of land. He made a conveyance of "one-half interest" in his right, title and interest "in and to an undivided one-tenth part" of the tract. Held, that A.'s grantee took an undivided fortieth, not a twentieth.—Hayes v. Wetherbee, 60 Cal. 396.

[d] Plaintiff was given by her husband's will a life estate in his undivided one-fifth interest in certain land, with remainder to her children. No reference was made in the will to her community interest By the death of two sons she acquired greater interests in the land. In 1880, she conveyed to her son A. all her interest in a portion of the land. In a partition suit A. admitted that it was not intended to convey to him plaintiff's life estate. By deed, in 1882, she conveyed to A. all her interest in the rest of the land. In 1884, she made a third deed, conveying to him all her life estate, as well as her claim in the community property. The consideration expressed was one dollar and support during life, and the deed stated that it was intended to correct any mistake as to the interest intended to be conveyed, and that such interest was an undivided one-tenth interest and a life interest in the remaining undivided one-tenth. Held, that the provisions of the last deed must govern, and the grantee acquired the one-tenth undivided community interest and the undivided one-tenth life interest, but not the property inherited from the children.—Sepulveda v. Sepulveda, 77 Cal. 605, 20 Pac. 145.

[e] Where deed conveys all right, title and interest of grantor, words "being one-half undivided interest" do not limit previous terms or except any interest conveyed by them, and all grantor's title passes.—McLennan v. McDonnell, 78 Cal. 277, 20 Pac. 566.

[f] Where an undivided quarter interest in land was conveyed to a man and his wife, and on her decease he took the community property, his deed for an undivided half interest in the land should not be construed to mean the undivided half of the quarter interest, but conveyed all his interest, since, as the greater includes the less, the undivided half necessarily included the undivided quarter.—Jordan v. Fay, 98 Cal. 264, 33 Pac. 95.

[g] A description in a deed, omitting immaterial parts, was as follows: "All my right, title, and interest to one and half square miles of farming land, ... being a portion of the lands granted to me in 1841, etc., ... known as the 'Sobrante,' running from the corral of Joaquin Castro, one and a half mile and bounded by the Creek one and mile." Held, that the deed conveyed an undivided interest in the "Sobrante."—Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228.

[h] One owning an undivided interest in a certain extensive tract of land executed a deed purporting to quitclaim to grantee all his interest in and to fifty acres thereof. Held, that the deed did not convey fifty acres of the undivided interest of the grantor, but only his interest in fifty acres.—Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228.

[i] One owning about six hundred and seventy-three acres, undivided, of his original undivided one-tenth of an extensive Mexican grant known as the "Sobrante," conveyed "all his right, title and interest . . . . to three hundred and twenty acres of land, to be taken out of his interest which he now holds in a certain tract of land," etc. (the "Sobrante"), "not to be taken where the said W. [the grantor] or any of his tenants are in possession in said grant, the right here sold is an undivided one," etc. Held, that he did not thereby grant three hundred and twenty acres undivided of the land owned by him, or an interest equal to that quantity, but granted only his interest in three hundred and twenty acres, to be taken by grantee in some part other than where he (grantor) or any of his tenants were in possession.—Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228.

[j] One owning a part of a Mexican grant, known as the "Sobrante," executed a deed describing the land conveyed as "the one undivided half of all my interest in and to that certain tract or portion of land . . . . known as the 'Castro Sobrante,' which was granted," etc., "meaning to convey three-fourths of one-twentieth of said rancho, less three hundred and twenty acres. . . . . The aforesaid three-fourths of one-twentieth acres of land was heretofore conveyed to the party of the first part by Marcella B. Bradley by deed," etc. Prior to this deed grantor owned three-fourths of one-twentieth of the "Sobrante," less three hundred and twenty acres. Held, that he thereby intended to convey only half his interest therein.—Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228.

§ 106. Particular Words or Terms.

[a] The grantor in a deed may, by a call inserted therein, set aside the general sense of the words he uses, and assign to them a different meaning.—Morrison v. Wilson, 30 Cal. 344.

[b] The words "situated to the south of the house of B.," in the description of the premises embraced in a (Mexican) grant of lands, do not necessarily mean immediately adjoining the house of B. on the south. A finding that the lands intended were those immediately adjoining the "lot" on which the house of B. stood, on the south, may be sustained on appeal.—Romie v. Casanova, 45 Cal. 131.

§ 107. Appurtenances, Incidents and Rights Passing with Deed.

[a] The rule is that everything essential to the beneficial use and enjoyment of the property designated is, in the absence of language indicating a different intention on the part of the grantor, to be considered as passing to the grantee.—Sparks v. Hess, 15 Cal. 186.

[b] Grant of a thing carries all things included, without which grant cannot be had.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 64, 11 Pac. 879.

[c] Everything essential to beneficial use of land conveyed passes by conveyance, in absence of contrary indication by grantor.—McShane v. Carter, 80 Cal. 315, 22 Pac. 178.

[d] When a party grants a thing, he by implication, grants whatever is incident to it or necessary to its enjoyment.—Smith v. Corbit, 116 Cal. 591, 48 Pac. 725.

§ 108. —— Real Estate.

[a] The sale of a "bridge" across a certain stream, "together with the toll-house, stables, and outhouses of every description," and "all the privileges and appurtenances appertaining, or in any wise belonging to said bridge," passes the land upon which the bridge rested and the other buildings were erected.—Sparks v. Hess, 15 Cal. 186.

[b] Land will sometimes pass without any specific designation of it as land. Thus, the grant of a messuage, or a messuage with the appurtenances, will pass the dwelling-house and adjoining buildings, and also its curtilage, garden, and orchard, together with the close in which the house is built.—Sparks v. Hess, 15 Cal. 186.

[c] The recital in an instrument of sale that there was conveyed "that certain store, and all the stock and goods therein, and the bakery attached thereto, and the tools and fixtures of said bakery," will be construed as conveying the land on which the store and the bakery attachment stand, and so much as may be necessary for their ordinary use.—Pottkamp v. Buss, 31 Pac. 1121.

§ 109. —— Artificial Waterways.

[a] Artificial waterway is appurtenant to land and passes by deed as such.—Stanart v. Round Valley Water Co., 77 Cal. 402, 403, 19 Pac. 689.

[b] Conduit or ditch, through which water flows to mill or mine is an appurtenance.—McShane v. Carter, 80 Cal. 315, 22 Pac. 178.

[e] Conveyance of ditch carries with it, as appurtenant, water appropriated and acquired by means of it.—Williams v. Harter, 121 Cal. 51, 53 Pac. 405.

§ 111. —— Rights of Way.

[a] Right of way of necessity will pass as appurtenant to the estate.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 65, 11 Pac. 879.

[b] Nothing passes as incident to a grant of a right of way but that which is necessary for its reasonable and proper enjoyment; and the question as to the extent of the right and duty of the respective owners toward each other is one of fact, to be determined by the language of the grant and all the circumstances existing at the time the grant was made.—Smith v. Worn, 93 Cal. 206, 28 Pac. 944.

§ 112. —— Gold and Silver.

§ 113. —— Fixtures.

[a] Chattels annexed to realty become appurtenances, and pass by deed.—Fratt v. Whittier, 58 Cal. 126, 41 Am. Rep. 251.

§ 114. —— Accretions.

[a] Accretion passes by deed of land which it adjoins.—Tappendorf v. Downing, 76 Cal. 170, 18 Pac. 247.

§ 115. —— Rents, Issues and Profits.

[a] Conveyance of land passes title to its rents, issues and profits, subject only to such limitations as are contained in the instrument of transfer, or of which the grantee has actual or constructive notice.—Garber v. Gianella, 98 Cal. 527, 33 Pac. 458.

§ 116. —— Right to Operate.

[a] Plaintiff having conveyed to defendant all his right and title to "all the buildings, tanks, derricks, pipes, pipe-lines, fixtures, and all other personal property whatsoever," situated on any portion of the ranch, it thereby not only became the owner of the property specifically mentioned, and property of a kindred nature, but also acquired the right to operate them in the manner they had theretofore been operated. Dietz v. Mission Transfer Co., 95 Cal. 92, 30 Pac. 380.

§ 117. After-acquired Title.

[a] Where a vendor conveys land to which he has no title, and afterward acquires the title, it will inure to the benefit of his vendee, though the after-acquired title is taken in the name of a third person, who has no interest in the transaction.—Quivey v. Baker, 37 Cal. 465.

[b] By the Spanish law the vendor of land was under the implied obligation to make his sale and conveyance effective, and a title afterward acquired by him inured to the benefit of the vendee.—Schmitt v. Giovanari, 43 Cal. 617.

[c] Where an applicant for the purchase of school lands, who has received a certificate of location or of purchase, conveys all his interest in the land described in the certificate, the conveyance vests in the grantee all the right which the grantor may afterward acquire from the state by virtue of a patent issued to him pursuant to his appplication.—Stanway v. Rubio, 51 Cal. 41.

[d] Deed and mortgage executed under a power will bind a title of principal acquired after the power and before the deed.—Ayres v. Palmer, 57 Cal. 309.

[e] It seems that title acquired on death of ancestor passes to grantee of heir-apparent under deed made prior to death of ancestor.—Ryder, Estate of, 119 Cal. 371, 74 Pac. 993.

§ 118. —— Instruments Passing.

Deeds passing after-acquired title. See, also, Estoppel, §§ 33-36.

[a] The thirty-third section of the act concerning conveyances changes the rule of the common law as to the effect of deeds, under the statute of uses, upon subsequently acquired interests of the grantor, and gives to them an operation equivalent to the most expressive covenant of warranty, and this section applies to mortgages equally as to conveyances absolute in their form.—Clark v. Baker, 14 Cal. 612, 76 Am. Dec. 449.

[b] By common law there were only two classes of conveyances which were held to operate upon the after-acquired title—those by feoffment, by fine, or by common recovery, and those by indenture of lease. No other forms of conveyance, in the absence of covenants of warranty, had any effect in transferring the title subsequently acquired. A grant or lease only operated upon the estate actually held at the time of its execution by the grantor or releasor.—Clark v. Baker, 14 Cal. 612, 76 Am. Dec. 449.

[c] The general doctrine prevailing in the United States is, that no estate can be passed by the ordinary terms of a deed, unaccompanied with covenants of warranty, which is not vested in interest at the time, and that estates subsequently acquired, whether by purchase or descent, are unaffected by such previous conveyance in the hands of the grantor or those claiming under him.—Clark v. Baker, 14 Cal. 612, 76 Am. Dec. 449.

[d] A deed of conveyance in fee simple, with the usual words of grant, but limited in its effect by a clause that it is to be considered, as to the title, only a quitclaim deed, will be held not to pass an after-acquired title, but only the present interest of the grantor.—Morrison v. Wilson, 30 Cal. 344.

[e] A quitclaim deed will not convey an after-acquired title of the vendor.—Cadiz v. Majors, 33 Cal. 288.

[f] The principle that a title acquired by the vendor after a conveyance by him in fee inures to the benefit of his purchaser does not apply when the vendor's deed was a quitclaim, even if it contain a qualified warranty against a specified adverse claim set up by a third party. Quivey v. Baker, 37 Cal. 465.

[g] A deed, whereby grantor bargains, sells and conveys realty, carries with it an after-acquired title of the grantor.—Dalton v. Hamilton, 50 Cal. 422.

[h] Deed of grant and quitclaim made by homestead claimant passes after-acquired title. Pekin Min. and Mill. Co. v. Kennedy, 81 Cal. 358, 363, 22 Pac. 679.

[i] A deed of school lands, made before a certificate of purchase was issued to the grantor, passes no interest under the statute of California, in force in 1869, providing that a subsequently acquired title shall pass to the grantee where the grantor had made no application to purchase the land, nor had paid anything on it.—People v. Blake, 84 Cal. 611, 22 Pac. 1142; People v. Hemme, 22 Pac. 1143.

[k] Defendant's grantor executed an instrument by which he released and quitclaimed to defendant land on which he had only a school land certificate of purchase, and by which he further agreed to perfect his title, and make defendant a good deed. Held, that the subsequent issue of a patent to the grantor inures to defendant's benefit, and invests him with the legal title.—Wholey v. Cavanaugh, 88 Cal. 132, 25 Pac. 1112.

[l] As a rule quitclaim deed does not pass after-acquired title.—Wholey v. Cavanaugh, 88 Cal. 136, 25 Pac. 1112.

[m] A grantor in a quitclaim deed, who at the time of the execution thereof had simply filed his application to purchase the land from the state, had no interest subject to transfer, and his after-acquired title did not vest in his grantee, even though the deed purported to convey to the grantee all the "estate, right, title and interest which the grantor might thereafter acquire in and to" the premises.—Anderson v. Yoakum, 94 Cal. 227, 28 Am. St. Rep. 121, 29 Pac. 500.

[n] A subsequently acquired title does not relate back so as to give effect to a void instrument.—Powell v. Patison, 100 Cal. 236, 34 Pac. 677.

[o] A deed of a title in fee simple absolute, expressly purporting to convey all after-acquired title of the grantor, operates upon all the interest in the property thereafter acquired by him, and causes it to inure to the benefit of the grantor and his heirs.—Green v. Green, 103 Cal. 108, 37 Pac. 188.

JOINT INTERESTS OR ESTATES, § 127.

§ 119. Operation of Quitclaim Deed.

[a] A quitclaim deed only purports to release and quitclaim whatever interest the grantor possesses at the time. He does not thereby affirm the possession of any title, and is not precluded from subsequently acquiring a valid title and attempting to enforce it. So a grantee in a quitclaim deed may deny that he received any estate by the deed.—San Francisco v. Lawton, 18 Cal. 465, 79 Am. Dec. 187.

[b] A quitclaim deed conveys whatever title the grantor had in the land.—Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291; Carpentier v. Williamson, 25 Cal. 154; Graff v. Middeton, 43 Cal. 341; Rego v. Van Pelt, 65 Cal. 254, 3 Pac. 867; Wholey v. Cavanaugh, 88 Cal. 135, 25 Pac. 1112.

[c] A covenant of nonclaim operates only upon the interests that the grantor had or may have claimed to have at the date of the deed.—Morrison v. Wilson, 30 Cal. 344.

[d] A quitclaim deed of a Spanish grant, executed by one afterward receiving a patent therefor from the United States, conveys the title to the purchaser, and the patent inures to his benefit.—Crane v. Salmon, 41 Cal. 63.

[e] Where a town, as the successor in interest of a Mexican pueblo, owns the pueblo lands within its limits, and its board of trustees grant a block of the land to a petitioner for the same, and he then conveys the same by a quitclaim deed, and the board of trustees of the town afterward make a conveyance to the grantor, the grantee acquires by the quitclaim deed the title to the premises, as against a subsequent purchaser from the grantor. The deed of the board of trustees relates back to the date of the grant.—Thompson v. Spencer, 50 Cal. 532.

[f] A quitclaim deed conveys the title in fee simple, if the grantor has such title and does not imply any precedent interest or easement in the releasee.—Spaulding v. Bradley, 79 Cal. 449, 22 Pac. 47.

[g] A deed executed by one having paper title to an individed one-third of a certain tract of land, executed on the day that suit was instituted against him and others for a decree that by reason of mistakes in description he was the owner of a third interest in the eastern half, instead of the northern half, of the tract, and which resulted in such a decree, will be held to quitclaim his interest in the entire tract, not merely the north half; it, after granting the undivided one-third of the northern half of the tract known as M., proceeding: "Together with all the estate," etc., "which I had or may have of, in or to the same, or any part or parcel thereof, to have and to hold the aforesaid premises."—Walsh v. Abbott, 145 Cal. 285, 78 Pac. 715.

§ 120. Operation of Deed in Representative or Official Capacity.

[a] Where, under a will, a wife took as legatee, executrix and guardian, and made a conveyance of the devised property, describing herself in the deed as executrix, it was held that this was a mere matter of description, and not a limitation upon the estate conveyed.—Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 226.

[b] Where an executrix without authority executes a deed as executrix, and also in her individual capacity, it will pass her interest in the property, although not that of other devisees.—Morrison v. Bowman, 29 Cal. 337.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 656, 657; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 503-506, §§ 402-405.

§ 121. Fee Simple.

[a] The words "Enagenasion . . . . del torreno," without any other limiting term, in a conveyance under the Mexican law, indicates an intent on the part of those executing the instrument to convey the fee, and not an intent to create a mere servitude upon the land as a use or usufruct.—Mulford v. Le Franc, 26 Cal. 88.

[b] A deed which, in its granting part, simply grants, bargains and sells to the party of the second part, and contains no words of inheritance under our statute, conveys a fee simple title; but the title thus conveyed may be limited, in the habendum clause, to an estate for life.—Montgomery v. Sturdivant, 41 Cal. 290.

[c] Under section 1105 of the Civil Code a fee-simple title is presumed to be intended to pass upon a grant of real property, only where it does not appear from the grant that a lesser estate was intended, and where it clearly appears from the grant that a lesser estate was intended, a fee simple title does not pass.—Pellissier v. Corker, 103 Cal. 516, 37 Pac. 465.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 642-644; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 444-455, §§ 344-355.

§ 122. Life Estates.

[b] Under section 779 of the Civil Code a deed of land purporting to "give, grant, alien and confirm unto the said party of the second part, and to his heirs all those certain lots, etc., ... to have and to hold, all and singular, the said premises . . . . unto the said party of the second part, for and during his natural life, and to the issue and heirs of the body of the said party of the second part," conveys a life estate only to the immediate grantee.—Barnett v. Barnett, 104 Cal. 208, 37 Pac. 1049.

[c] A person entitled to a homestead entry executed an agreement by which, in consideration of care and attention, she granted to her son all her personal property and all her interest in her homestead right under a specified homestead entry certificate giving to the grantee the right to cultivate or rent the land during the grantor's lifetime, with full power at her death to prove up on the same as the grantor's sole heir to the land, reserving her right to occupy and reside in the house thereon so long as she should live. Held, that such agreement was not a lease, but a conveyance of a freehold estate for life in the land entered by the grantor.—Mann v. Mann, 141 Cal. 326, 74 Pac. 995.

[d] Deed to husband and wife construed and held that on the death of the husband the wife had only an estate for life.—Burnett v. Piercy, 86 Pac. 603.

§ 123. Estates-tail.

[a] Civil Code, section 763, providing that "every estate which at common law would be djudged to be a fee-tail is a fee simple," does not apply to an instrument conveying only a life estate, though at common law it would convey a fee-tail.—Barnett v. Barnett, 104 Cal. 298, 37 Pac. 1049.

§ 124. Reversions.

[a] Where a deed conveying a life estate in lands recited that it was the "purpose" of the grantor that after the death of the grantee the land "shall become and be the property of R.," the recital was insufficient to convey any interest to R., and a reversion was left in the grantor after the life estate.—McGarrigle v. Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum of San Francisco, 145 Cal. 694, 79 Pac. 447.

§ 125. Repugnant and Conflicting Parts or Clauses Designating Estate Created.

[a] In a conveyance of "all the right, title and interest of" C. to a certain piece of real estate, made by a sheriff upon an execution sale thereof, the words in the description, "being a leasehold unexpired," were held not to limit the extent of the previous terms of conveyance, or except out any interest conveyed thereby.—Dodge v. Walley, 22 Cal. 224, 83 Am. Dec. 61.

[b] The statute which provides that every conveyance of real estate shall pass all the estate of the grantor, unless a different intent shall appear by express terms or necessary implication, was not intended to prohibit the use of a habendum clause limiting the estate granted, it being sufficient that the limitation appear in the deed, though not in the granting part thereof.—Montgomery v. Sturdevant, 41 Cal. 290.

§ 126. Application of Rule in Shelley's Case.

[a] Words in restraint of alienation will not limit operation of rule in Shelley's case.—Norris v. Hensley, 27 Cal. 451.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 127. Joint Interests or Estates.

[a] The grantee in a deed for "one-half of my lot" will take only as a tenant in common with the grantor.—Lick v. O'Donnell, 3 Cal. 59, 58 Am. Dec. 383.

[b] Where a deed conveys a portion of a tract of land, and fails to locate the quantity so conveyed by a sufficient description, the grantee becomes a tenant in common of the whole grant with his grantor.—Schenk v. Evoy, 24 Cal. 104.

[c] A deed purporting to describe a specific tract of land, giving the number of acres, and calling it part of a larger tract, but which fails to describe the tract of land intended to be conveyed, or any tract, does not convey an undivided interest in the larger tract, nor make the grantee a tenant in common with the grantor in the latter.—Grogan v. Vache, 45 Cal. 610.

[d] If, after owner has conveyed undivided one-third of same, he retains adverse possession until the title of the grantee is extinguished, and then executes a conveyance to another party of "the interest in said lands or rancho heretofore conveyed" to said grantee, and "all the undivided third part of" the whole tract of land and rancho, the latter conveyance vests in the grantee, not the particular third first conveyed, but an undivided third, without distinguishing which third.—Hartman v. Reed, 50 Cal. 485.

[e] A deed by which a husband bargains and sells real estate to his wife and son by name, and to such other heirs as the wife may have during the marriage, and after her decease to the children of the marriage, their heirs and assigns, forever, vests the estate in the wife and son named in the conveyance in equal parts, as tenants in common, in fee simple, even if other children are born to the spouses.—Brenham v. Davidson, 51 Cal. 352.

[f] When a deed conveys a certain number of acres without describing the land conveyed, to be taken out of a larger tract described, the grantee becomes, by his deed, a tenant in common, having a fractional interest, represented by a fraction having for its denominator a number equal to the number of acres in the larger tract described, and for its numerator a number equal to the number of acres conveyed. The grantee acquires such fractional interest in every acre of the larger tract.—Wallace v. Miller, 52 Cal. 655.

[g] A grant of water rights, reservoirs, etc., for the purpose of working ore conveyed, does not convey exclusive dominion of any portion of the ground, so as to make the grantee a joint tenant, or tenant in common, with the grantor.—Smith v. Cooley, 65 Cal. 46, 2 Pac. 880.

[h] Conveyance of definite quantity of land, within and as part of larger tract of land well described, but without locating land conveyed, conveys undivided interest in larger tract, unless deed purports to describe smaller tract and fails to do so.—Cullen v. Sprigg, 83 Cal. 61, 23 Pac. 222.

[i] A deed purported to convey "all the right, title, and interest" of the grantor, being an undivided interest in a specific tract of lands held in common. The grantee executed a deed purporting to grant, bargain and sell the specific tract, and reciting that it was the same land thus conveyed to him. At that time the grantor in the second deed had no general interest in the common land, as his grantee knew, but he subsequently acquired one. Held, that the grantee in the second deed took only an undivided interest in the specific tract.—Emeric v. Alvarado, 90 Cal. 444, 27 Pac. 356.

§ 128. Validity of Exceptions or Reservation.

[a] Covenant or reservation in favor of third person, without declaring a trust, or limiting a remainder, is void.—Eldridge v. Gee Yup Co., 17 Cal. 52.

[b] Where a grant by metes and bounds excepts a tract by the name under which it is generally known, the tract so excepted does not pass by the grant.—Truett v. Adams, 66 Cal. 218, 5 Pac. 96.

[c] Where a deed described the land conveyed by courses and distances, and conveyed no specific number of acres, it was competent for the grantor to except a swamp or marsh from the operation of the deed.—Painter v. Pasadena Land etc. Co., 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539.

[d] A reservation of a right of profit a prendre in a deed is equivalent to an express grant of the right by the grantee to the grantor.—Painter v. Pasadena Land etc. Co., 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539.

[e] When rights reserved are either exceptions or profits a prendre, neither words of inheritance nor an express power of assignment is required to be stated in the deed, in order to enable the grantor to make a transfer of such rights.—Painter v. Pasadena Land etc. Co., 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539.

[f] Reservation forbidding grantee from furnishing to others rock taken from premises sold is not in restraint of trade.—Pavkovich v. Southern Pac. Ry. Co., 87 Pac. 1097.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 675, 676; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 590-595, §§ 458, 459.

§ 129. Right to Occupy.

[a] Where a father and mother deeded to the husband of their deceased daughter the property which she had devised to them in fee, and he agreed, in consideration therefor to employ the father to farm and cultivate the property, the agreement reciting that its object was to insure to them "a home on said ranch during their lives, free of rent and all charges whatsoever," the father and mother were entitled, as long as they fully performed the agreement, to the undisputed use and occupation of the property, and this whether or not the agreement gave them a life estate therein.—Weeks v. Link, 137 Cal. 502, 70 Pac. 548.

§ 130. Property Excepted.

[a] The owner of an undivided interest in land sold and conveyed all his right, title and interest therein, except a specified portion, described by metes and bounds, which was then in his exclusive possession. The grantees stipulated by instrument in writing that in consideration of said deed they would consent and agree that he, the said grantor, should have set off to him in any decree of partition of said land that portion of the land so reserved, and that they would use all their influence to secure the same to him as the part reserved out of the interest which he held in the land before his deed to them. Held, that under such an agreement the said grantor only reserved to himself the equivalent of his undivided interest in the part reserved, and not the equivalent of the whole of the land reserved as described, and that such agreement did not constitute the grantee's trustees, so that, when the reserved portion was allotted to them under a partition, they would be bound to convey it all to him, but that a decree of partition allotting to him so much of the land in the reserved portion as was equivalent to his undivided interest therein gave him all that he was entitled to.—McBrown v. Dalton, 70 Cal. 89, 11 Pac. 583.

§ 131. Construction and Operation of Exceptions or Reservations.

[a] Where a deed conveys a tract of land by name and description, and then excepts from its operation certain parcels of the tract, and the language of the exception leaves it doubtful whether it was the intention of the grantor to except a particular parcel, the deed must be construed most favorable to the grantee, and the doubt resolved in his favor.—Muller v. Boggs, 25 Cal. 175.

[b] Deed reserving a wharf does not reserve a house on piles abutting the wharf.—Upham v. Hosking, 62 Cal. 250.

[c] Where the intention of the parties is clearly expressed in a deed containing an exception or reservation of marsh or water-bearing land, and of the right to develop the same, little weight should be attached to technical definitions of the terms used, and it matters little what name is given to the rights reserved. Painter v. Pasadena Land etc. Co., 91 Cal. 74, 27 Pac. 539.

[d] A reservation in a grant is to be interpreted in favor of the grantor.—Martin v. Lloyd, 94 Cal. 195, 24 Pac. 491.

[e] Where a husband and wife join in a conveyance of the wife's separate property, reserving a portion thereof to the grantors, and the grantees convey it, excepting the portion previously reserved by such husband, such latter conveyance does not vest any title in the husband, since a reservation in a conveyance cannot confer title on a stranger to the instrument.—Butler v. Gosling, 130 Cal. 422, 62 Pac. 596.

[f] A conveyance of a canal by deed reserved a perpetual right of way to carry three hundred and fifty inches of water, subject to the vendor's payment of such proportion of the entire expense of maintaining and repairing such canal as the three hundred and fifty inches should bear to the entire amount of water from time to time being carried through such canal. Held, that the vendor's successors were not obliged to pay the expenses specified in the reservation as a condition precedent to have their water flow through the canal, the right thereby given being one of reimbursement merely.—Smith v. Stearns Ranchos Co., 132 Cal. 178, 64 Pac. 261, 716.

[g] A deed of land for church purposes, containing the provision, "with the exception of the timber thereon," reserved in the grantor the fee simple title to the timber, and not merely the right to enter and remove the same within a reasonable time; Civil Code, section 1069, Code of Civil Procedure, section 1864, providing that exceptions and reservations in grants are to be interpreted in favor of the grantor, and Civil Code, section 1072, providing that words of inheritance are unnecessary to transfer a fee in real property.—Sears v. Ackerman, 138 Cal. 583, 72 Pac. 171.

[h] A deed conveying to the grantees all the lands embraced in the grant, "excepting and reserving from this conveyance all lands which have been heretofore conveyed" by the grantors, excepts from the conveyance all lands previously sold.—Adams v. Hopkins, 69 Pac. 228.

§ 132. Nature and Creation.

[a] To create condition in deed apt words must be appended to grant which, ex vi termini, import that vesting of continuance of estate is to depend upon condition.—Cullen v. Sprigg, 83 Cal. 64, 23 Pac. 222.

[b] Estate upon condition cannot be created by deed except when terms of grant admit of no other reasonable interpretation.—Cullen v. Sprigg, 83 Cal. 64, 23 Pac. 222.

[c] A provision in a conveyance of land for railroad purposes that, as a further consideration for such grant, the grantee will place certain stations on such land, is not available to defeat the estate created by the grant, as it is only a personal covenant of the grantee.—Behlow v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 130 Cal. 16, 62 Pac. 295.

§ 133. —— Condition or Reservation.

[a] The restrictions were on the power of disposition; there were rights of way reserved; the grantee was directed to have a judicial survey, etc.; and the judge was to make a report thereof. Held, that these were not conditions, but qualifications.—Scott v. Ward, 13 Cal. 458.

§ 134. Validity of Conditions.

[a] Where an owner of land conveys it absolutely, and afterward executes a conveyance to grantee under conditions, the conditions cannot operate, for there is no estate remaining in the grantor on which they can take effect.—Alemany v. Daly, 36 Cal. 90.

§ 135. —— Restraint of Alienation.

[a] Where the granting clause of a deed conveys an estate in fee simple, a subsequent proviso that the grantee shall not convey without the consent of the grantor is void, as a restriction on alienation, general as to time and persons, and therefore repugnant to the estate created.—Murray v. Green, 64 Cal. 363, 28 Pac. 118.

[b] Condition that grantee should sell to no one but grantor is in restraint of alienation.—Maynard v. Polhemus, 74 Cal. 143, 15 Pac. 451.

[c] An agreement reciting that defendant furnished as a gift the purchase money for land conveyed to his mother, and that his mother agreed that the land should not be conveyed without defendant's consent, is within Civil Code, section 711, providing that conditions restraining alienation, when repugnant to the interest created, are void.—Prey v. Stanley, 110 Cal. 423, 42 Pac. 908.

[d] Civil Code, sections 711, 1636, 1641, 1642, construed and held that where, on a fair consideration of all the parts of a deed and of contemporaneous instruments, intent is shown to limit the granting clause so that it should transfer only a limited estate, the rule that repugnant conditions restraining alienation are void does not apply.—Burnett v. Piercy (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 603.

Conditions in deeds in restraint of alienation: 57 Am. Dec. 488, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 686; 16 Cent. Dig., col. 624, § 478.

§ 136. —— Restraint of Use.

[a] The rule that a prohibition or limitation of the use of property granted, which is inconsistent with the title conveyed, is void, has no application where an estate in fee does not pass to the grantee.—Pellissier v. Corker, 103 Cal. 516, 37 Pac. 465.

§ 137. Construction and Operation of Conditions.

[a] Where a deed conveys land in praesenti for a valuable consideration, and the grantee covenants to perform certain acts, or, in case of his failure to perform, the deed to be void, the grantor to remain in possession until the performance, this will not constitute a mortgage, nor are the conditions in the deed conditions precedent.—Hihn v. Peck, 30 Cal. 280.

[b] The deed is to be construed as intending that the condition should apply to each lot conveyed, the same as if there had been four separate deeds of the separate lots, each containing the same condition set forth in the deed.—Quatman v. McCray, 128 Cal. 285, 60 Pac. 855.

[c] A purchaser of real estate, with both actual and constructive notice of a condition in a deed in the chain of title, is bound thereby, though the conveyance to him does not contain such condition.—Quatman v. McCray, 128 Cal. 285, 60 Pac. 855.

[d] Where an interest in a mining claim was conveyed to plaintiff in consideration of an agreement that he should work the mine, and give the grantor one-third of the minerals obtained, plaintiff and the grantee of a part of his interest cannot have their titles quieted as against the grantor and his grantee, since plaintiff and his grantee took and held their interests subject to the contract. Judgment (1900), 62 Pac. 1055, modified.—Downing v. Rademacher, 133 Cal. 220, 85 Am. St. Rep. 160, 65 Pac. 385.

[e] Where land is conveyed on condition that it shall be used solely for the erecting and maintaining thereon of a school, and residences for teachers and students thereof, and for no other purpose, the estate conveyed is conditional, and, on the land being abandoned for such purpose, all rights thereto revert to the grantor, and a clause of re-entry is not necessary.—Papst v. Hamilton, 133 Cal. 631, 66 Pac. 10.

[f] A deed to a reclamation district created to reclaim land in the district and construct and maintain works for the reclamation of such land, which provided that the district is to hold the premises, for reclamation only, and that, if the land shall cease to be so used, it shall revert to the grantor, gave the grantee no right to use the land for different purposes than that of reclamation, and on its use for such purposes it would revert to the grantor.—Reclamation Dist. No. 551 v. Van Loben Sels, 145 Cal. 181, 78 Pac. 638.

§ 138. Conditions Precedent.

[a] An instrument in the form of a deed of bargain and sale, duly recorded, contained a power of attorney to the grantees, authorizing them to manage and dispose of the property in the name of the grantor, with an agreement that the grantor would not exercise any right or disposition over the property unless on failure of the grantees to pay the price at time agreed on, and with a covenant that if the grantees should perform their covenants, or if the grantor should fail to perform his, the deed should take effect as an absolute conveyance. Held, that the title remained in the grantor until the strict and punctual performance by the grantees of their covenants, which was a condition precedent upon the performance of which the estate vested in them.—Brannan v. Mesick, 10 Cal. 95.

[b] An owner whose land had been used for some years for cemetery purposes conveyed same to a city for nominal consideration, provided the city obtain authority from the legislature, and remove the dead therefrom within certain time; said city to preserve the land as an ornamental public square, or use it for erection of public buildings, with reverter to the grantor in case of sale or otherwise to private uses. Held, that abandonment of the land for cemetery purposes and removal of the bodies was a condition precedent to the vesting of title.—City of Stockton v. Weber, 98 Cal. 433, 33 Pac. 332.

§ 139. —— Impossibility of Performance.

[a] A condition precedent, though impossible from the beginning, or for any reason incapable of performance, is not for that reason void, but operates to prevent the estate from vesting.—Stockton v. Weber, 98 Cal. 433, 33 Pac. 332.

[a] Deed upon condition precedent, distinguished from contract of sale.—Brannan v. Mesick, 10 Cal. 95, 107.

§ 141. Conditions Subsequent.

[a] Two of the members of a partnership conveyed to the others partnership property, reciting that the parties of the first part have bargained, sold, and conveyed all their right to the property, and, after stipulating as to the manner of paying the consideration, stated that if the consideration was not paid the property was to be delivered to the grantors, to be disposed of to pay it. Held, that the conveyance did not depend on the performance of the condition, but passed the title in præsenti.—Cayton v. Walker, 10 Cal. 450.

[b] Agreement in deed to assume and pay mortgage is not condition upon breach of which title revests in grantor.—Martin v. Splivalo, 69 Cal. 614, 11 Pac. 484.

[c] A deed which reserves to the grantor the right to live on the land until his death, and provides that his minor children shall be supported out of the proceeds thereof until each shall have received a certain sum, and that the grantee shall pay to each of the minor children a certain sum on certain dates, and that, when the grantee shall have performed the conditions expressed, the legal title to the land shall vest in him absolutely, creates a condition subsequent.—Bank of Suisun v. Stark, 106 Cal. 202, 39 Pac. 531.

[d] Conditions subsequent, especially when relied on to work a forfeiture, must be created by express terms or clear implication, and are to be construed liberally in favor of the holder of the estate, and strictly against an enforcement of the forfeiture.—Behlow v. Southern Pac. R. R. Co., 130 Cal. 16, 62 Pac. 295.

§ 142. Persons, Entitled to Benefit of Condition or of Breach.

[b] Question of performance of conditions of a land grant can only be raised by granting power.—Vanderslice v. Hanks, 3 Cal. 28.

[c] Questions as to the performance of the conditions contained in a grant can only be made by the grantor, and not by a mere naked trespasser.—Buckelew v. Estell, 5 Cal. 108.

See 13 Cyc. 692; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 652-657, §§ 496-499.

§ 143. Persons Bound to Perform Condition.

[a] An instrument in the form of a deed, duly recorded, contained a power of attorney to the grantees, authorizing them to manage and dispose of the property, in the name of the grantor, with an agreement that the grantor would not exercise any right or disposition over the property unless on failure of the grantees to pay the price at time agreed on, and with a covenant that if the grantees should perform their covenants, or if the grantor should fail to perform his, the deed should take effect as an absolute conveyance. Held, that the grantees' vendee must take notice of the grantees' title, and hence was bound by its conditions.—Brannan v. Mesick, 10 Cal. 95.

§ 144. Performance or Breach.

[a] At civil law mere nonperformance within a stipulated time does not, ipso facto, annul a contract, unless time is of the very essence of the contract.—Holliday v. West, 6 Cal. 519.

[b] Performance of condition precedent vests title without further act.—Brannan v. Mesick, 10 Cal. 95.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 695-706; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 664-698, §§ 505-521.

§ 145. —— Conditions Relating to Sale.

[a] An instrument in the form of a deed of bargain and sale, duly recorded, contained a power of attorney to the grantees authorizing them to manage and dispose of the property, in the name of the grantor, with an agreement that the grantor would not exercise any right or disposition over the property unless on failure of the grantees to pay the price at time agreed on, and with a covenant that if the grantees should perform their covenants, or if the grantor should fail to perform his, the deed should take effect as an absolute conveyance. Held that, on failure of the grantees to pay at the time agreed on, the grantor held, and could convey as if the deed had never been made.—Brannan v. Mesick, 10 Cal. 95.

§ 146. —— Excuse for Nonperformance of Breach.

[a] Where the consideration of a deed was that the grantee should marry the grantor, and live with him the rest of their joint lives, and they were married and lived as man and wife for a number of years, the husband is not entitled to a reconveyance because the wife refused to live longer with him, though, before the execution of the deed, the wife falsely represented to the husband that she was a woman of chaste character.—Barnes v. Barnes, 110 Cal. 418, 42 Pac. 904.

§ 147. Breach and Effect Thereof.

[a] At common law, breach of condition subsequent will not revest title without office found or re-entry for forfeiture.—Norris v. Moody, 84 Cal. 145, 24 Pac. 37.

[b] Under civil law no formal denouncement was necessary to forfeit alcalde grant for nonperformance of condition subsequent.—Norris v. Moody, 84 Cal. 151, 24 Pac. 37.

[c] Under a deed conveying four town lots, and conditioned that any dwelling-house erected "upon these premises" shall cost not less than a sum named, the erection of a house costing a less sum on one of two lots adjoining each other works a forfeiture only as to the lot on which the house is erected. Quatman v. McCray, 128 Cal. 285, 60 Pac 855.

[d] The conveyance of land by a reclamation district, in which the right is reserved to use a part of the building on the premises for tools, does not show that the premises have ceased to be used for the purposes of reclamation, in violation of a clause of the deed restricting the conveyance to one for reclamation purposes only.—Reclamation Dist. No. 551 v. Van Loben Sels, 145 Cal. 181, 78 Pac. 638.

[e] Under Civil Code, section 1442, providing that a condition involving a forfeiture must be strictly interpreted against the party for whose benefit it is created, every presumption, on conveyance of land for certain purposes and providing for a reverter to the grantor in case of its use for other purposes, is against such reverter, and the party claiming the same must clearly show that the land has ceased to be used for the purpose for which it was granted.—Reclamation Dist No. 551 v. Van Loben Sels, 145 Cal. 181, 78 Pac. 638.

[f] In an action by a reclamation district to quiet title to land conveyed to it for reclamation purposes only, and which was to revert to the grantor in case of its use for any other purposes, evidence held to support a finding that the land was used for reclamation purposes, and had never ceased to be so used.—Reclamation Dist. No. 551 v. Van Loben Sels, 145 Cal. 181, 78 Pac. 638.

[g] A deed by a reclamation district purporting to convey lands granted to it for reclamation purposes only, if void because of want of power in the district to make the conveyance, still left the title to the property in the reclamation district, and did not operate to put it in the owner of the reversion, which was dependent on the cessation of the use of the land for reclamation purposes.—Reclamation Dist. No. 551 v. Van Loben Sels, 145 Cal. 181, 78 Pac. 638.

§ 148. Release or Waiver of Condition.

[a] Defendant contracted to purchase certain lots, with verbal notice from the grantor that the deed to the premises would be conditioned that any dwelling-house erected thereon should cost not less than twelve hundred dollars. Before delivery of the deed, defendant removed to one of the lots a house of much less value, and the deed was delivered on his promise that he would improve same so as to conform with the condition. Defendant also promised at different times after the delivery of the deed to so improve the property, but failed to do so, and before this action was commenced defendant had paid interest on notes and mortgages given for part of the purchase price, but which had been assigned to another by the grantor. Held, that the condition of the deed was not waived.—Quatman v. McCray, 128 Cal. 285, 60 Pac. 855.

F. LOSS OR RELINQUISHMENT OF RIGHTS.

§ 149. Redelivery of Deed to Grantor.

[a] A subsequent surrender to the grantor of a deed which has been executed and delivered will not revest the title.—(Cal. 1861) Kearsing v. Kilian, 18 Cal. 491; (1867) Lawton v. Gordon, 34 Cal. 36, 91 Am. Dec. 670.

[b] After one has conveyed land by deed, and taken promissory notes for the purchase money, an agreement between the vendor and purchaser to rescind the sale, and the actual delivering up and cancellation of the deed and notes, does not revest the title in the vendor, so as to enable him to maintain an action of ejectment against a third party to recover possession of the land. There must be a reconveyance.—Cranmer v. Porter, 41 Cal. 462.

§ 151. Pleading.

[a] Allegation that signature to deed was procured through undue influence is an allegation of nondelivery.—Belcher v. Murphy, 81 Cal. 39, 22 Pac. 264.

[b] Where execution of deed is admitted, and it is sought to avoid it on ground of duress it must be specially pleaded.—Nordholt v. Nordholt, 87 Cal. 556, 22 Am. St. Rep. 268, 26 Pac. 599.

[c] The complaint in an action to set aside a deed, alleged that the deed in question was made by plaintiff to defendant in view of death and to take the place of a will; that it was placed in defendant's hands only to enable her to prove the same after plaintiff's death; that it was understood that the deed was not to take effect until after plaintiff's death; that, after acknowledging the deed, plaintiff retained possession of it, and it was understood that he should retain possession of it until his death; that defendant thereafter wrongfully obtained possession of the deed, and had the same recorded. Held, that the facts stated were sufficient to entitle plaintiff to a trial as to the delivery of the deed.—Denis v. Velati, 96 Cal. 223, 31 Pac. 1.

[d] A party offering a deed in evidence need not prove a delivery thereof, as against defendants, who by answer aver said deed was delivered.—Davis v. Pacific Imp. Co., 118 Cal. 45, 50 Pac. 7.

[e] A complaint alleging that defendant had "placed upon" a lot conveyed to him a house of the value of four hundred dollars, is a sufficient allegation of a breach of a condition in the deed that any dwelling-house "erected" on said premises should cost not less than twelve hundred dollars, where it appears that the parties to the deed understood the word 'erected" to include the removal of a building, and placing it upon the premises.—Quatman v. McCray, 128 Cal. 285, 60 Pac. 855.

§ 153. Presumption and Burden of Proof.

[a] Under our law no presumption of knowledge, on the part of a married woman, of the contents of a deed arises from the fact of executing it.—Pease v. Barbiers, 10 Cal. 436.

[b] Where the calls of a deed to a given quantity of land of a larger tract did not identify the land with certainty, the mere fact that at the time of the delivery the grantee paid the purchase price raised no presumption that the grantor put him in possession of a particular tract of the land conveyed.—Schenk v. Evoy, 24 Cal. 104.

[c] Deed expressing a money consideration is not presumed beneficial, in absence of proof of payment.—Hibberd v. Smith, 67 Cal. 547, 4 Pac. 473; 8 Pac. 46.

[d] Deed using apt words of grant without other words indicating less estate is presumed to have intended to pass fee simple title.—Klumpke v. Baker, 68 Cal. 561, 10 Pac. 197.

[e] It must be presumed that grantor intended to make valid grant of some property unless contrary appears.—Cullen v. Sprigg, 83 Cal. 63, 23 Pac. 222.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 13 Cyc. 725-739; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 750-791, §§ 562-594.

§ 154. —— Identity of Parties.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, provides that identity of person shall be presumed from identity of name. Held, that a deed executed in the name of defendant will be presumed to be defendant's deed.—Ward v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 240, 7 Am. St. Rep. 151, 17 Pac. 193.

§ 155. —— Identity of Land.

[a] Where a deed conveys the south half of 16 blocks, excepting certain lots, numbered 5, 6, 7, and 8, and there are 64 lots in all, the presumption is that the south half of each block contained lots numbered 5, 6, 7, and 8.—Sanchez v. Neary, 41 Cal. 485.

[b] A deed having described the land by reference to the plat of an addition to a town, an unrecorded plat is, as against the grantor and his privies, prima facie identified as the one referred to by evidence that he afterward exhibited it as the plat of the addition.—Redd v. Murry, 95 Cal. 48, 24 Pac. 841.

§ 156. —— Consideration.

[a] Presumption that consideration named in deed was paid by grantee named, can only be overcome by full, clear and satisfactory proof.—Anthony v. Chapman, 65 Cal. 73, 2 Pac. 889.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 1614, 1963, subdivision 39, providing that a written instrument is presumptive evidence of a consideration, the introduction of a deed in evidence places the burden of showing want of consideration on the party alleging it, and carries with it a presumption that it was given for a valuable consideration. Blair v. Squire, 127 Cal. xviii, 59 Pac. 211.

§ 157. —— Delivery.

[a] The due execution, acknowledgment, and record of a deed are prima facie proof of its delivery.—Bensley v. Atwill, 12 Cal. 231; Ward v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 240, 7 Am. St. Rep. 151, 17 Pac. 193.

[b] If the delivery of a deed of concession made by an alcalde was essential to pass the title the presumption is that the delivery was made at the time the deed was executed. Whether such delivery was essential, not decided.—Lick v. Diaz, 30 Cal. 65.

[c] The recording of a deed is not evidence of its delivery unless the deed comes from the hands of the grantee or some one claiming through or under him.—Barr v. Schroeder, 32 Cal. 609.

[d] A deed will be presumed, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, to have been delivered on the day on which it bears date. (Cal. 1873) Treadwell v. Reynolds, 47 Cal. 171.

[e] When a deed is regularly executed, and is found in the hands of the grantee, the presumption is that it has been duly delivered.—Branson v. Caruthers, 49 Cal. 374.

[f] No legal presumption of the delivery of a deed arises from signing and acknowledgment. The party claiming under it must prove its delivery.—Boyd v. Slayback, 63 Cal. 493.

[g] Possession by grantee is prima facie evidence of delivery.—Ward v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 242, 7 Am. St. Rep. 151, 17 Pac. 193.

[h] Under code deed is presumed delivered at its date.—War v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 243, 7 Am. St. Rep. 151, 17 Pac. 193.

[i] Presumption of delivery from possession is rebuttable.—Ward v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 242, 7 Am. St. Rep. 15, 17 Pac. 193.

[j] Under Civil Code, section 1055, providing that "a grant duly executed is presumed to have been delivered at its date," delivery by recording the deed will be presumed to have been at the date of the deed. War v. Dougherty, 75 Cal. 240, 7 Am. St. Rep. 151, 17 Pac. 193.

[k] Possession of deed by grantee presumes delivery.—McLennan v. McDonnell, 78 Cal. 276, 20 Pac. 566.

[l] A deed which was signed, acknowledged, and recorded on the day of its date, and produced in evidence by the grantee, carries with it the presumption that it was delivered on that day.—McGorray v. Robinson, 135 Cal. 312, 67 Pac. 279.

[m] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1951, providing that every instrument conveying real property, duly acknowledged and certified, may be read in evidence without further proof; Civil Code, section 1055, declaring that a grant duly executed is presumed to have been delivered at its date; Code of Civil Procedure, section 1959, defining a "presumption" as a deduction which the law expressly directs to be made from particular facts; and section 1961, providing that, unless a presumption is controverted by evidence, the jury are bound to find according to the presumption—where a deed is produced in court by the grantee, and offered in evidence by the party attacking the deed, without limiting the purpose for which it is offered, and there is no evidence as to the question of delivery, delivery at the date of the deed should be presumed.—McDougall v. McDougall, 135 Cal. 316, 67 Pac. 778.

[n] Proof that the consideration for a deed was not paid is not alone sufficient to rebut the presumption under Civil Code, section 1055, providing that "a grant duly executed is presumed to have been delivered at its date."—Gerke v. Cameron, 50 Pac. 434.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Delivery of deeds, whether presumed to have been at their dates or at the dates of their acknowledgment: 86 Am. Dec. 63, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 730-734; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 763-780, §§ 574-583.

§ 158. Admissibility of Evidence.

[a] When the beginning point of the survey of the tract conveyed is a visible monument which is clearly ascertained, and the descriptive calls are certain and definite, the title passes. A subsequent survey, changing the location of a larger tract, within which it was said in the deed, the land conveyed was located, or restricting its area, cannot devest the title of the grantee, or impair his rights and evidence thereof is inadmissible. Widbur v. Washburn, 47 Cal. 67.

[b] On the issue whether the grantor, at the time he executed the deed, was of sound mind sufficient to make the deed a valid one, a will executed by him, and the probate proceedings accompanying the same, wherefrom it appeared that the will was refused probate because of mental unsoundness at the time of its execution, was inadmissible.—Gridley v. Boggs, 62 Cal. 190.

[c] Deed is admissible without pleading or proving consideration for its execution. Martin v. Splivalo, 69 Cal. 614, 11 Pac. 494.

[d] Evidence aliunde deed is admissible to identify actual grantor conveying by fictitious name.—Wilson v. White, 84 Cal. 243, 24 Pac. 114.

[e] To determine whether delivery to third person was a delivery, it is competent to show intent of grantor but not that of depositary. Dean v. Parker, 88 Cal. 289, 26 Pac. 91.

[f] Declaration of grantor at or after delivery of deed is admissible to prove his intention to deliver it.—Dean v. Parker, 88 Cal. 289, 26 Pac. 91.

[g] The recital in a deed that the consideration has been paid is not conclusive, but the real character of the consideration may be shown.—Byers v. Locke, 93 Cal. 493, 27 Am. St. Rep. 212, 29 Pac. 119.

§ 159. Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence.

[a] Evidence showing a mere expectation on the part of the brother that the sister was going to pay for his support the sum of seventy-five dollars per month, without any testimony of the plaintiff that there was such an agreement, and without the production of any written contract to that effect, does not establish such an agreement as a consideration for the deed.—Odell v. Moss, 130 Cal. 352, 62 Pac. 555.

§ 160. —— Identity of Parties.

[a] A grantor stated his residence as the Island of Hawaii, and after describing the property as situated in a certain county, and known as "Johnson's Ranch," and giving its boundaries, stated that it was originally granted to G. by the Mexican government, and had been confirmed to him by the commissioners to settle private land claims in California. In ejectment on a patent from the United States, referring to Johnson as claimant and as the person filing the petition before the land commission, for confirmation of his claim under the grant to G., but not naming the residence of the claimant, such deed was offered in evidence, and was objected to because there was no proof of the identity of the Johnson of the deed with the Johnson of the patent. Held that the deed, from the identity of names and the reference to the source of title, contains sufficient evidence as to the identity of the person to admit it in evidence.—Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533.

[b] Evidence held sufficient to sustain finding that deed was made to grantor's sister and not to his daughter.—Luty v. Cresta (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 642.

§ 161. —— Identity of Land.

[a] Where a deed conveyed land as a numbered block, as marked on the plat of the grantor's addition to a town, this evidences the existence as against him of such a plat; and evidence tending to show a survey of the town prior to the conveyance, and that the grantor produced the plat in question some years afterward as such plat, is sufficient to identify it as that mentioned in the deed.—Redd v. Murry, 95 Cal. 48, 30 Pac. 132.

[b] In 1837 the Mexican government granted P. and V. a tract called the "San Jose Rancho," and in 1840 regranted the same land and an additional league to P., V. and A. In 1846 partition was made, and, in proceedings thereafter for confirmation of the grants, separate patents were issued for each tract. In 1864 V conveyed his interest in the Rancho San Jose, the description being the "rancho known as 'San Jose,'" and referring for further description to the Mexican government grant, the confirmation thereof by the United States land commission and district court, and the government survey. On an issue as to whether V. intended to convey his interest in the additional league, it appeared that some years prior to such conveyance he had made a lease to the grantees in such conveyance, wherein the property was described as the "Rancho San Jose," being the same land conveyed to V., P. and A. by the Mexican government. In a mortgage by V. and wife the property was described as the "Rancho San Jose," being the same originally granted to V. and P., and afterward regranted to V., P. and A., with an addition of one league. There was only one grant of land to V., P. and A. by the Mexican government. A nephew of P. testified that he had known the Rancho San Jose since the grant was made by the Mexican government, and that the two tracts were considered one ranch. Other witnesses also testified that the two tracts were known as the "Rancho San Jose." Held, that V. intended to include his interest in the additional league in such conveyance.—Vejar v. Mound City Land etc. Assn., 97 Cal. 659, 32 Pac. 713.

[c] P. devised to his wife "the land of the rancho," and in the probate proceedings a decree was entered giving the widow three thousand three hundred and thirty-five acres in the Rancho San Jose. Held to show that P. understood that he had an interest in only one rancho—the "San Jose"—and that included whatever interest he had in the additional league.—Vejar v. Mound City Land etc. Assn., 97 Cal. 659, 32 Pac. 713.

[d] In 1875 separate patents were issued to the Rancho San Jose, and to the additional league, under the name of the "San Jose addition"; and in 1877 V.'s widow executed a conveyance of her interest in the "Rancho San Jose." A nephew of P. testified that, after the grant of the original league, it was always considered one rancho. Other witnesses testified that they had never heard the additional league spoken of other than San Jose addition until 1881. Held, that at the time the widow made such conveyance the two tracts were not well known by different names, and that the widow must be deemed to have included in the tract conveyed the additional league.—Vejar v. Mound City Land & Water Assn., 97 Cal. 659, 32 Pac. 713.

[e] The mere fact that at the corner of a map was written a statement that one lot was "surveyed for J." at a date later than that at which the map was received for record, and signed by "P., County Surveyor," does not show that the entire map was a survey by P.—McCullough v. Olds, 108 Cal. 529, 41 Pac. 420.

[f] A subdivision map of a tract of land deposited in the office of the county recorder, and by him pasted in a deed-book, at a particular page, is sufficiently identified by a deed which refers to it as "recorded" in such book and page, and is admissible in evidence, in connection with the deed, to identify the land intended to be conveyed. McCullough v. Olds, 108 Cal. 529, 41 Pac. 420.

§ 162. —— Execution.

[a] Evidence that a deed was signed by the grantor by her mark, followed by a statement by a witness to the deed that the grantor could not write; that she made her mark; that her name was written near it by the witness at her request and in her presence; and that the name of the witness was subscribed as one of the witnesses to the mark and signature, as required by Civil Code, section 14, and that it was also duly acknowledged—was prima facie evidence of the execution thereof, though not conclusive. Langenbeck v. Louis, 140 Cal. 406, 73 Pac. 1086.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 743-746; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 806-819, §§ 614-624.

§ 163. —— Delivery.

[a] Where a deed is offered in evidence, which purports on its face to be a deed of bargain and sale for an alleged consideration, executed and acknowledged by the defendant, and on the same day recorded, it is some evidence to go to the jury of the delivery of such deed.—Bensley v. Atwill, 12 Cal. 231.

[b] The testimony of a single witness may be sufficient to prove that a deed was delivered on a day different from that given in the body of the deed.—Treadwell v. Reynolds, 47 Cal. 171.

[c] The production, on a trial, by the attorneys of plaintiff, of a deed to him, is sufficient evidence of its delivery to and acceptance by him to justify its reception in evidence without any further proof of delivery or acceptance.—Branson v. Caruthers, 49 Cal. 374.

[d] In an action to cancel a deed purporting to have been signed by plaintiff's decedent a few hours before his death, it appeared that at the time of the alleged execution decedent was paralyzed so that he could not use his arm, and that a bystander, by his direction, took and guided his hand, and thus made the signature. Held, that a finding that the deed was not signed or delivered by the decedent, or by any one authorized to sign or deliver it, was not sustained by the evidence.—Harris v. Harris, 59 Cal. 620.

[e] Fact that deed was found among papers of grantee after her death is some evidence at least that it had been delivered to and accepted by her; and evidence tending to prove nondelivery would simply raise a conflict in the testimony.—Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414.

[f] Delivery of a deed cannot be disproved by the testimony of a third person, with whom the grantor left it, that if he had afterward called for it he would have given it to him, since it does not tend to show the grantor's intention.—Dean v. Parker, 88 Cal. 283, 26 Pac. 91; Corker v. Corker, 95 Cal. 308, 30 Pac. 541.

[g] In an action by the widow of a grantor to cancel a deed on the ground of nondelivery, the evidence showed that some months prior to the grantor's death he made the deed conveying land to defendant, his son; that the day prior to his death the grantor delivered the instrument to one W., who took it to the register, stating that the grantor wished the same recorded, and then sent to defendant, which was done. Held, that the evidence failed to show a nondelivery.—Corker v. Corker, 95 Cal. 308, 30 Pac. 541.

[h] The presumption, declared by Civil Code, section 1055, that a deed duly executed was delivered on the day of its execution, is not overcome by the fact that it was not acknowledged until six months after its execution.—Gordon v. City of San Diego, 108 Cal. 264, 41 Pac. 301.

[i] In absence of contrary proof, evidence of due recordation of deed is sufficient to establish delivery.—Davis v. Pacific Imp. Co., 118 Cal. 49, 50 Pac. 7.

[j] Where no objection is made to the introduction of a deed in evidence on the ground that it was never delivered, it is not necessary to make actual proof of delivery. Davis v. Pacific Imp. Co., 118 Cal. 45, 50 Pac. 7.

[k] The father of plaintiff told him that if he would go on the land in controversy, and could make a living out of it, he would give it to him; and five years thereafter—in 1889—executed a deed to plaintiff, which the father testified was not to be delivered until his death. Plaintiff claimed delivery at its execution, and also testified that he received it from the notary on June 8, 1891, when it was recorded. Held, that a finding that plaintiff was not the owner of the land prior to June 8, 1891, was proper, since the weight of the evidence showed that the deed was not delivered until then.—Huntley v. San Francisco Sav. Union, 130 Cal. 46, 62 Pac. 255.

and at another time said that her husband did so. Their daughter corroborated her mother, and stated that her father said he would put it away for her mother, and that she could record it any time. An inmate of the house stated that she was in a position to have heard any such conversation, if it had occurred, and that she neither saw nor heard anything of the deed, but her testimony was vague as to the continuousness of her presence. Held, that the deed was delivered.—McGrath v. Hyde, 21 Pac. 948.

[m] Where rights of third persons have intervened, proof of nondelivery must be clear and convincing.—Central Trust Co. v. Stoddard (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 806.

[n] Where deed duly signed and acknowledged is in possession of grantee presumption of delivery must be overcome to prove nondelivery.—Central Trust Co. v. Stoddard (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 806.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 746-750; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 819-841, §§ 625-634.

§ 164. —— Validity.

[a] The evidence showed that the grantor was an illiterate woman, and was ignorant of business outside of her household and domestic affairs, but had good, natural intellectual faculties, and that, after the execution of the deed in question, she had given to some of the witnesses her motive for making it. Held, that the grantor had sufficient capacity to execute a deed.—Soberanes v. Soberanes, 106 Cal. 1, 39 Pac. 39.

[b] Plaintiff deeded a lot to her son, retaining a life estate therein. In an action by her to cancel the deed, the attorney drawing it testified that at the time of executing it her mind was sound. There was no evidence that she was of weak intellect, though she was old and in feeble health. Held, that a finding that she was of sound mind will not be reversed.—Springer v. Springer, 132 Cal. xviii, 64 Pac. 470.

[c] In a suit to have deed of gift executed by decedent to defendant, her brother, a few days before her death, canceled as fraudulent and void, the evidence was conflicting as to whether at the date of the execution of the deed defendant was drunk, and laboring under delusions. There was evidence that decedent first suggested deeding the property to defendant, and that she had, through defendant, obtained a lawyer's advice as to the way to make the gift so as to take effect at her death. Held insufficient to show mental incapacity on decedent's part.—Schuur v. Rodenback, 133 Cal. 85, 65 Pac. 298.

[d] Evidence in an action to set aside a conveyance of land alleged to have been procured by means of fraud and undue influence considered, and held to warrant a judgment for plaintiff.—Gatje v. Armstrong, 145 Cal. 70, 78 Pac. 872.

[e] Evidence held to show deed to have been obtained through mistake or misrepresentations and undue influence.—Allen v. Bryant (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 294.

DEPOSITARIES.

Include delivery of money or other personal property for safekeeping, either with or without compensation, to be redelivered in accordance with the purpose of the deposit; rights, duties, and liabilities of those receiving such deposits in general, and more particularly of depositaries of public moneys; and remedies relating thereto.

Liability of safety deposit companies: 72 Am. St. Rep. 206, note. See, also, 13 Cyc. 792-820; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 897-900, §§ 1, 2.

§ 1. What Constitutes.

[a] A certain amount of gold coin, which had been deposited with a sheriff to dissolve an attachment, was, under a private agreement, divided, pending the litigation, between the attorneys of the plaintiff and defendant in the attachment suit, they agreeing to pay interest thereon. Held, that they were not bailees of the coin, but mere debtors; and that the court could not order them to pay over the money in gold coin, as being a specific deposit with them as bailees.—Hathaway v. Brady, 26 Cal. 581.

[b] Plaintiff made a deposit with defendant of certain gold. Thereafter he agreed with defendant for the payment of interest on such deposit. Held, that such agreement turned the special deposit into an account.—Howard v. Roeben, 33 Cal. 399.

[c] Under the direct provision of Civil Code, section 1503, refusal to take back property sold held to create depositary for hire.—Sierra Land etc. Co. v. Bricker (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 665.

§ 2. Demand for Deposit—Statute Construed.

[a] Demand upon attorney of a depositary is not a demand upon the depositary.—Wilson v. Southern Pacific R. R. Co., 53 Cal. 735.

[b] Where, under Civil Code, section 1822, providing that a depositary must deliver the thing to the person for whose benefit it was deposited, on demand, unless he has been forbidden or prevented from doing so by the real owner, or by act of the law, a deposit is attached by creditors of the bailor's husband, the depositary, claiming that the deposit was held by the bailor only as agent for her husband, can justify his retention of the deposit only by proof that it actually belonged to the husband.—Wetherly v. Straus, 93 Cal. 283, 28 Pac. 1045.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 1823, providing that a depositary shall not be bound for the delivery of a deposit until demand made, a demand by an administrator on a depositary for the effect of his decedent, coupled with a statement that he held a paper calling for a certain sum of money is a sufficient demand for the money.—Northrop v. Knott, 114 Cal. 612, 46 Pac. 599.

§ 3. Actions Against Depositaries.

[a] Where personal property consisting of all of the goods owned by the vendor in a retail liquor saloon is sold for an agreed price, and as a further and separate agreement between the parties the purchaser agrees to deposit with third parties an additional sum to be paid to the vendor upon the procurement of the right to sell and carry on a retail liquor business within the saloon, a complaint by the assignee of the vendor to recover the amount of the deposit is insufficient if it does not aver that the vendee procured the right to carry on the business or could carry on the business without the procurement of the license, or that by his own neglect or default he had failed to secure the privilege.—Kiefer v. Laventhal, 110 Cal. 667, 43 Pac. 205.

DEPOSITIONS.

Include testimony taken in judicial proceedings in writing, upon interrogatories, oral or written, with opportunity for cross-examination, whether taken under a bill to perpetuate testimony, or to take testimony de bene esse, or under a commission or letters rogatory issued for the purpose, or on notice to or consent of parties to the proceeding, as authorized by provisions of statute or of rules of court, to be used instead of the oral examination of the witness in open court; in what actions or proceedings and for what purposes such depositions may be taken and used; requisites of bills to perpetuate testimony or take testimony de bene esse, and proceedings thereon; issue of commissions, etc., settlement of interrogatories, taking and requisites of depositions, and returning and filing them; objections to and motions to suppress depositions and amendment of defects; and use in evidence in general.

§ 1. Nature and Functions in General.

[b] On the granting of a continuance, the testimony of witnesses in attendance, taken by the judge in the form of a deposition, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 596, and reduced to writing by a stenographer, but not read over to, corrected, or signed by the witnesses, nor certified by the judge, does not constitute a deposition, within the requirements of section 2032.—Thomas v. Black, 84 Cal. 221, 23 Pac. 1037.

[c] Ordinary extrajudicial deposition taken de bene esse is one taken conditionally before commissioner or other officer authorized to administer oaths upon the theory of danger of witness dying or being unable to attend court.—People v. Sierp, 116 Cal. 251, 252, 48 Pac. 88.

[d] Taking of deposition is a "proceeding in court."—Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 5, 9, 10, 73 Pac. 597.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 832; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 927-929.

§ 2. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions in General.

[a] Section 13, article 1, of the present constitution is no prohibition upon the power of the legislature to authorize the taking of depositions by the defendant in every class of criminal cases.—People v. Hurtado, 63 Cal. 288.

[b] Ninth clause of section 1209 of the Code of Civil Procedure is intended to invest the superior court with power to prevent interference with any and all proceedings taken by the court or agencies acting in its behalf; and the word "proceedings" used therein should be given a meaning broad enough to embrace its intended purpose, and to include the taking of the deposition of a witness to be used in an action as a "proceeding of the court" in that action.—Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 1, 73 Pac. 597.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 835, 846-848. See 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 929-933, §§ 2, 3.

§ 3. Agreements and Stipulations in General.

[a] A stipulation between parties that a deposition taken in another case should be used on the trial "with the same force and effect, and subject to the same exceptions and objections, in all respects, as if taken in this case," held to be a waiver of objection of incompetency, on account of interest of the witness.—Brooks v. Crosby, 22 Cal. 42.

[b] Deposition taken under stipulation is governed by it and not by provisions of Penal Code.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 305, 17 Pac. 214.

§ 4. Right to Take and Use Depositions—Admissions to Prevent Taking.

[a] Under Penal Code, section 1354, the court may refuse to order a commission to take testimony in a foreign country, where the state admits the principal facts that it is claimed the witness would testify to.—People v. Young, 108 Cal. 8, 41 Pac. 281.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cent. Dig., col. 942, § 9.

§ 5. —— Discretion of Court.

[a] Under section 2033, Code of Civil Procedure, something is left to court's discretion in excluding deposition.—Lucas v. Richardson, 68 Cal. 621, 10 Pac. 183.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 933-935, § 4.

§ 6. Actions and Proceedings in Which Depositions may be Taken—Criminal Prosecutions.

[a] Superior court has jurisdiction and is bound to grant order for commission to take deposition in behalf of accused upon proper showing.—People v. Lundquist, 84 Cal. 26, 24 Pac. 153.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 13 Cyc. 845;16 Cent. Dig., cols. 956-958, § 25.

§ 7. Grounds for Taking.

[a] Under section 428 of the practice act, the testimony of a witness may be taken by deposition when he is a party to the suit, or where he resides in another county than that in which the action is tried, although he lives less than thirty miles from the place of trial. Skidmore v. Taylor, 29 Cal. 619.

[b] Deposition of absent witnesses who reside out of state, and who are not amenable to processes of our courts, is expressly prohibited by the provisions of the Criminal Practice Act.—People v. Francis, 38 Cal. 183.

[c] Where a witness for the people in a criminal case is required to enter into an undertaking with sureties to appear and testify, and is committed for failure to comply, and it appears that he is unable to procure sureties, he may be discharged, under Penal Code, section 882, and his deposition taken forthwith on behalf of the people, and used on the trial.—People v. Lee, 49 Cal. 37.

[e] It is not necessary to the taking of the deposition of a witness without the state, authorized by Code of Civil Procedure, section 2024, that the witness should be a nonresident.—Dolbeer's Estate, In re (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 8. Application for Order, Commission, or Letters—Notice.

[a] Under the statutes, upon an application for a commission to take the deposition of a witness residing out of the state, it is sufficient to serve on the opposite party the copy of an order of the court or judge requiring the party to show cause on a day named why a commission should not issue. No other notice is required. If the day named is less than the five days required for notice by the statute, the order and the issuing of the commission are equivalent to an order shortening the time.—Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 9. —— Affidavit.

[a] On a trial for murder, where the defense was insanity, it was shown by affidavits of defendant and his counsel that, by agreement with the prosecution, there were admitted at the former trial informal depositions of certain witnesses residing in Sweden, to the effect that defendant's mother was subject to epilepsy, and died insane, and his brother was an idiot, and that the prosecution had notified the defense that such depositions would be objected to at the next trial. Held, that this showing entitled defendant to the issuance of a commission to take the depositions of such persons in proper legal form.—People v. Lundquist, 84 Cal. 23, 24 Pac. 153.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 13 Cyc. 867-873; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 980-986, §§ 47-51.

§ 10. Order to Take Testimony or for Commission.

[a] An order to take testimony by deposition should specify the notice to be given to the adverse party.—Ellis v. Jaszynsky, 5 Cal. 444.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 13 Cyc. 879-882; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 988-990, § 53.

§ 11. Commission to Take Testimony—Form and Requisites in General.

[a] Commission to take a deposition need not state on its face that the person to whom it issued was a judge or a justice of the peace.—Dambmann v. White, 48 Cal. 439.

[b] Commissioner has no right to take testimony of persons other than those named in the commission.—Smith v. Westerfield, 88 Cal. 382, 26 Pac. 206.

§ 12. Interrogatories—Answers.

[a] Answer must be responsive to interrogatory.—Mill etc. Co. v. Machine Works, 82 Cal. 186, 23 Pac. 45.

§ 13. Officers Authorized to Take Depositions.

[a] Depositions may be taken by notaries public; but only when the witness resides out of the county where the suit is pending, and a commission is regularly sued out and directed to the notary.—McCann v. Beach, 2 Cal. 25.

[b] The deposition of a witness residing in the county where the suit is pending can be taken only by a commissioner for such county.—McCann v. Beach, 2 Cal. 25.

[c] Notice of time and place of taking a deposition having been given it is a matter of small importance who took the deposition, particularly in view of the inconvenience and delay which would result from a different rule.—Williams v. Chadbourne, 6 Cal. 559.

[d] It is no ground for the exclusion of a deposition that it was noticed to be taken before the county judge, but was taken before the county clerk.—Williams v. Chadbourne, 6 Cal. 559.

§ 14. Notice of Taking—Necessity and Sufficiency.

[a] A slight error in title of cause, where there is no other suit pending between the parties, will not invalidate the notice to take a deposition.—Mills v. Dunlap, 3 Cal. 94.

[b] An order to take testimony by deposition should specify notice to be given to the adverse party. A deposition taken upon an order without such specification, where the opposite party has not had reasonable notice, ought not to be read in evidence.—Ellis v. Jaszynsky, 5 Cal. 444.

[c] Reasonable notice of the taking of a deposition should be given to the opposite party, and what is reasonable notice will depend upon the particular circumstances.—Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37.

[d] Under section 2033, Code of Civil Procedure, deposition is properly excluded when notice does not specify place of taking.—Lucas v. Richardson, 68 Cal. 621, 10 Pac. 183.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 899-913; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1032-1068, §§ 90-117.

§ 15. —— Certainty as to Place of Taking.

[a] Notice of taking of deposition in city not specifying office or place of taking is insufficient.—Lucas v. Richardson, 68 Cal. 620, 10 Pac. 183.

[b] Notice of taking deposition should specify place of taking by such designation as will make it easy of ascertainment.—Lucas v. Richardson, 68 Cal. 621, 10 Pac. 183.

§ 16. —— Reasonableness as to Time.

[a] The judge's original order for taking a deposition fixed the time of notice at three days, and the counsel of the opposite party acknowledged service of a written copy of notice more than three days before the taking of the deposition. Held, that no grounds for setting aside the deposition were shown.—Attwood v. Fricot, 17 Cal. 37.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2031, providing that notice to take depositions must be served at least five days before the taking thereof, unless the judge prescribe a shorter time, an order to take depositions on the day of the order, and directing service of notice forthwith, is insufficient to justify less than five days' notice.—Howell v. Howell, 66 Cal. 390, 5 Pac. 681.

[c] An order shortening the time for which notice of the taking of a deposition shall be given must designate a definite time of notice. Howell v. Howell, 66 Cal. 390, 5 Pac. 681.

§ 17. —— Persons Entitled to Notice.

[a] Under the Practice Act, as it existed before the adoption of the Code of Civil Procedure, a notice to take deposition was required to be served on the attorney of the other party, even if he lived out of the county where the action was pending. Notice to the party himself was not sufficient.—Griffith v. Gruner, 47 Cal. 644.

§ 18. —— Proof of Service.

[a] The service of a notice to take depositions may be proved by oral testimony.—Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485.

§ 19. Attendance of Witnesses—Proceedings to Procure.

[a] If a subpoena issued by a notary for a witness to appear before him and give his deposition, fails to specify the precise locality where notary will take deposition, witness will not be excused for nonattendance if he is not misled thereby.—Keisker v. Ayres, 46 Cal. 82.

[b] The previous order of the court requiring the witness to attend in obedience to the subpoena of a notary adds nothing to the legal obligation of the witness to obey the notary's subpoena, where the action is in a court of this state.—Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 1, 73 Pac. 597.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 2035, provides that any party to an action or special proceeding in a court of a sister state may obtain the testimony of a witness residing in California, to be used in such action in the cases mentioned in the succeeding sections, and section 2036 declares that, if a commission to take such testimony has been issued from the court, or a judge thereof, before which such action or proceeding is pending, on producing the commission to a judge of the superior court with an affidavit satisfactory to him of the materiality of the testimony, he may issue a subpoena to the witness requiring him to appear and answer before the commissioner named in the commission at a specified time and place. Held, that section 2036 applied only to proceedings to take depositions to be used in sister states, and did not authorize an order of the domestic court requiring a witness to attend before a notary public, and give his deposition, to be used in an action pending in such court.—Burns v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 140 Cal. 1, 73 Pac. 597.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 919, 920; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1077, 1078, § 125.

§ 20. —— Punishment for Contempt in Refusing to Attend.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 2021, authorizes the taking of the testimony of a witness by depositions in an action or special proceeding when the witness is a party, etc., or in any other case where the oral examination of the witness is not required, and where he is the only one who can establish facts or a fact material to the issue, provided that the deposition shall not be used where the witness' presence can be procured; and section 1209 authorizes the court to punish as for a contempt any unlawful interference with the "process or proceedings of the court." Held, that the taking of a witness' deposition before a notary public, to be used in a pending action, was "a proceeding of the court," within section 1209, and hence the court had power to punish such witness for his refusal to attend and be examined in pursuance of the notary's subpoena.—Burns v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 140 Cal. 1, 73 Pac. 597.

[b] The superior court in which an action is pending has jurisdiction, upon a proper showing by affidavit, to punish as a contempt the disobedience of a witness to the subpoena of a notary public requiring him to attend and give his deposition to be used as evidence in such action. The case of Lezinsky v. Superior Court, 72 Cal. 510, 14 Pac. 104, overruled, in so far as holding to the contrary. (Angelotti, J., McFarland, J., and Lorigan, J., dissenting.)—Burns v. Superior Court, 140 Cal. 1, 73 Pac. 597.

[c] Code of Civil Procedure, section 177, provides that every judicial officer shall have power to compel obedience to his lawful orders, and compel attendance of persons to testify in proceedings before him. Section 178 declares that for the effectual exercise of the powers conferred by section 177 a judicial officer may punish for contempt in cases provided by the code. Held, that where a deposition of a defendant in an action pending before the superior court was taken before a judge of such court, and the defendant refused to answer any questions relating to the matters inquired about, the judge had power to punish him as for a contempt.—Crocker v. Conrey, 140 Cal. 213, 73 Pac. 1006.

[d] Where a defendant in a pending action refused to give his deposition before the judge of the court in which the action was pending, and the witness could not be coerced to give his deposition except by commitment, the judge had no discretion but to commit him until the contempt was purged, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1219, providing that, if the contempt consists in an omission to perform an act which is in the power of the person to perform, he may be imprisoned until he has performed it.—Crocker v. Conrey, 140 Cal. 213, 73 Pac. 1006.

[e] A justice of the peace before whom a witness' deposition was sought to be taken in a cause pending in the superior court held without jurisdiction to punish the witness for contempt.—Gay v. Thorpe, 1 Cal. App. 312, 82 Pac. 221.

[f] Refusal of a witness to give his deposition to be used in a pending cause held a contempt for which the witness is punishable. Gay v. Thorpe, 1 Cal. App. 312, 82 Pac. 221.

§ 21. Execution of Commission—Procedure in General.

[a] The code conferring no authority on the court to quash subpoenas in a proceeding to take depositions on affidavit and notice, they cannot be quashed, though the affidavit is insufficient.—Pfister v. Superior Court of Santa Clara County, 64 Cal. 400, 1 Pac. 492.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 913; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1068, 1069, § 118.

§ 22. —— Compliance with Statute.

[a] Taking of depositions is in derogation of common law, and the officers must follow the statute strictly.—Dye v. Bailey, 2 Cal. 383.

[b] All requisitions of statute in relation to taking must be strictly complied with; and this must appear upon the deposition to entitle it to admission.—Dye v. Bailey, 2 Cal. 383.

[c] Taking testimony by depositions is in derogation of the common law, and must not only be done before the proper officer, but every requirement of law must be complied with.—McCann v. Beach, 2 Cal. 25, 32.

[d] In taking deposition all essential requirements of statute must be complied with. Lucas v. Richardson, 68 Cal. 620, 10 Pac. 183.

§ 23. —— Examination of Witness.

[a] It is no objection to a deposition taken by a party in this state, where the opposite party, after due notice failed to appear, that it is in a narrative form, and not taken by question and answer.—Pralus v. Pacific Gold etc. Min. Co., 35 Cal. 30.

[b] That the magistrate taking a deposition excluded a question on cross-examination is not ground for the exclusion of the deposition, where the evidence sought by the question was immaterial.—People v. Keith, 50 Cal. 157.

[c] Penal Code, section 869, subdivision 3, provides that in taking depositions to be used in a criminal action, if a question be objected to and overruled, that fact, with the ground on which it was overruled, must be stated. Held sufficient if it appear that the question was overruled as "immaterial and irrelevant."—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 98, 16 Pac. 544.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 24. —— Compelling Witness to Answer.

[a] The judge before whom the deposition of a defendant is taken at the instance of the plaintiffs, should compel the witness to answer, and has no discretion to refuse to exercise the powers vested in him by law, so far as necessary to secure to such plaintiffs the right to take such deposition; and mandamus from this court is the proper remedy to compel such judge to complete the taking of the deposition, and to employ the process of contempt against the witness to compel him to answer.—Crocker v. Conrey, 140 Cal. 213, 73 Pac. 1006.

§ 25. —— Taking Down Testimony.

[a] The notary taking a deposition may either appoint a clerk or a shorthand reporter to take down the testimony; and the fact that such reporter was not appointed by the court and that his transcript of the testimony into longhand was objected to by defendant's counsel, is immaterial, if the certificate of the notary states that the transcription into longhand was by the notary carefully read to the witness, and, being by him first corrected, was subscribed by the witness ir the presence of the notary.—Kyle v. Craig, 125 Cal. 107, 57 Pac. 791.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 935-937; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1104-1109, §§ 147-154.

§ 26. Making and Requisites of Return.

[a] Certificate of officer must conform to the statute or the deposition will be excluded. Dye v. Bailey, 2 Cal. 383.

[b] Certificate of the notary to a deposition as set forth in the case was a substantial compliance with the statute, and sufficient.—Mills v. Dunlap, 3 Cal. 94.

[c] Certificate of notary to a deposition is sufficient without seal.—Mills v. Dunlap, 3 Cal. 94.

[d] Several depositions may be included in one certificate, if it is sufficiently formal. It is not necessary that a separate certificate should be appended to each deposition.—Praus v. Pacific Gold etc. Min. Co., 35 Cal. 30.

[e] A deposition of a witness in a criminal case, taken by a committing magistrate under Penal Code, section 869, is not admissible in evidence against the defendant under section 686, unless taken and certified in the form prescribed in section 869. A mere jurat is not a sufficient certifying therefor.—People v. Morine, 54 Cal. 575.

[f] Penal Code, section 869, subdivision 5, provides that a deposition taken down by a stenographer, and written out in longhand, and certified as being a correct statement of the testimony and proceedings, shall be prima facie evidence thereof. Held, that a certificate that the "foregoing is a correct transcript of the examination in the above-entitled case" is sufficient.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 98, 16 Pac. 544.

[g] Section 2032 of the Code of Civil Procedure, requiring the certificate to a deposition to state that the deposition, when completed, was read over to the witness and corrected by the witness if so desired, applies only to depositions taken in this state, and not to depositions taken out of the state.—St. Vincent's Inst. for Insane v. Davis, 129 Cal. 20, 61 Pac. 477.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 942-966; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1117-1182, §§ 165-207.

§ 27. —— Matters Certified.

[a] Where the certificate does not show that the deposition was taken on the day of notice, the deposition will be excluded.—Dye v. Bailey, 2 Cal. 383.

[b] Certificate to deposition must state that deposition was read to the witness before signing; it must set forth an actual compliance with all the requirements of the statute.—Williams v. Chadbourne, 6 Cal. 559.

[c] It is not essential to the certificate of a notary to a deposition taken before him that it state that the deposition was read over to the witness before signing. But if the certificate state that the deposition was corrected by the notary, under the direction of the witness, it is a sufficient compliance with the statute.—Higgins v. Wortell, 18 Cal. 330.

[d] The omission of the date in the final certificate appended to a deposition to the effect that it was read over to the witness is of no consequence when another certificate appended to the deposition gives the date when it was sworn to and subscribed. Especially is such omission of no consequence when it appears that the deposition was not required to be taken at any given time.—Elgin v. Hill, 27 Cal. 372.

[e] Under Penal Code, sections 882, 869, providing that in criminal cases the deposition of a witness on behalf of the people may be taken when it appears from the oath of the witness himself or some other person that he is unable to give sureties for his appearance at the trial, and that it must be read over to and signed by the witness, and certified to by the officer before whom it is taken, a deposition is inadmissible when it does not show that the witness or some other person made oath that he could not give sureties, nor that it was read over to the witness, nor that it was certified to by the officer before whom it was taken.—People v. Mitchell, 64 Cal. 85, 27 Pac. 862.

[f] Deposition in criminal case need not show that stenographer who took down testimony was sworn.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 101, 16 Pac. 544.

[g] A deposition which states that deponent is a boy sixteen years of age, living with his brother on a place in the mountains, contains a sufficient designation of deponent's business or profession, under Penal Code, section 869.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 28. —— Transmission.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 2032, requires a deposition, after being certified, to be inclosed in an envelope or wrapper, sealed, and directed to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending, etc. Held, that an indorsement of the name of the witness and case on the envelope was extraofficial, and no part of the deposition, and that an error in the initials of the witness in such indorsement did not detract from the validity and authenticity of the deposition, and might be explained by parol.—Wise v. Collins, 121 Cal. 147, 53 Pac. 640.

[b] An objection to the admission of a deposition in evidence, because not immediately transmitted to the clerk after being taken, was properly overruled, since the law does not require an immediate transmission.—Bank of Ukiah v. Mohr, 130 Cal. 268, 62 Pac. 511.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 961-963; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1172-1175, §§ 200, 201.

§ 29. —— Attaching Exhibits.

[a] In the absence of a positive statutory provision, exhibits properly identified need not be attached to the depositions in connection with which they are offered in evidence.—Toby v. Oregon Pac. R. Co., 98 Cal. 490, 33 Pac. 550.

§ 30. —— Filing.

[a] A record must show affirmatively that the reporter's "original notes" of a deposition are not on file with the transcript before it will have violated Penal Code, section 869, providing that a reporter shall file his "original notes" of a deposition with the clerk, together with the transcript of the same.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

[b] The provision of Penal Code, section 869, providing that a reporter shall, within ten days after the close of a deposition, file with the clerk a certified copy of his notes, transcribed in longhand, is merely directory, and the deposition is admissible if the filing is within a reasonable time.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

[a] A motion to suppress the reading of a deposition before the case in which it was taken is put upon trial is premature; the proper time to object to such deposition is when it is offered in evidence on the trial.—Mills v. Dunlap, 3 Cal. 94; Ramsay v. Chandler, 3 Cal. 90.

[b] Decision of a motion to suppress a deposition rests in the sound discretion of the court, who must decide upon the sufficiency, or otherwise, of the grounds upon which such motion is made.—Mills v. Dunlap, 3 Cal. 94.

[c] Defendant, claiming to be injured by the insufficiency of a notice of the taking of a deposition, held required to promptly move to suppress.—Kelly v. Ning Yung Ben. Assn. (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 321.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 972-975; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1192-1198, §§ 219-226.

§ 32. Parties Entitled to Use Depositions.

[a] Deposition of one of the defendants, introduced by plaintiff on trial, may be introduced by the defendants on a new trial.—Turner v. McIlhaney, 8 Cal. 575.

[b] Deposition of one not party to suit at time it was taken is properly excluded.—McDonald v. Cutter, 120 Cal. 46, 52 Pac. 120.

§ 33. Admissibility in Evidence.

[b] Depositions properly taken of witness residing in another county and absent at trial are admissible.—Sunol v. Molloy, 63 Cal. 369.

[c] The admission of the reporter's certified transcript of the testimony of a deposing witness is not error, under Penal Code, section 864, placing such a transcript, when properly filed, on the same footing as depositions, and section 1345, providing that depositions may be read in evidence by either party in criminal trial, etc.—People v. Grundell, 75 Cal. 301, 17 Pac. 214.

[d] Testimony taken before court as condition to granting continuance is inadmissible if it lack essential elements of deposition.—Thomas v. Black, 84 Cal. 225, 23 Pac. 1037.

[f] Depositions taken de bene esse in criminal cases cannot be read in evidence without consent of accused.—People v. Sierp, 116 Cal. 252, 48 Pac. 88.

[g] Where the certificate of the notary to a deposition shows that, when the deposition was transcribed into longhand, it was read by the notary to the witness, and subscribed by him, an objection to such deposition being read in evidence, on the ground that it was taken in shorthand by a shorthand reporter not appointed by the court, and transcribed into longhand by such reporter, is properly overruled.—Kyle v. Craig, 125 Cal. 107, 57 Pac. 791.

[h] On a criminal prosecution the trial was set for April 14th, and continued to May 5th, because of the absence of the prosecuting witness. Before offering the deposition of the prosecuting witness on May 5th, it was shown that efforts had been made to serve a subpoena on him, but that the only information that could be obtained about him was that he was in another state. Held, that the evidence of diligence was sufficient.—People v. Goodrich, 142 Cal. 216, 75 Pac. 796.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 981-1001; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1214-1266, §§ 242-279.

§ 34. —— Continued Existence of Grounds for Taking.

[a] Evidence held sufficient to show absence of prosecuting witness from state in order to admit his deposition.—People v. Riley, 75 Cal. 101, 102, 16 Pac. 544.

[b] Showing that witness is out of state, held sufficient.—Renton, Holmes & Co. v. Monnier, 77 Cal. 458, 19 Pac. 820.

[c] Plaintiff's deposition is admissible in evidence where he is absent from the county, and one of his counsel testifies that he knows of no other witness in the county by whom certain facts can be proven.—Johnston v. McDuffee, 83 Cal. 30, 23 Pac. 214.

[d] Where the deposition of a witness is taken without the state, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2024, preliminary proof that the witness continues absent, etc., is not required as a condition precedent to the use of such deposition under section 2032.—Dolbeer's Estate, In re (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695; Schander v. Gray (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 695.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1219-1238, §§ 246. 257.

§ 35. —— Presence of Deponent.

[a] Deposition of plaintiff taken at instance of defendant may be read without showing his absence.—Newell v. Desmond, 74 Cal. 47, 15 Pac. 369.

[b] Where party has testified and been fully examined, it is in discretion of court to refuse to allow his counsel to read his deposition taken before trial.—Grigsby v. Shwarz, 82 Cal. 281, 22 Pac. 1041.

[c] Deposition may be read at trial notwithstanding presence of deponent except where deposition was taken under subdivision 6, section 2019, Code of Civil Procedure.—Johnston v. McDuffee, 83 Cal. 32, 23 Pac. 212.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 2032, excluding certain depositions when deponent is present in court, does not apply to the deposition of a party taken on behalf of the adverse party under section 2021, subdivision 1.—Adams v. Weaver, 117 Cal. 42, 48 Pac. 972.

§ 36. —— Parts of Deposition.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 2028, 2032, 2034, providing that depositions may be taken and used, it is error to permit a party to read a portion of a deposition taken in his behalf when he has stated that he should not read it all.—Bank of Orland v. Finnell, 133 Cal. 475, 5 Pac. 976.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 983-985; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1260-1263, §§ 276, 277.

§ 37. —— Subsequent Incompetency of Deponent.

[a] A legislature may at any time modify the rules of evidence; and, if a witness is rendered incompetent by a change in the law, his deposition, offered after the law has taken effect, must be excluded, although, when it was taken, he was competent.—Mitchell v. Haggenmeyer, 51 Cal. 108.

§ 38. —— Contradicting.

[a] If the deposition of a witness has been introduced on behalf of one party, the other may prove his confessions or declarations for the purpose of contradicting his deposition or impeaching his credit.—Fox v. Fox, 25 Cal. 587.

§ 39. —— Amendment of Process or Pleading After Taking Deposition.

[a] Depositions taken before an amended answer is filed will not for that reason be rejected if the issue has not been materially changed.—Pico v. Cuyas, 47 Cal. 174.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 1001; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1263-1266, §§ 278, 279.

§ 40. Actions in Which Admissible—Other Actions Between Different Parties.

[a] The deposition of a deceased surveyor, offered in connection with a map made by him to prove a boundary line, which deposition was used in a previous suit between different parties, is competent evidence.—Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 275.

[b] Depositions taken in action between two parties are admissible in actions between their successors in interest.—Briggs v. Briggs, 80 Cal. 255, 22 Pac. 334.

[c] It is proper to exclude a deposition offered in proceedings in aid of execution, where the deposition was taken in the action in which the judgment was rendered, but where there were some defendants against whom no judgment was taken, in view of Code of Civil Procedure, section 2034, providing that "a deposition . . . . may be read . . . . in any other action between the same parties."—Lyons v. Marcher, 119 Cal. 382, 51 Pac. 559.

[d] Where two actions were consolidated by an order reciting that the parties beneficially interested therein were the same, to which no exception was taken, it was error to exclude a deposition taken in one of them on the trial of the issues involved in the other. Judgment (1899) 57 Pac. 73, reversed.—Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644, 59 Pac. 143.

[e] Where neither the parties nor the issues in two different actions are identical, depositions taken in one are inadmissible in the other.—Wolters v. Rossi, 57 Pac. 73.

[f] Depositions taken in one action are inadmissible in another, where neither the parties nor the issues are the same, as against a party who had no opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses.—Wolters v. Rossi, 57 Pac. 73.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1282-1285, §§ 297, 298.

§ 41. Defects and Objections.

[a] Proof of notice to take a deposition where the written notice was defective was held good when made by parol, and it conforms substantially to the statute.—Mills v. Dunlap, 3 Cal. 94.

[b] Where rule of court is that "all exceptions to depositions, unless appearing on the face thereof, must be filed," etc. This means, not that the objectionable matter must appear, but that the objection must appear on the face of the depositions.—Myers v. Casey, 14 Cal. 542.

[c] Depositions are subject to all legal exceptions at trial, save only the objection to the form of an interrogatory where the parties attend the examination.—Lawrence v. Fulton, 19 Cal. 683.

[d] Party not appearing may object to reading of deposition for insufficiency of notice.—Howell v. Howell, 66 Cal. 390, 5 Pac. 681.

[e] Depositions are taken subject to all legal exceptions except as to the form of the interrogatory; and, when read upon a retrial of an action, the parties are at liberty to interpose new objections.—Nicholson v. Tarpey, 89 Cal. 617, 26 Pac. 1101.

[f] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2034, an objection that a copy of records made a part of a deposition was not the best evidence held untenable.—Madera Ry. Co. v. Raymond Granite Co. (Cal. App.), 27.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 13 Cyc. 979; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1208-1213, §§ 237-241.

§ 42. —— Time to Make.

[a] There is nothing in the statute that requires that exceptions to depositions shall be filed before the time of trial. The objection can be made at any time before the depositions are read in evidence.—Dye v. Bailey, 2 Cal. 383.

[b] Depositions should be objected to when offered in evidence.—Mills v. Dunlap, 3 Cal. 94.

[c] When deposition of a witness is taken, objections to his competency must be taken at the time and not reserved till the trial, or they will be deemed waived.—Jones v. Love, 9 Cal. 68; Brooks v. Crosby, 22 Cal. 42.

[d] If part of the deposition be liable to the exception of hearsay, this goes only to the rejection of that part, and the objection should be taken at the hearing.—Myers v. Casey, 14 Cal. 542.

[e] Where a rule of the district court requires three days' written notice of exceptions to depositions, if they are returned and filed with the clerk that length of time before trial, and such notice is not given on a first trial, the deposition may be admitted on a second trial, though it took place the day after the first trial. The party was in default in not giving the notice before the first trial. Myers v. Casey, 14 Cal. 542.

[f] Rejection of answer on defendant's objection is not waived because not raised when the deposition was taken.—Lawrence v. Fulton, 19 Cal. 683.

[g] Objections to depositions must be made at the trial and the fact that the party against whom they were used was not present at the trial does not alter the rule.—Clark v. Gridley, 35 Cal. 398.

[h] Objections to the admission of depositions cannot be raised for the first time on appeal.—Hobbs v. Duff, 43 Cal. 485.

[i] Where both parties were present at the taking of a deposition, the objection that questions were leading must be taken at the time of the interrogatory, and if no objection was then made to the form of the interrogatory, it cannot be urged at the trial.—Kyle v. Craig, 125 Cal. 107, 57 Pac. 791.

§ 43. —— Renewal at Trial of Previous Objection.

[a] When an exhibit to a deposition is objected to when produced by the witness, and the objection noted in the deposition, but there is nothing in the record to show that the objection was renewed at the trial, it will not be considered on appeal.—Parrott v. Byers, 40 Cal. 614.

§ 44. —— Mode of Making Objection.

[a] An objection to the admission in evidence of a deposition, on the grounds that the witness had neglected to answer certain interrogatories put by the party objecting, and that the deposition was not complete or responsive, in order to be available, must call the attention of the court to the particular interrogatories which the witness had refused to answer, or the answer to which was evasive or not fully responsive.—Gassen v. [a] Whole deposition cannot be excluded on ground that certain questions asked on the examination were improper. § 2. What Law Governs.

[a] The estates of persons who died prior to the passage of the probate laws, whether testate or intestate, whether leaving adult or minor heirs, are not within the operation of those laws, but are regarded as having vested in the devisees, or heirs, under the Mexican law.—Coppinger v. Rice, 33 Cal. 408.

[b] Inheritance is regulated by law in force at time of death.—Brenham v. Story, 39 Cal. 179.

[c] If, in an antenuptial contract, made in France, each of the future spouses gives or conveys to the survivor of them all the property which the first one dying shall leave, except what the law gives to the children of the marriage, the children take, not under the contract, but under the law, and if the survivor of the spouses dies in California, leaving property there, the same will be distributed by the probate court in accordance with the statutes of this state.—Baubichon's Estate, In re, 49 Cal. 18.

[d] In the absence of an antenuptial contract, property in California left by a foreigner, dying in that state, and leaving children, must be distributed in accordance with the statutes of this state.—Baubichon's Estate, In re, 49 Cal. 18.

[e] The laws of the state furnish the rule in regard to the inheritance and distribution, and the courts will not resort to the laws of a foreign country, unless those laws are expressed in, and made a part of, a marriage contract.—Baubichon's Estate, In re, Myr. Prob. 55.

See 14 Cyc. 20-24; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1382-1396, §§ 16-27.

§ 3. —— Common or Civil Law.

[a] In computing the degrees of consanguinity, the common law is the rule of decision in all cases except in relation to descent and distribution, in which the rule of computation which prevails under the civil law has been adopted.—People v. De La Guerra, 24 Cal. 73.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 24; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1395-1396, §§ 25-27.

§ 4. Statutes Construed.

[a] Seventh clause of the statute of descents and distribution is not contradictory of, but simply provides a specific exception to, the second clause of the same.—De Castro v. Barry, 18 Cal. 96.

[b] Descent from deceased child to surviving child is governed by the seventh clause of the statute of descents and distributions (Wood's Digest, 423), and not by the second clause. The second clause lays down the general rule, while the seventh clause provides for the case where the intestate leaves several children and one of them dies unmarried. De Castro v. Barry, 18 Cal. 96.

[c] Section 1384, Civil Code, as adopted in 1874, is declarative of law as previously interpreted by this court.—Bates v. Howard, 105 Cal. 173, 38 Pac. 715.

[d] Section 1386, Civil Code, does not classify successors to an estate but merely declares who they are under different conditions. Wilmerding's Estate, 117 Cal. 286, 59 Am. St. Rep. 179, 49 Pac. 181.

[e] Section 1386, Civil Code, must be read as a whole.—Wilmerding's Estate, 117 Cal. 286, 59 Am. St. Rep. 179, 49 Pac. 181.

§ 5. —— "Heir" Defined.

[a] Word "heir," in Code of Civil Procedure, section 1658, as to distribution of estate, includes all who succeed to, or have, the estate of decedent.—Ricaud's Estate, Myr. Prob. 158.

§ 6. Power of Legislature to Change Rules of Descent.

[a] Legislature may change rule of inheritance, but cannot devest vested right of heirs. Partridge v. McKinney, 13 Cal. 159.

[b] Legislature may change rule of inheritance, where not devesting vested rights of heirs.—Brenham v. Story, 39 Cal. 179.

§ 7. Source of Title and Seisin of Intestate.

[a] If the grantee of a Mexican grant petitioned for its confirmation, and died during the pendency of the proceedings, and his children were substituted in his place, and the confirmation was made, and the patent issued to them as his heirs, a sale of the land made under the direction of the probate court before the patent issues will confer on the purchaser a better right than the heirs possess, and a court of equity will enforce such right against the heirs, or a purchaser from them.—McCauley v. Harvey, 49 Cal. 497.

[b] Under subdivision 6 of section 1386 of the Civil Code, which provides that "if the decedent leave neither issue, husband, wife, father, mother, brother, nor sister, the estate must go to the next of kin in equal degree," the next of kin in equal degree in such cases are the aunts and uncles of the decedent, and, if they are of the whole blood, the estate must go to them in equal shares, regardless of the source from which the estate was derived.—Pearsons, Estate of, 110 Cal. 524, 42 Pac. 960.

[c] Section 1386 of the Civil Code has no allusion to the blood of the first purchaser, and makes no attempt at any distinction founded upon the sources from which the estate of the decedent may have been derived; and section 1394, which deals entirely with cases of kindred of the half-blood, does not qualify or change the rule of section 1386, respecting kindred of the whole blood, who, if next of kin, share in all the estate of the decedent no matter from what source it comes.—Pearsons, Estate of, 110 Cal. 524, 42 Pac. 960.

§ 8. —— Succession Dependent on Whether Intestate's Title is by Purchase or by Descent.

[a] Under statutes of 1862, page 570, property of an intestate acquired by devise descends in equal shares to his surviving brothers, sisters, and mother, and the children of a deceased brother or sister by representation; but if acquired by inheritance the mother does not share.—Donahue's Estate, 36 Cal. 329.

[b] An estate acquired by inheritance is one that has descended to the heir and been cast upon him by the single operation of the law. A devisee acquires by "purchase," in the technical sense of the term, and not by "descent."—Donahue's Estate, 36 Cal. 329.

§ 10. Necessity for Death—Civil Death.

[a] Testator, a resident of New York, bequeathed his entire property to his daughter "in case she should become a widow." The daughter's husband was convicted of a felony, and sentenced to imprisonment for life. The daughter petitioned for distribution, in California, of his entire estate in that state. Held, that the husband being civilly dead in New York, his wife should be regarded here as a widow, and entitled to distribution. Stott's Estate, In re, Myr. Prob. 168.

§ 13. Parents.

[a] A wife died, leaving a husband and two children, of whom one died soon after, at the age of three years. Held, that the case was governed by the seventh clause of the act of descents and distributions; that the husband took one-third of the wife's property, but that the whole of the deceased child's share passed to the surviving child.—De Castro v. Barry, 18 Cal. 96.

[b] Upon the death of the husband intestate, leaving no descendants, the surviving wife and surviving father of the deceased each inherit one-half of the husband's half of the common property.—Jewell v. Jewell, 28 Cal. 232.

[b] Under the provision in the statute of descents, as it has been generally adopted, regulating the distribution of property in the collateral descending line, the word "children" does not include grandchildren, but is confined to descendants in the first degree, the same being children of brothers and sisters of decedent.—Curry's Estate, 39 Cal. 529.

[c] Children of deceased brother or sister do not take by right of representation unless there is a surviving brother or sister.—Ingram, In re, 78 Cal. 588, 12 Am. St. Rep. 80, 21 Pac. 435.

§ 15. Brothers and Sisters.

[a] Under the Mexican law, if a father dies leaving land to his wife and children in certain proportions, the interests of children afterward dying vest in their mother, and not in the surviving children.—Emeric v. Alvarado, 64 Cal. 529, 2 Pac. 418.

§ 16. —— Half-blood.

[a] Property inherited from the father of a wife who has died intestate, leaving as sole heirs a husband and two half-sisters on the mother's side, must be distributed one-half to the husband and one-half to such half-sisters.—Smith, Estate of, 131 Cal. 433, 82 Am. St. Rep. 358, 63 Pac. 729.

[b] Subdivision 2 of section 1386 of the Civil Code must be construed in its proper sense, and according to the approved usage of the language, as including in the expression "brother and sisters of the decedent" those of the half-blood as well as those of the whole blood.—Smith, Estate of, 131 Cal. 433, 82 Am. St. Rep. 358, 63 Pac. 729.

[c] Under paragraph 2 of section 1386 of the Civil Code, providing that if there be no issue, and no father or mother, "one-half goes in equal shares to the brothers and sisters of the decedent, and to the children of any deceased brother or sister by right of representation," the terms, "brothers and sisters," include brothers and sisters of the half-blood; and where surviving brothers and sisters of the half-blood are entitled to inherit thereunder the children of deceased brothers and sisters of the full blood are also entitled to inherit by representation, though there was no surviving brother and sister of the full blood.—Lynch, Estate of, 132 Cal. 214, 64 Pac. 284.

[d] The qualification made in section 1394 of the Civil Code, as to inheritance by kindred of the half-blood, does not limit their right of inheritance equally with those of the whole blood in the same degree, except in the particular case of the inheritance coming to the intestate in the way therein specified. The rights of half brothers and sisters to inherit from a deceased half brother or sister are conferred upon them by section 1386 of that code, and are only limited in the particular mentioned in section 1394.—Lynch, Estate of, 132 Cal. 214, 64 Pac. 284.

§ 17. Nephew or Niece.

[a] Nephew or niece must have uncle or aunt living to inherit through deceased parent.—Ingram, In re, 78 Cal. 588, 12 Am. St. Rep. 80, 21 Pac. 435.

[b] Under the terms of subdivision 9 of section 1386 of the Civil Code, the nieces of the deceased husband may inherit from the deceased's widow the common property inherited by her from the deceased husband, notwithstanding there was no brother or sister of the deceased husband living at the date of the widow's death.—McCauley, Estate of, 138 Cal. 546, 71 Pac. 458.

§ 18. Operation and Effect of Will.

[a] Where testator devised his real estate to his wife for life and directed in the will that after her death it be sold and the proceeds divided between beneficiaries therein named, the right to the property as heirs at law was taken from the beneficiaries by the will, and by a decree distributing the property to the testator's widow pursuant to the terms of the will, though the beneficiaries were the only heirs at law of testator.—Bank of Ukiah v. Rice, 143 Cal. 265, 76 Pac. 1020.

§ 19. —— Omitted Heirs.

Effect of omission of children or issue of deceased children on validity of will. See Wills, § 31.

[a] Where a testator neglected to make provision for a child in his will, without showing that it was intentional, the child will take the same share in the estate and hold by the same title, as though the testator had died intestate; and if the latter leaves a surviving wife and other children, who are devisees, the pretermitted child takes the title by descent, and becomes a tenant in common with the devisees.—Pearson v. Pearson, 46 Cal. 609.

[b] Children unintentionally omitted from father's will take same interest in estate as if father had died intestate.—Grider, In re, 81 Cal. 575, 22 Pac. 908.

[c] Widow to whom whole estate is devised takes it as tenant in common with omitted heirs.—Grider, In re, 81 Cal. 575, 576, 22 Pac. 908.

[d] Section 1307, Civil Code, does not protect from effects of mere omission from will except those who were issue of deceased child when will was made.—Barter, Estate of, 86 Cal. 444, 25 Pac. 15.

[e] Under Civil Code, section 1306, providing that, where any testator omits to make provision for any of his children, and the will does not show that such omission was intentional, such child succeeds to such portion of the estate as he would have received if the testator had died intestate, the estate descends to him at once, and he becomes vested with such interest, subject only to a sale for the payment of debts; and where a will gives to the testator's wife all his property, with absolute power to sell any and all of it without application to or approval by the court, but omits to make provision for a child, a sale under such power will not convey a valid title, as against the right of the child.—Smith v. Olmstead, 88 Cal. 582, 22 Am. St. Rep. 336, 26 Pac. 521, 12 L. R. A. 46, affirming 22 Pac. 1143.

[f] Section 1307, Civil Code, is not intended to limit disposing power of testator, and applies only to case where heir is unknown, forgotten or unintentionally overlooked.—Callaghan's Estate, 119 Cal. 574, 51 Pac. 860.

[g] A testator bequeathed $10 to a son, who was dead at the time of making the will, but left a child living. The testator believed at the time that his son was living. Held, that the grandson was entitled to the same share of the testator's estate as if he had died intestate.—Ross' Estate, In re, 140 Cal. 282, 73 Pac. 976; Frear v. Ross, 140 Cal. 282, 73 Pac. 976.

§ 20. —— Intentional Omission and Evidence Thereof.

[a] Where a will leaves all of testator's property to his wife, with a request that she invest a certain sum for a designated grandson, and does not in any way refer to a certain child of testator's, it does not show on its face that such omission was intentional.—Stevens' Estate, In re, 83 Cal. 322, 17 Am. St. Rep. 252, 23 Pac. 379.

[b] Declarations of testator consistent with intent disclosed by words of will are inadmissible under our code, to prove his intention to omit child from will.—Stevens, In re, 83 Cal. 326, 17 Am. St. Rep. 252, 23 Pac. 379.

[c] Intent to omit child must appear on face of will by words indicating it directly or by implication equally as strong.—Stevens, In re, 83 Cal. 329, 17 Am. St. Rep. 252, 23 Pac. 379.

[d] A will reciting that testator, knowing that his wife would ever continue the same kind, devoted mother to their children which she had always proven herself, gave all his property to his wife, expressly excluding said children. Held, that an intentional omission to provide for issue of deceased children appeared on the face of the will, within Civil Code, section 1307, providing that in case of an omission to provide for any child or the issue of a deceased child, unless it appears that such omission was intentional, he shall take as though there had been no will.—Rhoton v. Blevin, 99 Cal. 645, 34 Pac. 513.

[e] Parol evidence is inadmissible to prove that the omission of the testator to provide in his will for any of his children, or for the issue of any of the deceased children, was intentional, and the face of the will itself can only be looked to to determine his intention.—Salmon, Estate of, 107 Cal. 614, 48 Am. St. Rep. 164, 40 Pac. 1030.

[f] The fact that the testator mentioned in the will the widows of his deceased sons, the mothers of the omitted grandchildren, is not sufficient to show that he had his grandchildren in mind, and does not rebut the presumption that they were forgotten, or show that the omission was intentional.—Salmon, Estate of, 107 Cal. 614, 48 Am. St. Rep. 164, 40 Pac. 1030.

§ 21. —— Children of Intentionally Omitted Heir.

§ 22. —— Posthumous Child.

[a] A posthumous child, for whom no provision is made in the will of the father, is entitled to one-half of the separate and common property where no express intention of the testator to the contrary appears.—Buchanan's Estate, 8 Cal. 507.

§ 23. —— Child Born After Execution of Will.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 1306, a son born after the execution of a will, and not having been provided for or mentioned therein, takes the same portion of his father's estate that he would have succeeded to if the testator had died intestate, and his right to do so will not be affected by a reference in the will to the testator's sons then living and who are specially mentioned.—Painter v. § 25. Rights of Surviving Wife in General.

[a] Upon death of father, children become tenants in common, of community property, with mother.—Plass v. Plass, 121 Cal. 134, 53 Pac. 448.

[b] Testator deserted his wife, A, and subsequently went through a marriage ceremony with B, with whom he accumulated property, all of which he left to B by his will. B was ignorant, when she married testator, that he had a wife living. Held, that A was entitled to one-half as wife, and B to the other half under the will.—Winter's Estate, In re, Myr. Prob. 131.

§ 26. —— Effect of Separation.

[a] A wife who had never maintained conjugal relations with her husband, A, after a separation, married B, under the false impression that she was legally divorced from A. She bore children by B, was divorced from him, and on death of A claimed her share in A's estate. Held, that her right was to be tested by reference to her relations with A, and her right to call on him for support during his life, and that she was not entitled to an allowance in A's estate.—Byrne's Estate, Myr. Prob. 1.

§ 27. —— Failure of Issue.

§ 28. Rights of Surviving Husband in General.

[a] Where wife dies leaving a husband and their two infant children, a boy and a girl and the boy dies unmarried, the father inherited one-third of the wife's separate estate; but the surviving sister, and not the father, inherits the deceased boy's share. De Castro, Estate of, v. Barry, 18 Cal. 96.

[b] Husband and children of deceased wife take as tenants in common of her separate estate.—Eversdon v. Mayhew, 65 Cal. 163, 3 Pac. 641.

[c] The delay of administration and distribution of the wife's estate until after the death of the husband cannot affect his title or the title of his estate to a one-third interest in insurance policy on his life and its proceeds when paid to the estate of the deceased wife.—Estate of Dobbel, 104 Cal. 432, 43 Am. St. Rep. 123, 38 Pac. 87.

§ 29. —— Interest in Insurance Policies.

[a] The policy of insurance in name of wife, is her separate property, payable to her heirs at the time of her death, she having died intestate before the death of the husband; and her husband took one-third interest therein by virtue of his heirship to the separate property of the wife, and when he died before administration of her estate one-third of the proceeds of the policy became part of his estate.—Estate of Dobbel, 104 Cal. 432, 43 Am. St. Rep. 123, 38 Pac. 87.

§ 30. Rights of Children of Survivor of Second Marriage.

[a] Decedent left no issue, father, mother brother, or sister, but left a wife, and nephews and nieces. The widow died, leaving children by a prior marriage. Held that, at decedent's death, his widow took, to the exclusion of nephews and nieces, the entire estate, and that on her death the entire estate went to her children by a former marriage.—Linehan's Esate, In re, Myr. Prob. 83.

§ 31. Release of Right.

[a] Proponents of a deceased wife's will, relying on an agreement of separation and mutual relinquishment as to all property rights and rights of succession and inheritance entered into between decedent during her lifetime and her husband, as a defense to a contest by the latter of the admission of the will to probate, held not bound to prove the fairness of the contract in order to have equitable effect given thereto.—Edelman's Estate, In re (Cal. [a] Action to determine heirship of claimants to an estate is a special proceeding.—Smith v. Westerfield, 88 Cal. 379, 26 Pac. 206.

[b] It seems that the proceedings and decree provided for in section 1664 of the Code of Civil Procedure were intended by the legislature to be in rem, and conclusive against all persons, and the unquestioned basis for the decree of distribution which was to follow.—Estate of Blythe, 110 Cal. 231, 42 Pac. 643.

[c] "Distribution" of estate includes determination of persons entitled thereto and also the proportion to which each is entitled. Wm. Hill Co. v. Lawler, 116 Cal. 361, 48 Pac. 323.

[d] In a proceeding to determine heirship under section 1664 of the Code of Civil Procedure, each person who appears, and either by complaint or answer sets up a distinct claim of heirship, or right to distribution of the estate, peculiar to himself, is an actor, and has a separate and independent right to conduct his case according to his own judgment, including the right to cross-examine the witnesses of hostile parties; and an independent actor styled a defendant cannot be compelled to yield his judgment as to cross-examination of a witness to that of counsel for the plaintiff.—Estate of Kasson, 127 Cal. 496, 59 Pac. 950.

[e] A proceeding under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1664, authorizing an action to determine the rights of the heirs of a decedent, cannot be converted into a hearing for the probate of a will of the decedent, for section 1299 et seq., relating to the probate of wills, provide for the only procedure under which a will can be probated.—Christensen's Estate, In re, 135 Cal. 674, 68 Pac. 112; Jacobsen v. Norton, 135 Cal. 674, 68 Pac. 112.

[f] In proceeding to determine heirship, every party is an independent actor and is plaintiff against all parties whose claims are adverse.—Kasson's Estate, 141 Cal. 39, 74 Pac. 436.

§ 34. —— Right to Jury Trial.

[a] It seems that issues raised in a proceeding to determine the question of heirship are a proper subject for a jury trial.—Estate of Sheid, 122 Cal. 528, 55 Pac. 328.

§ 35. —— Representation of Absent Heirs.

[a] Under section 159 of the probate act, as it stood prior to the amendment of 1861, it was not requisite that the attorney appointed to represent the minor heirs should have ten days' notice of the hearing of the petition.—Richardson v. Musser, 54 Cal. 196.

[b] Appointment of attorney for absent heirs and allowance of fee to him are discretionary with probate court.—Rety's Estate, 75 Cal. 256, 17 Pac. 65.

[c] Probate court may vacate order allowing fee to attorney for absent heirs at suggestion of any one or sua sponte, if it be improvident.—Dorsey's Estate, 75 Cal. 258, 17 Pac. 209.

[d] The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction to determine whether an attorney shall be appointed to represent absent or minor heirs, and to fix the amount of his compensation.—Dougherty v. Bartlett, 100 Cal. 496, 35 Pac. 431.

[e] Before the court can make an order appointing an attorney for nonresident devisees, legatees, heirs, or creditors of a deceased person, the court must be satisfied that such persons exist, and the order must designate who they are, and if their names are not known, they must still be identified in some mode in the order.—Lux's Estate, 134 Cal. 3, 66 Pac. 30.

[f] Where an attorney, appointed to represent absent heirs, agreed with them for a stipulated fee, he can thereafter recover from them no greater sum. The court had no jurisdiction to make a contract for the absent heirs; and an order made, fixing a quarterly compensation to be paid to such attorney each quarter year during administration, was void. The final allowance of the fee was in the discretion of the court, and was to be judicially determined by the court, after knowledge of the facts.—Lux's Estate, 134 Cal. 3, 66 Pac. 30.

[g] The compensation of an attorney appointed by the court to represent nonresident persons interested in the estate is to be paid only on account of the interest of the persons represented, and nothing should be paid out of the estate for persons named, who turn out to have no interest in the estate.—Lux's Estate, 134 Cal. 3, 66 Pac. 30.

§ 36. —— Limitations and Laches.

[a] The statute of limitations does not begin to run against an action by the heirs and distributees of an estate against the devisees and legatees under the decedent's will, brought to determine the claims of all persons interested in the estate, as provided by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1664, until a final distribution is made. The plaintiff's have five years after attaining their majorities to institute such an action.—Grider's Estate, In re, 21 Pac. 532.

§ 37. —— Presumption and Burden of Proof.

[a] Evidence of inquiries made only at the last known residence of heirs, who appear to have removed from such place, and have not been heard from for a considerable time, will not serve as a basis for the presumption that they are dead; and in such a case it is proper to postpone the distribution, that further proofs may be obtained.—Garrity's Estate, In re, Myr. Prob. 180.

§ 38. —— Admissibility of Evidence.

[a] In a proceeding to deterimne heirship under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1664, authorizing an action to determine the rights of all persons to the estate of a decedent, evidence of the execution of decedent's holographic, unprobated will, under which certain persons claim an interest in his estate, is properly excluded.—Christensen's Estate, In re, 135 Cal. 674, 68 Pac. 112; Jacobsen v. Norton, 135 Cal. 674, 68 Pac. 112.

§ 39. —— Nonsuit.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1664, providing that in a proceeding to establish heirship, when the pleadings of all the parties are in, the subsequent proceedings shall be the same as in an ordinary civil action, etc., where a party claiming to be an heir failed to appear and introduce any proof to support her claim it was proper for the court to enter a nonsuit as to her.—Kason's Estate, In re, 141 Cal. 33, 74 Pac. 436; Lindy v. McChesney, 141 Cal. 33, 74 Pac. 436.

§ 40. —— Judgment.

[a] The final order or decree, in a proceeding under section 1664 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to determine heirship, is properly entered when spread at length upon the minute-book of the court in probate. It is not necessary that it should be entered in a judgment-book.—Estate of Blythe, 110 Cal. 26, 229, 42 Pac. 641, 642.

§ 41. —— Appeal.

[a] In a proceeding to determine heirship, where the finding of the superior court is against the kinship of the contesting claimant to the decedent, and to the effect that she has no interest in the estate, and the testimony in favor of the claimant is of an exceedingly slight and flimsy character, the conclusion of the trial judge will not be disturbed upon appeal, but it will be considered that she has no interest in the estate, and is not concerned with its distribution.—Estate of Blythe, 110 Cal. 231, 42 Pac. 643.

§ 42. —— Costs.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1664, providing for proceedings for the ascertainment of rights of persons claiming as distributees of an estate of a decedent, and declaring that the court shall apportion the costs of such proceedings between the parties, in its discretion, where a petitioner claimed the entire estate, and the other parties claimed as devisees, and the petitioner was unsuccessful, it was proper to tax him with the entire costs. Lindy v. McChesney, 141 Cal. 351, 74 Pac. 1034.

§ 43. Title of Heirs or Distributees.

[a] Possession of land at death of party gives prima facie title to his heirs or representatives. (Baldwin, J.)—Gregory v. McPherson, 13 Cal. 562.

[b] Title vests in heir or devisee subject to debts and expenses of administration.—Colton v. Onderdonk, 69 Cal. 157, 10 Pac. 395.

[c] Subject to administrator's right to dispose of land to pay debts heir has right to title and possession.—Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 167, 24 Pac. 738.

[d] Title of heirs of deceased person to real estate owned by him does not originate in the decree of distribution, but comes to them directly from their ancestor, subject only to the control of the probate court, and the possession of an administrator appointed by that court for the purpose of administration. Bates v. Howard, 105 Cal. 173, 38 Pac. 715.

[e] Under our probate system all deraignment of title to the property of deceased persons, whether dying testate or intestate, is through the decree of distribution entered as the final act in the administration of the estate.—Toland v. Earl, 129 Cal. 148, 79 Am. St. Rep. 100, 61 Pac. 914.

§ 44. —— Time of Vesting in General.

[a] Upon the death of an intestate his estate vests immediately in such heirs, alien or not, as are resident here, and is not devested in favor of alien heirs who afterward come to reside within this state.—Farrell v. Enright, 12 Cal. 450.

[b] Upon the death of the ancestor the heir becomes vested at once with the full property, subject to the lien of creditors, the support of the family of the deceased, and the expenses of administration, Subject to these liens and the administrator's temporary possession, he may sell, and may judge for himself as to the relative advantages of selling or holding; and the legislature has no more power to order a sale of his estate by the administrator than it has to direct the sale of the property of any other person, acquired in any other way.—Brenham v. Story, 39 Cal. 179.

[c] Rights of heirs do not vest until death casts the inheritance.—Herrold v. Reen, 58 Cal. 443.

[d] The title to land vests in the heirs of a deceased person at the time of his death, subject only to the law for the sale of lands of the decedent then operative. Where the deceased died prior to the amendments of 1893 to sections 1536, 1537, 1542, and 1543 of the Code of Civil Procedure, authorizing a sale when it appears to be for the advantage, benefit, and best interest of those interested, the vested rights of the heirs cannot be affected or impaired thereby.—Estate of Newlove, 142 Cal. 377, 75 Pac. 1083.

§ 45. —— In Absence of Administration.

[a] An action cannot be maintained by any heirs of a deceased person against the other heirs, to recover their distributive share of the decedent's property, when there has been no administration on his estate, but the defendants managed it, for a few years after the death of the deceased, under and for his widow, and the plaintiffs succeeded them in such management.—Valencia v. Bernal, 26 Cal. 328.

[b] Under the Mexican system, on the death of an intestate the heirs succeeded immediately to the estate, and became personally responsible for the debts of the deceased, whether they were adults or minors; and no administration in the sense of the common law was needed or could be had at any time. Coppinger v. Rice, 33 Cal. 408.

§ 46. —— Real Property and Interests Therein.

[a] An heir can maintain ejectment for the realty when a considerable period has elapsed since the ancestor's death, and no administration has been taken out, or is required to be taken, because no debts exist.—Updegraff v. Trask, 18 Cal. 458.

[b] Where a Mexican grantee dies, and his heirs petition for and obtain to themselves a confirmation of the grant, and the patent issues to them, the legal title vests in the heirs and their grantees.—Hartley v. Brown, 51 Cal. 465.

[c] Pending the administration of an estate no title to real estate vests in an heir sufficient to maintain an action of ejectment or to quiet title.—Harper v. Strutz, 53 Cal. 655.

[d] A direction to the executrix of a will to convert all the testator's property, real, personal, or mixed, into money, operates as a conversion of the land into money from the death of the testator only for the benefit of those for whose use the conversion is intended to be made, and does not operate as a devise of land to the executrix, or deprive the heir of the right to maintain an action of ejectment for the possession of the land, and for recovery of the rents, issues, and profits thereof, as against any person other than the executrix.—Estep v. Armstrong, 91 Cal. 659, 27 Pac. 1091.

§ 47. Possession and Control of Property.

[a] Under our peculiar system (as in Texas), real and personal estate vests in the heir, subject to the administrator's lien, derived from the deceased, for the payment of debts, etc., and to his right of present possession.—Beckett v. Selover, 7 Cal. 215, 68 Am. Dec. 237.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 110-112; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1634-1640, §§ 263-275.

§ 48. —— Real Property.

[a] The statute giving possession of real estate of intestates to their administrators until administration and distribution are had applies only to cases arising since the statute was passed. The heirs took the estate of intestates dying before its passage, and are proper parties to bring ejectment.—Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

[b] Under the state law, the right to possession of real estate of an intestate remains exclusively with the administrator until the estate is settled or distribution ordered by the probate court, and, until such time neither the heirs nor their grantees can maintain ejectment for the property.—Meeks v. Hahn, 20 Cal. 620.

[c] Under section 114 of the statute for the settlement of estates, giving the administrator the right to the possession of the realty of the intestate, and to receive the rents and profits therefrom until the estate is settled, the right of possession of such property is exclusively in the administrator, notwithstanding the statute provides that the estates of intestates shall descend to the heirs, subject to the payment of debts.—Meeks v. Hahn, 20 Cal. 620.

[d] Where an heir of realty belonging partly to an estate joins in a lease with the other owners, and thereafter such heir is appointed administrator of the estate, the lessees of heirs who did not join in the lease cannot oust the administrator having the right to possession, but are entitled to be let into possession jointly with the prior lessees, to the extent of the interest of their lessors, so far as authorized by their lease.—Berry v. Eyraud, 134 Cal. 82, 66 Pac. 74.

§ 49. —— Personal Property.

[a] Under the statute of descent, vesting the title of personalty in the heir, the administrator is entitled to its possession until disposed of in the course of administration, and the right of possession extends by relation back to the time of the death of the intestate.—Jahns v. Nolting, 29 Cal. 507.

§ 50. Division of Estate by Legal Proceedings.

[a] The probate court has no power to direct that the portion of an estate of an intestate, originally allotted to one of the heirs at law, a nonresident, shall be distributed among the other heirs, if he shall fail to appear and claim it within a year. The money should be paid into the state treasury, where it must remain until claimed by the owner, or, in case of his death, by his representatives.—Pyatt v. Brockman, 6 Cal. 418.

Partition in connection with distribution of estates of decedents: 41 Am. St. Rep. 140, note.

§ 51. Rights of Surviving Wife.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 1402, the probate court has jurisdiction to declare certain property devised to testator's son to be community property, and to distribute it to the wife, who is not a legatee or devisee.—Burdick's Estate, In re, 40 Pac. 35.

§ 52. Conveyances and Assignments by Heirs or Distributees.

[a] If heir convey his interest in estate of his ancestor, he conveys such interest only as will remain to him after satisfying the objects of administration, unless the deed should in express terms cover more.—Moore's Estate, 57 Cal. 437.

[b] A power of attorney given by an heir to receive his distributive share of the estate to one who had purchased it does not constitute a transfer of the title thereto.—Freeman v. Rahm, 58 Cal. 111.

[c] Heir may contract about or convey title cast upon him by death of ancestor.—Chever v. Ching Hong Poy, 82 Cal. 71, 22 Pac. 1081.

[d] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1678, providing that distribution of real estate may be made to the grantees of the original heirs, legatees, or devisees, does not authorize distribution to a mortgagee of the testatrix.—Brook's Estate, In re, 125 Cal. 459, 58 Pac. 89.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 133-139; 16 Cent. Dig., cols. 1680-1694, §§ 322-336.

§ 53. —— Rights and Liabilities of Purchasers or Assignees.

[a] Deed of heir passes only right acquired by succession and not rights given by probate law.—Moore's Estate, 57 Cal. 437.

[b] Under Code of Civil Precedure, section 1678, providing that upon distribution, if any of the heirs, legatees, or devisees, have conveyed their shares to other persons, such shares must be assigned to the persons holding them in the same manner as they otherwise would have been to such heirs, legatees, or devisees, and that (section 1908) a judgment or final order in an action or special proceeding before a court having jurisdiction is conclusive, etc., a decree of the probate court assigning to an heir his share of the estate is conclusive upon one who purchased it prior to the decree, as against an attaching creditor of the heir, it appearing that such purchaser had notice of the proceedings of distribution, but failed to assert his rights therein.—Freeman v. Rahm, 58 Cal. 111.

[c] Distribution of a legatee's interest in an estate to his assignee's assignee should not be refused on account of the pendency of a suit to set aside the assignment, brought a few days before the date fixed for distribution, against the original assignee, in which suit the assignee claiming distribution was not a party, and no service had been had or appearance entered at said date, and there was no pretense but that the note to secure which the assignment was made was for a valuable consideration and without fraud.—Phillips, In re, 71 Cal. 285, 12 Pac. 169.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1664, which provides that, in all estates now being administered, any person claiming to be heir to the deceased, or entitled to distribution, in whole of in part, of such estate, may file a petition praying the court to "declare the rights of all persons to said estate, and all interests therein, and to whom distribution thereof should be made," etc., one who has, by purchase, succeeded to the rights of the heirs to land before distribution, may maintain her petition in the superior court for the determination of the title and for distribution.—Burton, In re, 93 Cal. 459, 29 Pac. 36; distinguishing Theller v. Such, 57 Cal. 447; Bath v. Valdez, 70 Cal. 350, 11 Pac. 724; Barnard v. Wilson, 74 Cal. 512, 16 Pac. 307; and Chever v. Ching Hong Poy, 82 Cal. 68, 22 Pac. 1081.

[f] All the heirs of an estate except one conveyed all their interest in certain property to the latter, who conveyed it to petitioner, Held, that distribution thereof should be decreed to petitioner and not the legal heirs, where notice was served on all parties interested, and the fact of petitioner's ownership was before the court.—Vaughn's Estate, In re, 92 Cal. 192, 28 Pac. 221.

[g] One to whom the title of an heir of an estate is transferred or mortgaged as a rule takes only so much of the distributive share of such heir as remains after the purposes and objects of administration have been satisfied, and is presumed to know the law, but is not presumed to anticipate or have notice of any unusual or extraordinary proceeding taken under the form or guise of law.—Curtis v. Schell, 129 Cal. 208, 79 Am. St. Rep. 107, 61 Pac. 951.

[h] The assignee of a deceased heir may have the assigned property distributed to him directly to pay a debt against the heir secured by such assignment, but the court cannot order a sale of real estate to pay the indebtedness, nor can it distribute real estate where the assignment contained a defeasance in case of payment of the debt.—Hite's Estate, In re, Myr. Prob. 232.

54. Contracts by Heirs.

[a] Heirs cannot bind estate by contract.—Stuttmeister, In re, 75 Cal. 348, 17 Pac. 223.

§ 55. Actions Between Heirs and Distributees—Pleading.

[a] A complaint showing that intestate, having a separate estate of eighteen hundred dollars in money, and other personalty, died in 1860, leaving him surviving a widow and two children, the plaintiffs, aged ten and eight years; that there were no claims against the estate, which was not administered upon; that the widow took possession of the money and personalty for the benefit of herself and plaintiffs, and sold the personalty for four hundred dollars, retaining the two thousand two hundred dollars until she married in 1861, when she invested it in real estate in her husband's name; that both knew of plaintiffs' interest in the money, and acknowledged their rights until within sixty days before suit brought; and praying for an accounting and a lien on the realty for the amount found due—is sufficient to put defendants to answer.—McClure v. Colyear, 80 Cal. 378, 22 Pac. 175.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 56. Actions by Heirs and Distributees.

[a] In an action brought by a distributee against an executor to recover the value of land allotted to the plaintiff under a decree of distribution the complaint alleged that by the decree it was adjudged that the defendant came into possession of the land in question as executor, and was chargeable with the same, and that he be charged with it; but further alleged, in effect, that prior to the rendition of the decree the land had been lost to the estate through the negligence of the defendant, by an adverse possession of intruders for more than five years. Held, (1) that the complaint stated a good cause of action; and (2) that it did not rest upon the last-mentioned averment, but was based on the decree of distribution, and (being in due time after the decree) that the action was not barred.—Wheeler v. Bolton, 54 Cal. 302.

[b] Heir may maintain action to recover possession against anyone except administrator.—Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 167, 24 Pac. 738.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 57. —— Limitations.

[a] When a wife dies, and her husband takes possession of her whole property, and interest in the common property, though she leaves heirs to whom a portion of it should pass, the statute of limitations does not run to bar the claims of such heirs, etc., against the husband or his representatives, who hold as trustees.—Ord v. De La Guerra, 18 Cal. 67.

§ 58. —— Relating to Real Property.

[a] An allegation in the complaint that plaintiffs are the sons of Joaquin Castro, and have been in possession of the rancho since his decease, is, in the absence of a special demurrer, a sufficient allegation of heirship.—Castro v. Armesti, 14 Cal. 38.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 384, providing that "all persons holding as tenants in common, ... or any number less than all, may jointly or severally commence or defend any civil action or proceeding for the enforcement or protection of the rights of such party," one of several codistributees of the estate of a decedent may maintain ejectment against another person in possession of the entire premises distributed.—Moulton v. McDermott, 80 Cal. 629, 22 Pac. 296.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 384, providing that tenants in common may jointly or severally commence any civil action to protect their rights, and section 1452, providing that heirs may themselves, or jointly with the administrator, maintain an action for possession of the real estate, but that they shall not be required to do so, one heir alone could bring action for the recovery of real property left by deceased.—Kimball v. Tripp, 136 Cal. 631, 69 Pac. 428.

[d] The heirs may bring suit to set aside a deed made by intestate; Code of Civil Procedure, section 1452, providing they may maintain action for possession of his real estate, or to quiet title to it, against anyone but the administrator.—Trubody v. Trubody, 137 Cal. 172, 69 Pac. 968.

§ 59. Actions Against Heirs or Distributees —Parties.

[a] As, under our system, all the estate vests in the heir, subject to certain rights of the administrator, on the death of one who holds title to lands owned by a firm of which he is a member, a bill in equity, making the heir, administrator, and widow defendants, is necessary to transfer the legal title to the partner who has the equitable right.—Gray v. [c] A judgment creditor of a widow held entitled to enforce his judgment only against such portion of the residue of the estate of the widow's deceased husband as belonged to her or her successors in interest.—Angle's Estate, In re (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 668.

[d] After a decree of distribution the property no longer belongs to the estate of the deceased, but is the property of the distributees therein named, and a creditor of the estate cannot thereafter make any claim against the fund.—Dall's Estate, In re, Myr. Prob. 159.

DETINUE.

Include actions for recovery of specific personal property wrongfully detained, or the value thereof as damages where it cannot be delivered, founded on the right of property; nature and scope of the remedy in general; grounds of such actions and defenses thereto; by and against whom and as to what property they may be maintained; procedure therein; alternative or incidental recovery of damages; verdict and judgment and enforcement thereof; review of proceedings; and costs in such actions.

§ 1. In General.

[a] In the action of detinue, the manner of laying the possession of the property has always been held to be inducement. It is usual to aver a bailment or finding.—Otero v. Bullard, 3 Cal. 188.

[b] Possession by defendant, of subject of action at time of its commencement is not essential to recovery in detinue.—Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258, 62 Pac. 463.

[c] The usual judgment in an action of detinue is in the alternative that the plaintiff recover the possession of the property, or its value, in case delivery cannot be had; but where it appears that delivery cannot be had, the defendant is not prejudiced by a judgment for value only, without any alternative. Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank 130 Cal. 258, 62 Pac. 463.

[d] The action in this case being based upon a contract of bailment, in which the original taking was lawful but the detention was unlawful, the wrong is one for which the common-law action of detinue is especially appropriate. In such action, it was no defense that the defendant had voluntarily disposed of the bailed property before the commencement of the action, in breach of his duty as bailee.—Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258, 62 Pac. 463.

[e] Notwithstanding Code of Civil Procedure, sections 509-520, provide an auxiliary remedy to one suing to recover specific property by which he may secure possession before trial, an action analogous to the common-law action of detinue may be maintained against a bailee who has wrongfully delivered plaintiff's property to a third person, without invoking the auxiliary remedy, and hence a judgment for the value of the property is proper, though the prayer in the complaint be for either the return of the property or judgment for its value.—Faulkner v. First Nat. Bank, 130 Cal. 258, 62 Pac. 463.

§ 1. Retraxit or Nolle Prosequi.

[a] A judgment of dismissal, rendered on the application of either party, with the written consent of the other, amounts to an open and voluntary renunciation of the plaintiff's suit, which amounts to a retraxit. Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542.

[b] A dismissal of a prior contest before citation was served on defendant is not a retraxit.—Lord v. Dunster, 79 Cal. 477, 21 Pac. 865.

[c] An order of dismissal, to operate as a retraxit, must be made on motion of one party on the written consent of the other.—Stoutenborough v. Board of Education of City and County of San Francisco, 104 Cal. 664, 38 Pac. 449.

§ 1½. What Constitutes Dismissal.

[a] Where plaintiff made an ineffectual attempt to dismiss before trial under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 1, the mere making of a subsequent motion for a dismissal by plaintiff's attorneys in open court held not a dismissal under such section. Boca etc. R. Co. v. Superior Court of Lassen County (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 718.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 393; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 7, 8, § 2.

§ 2. Necessity that Renunciation be Made by Attorney of Record.

[a] Under our practice, the plaintiff in person cannot make a renunciation of his suit in court, but such renunciation must be made by his attorney of record.—Merritt v. Campbell, 47 Cal. 542.

[b] Where a party appeared by attorney and had an attorney of record representing him, such party, acting in his own proper person, was not entitled to dismiss the action without the attorney's consent, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 1.—Boca etc. R. Co. v. Superior Court of Lassen County (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 718.

§ 3. Condition of Cause.

[a] Plaintiff has a right to take a nonsuit at any time before the jury retires, there being no counterclaim.—Hancock Ditch Co. v. Bradford, 13 Cal. 637.

[b] The right of the plaintiff to dismiss the action of his own motion with legal form and effect cannot be impaired by the fact that a judgment of dismissal had been before improvidently, irregularly, and illegally entered by the clerk.—Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152, 46 Pac. 904.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 400, 406; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 11-26, §§ 6-26.

§ 4. —— Submission to Reference.

[a] A plaintiff can voluntarily submit to a nonsuit before a referee in a case where no counterclaim is set up by the defendant.—Plant v. Fleming, 20 Cal. 92.

§ 5. —— Evidence Closed.

[a] A nonsuit may be granted after the evidence on both sides is closed.—Toulouse v. Pare, 103 Cal. 251, 37 Pac. 146.

§ 6. —— Submission to Court or Jury.

[a] Plaintiff has not the absolute right to take a nonsuit after the case has been finally submitted and the jury has retired; but such right does exist at any time before such final submission and retirement.—Brown v. Harter, 18 Cal. 76.

[b] Under the practice act, a plaintiff can dismiss his action "at any time before trial," but not after the action has been tried and submitted, without a written consent of the defendants; and a dismissal granted upon the ex parte motion of the plaintiff will be overruled upon appeal.—Heinlin v. Castro, 22 Cal. 100.

[c] After cause is regularly tried and submitted for decision, it cannot be dismissed on plaintiff's motion.—Casey v. Jordan, 68 Cal. 247, 9 Pac. 92, 305.

[d] Where cause has been tried and submitted, but submission is set aside, plaintiff has right, with leave of court, to dismiss action.—Westbay v. Gray, 116 Cal. 667, 48 Pac. 800.

[e] Where a complaint contains three alleged causes of action, and defendant demurs thereto, and the demurrer is sustained as to two of the cases and overruled as to the third, and defendant answers the third cause of action, and plaintiff dismisses as to it, and does not amend his complaint, there is a trial, and he cannot afterward dismiss the entire action, but judgment may be rendered for defendants as to the issues raised by demurrer.—Goldtree v. Spreckels, 135 Cal. 666, 67 Pac. 1091.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 7. Right to Withdraw or Discontinue.

[a] Under section 581 of the Civil Code, any action, including an action of interpleader, may be dismissed by the plaintiff at any time before trial, upon payment of costs, provided a counterclaim has not been made or affirmative relief sought by cross-complaint or answer of either of the defendants.—Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 52, 46 Pac. 904.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, authorizing a dismissal of a suit by the plaintiff before trial, on payment of costs, unless affirmative relief is sought, or with defendant's consent, where a defendant, on mortgage foreclosure, seeks by a cross-complaint a foreclosure of a mortgage held by him, as a prior one, it is proper not to allow such defendant to dismiss his cross-complaint without plaintiff's consent.—Rodgers v. Parker, 136 Cal. 313, 68 Pac. 975.

[c] Where the answer consists of a mere denial of the allegations of the complaint, and no affirmative relief is sought by the defendant, by the way of answer or cross-complaint, and a petition in intervention is merely for the purpose of resisting the plaintiff's claim, the plaintiff has the right to dismiss the action, both as against the defendant and the intervener.—Henry v. Vineland etc. Dist., 140 Cal. 376, 73 Pac. 1061.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 394, 397; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 26-31, §§ 27-31.

8. Estoppel or Waiver of Right.

[a] Right to dismiss is not precluded by stipulation for judgment containing conditions which never occurred and cannot occur. Southern etc. Water Co. v. Cameron, 141 Cal. 286, 287, 74 Pac. 838.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 9. Grounds for Objection—Defendant's Right to Affirmative Relief Demanded Generally.

[a] In an action to acquire title, defendant's answer set up matter which, if properly pleaded, would have entitled him to relief, but such matters were not pleaded as a counterclaim, but as a defense. In 1865, plaintiff's motion to dismiss the complaint was denied because the answer contained a counterclaim; but in 1876 the motion was again renewed and granted. Held, that the former order refusing to dismiss the action was conclusive on the parties, for the court could not, after such lapse of time, so change the interpretation of the answer as to prevent the defendants from being heard.—Brannan v. Paty, 58 Cal. 330.

[b] When a defendant avers matters growing out of the matters set forth in the complaint upon which he seeks affirmative relief, the plaintiff cannot dismiss the action upon his own motion, and without the consent of the defendant.—Clark v. Hundley, 65 Cal. 96.

[d] Where affirmative relief is sought by defendant plaintiff cannot dismiss.—Mott v. Mott, 82 Cal. 415, 22 Pac. 1140, 1142.

[e] In an action for possession of personal property, which is thereupon taken possession of by plaintiff after giving an undertaking for its redelivery, an answer asking for the return and redelivery of the property to defendants, or in case a redelivery cannot be had, then for the value of the property, and for damages and costs, asks affirmative relief, so that, after such answer is filed, plaintiff cannot dismiss the action.—Acock v. Halsey, 90 Cal. 215, 27 Pac. 193.

[f] Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, providing that an action may be dismissed by plaintiff, provided a counterclaim has not been made or affirmative relief sought by defendant, does not prevent such dismissal of action to quiet title, though the answer asserts title in defendant, denies plaintiff's right of possession, alleges an ouster by plaintiff and prays for a decree establishing defendant's title and enjoining plaintiff from asserting any claim to the land or interfering with the possession.—Wood v. Jordan, 125 Cal. 263, 57 Pac. 998.

[g] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, authorizing a dismissal of a suit by the plaintiff before trial on the payment of costs unless a counterclaim has been made, or affirmative relief sought by cross-complaint or answer, it is not error to refuse to allow plaintiff in a suit to quiet title to dismiss his suit after the filing of an answer denying the material allegations in the complaint, and alleging facts entitling defendant to a decree to quiet title against plaintiff, and asking such relief.—Islais etc. Water Co. v. Allen, 132 Cal. 432, 64 Pac. 713.

§ 10. —— Rights as to Setoff or Counterclaim.

[a] After plea of setoff or counterclaim filed by defendant, plaintiff cannot dismiss the action of his own accord.—Hancock Ditch Co. v. Branford, 13 Cal. 637; (1865) People v. Piatt, 28 Cal. 166.

[b] An answer to a complaint to quiet title, setting up title in defendant and praying that possession of the premises may be awarded to him, does not contain a counterclaim, in such a sense that it prevents plaintiff from dismissing the action.—Moyle v. Porter, 51 Cal. 639.

[c] In a suit by an executrix for a reconveyance of certain land, the use of which she claimed, had satisfied the debt for security of which it had been conveyed, defendants answered by setting up further advances and payments by themselves, and claiming a balance due. Held, that plaintiff could not dismiss the action on her own motion without defendants' consent.—Clark v. Hundley, 65 Cal. 96, 3 Pac. 131.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, which provides that an action may be dismissed by plaintiff at any time before trial on payment of costs, provided no counterclaim has been made, or affirmative relief sought, by cross-complaint or answer, defendant cannot file such pleadings after an order of dismissal has been filed by plaintiff with the clerk who is authorized to enter the same, though it was not entered at the date of its filing.—Hinkel v. Donohue, 90 Cal. 389, 27 Pac. 301.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 407; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 34-43, §§ 34-36.

§ 11. —— Rights as to Cross-complaint.

[a] A judgment for dismissal may be entered, notwithstanding the filing of a cross-complaint, where it does not set up a counterclaim.—James v. Center, 53 Cal. 31.

[b] A cross-complaint having been stricken from the answer, plaintiff may dismiss before trial on payment of costs.—Thompson v. Spraig, 66 Cal. 350, 5 Pac. 506.

§ 12. —— Rights of Interveners.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, providing that an action may be dismissed by plaintiff, provided a counterclaim has not been made or affirmative relief sought by the cross-complaint or answer, plaintiff in an action to have tax assessments against his land to raise money to pay bonds, and sales of the land thereon, and the bonds, declared void, and to have the issuing of certificates of sale enjoined, may dismiss the action as against intervener as well as defendant, who merely denied the allegations of the complaint; intervener, a holder of the bonds, who prayed that plaintiff take nothing by the complaint, that the bonds held by him and the assessment be declared valid, and that the purchaser at the sales be held entitled to deeds, getting by the dismissal all the relief that could be properly awarded if the litigation proceeded.—Henry v. Vineland Irr. Dist., 140 Cal. 376, 73 Pac. 1061.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 410; 17 Cent. Dig., col. 43, § 37.

See 14 Cyc. 397, 400; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 44-48, §§ 38-43.

§ 14. Dismissal as to One or More Codefendants.

[a] Plaintiff, before trial, may dismiss as to some defendants and proceed as to others. Reed v. Calderwood, 22 Cal. 464.

[b] In an action for injuries on a defective sidewalk, the board of public works held not entitled to object to the dismissal of adjoining owners from the case.—Heath v. Manoa, 147 Cal. 694, 82 Pac. 331.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 411-415; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 49-66, §§ 44-59.

§ 15. —— Defendants not Served.

[a] Plaintiff has a right to dismiss as to parties named as defendants, but not served with process.—Harney v. Corcoran, 60 Cal. 314.

§ 16. Defendant Appearing or Pleading.

[a] A and B, tenants, and C, landlord, were jointly sued in an action of ejectment. A and B were defaulted, and C answered. Held, that the plaintiff, before trial, could dismiss the action as to C, and take judgment against A and B.—Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 488.

§ 17. —— Joint Defendants Sued as Copartners.

[a] Where several are sued as copartners, the plaintiff may discontinue at any time as to such, if any, as are not partners.—Stoddart v. Van Dyke, 12 Cal. 437.

§ 18. Application and Proceedings Thereon.

[a] The provision for the dismissal of an action under subdivision 1 of section 581 of the Code of Civil Procedure by request of the plaintiff to the clerk is not mandatory or exclusive of the power of the court to grant an order of dismissal, which, when procured by the plaintiff, should be noted by the clerk in the register of actions.—Richards v. Bradley, 129 Cal. 670, 62 Pac. 316.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 416, 417; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 67-71, §§ 60-69.

§ 19. —— Payment or Tender of Costs.

[a] Under the one hundred and forty-eighth section of the Practice Act plaintiff is not bound to tender costs before the nonsuit. The provision as to costs is simply that, by the nonsuit, plaintiff becomes subject to costs.—Hancock Ditch Co. v. Bradford, 13 Cal. 637.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, providing that an action may be dismissed by the plaintiff himself at any time before trial "upon payment of costs," the only costs which a plaintiff is required to pay before dismissing his action are the clerk's costs for entering the order, and the court has no jurisdiction to require that he also pay the costs embraced in the defendant's cost bill.—Hopkins v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 136 Cal. 552, 69 Pac. 299.

§ 20. Order or Judgment.

[a] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, which provides that the dismissal of an action by plaintiff "is made by entry in the clerk's register," and that "judgment may thereupon be entered accordingly," the filing by plaintiff of a written statement of abandonment of the action, and an entry thereof by the clerk in the register, does not operate as a dismissal, where no judgment of dismissal is entered, nor any order of the court made in relation to the matter of abandonment.—Rochat v. Gee, 91 Cal. 355, 27 Pac. 670; Somers v. Somers, 91 Cal. 355, 27 Pac. 670.

[b] Where plaintiff in an action of interpleader has taken every step required on his part to have the action dismissed, the failure of the clerk to perform his ministerial duties entering the dismissal in the register, and to cause a proper judgment of dismissal to be entered in his judgment-book, cannot affect the substantial rights of the parties, nor is the right of the plaintiff to a dismissal impaired or lost by the subsequent filing of a cross-complaint by one or both of the defendants; and a judgment of dismissal thereafter entered by the clerk will relate to the date of the legal demand for dismissal of the action.—Kaufman v. Superior Court, 115 Cal. 152, 46 Pac. 904.

[c] The entry of an order of voluntary dismissal by the clerk of the trial court in the form of a final judgment of dismissal, as directed by an order of plaintiff's counsel, is not judgment of dismissal, and is unauthorized. Judgment (1899) 57 Pac. 73, reversed.—Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644, 59 Pac. 143.

[d] A direction by plaintiff to the clerk, though sufficient to authorize him to enter a judgment of dismissal in a pending action, did not effect a dismissal, where such judgment was never entered; and the court therefore retained jurisdiction over the cause and the parties.—Truett v. Onderdonk, 50 Pac. 394.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 21. —— Entry of Order or Judgment.

[a] In an action in ejectment, a stipulation was filed, and an entry made in the register, dismissing it as to certain defendants and as to a part of the property, but no judgment was entered by the clerk. Held, that, if it was necessary for formal judgment to be entered, the law would consider that it was done.—McLeran v. McNamara, 55 Cal. 508.

[b] The court does not lose jurisdiction of a case by plaintiff's filing a written statement that "the above-entitled action is hereby dismissed," where no judgment of dismissal is entered.—Barnes v. Barnes, 95 Cal. 171, 30 Pac. 298, 16 L. R. A. 660.

[c] An action may be dismissed by the plaintiff upon the payment of costs by entry in the clerk's register; but, until a judgment of dismissal is entered, the action is still pending against the defendant.—Brady v. Times-Mirror Co., 106 Cal. 56, 36 Pac. 209.

[d] An action held not obnoxious to a plea of another action pending.—McIntosh v. Robb (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 517.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 417; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 70, § 67.

§ 22. Operation and Effect—Rights and Liabilities of Dismissed Defendant Generally.

[a] Where an action against several defendants has been dismissed against some, and a judgment by default rendered against others, one of the defendants, against whom the action was dismissed, cannot move to transfer the cause.—Reed v. Calderwood, 22 Cal. 463.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 420, 421; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 76-80, §§ 75-83.

§ 23. —— Jurisdiction After Dismissal.

[a] A dismissal of an action is, in effect, a final judgment in favor of the defendant. It is a final decision of that action as against all claims made by it, although it may not be a final determination of the rights of the parties as they may be presented in some other action.—Leese v. Sherwood, 21 Cal. 151.

Digitized by Google

[b] A dismissal of an action as to a plaintiff, pursuant to his request, precludes the court from proceeding further to determine the rights of several defendants as between themselves.—Ryan v. Tomlinson, 31 Cal. 11.

[c] The entry of an order of dismissal as to one of the parties ousts the jurisdiction of the court as to such person, and judgment subsequently rendered against him, without vacating the order of dismissal, is void.—Sere v. McGovern, 65 Cal. 244, 3 Pac. 859.

§ 24. Setting Aside and Reinstatement of Cause.

[a] Where an action is improperly dismissed by the plaintiff, the remedy of the defendant is by appeal from the judgment, and not by motion to set aside the judgment of dismissal. Higgins v. Mahoney, 50 Cal. 444.

[b] Where consent to the dismissal of an action is filed, but no judgment of dismissal has been entered, the action is still pending; and on a subsequent motion for plaintiff to set the case for trial, supported by an affidavit in which plaintiff asks to be relieved from the obligation of his consent to a dismissal, the case may be set for trial.—Truett v. Onderdonk, 120 Cal. 581, 53 Pac. 26.

[c] An order vacating an order of dismissal, unappealed from, operates to annul the entry in the clerk's register showing dismissal, as well as the judgment of dismissal. Judgment (1899) 57 Pac. 73, reversed.—Wolters v. Rossi, 126 Cal. 644, 59 Pac. 143.

[d] On entry of a judgment of dismissal, the court retains jurisdiction, so as to entitle it to vacate the judgment on a showing of mistake.—Palace Hardware Co. v. Smith, 134 Cal. 381, 66 Pac. 474.

[e] Relief will be granted a plaintiff whose attorney entered a judgment of dismissal under the mistaken belief that the sum paid by defendant was the whole amount demanded in the complaint.—Palace Hardware Co. v. Smith, 134 Cal. 381, 66 Pac. 474.

[f] The mistake of fact under which a judgment of dismissal is entered need not be mutual in order to warrant the granting of relief.—Palace Hardware Co. v. Smith, 134 Cal. 381, 66 Pac. 474.

[g] Where consent to the dismissal of an action is filed, but no judgment of dismissal has been entered, the action is still pending; and on a subsequent motion for plaintiff to set the case for trial, supported by an affidavit in which plaintiff asks to be relieved from the obligation of his consent to a dismissal, the case may be set for trial.—(1897) Truett v. Onderdonk, 50 Pac. 394.

[h] An order dismissing a suit to set aside a judgment adjudging an assessment void, and enjoining the county tax collector from proceeding under it, though entered by the plaintiff tax collector's attorney with his consent, will be opened for mistake on showing that he gave his consent in ignorance of his obligation to other parties interested, and that their interests would be prejudiced. Sheehan v. Osborne, 69 Pac. 842.

§ 25. —— Time for Setting Aside Nonsuit and Reinstating Cause.

[a] Upon the calling of a case for trial, the plaintiff moved for a continuance, which was refused, whereupon he took a voluntary nonsuit, with leave to move to set aside the same upon affidavits. Two days after, he gave notice of his intention so to move as soon as the affidavits could be prepared, but the term expired twenty-six days later without any further steps having been taken. Held, that plaintiff's right of motion in legal effect amounted only to permission to move for a new trial, and that, by his failure to comply with the provisions of the statute concerning new trials, the court lost jurisdiction.—Whipley v. Dewey, 17 Cal. 314.

§ 27. Enforcement of Stipulations.

[a] Where the plaintiff moves to dismiss an action, it is the duty of the counsel for the defendant, if he relies on a stipulation of the plaintiff as precluding a motion to dismiss, to bring forward the stipulation, or ask for delay to produce it. He cannot remain silent, and afterward attack the judgment of dismissal.—Higgins v. Mahoney, 50 Cal. 444.

§ 28. Right and Authority to Dismiss—Parties Entitled to Dismissal.

[a] Where several parties conspire to obtain the land of another, a disclaimer by some of the defendants of all interest therein in an action against them to recover the property is no ground for dismissing the suit as to them, as they are the proper parties and are liable for costs.—Dupuy v. Leavenworth, 17 Cal. 262.

[b] Where, in an action no summons is served, and part of the defendants appear by demurrer, the court has no jurisdiction, under section 581, Code of Civil Procedure, providing that, if appearance has been made by defendants within three years, such action may be prosecuted as if summons had been issued and served, to dismiss such action, on motion of defendants, as to those defendants who demurred.—Peck v. Agnew, 126 Cal. 607, 59 Pac. 125.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 425; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 99-101, § 103.

§ 29. —— Parties Entitled to Oppose Dismissal.

[a] Where action is brought against the owner of a building and an independent contractor for damages alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the latter in doing some work on the building at the instance of the owner, the contractor cannot complain of the granting of a nonsuit to the owner.—Ahern v. McGeary, 79 Cal. 44, 21 Pac. 540.

§ 30. Grounds for Dismissal—Neglect to Enter Judgment.

[a] Negligence of clerk in entering judgment after party pays fee and requests him to make entry is not ground for dismissal under section 581, Code of Civil Procedure. Gardner v. Tatum, 77 Cal. 450, 19 Pac. 879.

[b] Amendment of 1885 to section 581, Code of Civil Procedure, did not apply to existing verdicts, unless there was six months' neglect after it took effect.—Gardner v. Tatum, 77 Cal. 459, 19 Pac. 879.

[c] Section 581 of the Code of Civil Procedure, providing that an action may be dismissed if judgment is not entered within six months after its rendition, is not mandatory, and does not confer an absolute right to the dismissal where the neglect to enter the judgment is shown to be excusable when the order of dismissal is applied for.—Rosenthal v. McMann, 93 Cal. 505, 29 Pac. 121.

[d] A motion to dismiss an action tried to the court, on the ground that plaintiff has neglected to have judgment entered for more than six months after decision, is not authorized by Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, where neither party is entitled to judgment at the time, because written findings have not been prepared and approved by the judge, or waived by the parties.—Neihaus v. Morgan, 45 Pac. 255.

§ 31. —— Disability of Party Pending Proceedings.

[a] Where an action was properly brought in the name of one who became insane while it was pending, an erroneous order, substituting the guardian of his person and estate as plaintiff, is not cause for dismissal.—Dixon v. Cardozo, 106 Cal. 506, 39 Pac. 857.

§ 32. —— Want of Authority to Bring Suit.

[a] A motion to dismiss is the proper method of raising the question whether the attorney appearing in the suit has been authorized by plaintiffs to prosecute.—Turner v. Caruthers, 17 Cal. 431.

[b] Where an action is brought by an attorney for a corporation as plaintiff, it is presumed to have been instituted by the consent of plaintiff, and until the want of authority on the part of the attorney to appear for his client is shown the defendant will not be permitted to have a dismissal by showing that plaintiff does not desire to maintain the action.—Boston Tunnel Co. v. McKenzie, 67 Cal. 485, 8 Pac. 22.

[c] Motion to dismiss is proper procedure when authority of attorney is challenged.—Ventura v. Clay, 119 Cal. 215, 51 Pac. 189.

[d] Right of defendant to move to dismiss action for lack of authority of plaintiff's attorney to institute it is based on the ground that he might be twice compelled to litigate same cause of action; but this reason ceases, and with it the rule, if the act of the attorney is subsequently ratified by the plaintiff.—People v. Madden, 133 Cal. 347, 65 Pac. 741.

[e] Where the evidence warrants a finding that the attorney who brings a suit for a corporation against one of the stockholders was not authorized by the corporation to do so, it is proper for the court, on motion of defendant, to enter a judgment dismissing the action.—Magnolia & H. Fruit Cannery v. Guerne, 31 Pac. 363.

§ 33. —— Defects and Objections as to Parties.

[a] A party not named as defendant was served as a party designated by a fictitious name, under Practice Act, section 69, providing that, when plaintiff is ignorant of defendant's name, he may be designated by any name, and when his true name is discovered it may be inserted. He moved to set aside the service and dismiss the action. There was no averment in the complaint that plaintiff was ignorant of the true name of the person intended to be made a defendant, and the true name could have been ascertained by inquiry, and no offer was made by plaintiff in response to the motion to insert the true name in the complaint. Held, that the motion to dismiss the complaint was properly granted.—Rosencrantz v. Rogers, 40 Cal. 489.

[b] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1597, authorizes the probate court to compel specific performance by an executor of a contract of his decedent to convey realty. Held, that where, in an action in the probate court for specific performance of such a contract, third parties are interested who, if the proceeding were in equity, would be necessary parties, the petition should be dismissed, for it is not the intention of the statute to vest in the probate court more extensive power than is administered in such cases by courts of equity.—Corwin's Estate, In re, 61 Cal. 160.

§ 34. —— Defects and Objections as to Process.

[a] A summons is not issued within one year after filing the complaint, within the meaning of the twenty-third section of the Practice Act, unless, within one year after filing the complaint, both a summons and a certified copy of the complaint, properly prepared and certified, are placed at the disposal of the party for service.—Reynolds v. Page, 35 Cal. 296.

[b] A neglect to serve a summons, two years and eight months after the issue, will justify a dismissal of the action for want of prosecution.—Grigsby v. Napa County, 36 Cal. 585, 95 Am. Dec. 213.

[c] Where a complaint was filed and summons issued more than eight years before service, a motion by defendant to set aside the summons, and strike the complaint from the files was held to have been properly granted.—Carpentier v. Minturn, 39 Cal. 450.

[d] Where a summons is not served until three years after the complaint is filed, and it is issued, and there is no reasonable excuse for the delay, the suit, on motion, may be dismissed.—Eldridge v. Kay, 45 Cal. 49.

[e] Where a complaint is filed and summons issued in October, 1870, and the summons is not served until January, 1872, the court will dismiss the action for lack of diligence in prosecuting it, unless plaintiff presents sufficient excuse for his negligence. Lander v. Flemming, 47 Cal. 614.

[f] Motion to dismiss for failure to issue summons within one year after filing complaint, is proper.—Linden G. M. Co. v. Sheplar, 53 Cal. 245.

[g] Action may be dismissed for unreasonable delay in service of process or other want of prosecution.—Cowell v. Stuart, 69 Cal. 527, 11 Pac. 57.

[h] Where delay in issuing summons is at request of defendants, and occasioned by their promises to pay money sued for, case should not be dismissed for want of prosecution.—Cowell v. Stuart, 69 Cal. 527, 11 Pac. 57.

[i] Where a summons is served nine years after the complaint is filed, the delay is grossly unreasonable, and, in the absence of a showing of the proper exercise of diligence, a motion to quash and dismiss the action should be granted.—Diggins v. Thornton, 96 Cal. 417, 31 Pac. 289.

[j] Court has discretion to dismiss a cause for delay of nearly two years in the service of the summons upon the defendant.—Kreiss v. Hotaling, 99 Cal. 383, 33 Pac. 1125.

[k] Only limitation upon the exercise of the discretionary power of the court to dismiss a cause for delay in the service of summons is that it must not be abused; and it is for the court, in the exercise of its discretion, after hearing the statement of the parties, to determine whether the plaintiff was or was not acting in good faith and in the exercise of reasonable diligence.—Kreiss v. Hotaling, 99 Cal. 383, 33 Pac. 1125.

[l] Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, as amended in 1889, which provides that any action shall be dismissed unless summons be issued within one year, and served within three years, after commencement of the action, or unless defendant has appeared within said three years, is not a legislative declaration that three years is a reasonable time for serving summons.—Kreiss v. Hotaling, 99 Cal. 383, 33 Pac. 1125.

[m] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 7, which provides that an action shall be dismissed "unless summons shall have been issued within one year, and served and return thereon made within three years," it is error to dismiss an action because the summons was not served within one year after suit brought.—Murray v. Gleeson, 100 Cal. 511, 35 Pac. 88.

[n] A defendant, by taking from the plaintiff and filing a stipulation extending his time to answer, and by accepting and acting upon an agreement contained therein to grant successive extensions in consideration of certain payments made, does not appear in the action, within the meaning of said section 581; and such facts will not operate to prevent a dismissal of the action for a failure to return the summons within the time limited by the section.—Vrooman v. Li Po Tai, 113 Cal. 302, 45 Pac. 470.

[o] Where summons was not issued for nearly a year after the filing of the complaint, and not served for nearly another year, though defendant was a resident of the county, and after issue joined the case stood for a year and a half without any effort to bring it to trial, a judgment dismissing the action for want of prosecution will not be reversed, because defendant had threatened to take advantage of the insolvency laws if judgment was obtained.—First Nat. Bank of San Diego v. Nason, 115 Cal. 626, 47 Pac. 595.

[p] Where summons is not issued within one year, or not served within three years court must dismiss; it has no discretion.—Stanley v. Gillen, 119 Cal. 178, 51 Pac. 183.

[q] Court may in its discretion dismiss for want of prosecution though summons be issued and served within the time. Plaintiff is not entitled to full time in all cases.—Stanley v. Gillen, 119 Cal. 178, 51 Pac. 183.

[r] An action commenced in April, 1883, in which summons was never issued, was dismissed in 1896, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 7, authorizing dismissal on failure to make appearance within three years. On motion to vacate such judgment, it appeared that defendant had entered into a written stipulation that plaintiff could enter judgment at any time, and was granted a stay of execution on certain payments being made. This stipulation was thereafter renewed with due credits allowed therein for payments made. Held, that the stipulation was sufficient appearance on the part of defendant to render judgment of dismissal unauthorized.—Cooper v. Gordon, 125 Cal. 296, 57 Pac. 1006.

[s] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, providing that all actions, wherein summons is not served within three years after commencement of the action, shall be dismissed, and no further proceedings shall be had therein, the failure of plaintiff to make service of summons for three years and eleven days after commencement of an action deprives the court of all jurisdiction to do other than dismiss the action.—Modoc etc. Livestock Co. v. Superior Court of Modoc County, 128 Cal. 255, 60 Pac. 848.

[t] Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 7, providing that all actions shall be dismissed unless the summons shall be served, and return thereon made, within three years after the commencement of the action, is mandatory; and where the summons is not so served and returned, the defendant is entitled to dismissal, though his motion therefor was not made until after his default was entered.—Sharpstein v. Eells, 132 Cal. 507, 64 Pac. 1080.

[u] Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 7, as enacted in March, 1889, provided that all actions shall be dismissed unless summons shall be issued within one year, and served and return made thereon within three years, after the commencement of the action. In March, 1895, such subdivision was amended to read, "That all actions shall be dismissed unless summons shall be 'issued within one year and all such actions shall be in like manner dismissed unless the summons shall be' served and return thereon made within three years." Held, that the amendment was merely to free the statute from ambiguity, and not made in order to oust the court of jurisdiction in those cases only in which the summons had not been issued within the year; and the statute therefore applied to all cases in which the summons had not been served and returned within three years from the beginning of the action.—Sharpstein v. Eells, 132 Cal. 507, 64 Pac. 1080.

[v] Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 7, as amended in 1897, declares that an action shall be dismissed unless the summons be served within three years from the commencement of the action, but that an appearance within three years shall waive the failure to serve the summons. Held, that where, in a suit to foreclose a mortgage, there was no service of summons nor appearance by the mortgagor for three years, the fact that a junior mortgagee appeared by demurring to the complaint within the three years did not prevent the dismissal of the action; the mortgagee not being prejudiced by the dismissal of the action as to said defendant, and not complaining.—Siskiyou County Bank v. Hoyt, 132 Cal. 81, 64 Pac. 118.

[w] Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 7, as amended in 1897, declares that an action shall be dismissed unless the summons be served within three years from the commencement of the action, but that all actions may be prosecuted if appearance be made by defendant within three years, the same as if summons had been served; and section 1014 declares that a defendant appears when he answers, demurs or gives written notice of his appearance. Held, that, where a summons was not served within three years from the commencement of the action, the suit was properly dismissed, though before the expiration of the three years defendant had stated plaintiff need not serve any papers, as it could take judgment in the case at any time.—Siskiyou County Bank v. Hoyt, 132 Cal. 81, 64 Pac. 118.

[x] Code of Civil Procedure, section 582, provides that all actions shall be dismissed unless the summons is served and return made within three years of commencement, unless there be an appearance by defendant within such time. Held, that where there was no appearance within the time limited, and no return of summons, but within the time an affidavit of service on one of defendants was filed, and also a copy of the summons, the action was dismissable.—Grant v. McArthur, 137 Cal. 270, 70 Pac. 88.

[y] On a motion to dismiss under the statute, that the summons was for a time lost is of no avail to plaintiff; the remedy being provided for by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1045, providing that, if a paper be lost, the court may authorize a copy to be used in lieu of the original.—Grant v. McArthur, 137 Cal. 270, 70 Pac. 88.

[z] Subdivision 7, section 581, Code of Civil Procedure, is mandatory and court is bound to dismiss suit when summons is not returned or appearance made within three years.—Swortfiguer v. White, 141 Cal. 579, 75 Pac. 172.

[aa] A stipulation signed by attorneys for both parties, extending time to answer, held an appearance within the exception to Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 7, as to dismissal of actions for failure to serve and return the summons.—Roth v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 246.

[bb] Where the summons was not issued till nearly a year after the action was begun, and had not been served at the time of a motion to dismiss, three years and eight months after its issuance, plaintiff explaining that he forbore to serve the summons for the reason that certain persons represented that defendant would abide the event of a test case, but not showing the authority to make the representations, and defendant denying it, held, that there was no abuse of discretion in granting the motion to dismiss.—Pacific Bridge Co. v. Jacobus, 13 Pac. 493.

[cc] It is within the sound discretion of the lower court to dismiss an action for inexcusable delay in failing, for two years after the commencement of the action, to serve defendant with process.—Castro v. City and County of San Francisco, 35 Pac. 1035.

§ 35. —— Defects and Objections as to Pleadings.

[a] Where plaintiff's complaint does not state a cause of action, and he declines to amend, the action may be dismissed on defendant's motion.—King v. Montgomery, 50 Cal. 115.

[b] Where the complaint is, by consent of both parties, after answer denying all the allegations therein, stricken out, the court should dismiss the action.—Smith v. Ling, 73 Cal. 72, 14 Pac. 390.

See 14 Cyc. 440, 443; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 129-136, §§ 134-139.

§ 36. —— Want of Prosecution.

[a] Where the plaintiff fails to appear and prosecute his suit, and defendant moves a nonsuit, the court has no alternative but to grant it.—Peralta v. Mariea, 3 Cal. 185.

[b] Where plaintiff, after bringing an action, but without serving a summons, absents himself, leaving no attorney to represent him, he cannot complain that some of the defendants voluntarily appear and have the case dismissed for want of prosecution, unless he shows that he was acting under some mistake of law, or was misled by some action of defendants.—Pickett v. Hastings, 39 Cal. 105.

[c] Rule of court for ex parte dismissal for failure to bring a cause to hearing does not apply if cause is continued by consent.—Poole v. Caulfield, 45 Cal. 107.

[d] A court does not disabuse its discretion in dismissing an action for want of prosecution, where, after a reversal, plaintiff neglects for fourteen years to file a remittitur in the trial court.—Chipman v. Hibberd, 47 Cal. 638.

[e] Where a plaintiff neglects for more than two years to bring his case to trial, the court may, on motion of defendant and notice to plaintiff, dismiss the action.—Simmons v. Keller, 50 Cal. 38.

[f] A judgment dismissing an action for want of prosecution is not void, although made after the death of the plaintiff, and without the substitution of his personal representative.—Wallace v. Center, 67 Cal. 133, 7 Pac. 441.

[g] Delay of twelve years in introducing evidence before referee warrants dismissal for want of prosecution.—Saville v. Frisbie, 70 Cal. 87, 88, 11 Pac. 502.

[h] Superior court has power to dismiss an action for want of prosecution.—Pardy v. Montgomery, 77 Cal. 327, 19 Pac. 530; Kubli v. Hawkett, 89 Cal. 638, 27 Pac. 57; Hasser v. South San Francisco Homestead etc. Association, 102 Cal. 611, 36 Pac. 945; McLaughlin v. Clausen, 116 Cal. 489, 48 Pac. 487.

[i] It is error to dismiss an action because the plaintiff did not appear to give her deposition, continued by consent to a time of which she had no notice; her attorney having told her that he would let her know when to come.—Clifford v. Allman, 84 Cal. 528, 24 Pac. 292.

[j] It is not an abuse of discretion to dismiss a cause for want of prosecution where a demurrer to the complaint had been on file for nearly three and one-half years, without being called up for determination by the plaintiff, and the evidence as to a stipulation for delay is conflicting, and by the neglect of plaintiff's counsel the attention of the court was not called to an order, previously entered by consent, continuing the cause for trial at a time to be agreed between counsel.—Kubli v. Hawkett, 89 Cal. 638, 27 Pac. 57.

[k] The dismissal of an action by the superior court for want of prosecution will not be disturbed upon appeal where it appears that the action had been commenced more than twenty years before a motion to dismiss was made, and that the motion stood over two years without being brought to a hearing, although it is admitted that the delay in bringing the case to a hearing was, during the first ten years, by the consent of, or at the request of, the defendant's attorney.—Hassey v. South San Francisco Homestead etc. Association, 102 Cal. 611, 36 Pac. 945.

[l] Where the delay in the prosecution has been had at the instance or request of the defendant, the court will properly refuse to dismiss; but a mere threat of the defendant to take advantage of the insolvent laws, not coupled with any request for delay, or promise of payment in the event of such delay, is not a valid excuse for postponement on the part of the plaintiff in prosecuting the action. First Nat. Bank of San Diego v. Nason, 115 Cal. 626, 47 Pac. 595.

[m] It is not an abuse of discretion for a court to dismiss an action for want of prosecution where it was dropped from the calendar nearly three years before by a verbal agreement between the attorneys, not authorized by the defendant, to await the determination of another action; there being no agreement filed as provided by Code of Civil Procedure, section 283.—McLaughlin v. Clausen, 116 Cal. 487, 48 Pac. 487.

[n] Where a stipulation, in an action in which defendant was not served, provides for entry of judgment by plaintiff whenever he might choose so to do for a certain amount, defendant is estopped from urging that plaintiff has declined to prosecute the action with due diligence, so as to authorize dismissal, after the lapse of three years, as limited by Code of Civil Procedure, section 581.—Cooper v. Gordon, 125 Cal. 296, 57 Pac. 1006.

[o] In an action by the state, on the relation of an individual, against an irrigation district, formed under the statutes of the state, to have such district declared to have no legal existence, laches may be imputed to plaintiff for failure to prosecute with due diligence, so as to authorize dismissal.—People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296, 58 Pac. 704.

[p] Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivisions 3, 4, prescribing the circumstances under which an action may be dismissed, is not the sole source of power to dismiss an action for failure to prosecute, but such power exists independent of the Code.—People v. Jefferds, 126 Cal. 296, 58 Pac. 704.

[q] Facts found sufficient to warrant a dismissal for want of prosecution.—Davis v. Clark, 126 Cal. 232, 58 Pac. 542.

[r] Where an order sustaining a demurrer to a complaint was entered, and a court rule allowed ten days to amend, but no notice of the entry of the order was given, and plaintiff did not move for leave to amend for over three years, an order dismissing the action for lack of prosecution is not in conflict with Code of Civil Procedure, section 476, providing that, where leave to amend within a stated time is given on sustaining a demurrer, the time runs from service of a notice of the order, since such section only affects the right to plead anew, and not the right to move to dismiss for failure to prosecute.—San Jose Land etc. Co. v. Allen, 129 Cal. 247, 61 Pac. 1083.

[s] Where plaintiff commenced an action in 1890, and failed to bring on a demurrer for hearing for over three years, and further failed to move for leave to amend till June, 1897, the demurrer having been sustained in January, 1894, an order dismissing the action for want of prosecution is not an abuse of the discretion of the court.—San Jose Land etc. Co. v. Allen, 129 Cal. 247, 61 Pac. 1083.

[t] Leave to plaintiff to amend is no bar to granting defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution, made shortly thereafter. San Jose Land etc. Co. v. Allen, 129 Cal. 247, 61 Pac. 1083.

[u] Though Code of Civil Procedure, section 286, provides that, when an attorney dies, a party to an action, for whom he was acting, must be required by the adverse party, by written notice, to appoint another attorney, or appear in person, before any further proceedings are had against him, failure of a defendant to give such notice to a plaintiff whose attorney had died will not deprive the court of jurisdiction to dismiss an action for want of prosecution where plaintiff appointed another attorney before the commencement of the proceedings.—Nicol v. City and County of San Francisco, 130 Cal. 288, 62 Pac. 513.

[v] Evidence showing that the plaintiff in an action for damages to real property, on the death of his attorney, appointed another, with whom he did not speak concerning the case for five years, claiming that his time was otherwise occupied, and that he left the case entirely in his attorney's hands, will not justify disturbing the trial court's judgment dismissing the case for lack of prosecution, on the ground of abuse of the court's discretion, since the negligence of the attorney is his client's negligence.—Nicol v. City and County of San Francisco, 130 Cal. 288, 62 Pac. 513.

[w] Where an affidavit of plaintiff shows that the defendant has admitted having no defense to the suit, and that the answer on file is a sham, and false, and was filed for the purpose of delay, and no counter affidavit is filed, it is error to dismiss the case for plaintiff's laches in failing to prosecute the action.—Herman v. Pacific Jute M. Co., 131 Cal. 210, 63 Pac. 344.

[x] Refusal to set aside and vacate the service of a summons and to dismiss the action for want of diligence in its prosecution was not an abuse of discretion where the action itself was commenced May 29, 1896, summons issued May 22, 1897, and served March 24, 1898, and no injury was shown to have resulted to defendant.—Kennedy v. Mulligan, 136 Cal. 556, 69 Pac. 291.

[y] An action in which the burden of proof is not on defendant may be dismissed for want of prosecution by plaintiff, though it stands on demurrer to the complaint.—Mowry v. Weisenborn, 137 Cal. 110, 69 Pac. 971.

[z] It cannot be said there was any abuse of discretion in dismissing an action for want of prosecution, where demurrer was filed to complaint, and set for hearing in 1890, but hearing was continued for plaintiff to employ an attorney in place of one who had died, and one was not employed till 1896, and after a motion to dismiss, which was denied, and no steps to have demurrer disposed of were taken till 1899, when notice was given that demurrer would be heard on a certain day, and on the next day the motion to dismiss was made, and this, though from 1896 to 1899 the department in which the case was pending was engaged in trial of criminal cases, and the law and motion calendar of civil cases there pending was not called; it not appearing that the judge was requested to hear the demurrer, or that effort to have the case transferred was made. Mowry v. Weisenborn, 137 Cal. 110, 69 Pac. 971.

[aa] Defendant, though personally served with summons, did not personally appear until several years later, but there was placed on file on his behalf, within ten days after service of summons on him, what purported to be an appearance for him by a demurrer to the complaint, signed by attorneys of the court; and defendant never intimated that such attorneys had not in fact been authorized to appear. Held, that under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1014, providing that the defendant appears when he answers, demurs, or gives the plaintiff written notice of appearance, or when an attorney gives notice of appearance for him, the court was not warranted in finding that there was no appearance made by the defendant, on a motion to dismiss, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 7, for failure to return the summons within three years if appearance has not been made by the defendant.—Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich, 141 Cal. 4, 74 Pac. 352.

[bb] Where defendant, in whose favor the court announced that he should give judgment, failed to file findings or have them ordered, or to give any notice of decision, and plaintiff was ready to try the case, it was error to dismiss for want of prosecution. Pardy v. Montgomery, 18 Pac. 330.

[cc] Action of court in dismissing action for want of prosecution held not an abuse of discretion.—Marks v. Keenan (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 772.

[dd] An action should not be dismissed under Code of Civil Procedure, section 581, subdivision 3, for plaintiff's failure to appear on the trial, except on proof of five days' notice of trial required by section 594.—Dean's Estate, In re, 87 Pac. 13.

§ 37. Dismissal After Continuance by Consent.

[a] An order of dismissal, made during the term, after it is understood by the attorneys of both parties that the cause has been continued for the term, is irregular, and must be set aside on a proper showing.—Bensley v. Ellis, 39 Cal. 309.

§ 38. Dismissal by Court on Its Own Motion.

§ 39. Procedure to Effect Dismissal—Motion in General.

[a] A judgment by default against one of the defendants cannot be set aside on the ground that it was entered pending a motion by him to dismiss the action for want of prosecution: a motion to dismiss not extending the time to answer.—McDonald v. Swett, 76 Cal. 257, 18 Pac. 324.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 449, 452; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 159-168, §§ 161-168; cols. 176, 177, § 176.

§ 40. —— Form and Requisites of Motion.

[a] Where a motion to dismiss omits to state the grounds upon which it is based, it will not be entertained.—Kiler v. Kimbal, 19 Cal. 267; People v. Banvard, 27 Cal. 479; Poehlmann v. Kennedy, 48 Cal. 201; Coffey v. Greenfield, 62 Cal. 602; Silva v. Holland, 74 Cal. 530, 16 Pac. 385; Loring v. Stuart, 79 Cal. 200, 21 Pac. 651; Shain v. Forbes, 82 Cal. 577, 23 Pac. 198; Palmer v. Marysville Democrat Pub. Co., 90 Cal. 168, 27 Pac. 21; Flynn v. Dougherty, 91 Cal. 669, 27 Pac. 1080, 14 L. R. A. 230.

[b] Motion for a nonsuit must distinctly point out the grounds on which it is asked, and it is not error to refuse it, even if there is ground for it, and it is not asked on such ground.—Gardiner v. Schmaelzle, 47 Cal. 588.

[c] Motion for nonsuit must state grounds on which it is made.—Loring v. Stuart, 79 Cal. 201, 21 Pac. 651.

[d] A motion for nonsuit on the ground that "plaintiffs had failed to prove a sufficient case" is properly denied, as not stating the grounds relied on sufficiently.—Miller v. Luco, 80 Cal. 257, 22 Pac. 195.

[e] No other grounds than those stated in motion can be considered by court.—Shain v. Forbes, 82 Cal. 582, 23 Pac. 198.

[f] One who moves for a nonsuit must state the particular grounds upon which the motion is based; and if he fails to do so, the motion is properly denied.—Durfee v. Seale, 139 Cal. 603, 73 Pac. 435.

§ 41. —— Affidavits to Support Motion or in Opposition Thereto.

[a] Where, to defeat a motion for dismissal, an affidavit is offered, which shows that affiant made, at a time not mentioned, unsuccessful efforts to locate defendant, and about nine years after filing the complaint certain other efforts, which were successful, it will be assumed, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that both efforts were made at about the same time, and such affidavit will be held insufficient.—Diggins v. Thornton, 96 Cal. 417, 31 Pac. 289.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 452; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 165-167, §§ 165, 166.

§ 42. —— Hearing and Determination.

[a] In an action on a note by an indorsee, the question whether plaintiff is the holder as an agent or for value cannot be considered on motion for nonsuit; for in either case he has the title, and can maintain an action in his own name.—Poorman v. Mills, 35 Cal. 118, 95 Am. Dec. 90.

[b] One of the defendants served notice of motion on plaintiff to dismiss the action, as to him, for want of prosecution; he not having been served with summons until about two years after the summons was issued. At request of plaintiff's attorney the hearing of the motion was continued to a certain date. A few days before the hearing, plaintiff's attorney entered judgment by default against said defendant, and on the hearing the motion to dismiss was denied. Held, that there was no abuse of the discretion of the court in denying the motion.—McDonald v. Swett, 76 Cal. 257, 18 Pac. 324.

[c] A motion by defendant for nonsuit is properly denied if made, not on the ground that the evidence admitted did not support plaintiff's cause of action, but only on the grounds on which portions of the admitted evidence were objected to when offered, to the admission of which evidence he excepted, since errors in admitting evidence cannot be reviewed on a motion for nonsuit.—O'Connor v. Hooper, 102 Cal. 528, 36 Pac. 939.

[d] Objection that complaint does not state cause of action is not available on motion to dismiss action.—Pacific Paving Co. v. Vizelich, 141 Cal. 10, 74 Pac. 352.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 451, 452; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 167, 168, §§ 167, 168.

§ 43. —— Conditional Dismissal.

[a] In an action on a note given by a decedent and to foreclose a mortgage securing its payment, the summons was served on the executrix by publication ten years after the commencement of the action. Executrix moved to vacate the summons and dismiss the action, as to her, for want of diligence in its prosecution. Decedent had conveyed the mortgaged property to a third person, and was not the owner at his death. A claim for the payment of the debt had been presented to the executrix, and rejected. Held, that a judgment denying the motion, on condition that the plaintiff file a stipulation waiving judgment for any deficiency arising on the sale of the mortgaged property, was proper.—Clark v. Smith, 63 Cal. 385.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 453; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 170-174, §§ 170-173.

§ 44. —— Nature of Question Presented by Motion.

[a] Question presented on motion for nonsuit is question of law.—Donahue v. Gallavan, 43 Cal. 573.

§ 45. —— Order or Judgment of Dismissal.

[a] Until judgment of dismissal is entered action is not dismissed.—Page v. Superior Court, 76 Cal. 374, 19 Pac. 183.

[c] The date of the dismissal of an action is when the judgment of dismissal is entered, and not when the entry is made in the register of actions by the clerk that the action is dismissed by order of the plaintiff.—Acock v. Halsey, 90 Cal. 215, 27 Pac. 193.

[d] Where a case was, on motion of plaintiff, dismissed in open court, but no order of dismissal was entered at the time, and an order of dismissal was afterward entered, without notice to plaintiff, which recited that the case had been settled, and a judgment of dismissal was entered on such order, the court will, eleven years after the entry of the order, set aside the order and judgment, and enter an order nunc pro tunc, as of the date of dismissal, showing that the case was dismissed in open court on plaintiff's motion.—Stoutenborough v. Board of Education of City and County of San Francisco, 104 Cal. 664, 38 Pac. 449.

[e] Under the amended section 581 of the Code of Civil Procedure the entry of a judgment of dismissal is not required, and it is sufficient that the dismissal be entered in the clerk's register.—Hopkins v. Superior Court, 136 Cal. 552, 69 Pac. 229.

§ 46. —— Necessity for Findings.

[a] Findings of fact and conclusions of law are not required nor proper in case of nonsuit.—Gilson Quartz Min. Co. v. Gilson, 47 Cal. 597.

[b] Where a plaintiff is nonsuited written findings are not required.—Harney v. McLeran, 66 Cal. 34, 4 Pac. 884.

[c] Where nonsuit is granted there is no occasion for findings on issues made by complaint.—Kennedy etc. Co. v. Dusenbery, 116 Cal. 125, 47 Pac. 1008.

[d] Findings are not required in cases of nonsuit.—Jewell v. Pierce, 120 Cal. 85, 52 Pac. 132.

§ 47. —— Curing Discontinuance.

[a] A plaintiff, next day after being served with notice of a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, caused the summons, issued more than two years before, to be served; and, the defendant having failed to answer within ten days, default was noted, but no assessment was made or judgment entered by the court, and on the day specified in the notice the defendant moved, notwithstanding the default, to dismiss the action for want of prosecution. Held, that the court did not err in so dismissing the suit, by relating back to the time of service of the motion.—Grigsby v. Napa County, 36 Cal. 585, 95 Am. Dec. 213.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 176, 177, § 176.

§ 48. Operation and Effect of Dismissal.

[a] The dismissal of a suit for want of prosecution determines everything involved in it, and, so far as the particular action is concerned, is the same as a judgment for defendant on the merits.—Dowling v. Polack, 18 Cal. 625.

[b] If the district court acquired jurisdiction its order dismissing the cause is final and conclusive in the proceeding.—Eldridge v. Stockton, 39 Cal. 693.

[c] Jurisdiction of person is lost by dismissal, and judgment thereafter without vacating dismissal is void.—Sere v. McGovern, 65 Cal. 244, 3 Pac. 859.

[d] Where an action was brought against a ward, and she appeared and answered by general guardian, but no cause of action was stated against him individually, a dismissal as to such ward was a dismissal of the entire action.—O'Shea v. Wilkinson, 95 Cal. 454, 30 Pac. 588.

[e] Mere filing of the dismissal of an action with the clerk, or the entry of an order of dismissal upon the minutes, does not, of itself, constitute a bar to another action against the party as to whom the former action was dismissed.—Allin v. Williams, 97 Cal. 403, 32 Pac. 441.

[f] Order dismissing action for want of prosecution under subdivision 7, section 581, Code of Civil Procedure, ousts court of jurisdiction and it has no power to enter amended judgment of dismissal thereafter limiting its effect.—Swortfiguer v. White, 141 Cal. 579, 75 Pac. 172.

§ 49. —— Effect of Counterclaim or Cross-Complaint.

[a] If there is an intervener who claims an interest in the matter in dispute adverse to both plaintiff and defendant, and they answer the intervention, raising material issues, and, on motion of the defendant, the court nonsuits the plaintiff, the action is still pending as to the issues raised on the intervention, and the court should proceed and try them. The intervention should not be dismissed on the ground that there is no action pending.—Poehlmann v. Kennedy, 48 Cal. 201.

[b] Where the defendant in an action filed a cross-complaint seeking affirmative relief, and the plaintiff filed an answer thereto, the nonsuit of the plaintiff, upon motion of the defendant, does not operate as a dismissal of the action, so as to deprive the defendant of the right to a trial of the issues raised by the cross-complaint and answer thereto.—Warner v. Darrow, 91 Cal. 309, 27 Pac. 737.

§ 50. Setting Aside and Reinstatement of Cause.

[a] The district court cannot review an order granting a nonsuit upon a motion to set aside the nonsuit.—Levy v. Getleson, 27 Cal. 685.

[b] Reinstatement of dismissed case is discretionary.—Lodtman v. Schulter, 71 Cal. 97, 16 Pac. 540.

[c] Judgment dismissing case for want of prosecution may be set aside on showing good cause.—Lodtman v. Schulter, 71 Cal. 97, 16 Pac. 540.

[d] It is not an abuse of discretion to refuse to set aside a dismissal for failure to file an amended complaint within the required time, where the affidavits of the attorneys, as to the existence of an oral stipulation for the extension of the time to file the complaint, are contradictory.—Rauer v. Wolf, 115 Cal. 100, 46 Pac. 902.

[e] After a substitution of attorneys by plaintiff, defendant's motion to dismiss for want of prosecution was granted. Plaintiff's attorney moved to vacate such order, alleging failure to find the former attorney, and consequent inability to procure an affidavit contradicting the allegations in support of the motion. Held that, if the plaintiff's affidavits were sufficient to satisfy the court that the attorney had made a reasonable effort to find the former attorney, it was justified in holding that the neglect was excusable.—Moore v. Thompson, 138 Cal. 23, 70 Pac. 930.

[f] A motion to vacate an order dismissing a cause for want of prosecution is not only addressed to the discretion of the court, but this discretion may be controlled by facts not before the court on the hearing of the motion to dismiss, if there was an excusable neglect in the failure to present them.—Moore v. Thompson, 138 Cal. 23, 70 Pac. 930.

[g] Where an attorney appears in court five minutes after the dismissal of the cause and rendition of judgment against his client because of the absence of both attorney and client when the case was called for trial, it is not an abuse of discretion for the court, on motion supported by a sufficient affidavit, to vacate the order of dismissal and judgment, and restore the cause to the calendar.—Ashton v. Dashaway Assn., 33 Pac. 446.

§ 1. Nature and Elements of Offenses—Place Where Committed.

[a] Code, section 415, making it an offense to use vulgar, profane, or indecent language within the hearing of children, etc., does not make the offense such only when committed in the streets of an incorporated town.—Foley, Ex parte, 62 Cal. 508.

[a] Penal Code, section 415, prohibits the use by any person of "vulgar, profane, or indecent language in the presence or hearing of women or children, in a loud or boisterous manner." § 4. Letting Apartments for Purpose of Prostitution or Assignation.

[a] Under section 316, Penal Code, every person who lets any apartment or tenement, knowing that it is to be used for the purpose of assignation or prostitution, is guilty of a misdemeanor.—Chateau v. Singla, 114 Cal. 91, 55 Am. St. Rep. 63, 45 Pac. 1015.

[a] Statutes of 1861, page 552, giving the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco power to determine the penalties for breach of its regulations, with the maximum limit of one thousand dollars, or six months' imprisonment, or both, does not authorize the maximum penalty for violation of every regulation. The penalty must be reasonable, with reference to the offense, and section 33 of order 1587, as amended by order 1955, of the board of supervisors, leaving it to the discretion of the judge to fix the punishment for visiting a house of ill-fame, with a maximum limit of one thousand dollars fine, or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both, since it gives the judge power to fix an unreasonable punishment for the offense, is void.—Ah You, In re, 88 Cal. 99, 22 Am. § 1. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions.

[a] The policy of the act of 1851, providing for the election of a district attorney in each county at the general election for that year, and at the general election every two years thereafter, was to create uniformity in the official terms of district attorneys by filling those terms at fixed periods.—People v. Brown, 16 Cal. 441.

[b] Constitution does not fix term of office of district attorney, but merely directs (article 6, sec. 7) that the legislature shall provide for his election by the people, and shall fix by law his duties and compensation.—People v. Brown, 16 Cal. 441.

[c] Section 4330 of the Political Code, as amended by the act of March 28, 1872, was intended to regulate the salaries of district attorneys, as contradistinguished from fees to which they were entitled under existing laws, and does not repeal prior statutes allowing fees in addition to salaries.—Pillsbury v. Brown, 45 Cal. 46.

§ 2. Appointment, Qualification, and Tenure —Appointment.

[a] Act of 1851 (Wood's Digest, p. 64), providing for the election of a district attorney in each county in that year and every two years thereafter, and act of 1855 (Wood's Digest, p. 561, secs. 46, 49), empowering the supervisors in each county to fill vacancies in such office by appointment, the appointee to serve until the next general election, and the person then elected to serve out the balance of the term of the original incumbent of the office, are not impliedly repealed by consolidation act of 1856, section 9, as to San Francisco, providing a different mode of filling vacancies, "where provision is not otherwise made in this or some other act."—People v. Brown, 16 Cal. 441.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 256-262, §§ 2-9.

§ 3. —— Eligibility.

[a] There is nothing in the constitution or laws of this state, nor is there any usage or custom which requires that a license to practice law from the supreme or any other court must be obtained before a person can become eligible to the office of district attorney.—People v. Dorsey, 32 Cal. 296.

§ 4. Assistants.

[a] An assistant prosecuting district attorney, appointed by the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco, under the act of April 3, 1858 (238), is not limited in his official action to any particular class of cases. The true construction of the statute is, that he shall be prosecuting attorney in the police court, and shall assist the district attorney in the discharge of his various legal duties.—People v. Magallones, 15 Cal. 426.

[b] In absence of objection by attorney general, appeal by county from judgment rendered against it will be dismissed on motion of district attorney, in pursuance of resolution of board of supervisors, although an attorney claiming to act as special counsel for the appellant opposes the motion.—Allen v. County of San Bernardino, 72 Cal. 450, 14 Pac. 18.

[c] County Government Act of 1893, (Stats. 1893, p. 359), section 25, subdivision 36, declaring that the county board of supervisors shall have authority to authorize the district attorney to appoint an assistant district attorney, which office was thereby created, was not unconstitutional, since the assistant district attorney was but a deputy, and by section 61 of the same act the district attorney could appoint as many deputies as he saw fit, and, if not a deputy, the board had power to authorize the district attorney to fill the office when in their judgment the public interest required it.—Freman v. Barnum, 131 Cal. 396, 63 Pac. 691.

[d] Under Political Code, section 472, providing that, when a district attorney shall become disqualified from conducting a criminal prosecution, the attorney general may employ special counsel at the expense of the state, the attorney general must appoint special counsel in case of permanent disqualification of the district attorney, due to the latter having been defendant's attorney at a former trial of the case.—Toland v. Ventura County, 135 Cal. 412, 67 Pac. 498.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 262-272, §§ 10-17.

§ 5. Compensation and Fees—Fees and Costs in General.

[a] A district attorney is not entitled to fees for prosecuting an offender convicted of violating a city ordinance.—Pillsbury v. Brown, 47 Cal. 477.

[b] A contract by a board of supervisors to retain the county district attorney to attend to county litigation in another county, after the term of his office has expired, is not a contract for the increase of his salary, nor is it void because made with him during his term of office, if made in good faith.—Jones v. Morgan, 67 Cal. 308, 7 Pac. 734.

[c] Acts of 1869-70, page 170, provides for a salary for the district attorney of Fresno county, and for a fee of fifteen dollars for all district attorneys for each conviction in cases of misdemeanor, to be a county charge in Fresno county if the defendant therein is unable to pay it. Political Code, sections 4256-4258, prescribe the duties of district attorneys, and that, when not engaged, they shall attend before magistrates when required in cases of arrest. The attorney for Fresno county sued for fees for convictions in cases that he did not prosecute, nor attempt to collect the fees from the defendants therein by execution or otherwise. Held, that the county was not liable.—Edwards v. Fresno County, 74 Cal. 421, 16 Pac. 239.

[d] Political Code, section 4046, gives boards of supervisors the management and control of suits to which the county is a party, and act of April 23, 1880, empowers any county to sue in its own name for delinquent taxes, but district attorneys are not expressly authorized to sue for delinquent taxes; and one who does bring such action without the direction or ratification of the supervisors can recover no attorneys' fees of defendant, nor costs against the county.—San Diego Co. v. California Southern R. Co., 1 Pac. 897.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 273-291, §§ 18-25.

§ 5½. —— Deputies and Assistants.

[a] Under acts of 1893, section 173, and acts of 1897, sections 59, 215, 233, the deputy district attorneys of Tulare county who were holding office at the time of the enactment of the law of 1897 are entitled to the salary provided by the law of 1893.—McPhail v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; Clark v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; De Witt v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735; Bliss v. Jefferds, 130 Cal. 480, 62 Pac. 735.

[b] The provision of the county government act of 1893, that the district attorney may appoint one assistant, at a salary of two thousand dollars, and two deputies, at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars, per annum, does not mean fifteen hundred dollars for the two deputies, but for each.—Freman v. Marshall, 137 Cal. 159, 69 Pac. 986.

§ 6. —— Commissions on Fines and Collections.

[a] Under the statute giving a district attorney a commission on money collected by him for the county, it is immaterial whether he recovers the money by action of debt or proceeds by mandamus to procure a warrant which is obtained and subsequently converted into money by the county. In either case, he is entitled to his commission.—Higby v. Calaveras County, 18 Cal. 176.

[b] In an action prosecuted by the district attorney to recover a swamp-land assessment, delinquent before the adoption of the code, he is entitled to fifteen per cent of the recovery, to be assessed as costs.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 190.

[c] The district attorney of Lake county, in an action to recover a tax, is entitled to the percentage provided for in the act of March 5, 1870.—Lake County v. Sulphur Bank Quicksilver Min. Co., 66 Cal. 17, 4 Pac. 876.

[d] If section 3553 of the Political Code were impliedly repealed, the district attorney could not be heard to say that costs and fees collected thereunder in his official capacity were paid to him illegally, and that he therefore has the right to retain them.—County of Kern v. Fay, 131 Cal. 547, 67 Pac. 857.

§ 7. —— Salary and Extra Allowance.

[a] Political Code, section 4330, as amended by act of March 28, 1872 (Stats 1871-72, p. 553), which fixes the salary of the district attorney of San Joaquin county at two thousand five hundred dollars in lieu of all the fees, was intended to regulate the salaries of district attorneys as distinguished from fees to which they were entitled under existing laws, and was not intended, and did not have the effect, to repeal prior statutes allowing fees in addition to salaries.—Pillsbury v. Brown, 45 Cal. 46.

[b] Under Statutes of 1893, page 346, section 197, providing that the district attorney of K. county shall receive, as compensation for his services, a fixed annual salary; and section 216, prescribing that such salary shall be in full compensation for all services of every kind rendered by him as such officer—such attorney, holding office from 1895 to 1899, was not entitled to the fee of ten dollars for each suit of foreclosure against delinquent purchasers of school lands, authorized by Political Code, section 3553, passed in 1873, in addition to his salary, since the money was collected by him in his official capacity.—Kern County v. Fay, 131 Cal. 547, 63 Pac. 857.

[c] Under sections 132 and 133 of the county government act of 1897 (Stats. 1897, p. 488, c. 277), which make it the duty of the district attorney to prosecute all persons charged with crime, and sue for the recovery of penalties and forfeitures accruing to the state or county, and to defend suits against the county, and to give, without fee, his opinion in writing to county officers and the board of supervisors, and prohibiting him from presenting any claim for allowance against the county, except for his own services, and under section 215 of the same act (page 572), which declares that the salaries and fees provided therein shall be in full compensation for all services rendered by the county officers or their deputies, and requiring deputies to be paid by their principals out of their salaries, unless otherwise provided, the district attorney cannot claim any extra compensation for his services, or for the services of any deputy or assistant, such as a stenographer employed in writing letters, pleadings, judgments, opinions, etc.—Humiston v. Shaffer, 145 Cal. 195, 78 Pac. 651.

[d] Constitution, article 11, section 9, prohibits the increase of the compensation of county or municipal officers after their election, or during their term of office. The County Government Act of 1897, sections 132, 133, define the duties of the district attorney, and section 215 of the act declares that the salaries and fees provided therein shall be in full compensation for all services rendered by the officers therein named, or by their deputies, and provides for the payment of deputies by their principals out of their salaries. Held, that the county board of supervisors cannot appoint a salaried stenographer, for the district attorney, either directly or indirectly, by allowing a claim against the county for work done by such stenographer.—Humiston v. Shaffer, 145 Cal. 195, 78 Pac. 651.

[e] Nor are the services rendered by such a stenographer personal expenses of the district attorney, within the meaning of section 228 of the same act (page 575), which makes the traveling and other personal expenses of the district attorney incurred in criminal and civil cases, and other matters in which the county is interested, a county charge.—Humiston v. Shaffer, 145 Cal. 195, 78 Pac. 651.

§ 8. —— Allowance and Collection.

[a] Claim of district attorney for his commission on debts recovered for the county comes within that clause of section 17 of the limitation act of 1850, which bars "an action upon a liability created by statute, other than a penalty or forfeiture," in three years. Such claim is exclusively the creature of the statute.—Higby v. Calaveras County, 18 Cal. 176.

[b] The statute does not allow the district attorney commissions on sums paid into the county treasury by the debtor, on a compromise made by the board of supervisors in good faith, pending an action brought by the county to collect an amount claimed due. Where he is entitled to commissions, and a compromise is effected, attributable solely to the litigation, and the money is paid into the county treasury for the purpose of depriving him of his commissions, such averments must be made in the complaint to recover these commissions as will show such facts to have existed. In such case, an averment that a certain sum was collected by means of said action, which amount was paid into the county treasury in pursuance of a compromise made by the board of supervisors while the action was pending, is not sufficient.—Herrington v. Santa Clara County, 44 Cal. 496.

§ 9. —— Conflicting Claims.

[a] An out-going district attorney must surrender to his successor the prosecution of all tax suits pending at the time of the change of incumbents; but semble that he should receive a ratable proportion of the percentage collected from the same by his successor.—Cole v. McKune, 19 Cal. 422.

[b] The salary of the office of district attorney for a period when it is occupied by a person without right belongs to the party entitled to the office.—Dorsey v. Smith, 28 Cal. 21.

§ 10. Powers and Duties in General.

[a] District attorney is mere ministerial officer.—Sternes, Ex parte, 82 Cal. 248, 23 Pac. 38, 40.

[b] District attorney is the officer authorized by law to take charge of and conduct county litigation.—Merced County v. Cook, 120 Cal. 277, 52 Pac. 721.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 302-310, §§ 34-37.

§ 11. —— Prosecution and Conduct of Criminal Proceedings.

[a] It was error to withdraw from the consideration of the jury an admission by the district attorney, at the trial, that one of his witnesses was then under indictment for receiving stolen property; such admission being material, as affecting the witness' credibility, and the district attorney being competent to make it.—People v. Robles, 34 Cal. 591.

[b] In the filing of informations the functions of the district attorney are ministerial only, and not appellate over those of the committing magistrate. He has no power to file an information for any greater or other offense than that specified in the commitment by the magistrate, though in accordance with the complaint made before the magistrate.—People v. Nogiri, 142 Cal. 596, 76 Pac. 490.

§ 12. —— Dismissal of Criminal Prosecution.

[a] District attorney has no power to order judge to dismiss criminal case.—People v. Ward, 85 Cal. 590, 24 Pac. 785.

§ 13. —— Duty to See that Defendant in Criminal Proceedings has Fair Trial.

[a] It is the sworn duty of prosecuting attorneys to see that defendant has a fair and impartial trial and that he is not convicted except by competent and legitimate evidence. It is not his sole duty to convict.—People v. Lee Chuck, 78 Cal. 329, 20 Pac. 719.

§ 14. —— Prosecution or Defense of Civil Actions.

[a] A district attorney has authority to bring an action of his own volition in the name of the people, upon the bond of the tax collector of his county.—People v. Love, 25 Cal. 520.

[b] In all cases saving those embraced in section 8, County Government Act, district attorney can institute suit only under direction of supervisors.—Ventura v. Clay, 119 Cal. 214, 51 Pac. 189.

[c] Subdivison 3 of section 136 gives district attorney no right to institute proceedings at will. It merely imposes duty to do so when directed by competent authority.—Ventura v. Clay, 119 Cal. 215, 51 Pac. 189.

[d] As a general rule all actions brought by or prosecuted on behalf of a county must be brought by authority of the board of supervisors, and where money has been collected for supervisors under contract with them for a percentage, the district attorney has no authority to prosecute an action in the name of the county to recover the amount of such percentage, without a previous order of the board of supervisors. The district attorney has only the limited power given him under section 8, where the board has ordered money paid without authority of law.—County of Contra Costa v. Soto, 133 Cal. 57, 70 Pac. 1019.

§ 15. —— Outside of County or District.

[a] A county attorney is not required to go beyond the limits of his county to prosecute or defend litigation for the county.—(Cal. 1872) Herrington v. Santa Clara County, 44 Cal. 496.

§ 16. —— Power to Allow Entry of Tax Judgment for Amount Less than Fixed by State Board.

[a] District attorney has no authority to allow judgment for less than amount of tax fixed by state board.—Sacramento County v. Central etc. R. R., 61 Cal. 255.

§ 17. —— Authority to Wind Up Unfinished Business After Expiration of Office.

[a] Suits brought by the district attorney of the city and county of Sacramento to collect delinquent taxes under the acts of 1860 and 1861 (Stats. 1860, p. 159; Stats. 1861, p. 119), and pending when his successor in office was qualified, must be turned over to such successor.—Cole v. McKune, 19 Cal. 422.

[b] The fact that a portion of the business in the hands of a district attorney is unfinished, on the assumption of office by his successor, does not give such attorney any authority to conclude it.—Cole v. McKune, 19 Cal. 422.

§ 18. Presumption of Authority to Institute Proceedings.

[a] Rule of presumption of authority of attorney has no application to district attorney whose powers and duties are defined by law.—Sacramento County v. Central etc. R. R., 61 Cal. 255.

[b] The district attorney, being an attorney at law, is presumed to be authorized by the proper party to institute the actions he may bring, in the absence of evidence to the contrary.—County of San Luis Obispo v. Hendricks, 71 Cal. 242, 11 Pac. 682.

§ 19. Validity of Acts of De Facto District Attorneys.

[a] Acts of de facto assistant district attorney are valid.—People v. Turner, 85 Cal. 433, 24 Pac. 857.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 573; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 359-361, §§ 1, 2.

§ 2. Construction and Validity of Act of 1903.

[a] Statutes of 1903, page 75, chapter 67, declaring that a final judgment of divorce shall not be entered until the expiration of one year after the rendition of an interlocutory decree of divorce, is not invalid because it only affected a decree awarding a divorce, and authorized the rendition of a final judgment denying a divorce without an interlocutory decree.—Deyoe v. Superior Court of Mendocino County, 140 Cal. 476, 74 Pac. 28.

[b] The right to divorce is statutory and subject to regulation by the legislature, which may impose restrictions or delays in regard to the time for beginning the action, or the method and order of procedure after the same is begun; and hence the legislation of 1903 (Stats. 1903, pp. 75, 76, c. 67), adding to the Civil Code sections 131, 132, prohibiting the granting of absolute divorces until the expiration of a year from the entry of an interlocutory decree, is constitutional.—Grannis v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 146 Cal. 245, 79 Pac. 891.

§ 3. Construction and Operation of Hawaiian Statute.

[a] A statute of the Republic of Hawaii, declaring that where a divorce is decreed for the adultery of the wife, the husband shall hold her personal estate forever, can have no operation pending suit for such divorce, and can have no applicability until the entry of judgment.—McGrew v. Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, 132 Cal. 85, 84 Am. St. Rep. 20, 64 Pac. 103.

§ 4. Divorce from Bed and Board.

[a] Court has discretion to limit divorce to bed and board.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 250, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

[b] Courts of California have no authority to grant divorce a mensa et thoro, or to compel a husband to support his wife while she is living separate and apart from him, against his will and consent, without any statutory ground for an absolute divorce, or any statutory excuse for her absence from his home.—Hagle v. [a] Under Statutes of 1850, as to husband and wife, a petition for the partition of common property is well joined with an application for a divorce.—Kashaw v. Kashaw, 3 Cal. 312.

[b] A petition in divorce, uniting a cause of action for recovery of community property, is demurrable for misjoinder of causes of action.—Cummings v. Cummings, 14 Pac. 562.

[a] Public has an interest in result of every divorce suit.—McBlain v. McBlain, 77 Cal. 509, 20 Pac. 61.

§ 10. Habitual Drunkenness.

[a] To constitute "habitual intemperance," within our divorce statute, it is not necessary that the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors to excess be of such a character as to render the party at all times incapable of attending to business; but if there be a habit of drinking to excess to such a degree as to disqualify the party from attending to his business during the principal portion of the time usually devoted to business, it is habitual intemperance, although at intervals he may be in a condition to attend to his business.—Mahone v. Mahone, 19 Cal. 626, 81 Am. Dec. 91.

§ 11. Cruelty.

[a] Cruelty may be defined, generally, to be any conduct in one of the married parties which furnishes reasonable apprehension that the continuance of the cohabitation would be attended with bodily harm to the other.—Morris v. Morris, 14 Cal. 76, 73 Am. Dec. 615-n.

[b] Extreme cruelty, in our divorce act, means the same thing as the saevitia or cruelty of the English ecclesiastical courts.—Morris v. Morris, 14 Cal. 76, 73 Am. Dec. 615-n.

[c] If there has been actual violence it must be attended with danger to life, limb, or health, or be such as to cause reasonable apprehension of future danger in order to entitle plaintiff to a divorce.—Morris v. Morris, 14 Cal. 76, 73 Am. Dec. 615-n.

[d] Courts grant divorces, not to punish offense already committed, but to relieve the complaining party of apprehended danger. And the divorce may follow, even in the absence of any actual violence.—Morris v. Morris, 14 Cal. 76, 73 Am. Dec. 615-n.

[e] The acts of cruelty which are made a cause of divorce need not be persistent nor a fixed habit.—Mahone v. Mahone, 19 Cal. 627, 81 Am. Dec. 91.

[f] A husband's extreme cruelty, to justify a divorce, need not be such as to furnish an apprehension that the continuance of cohabitation would be attended with bodily harm to the wife.—Mahone v. Mahone, 19 Cal. 626, 81 Am. Dec. 91.

[g] Cruelty, as the ground of a divorce, is such conduct in one of the married parties as renders further cohabitation dangerous to the physical safety of the other, or creates in the other such reasonable apprehensions of bodily harm as naturally interferes with the discharge of marital duty.—Powelson v. Powelson, 22 Cal. 358.

[h] Any conduct sufficiently aggravated to produce ill-health, or bodily pain, though operating primarily upon the mind only, is legal cruelty.—Powelson v. Powelson, 22 Cal. 358.

[j] Extreme cruelty is distinct from every other ground.—Haskell v. Haskell, 54 Cal. 262.

[h] Adultery does not, in a legal sense, constitute extreme cruelty.—Haskell v. Haskill, 54 Cal. 262.

[i] Habitual intemperance does not, in a legal sense, constitute extreme cruelty, but is something different from any other cause of divorce, and constitutes a separate and distinct cause of action.—Haskell v. Haskell, 54 Cal. 262.

[j] A wife deserted her husband and children for three months, while she went to Germany to learn painting. Held, that this was not such cruelty as entitled the husband to a divorce.—Smith v. Smith, 62 Cal. 466.

[k] Cruelty does not include acts of insane wife.—Cohen v. Cohen, 85 Cal. 109, 24 Pac. 659.

[m] Infliction of grievous mental suffering alone, without reasonably apprehended injurious effect upon body or health of complaining party, is not cruelty.—Waldron v. Waldron, 85 Cal. 256, 259, 24 Pac. 640, 858, overruled in Barnes v. Barnes, 95 Cal. 175, 177, 24 Pac. 649, 858.

[n] Institution and dismissal of suit for divorce, complaint in which contained extremely cruel and unjust charges, is act of cruelty justifying divorce.—Cooper v. Cooper, 88 Cal. 48, 25 Pac. 1062.

[o] Any unjustifiable conduct upon the part of either of the spouses, which so grievously wounds the feelings of the other, or so utterly destroys the peace of mind of the other, as to seriously impair the health, or such as utterly destroys the legitimate ends and objects of matrimony, constitutes extreme cruelty.—Barnes v. Barnes, 95 Cal. 171, 30 Pac. 298.

[p] What acts of a spouse will constitute extreme cruelty, within the meaning of the statute providing for a divorce upon that ground, cannot be defined with precision; but each case is to be determined, according to its own peculiar circumstances, by the good sense and judgment of the court or jury, keeping always in view the intelligence, apparent refinement, and delicacy of sentiment of the complaining party.—Fleming v. Fleming, 95 Cal. 430, 29 Am. St. Rep. 124, 30 Pac. 566.

[q] A finding that defendant was chargeable with extreme cruelty to his wife (plaintiff) is sustained by evidence that without sufficient provocation, and without grounds he called her a whore, a hog, and a hypocrite; charged her with infidelity; and accused her, when she was ill, of having contracted her disease by illicit intercourse, though such illness was not of a character indicating such origin.—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 183, 48 Pac. 730.

[r] It is not necessary to constitute extreme cruelty that it result in impairment of health. Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 187, 48 Pac. 730.

[s] To justify a divorce because of abusive anguage and charges of unchastity and immorality and insanity, it is not necessary that uch conduct should have occurred in the resence of other than the children of the arties.—Andrews v. Andrews, 120 Cal. 184, 2 Pac. 298.

[t] A husband called his wife vile names harged her with being insane, unchaste, and rith having tried to poison him. Held, that uch conduct constituted extreme cruelty nder the statute describing it as the iniction of grievous bodily injury or mental uffering.—Andrews v. Andrews, 120 Cal. 184, 2 Pac. 298.

[u] Infliction of grievous mental suffering, ay constitute extreme cruelty, independent f physical injury.—Andrews v. Andrews, 20 Cal. 187, 52 Pac. 298.

[v] Extreme cruelty is infliction of grievus bodily injury or grievous mental sufferng.—Andrews v. Andrews, 120 Cal. 187, 52 ac. 298.

[w] Evidence that after a husband, without cause, had deserted his wife, who was t the time sick, she missed her diamonds nd her sealskin sacque, and reported to riends of his that she thought he had taken hem, is insufficient to entitle him to divorce n the ground of extreme cruelty.—Kuhl v. uhl, 124 Cal. 57, 56 Pac. 629.

[x] A charge by a husband, in a cross-bill led by him for divorce, that his wife was regnant from some one other than himself hen he married her, and that she concealed he fact from him, tends to cause the wife grievous mental suffering," and is a sufficint ground to sustain a subsequent bill by the ife, where it appears that the charge was lse and malicious, and that the husband's ill was dismissed.—Haley v. Haley, 14 Pac. 2.

12. Willful Neglect or Nonsupport.

a] Willful neglect, whether accompanied ith desertion or otherwise, is a distinct ound of divorce.—Washburn v. Washburn, Cal. 475.

b] Support of wife is a continuing obligaon on part of husband, and his failure to eet it is a continuing cause for a divorce, less there has been an unreasonable lapse time before the action is commenced; and is not released from this obligation by a dgment in his favor in an action for a divorce upon this ground.—Wagner v. Wagner, 104 Cal. 293, 37 Pac. 935.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 624, 625; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 427, 428, §§ 95, 96.

§ 13. —— Ability to Provide.

[a] An application for a divorce on the ground of neglect must fail, where it does not affirmatively appear, on the part of the applicant, that the husband was the owner of property sufficient to provide support for the wife, and neglected to do so.—Washburn v. Washburn, 9 Cal. 475.

[b] When a husband is in constant employment for which he receives the ordinary wages of his labor, and refuses or neglects for years to make any provision for the wants of his wife, a court is justified in finding him guilty of willful neglect.—Wagner v. Wagner, 104 Cal. 293, 37 Pac. 935.

§ 14. —— Effect of Wife's Self-supporting Ability.

[a] Where the earnings of the wife are sufficient for her support, and are applied to such purpose by the husband, or with his assent, there is no basis for a divorce on the ground of neglect, as the earnings of both husband and wife go into a common fund, the control of which belongs to the husband. Washburn v. Washburn, 9 Cal. 475.

[b] Where the wife's earnings are sufficient for her support, and they are not interfered with by the husband, the neglect of the husband to provide the common necessaries of life for the wife is not sufficient ground for a divorce, although the husband be a good workman, and able to earn enough to support the wife.—Rycraft v. Rycraft, 42 Cal. 444.

§ 15. Desertion.

[a] Willful desertion of the other, by either party, for the period of two years, is ground for a divorce under the statute.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

[b] Desertion must be for full period of statute, to sustain or bar a divorce.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 250, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

[c] Though a refusal on the part of the wife to accompany the husband in a reasonable change of domicile probably amounts to a desertion, yet it must appear that the proposition for removal was peremptory, and could not reasonably have been regarded as addressed to her discretion whether to accompany her husband or not.—Hardenbergh v. Hardenbergh, 14 Cal. 654.

[d] Desertion consists of an actual cessation of matrimonial cohabitation between the parties, coupled with the intent to desert, in the mind of the offending party.—Hardenbergh v. Hardenbergh, 14 Cal. 654; Morrison v. Morrison, 20 Cal. 431.

[e] "Willful desertion," as used in the statute in regard to divorces, signifies an intentional desertion. It does not imply malice towards the other party.—Benkert v. Benkert, 32 Cal. 467.

[f] A desertion is made out when it is shown that the absence has commenced, and has continued during the prescribed period without the consent and against the objections of the other party.—Benkert v. Benkert, 32 Cal. 467.

[g] In an action for divorce for willful desertion, the evidence showed that the plaintiff, after the desertion, had requested the defendant, by letter, to return, and that, although they had met several times on the street, defendant had not spoken to plaintiff, nor in any way signified a willingness to live with him until more than a year after such request, when defendant, by letter, stated that she was ready to live in a fit and proper place with plaintiff, but refused to condone any offense which he might have committed against her or his marriage obligations. Held to constitute willful desertion.—Carey v. Carey, 73 Cal. 630, 15 Pac. 313.

[h] A wife is not guilty of desertion, within Civil Code, section, 103, providing that "the husband may choose any reasonable place or mode of living, and, if the wife does not conform thereto, it is desertion," though she refuses to agree with her husband as to the selection of a new home, and though he may be satisfied, if he does choose a new home, she will refuse to go to it, until he actually acquires the home, offers it to her, and she, without sufficient cause, refuses to comply with his selection.—Vosburg v. Vosburg, 136 Cal. 195, 68 Pac. 694.

[i] Civil Code, section 96, provides that persistent refusal to have reasonable matrimonial intercourse as husband or wife, when physical condition does not make such refusal reasonably necessary, or the refusal of either party to dwell in the same house with the other party, when there is no just cause for such refusal, is desertion. Held, that the qualifying clause, "when there is no just cause for such refusal," applies equally to the first refusal mentioned and to the latter.—Fink v. Fink, 137 Cal. 559, 70 Pac. 628.

[j] Desertion continues only so long as there is a want of consent to the separation on the part of the deserted party.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 117, 73 Pac. 808.

[k] Refusal of reconciliation after separation by consent constitutes desertion.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 115, 117, 73 Pac. 808.

[l] An action by a wife for divorce held required to be in good faith to prevent her separation from him amounting to desertion.—Kusel v. Kusel, 147 Cal. 297, 81 Pac. 297.

[m] A wife's maintenance of suit for separate maintenance held not to prevent her absence from him amounting to desertion.—Kusel v. Kusel, 147 Cal. 52, 81 Pac. 297.

[n] Civil Code, section 101, provides that consent to a separation between husband and wife is a revocable act, and that, if one of the parties afterwards in good faith seeks a reconciliation, but the other refuses it, such refusal is desertion; and section 102 declares that, if one party to a marriage deserts the other, and before the expiration of the year required to make the desertion a cause of divorce, returns, and offers in good faith to fulfill the marriage contract, and solicits condonation, the desertion is cured. Held, that where a husband deserted his wife against her consent, he could not, 18 years thereafter, cure such desertion by an offer to return, so as to entitle him to a divorce for desertion on the wife's refusal of his offer.—McMullin v. McMullin, 71 Pac. 108.

§ 16. In General.

[a] Cause of action for divorce barred by statute is no defense.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 117, 73 Pac. 808.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Loss of right to divorce after it is perfected: 84 Am. St. Rep. 136, note. See, also, 14 Cyc. 628-652; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 462-501, §§ 140-197.

§ 17. —— Pendency of Action to Annul Marriage.

[a] The pendency of an action by the husband to annul the marriage on the ground that it was contracted under duress does not prevent an action by the wife for divorce on the ground of nonsupport.—Simpson v. Simpson, 41 Pac. 804.

§ 18. Agreement for, or Consent to, Separation.

[a] Consent to separation after desertion for time essential to give right to divorce does not bar right.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 117, 73 Pac. 808.

[b] The consent of a husband and wife to a separation is a revocable act; and if one of the parties thereafter in good faith seeks a reconciliation and restoration, which the other refuses, such refusal is desertion, which, if continued for a year, constitutes ground for divorce.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112, 73 Pac. 808.

[c] The consent of the parties to the separation need not be expressed in words, but it may be implied from the acts of the parties, and may be tacit as when the parties are willing and make no objection.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112, 73 Pac. 808.

[d] It is for the court trying the case to determine from all the facts and circumstances appearing therein whether or not there was consent or the absence of consent to the separation; and the acts, statements, and admissions of the parties are competent and material evidence in determining that question.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112, 73 Pac. 808.

[e] The character of the separation is not forever established by the status at the time when the parties ceased to live together; but what was originally a separation without consent may become a separation by consent; and that status may again be changed by the refusal to accept a reconciliation proffered in good faith.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112, 73 Pac. 808.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 19. Insanity.

[a] Marriage being a civil contract, and Civil Code, sections 92, 107, providing that it may be annulled for willful desertion for one year, a suit for divorce may be maintained against an insane person for desertion, where such desertion continued for a year before he became insane, provided there is no reasonable probability of his recovery. Harrigan v. Harrigan, 135 Cal. 397, 67 Pac. 506.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Adultery of insane wife as a ground for divorce: 47 Am. Dec. 469. See, also, 14 Cyc. 628; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 463, 464, §§ 142, 143.

§ 20. Connivance and Collusion.

[a] When the court, in an action for divorce, is informed, before the issues are tried, of the existence of a collusive agreement between the parties, by one of the parties, who then repudiated the agreement and disclosed all the facts to the court, and the pleadings are not changed, but the issues are rigorously contested, the fact of such agreement does not render void the decree granting the divorce, so as to authorize its reversal on appeal.—Loveren v. Loveren, 106 Cal. 509, 40 Pac. 801.

[b] Connivance and collusion imply consent to act complained of.—Thompson v. Thompson, 121 Cal. 12, 53 Pac. 403.

[c] Acquiescence is consent by silence (Civil Code, section 121.)—Thompson v. Thompson, 121 Cal. 12, 53 Pac. 403.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Adultery, connivance in, what is not: 54 Am. Rep. 492, note; 12 L. R. A. 524, note. See, also, 14 Cyc. 644, 645; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 477-479, §§ 162-165.

§ 21. Provocation or Excuse.

[a] Divorce for extreme cruelty will not be granted, when such cruelty is caused by the misconduct of the wife, who applies.—Johnson v. Johnson, 14 Cal. 459.

[b] Sufficient excuse obviates the wrong of desertion.—Benkert v. Benkert, 32 Cal. 471.

[c] Acts of violence to the person of the wife sufficient to authorize a divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty held not excused by the fact that the wife had an irascible temper and conducted herself improperly towards the husband.—Eidenmuller v. Eidenmuller, 37 Cal. 364.

[d] Though Civil Code, section 94, defines "extreme cruelty" as "the affliction of grievous bodily injury or grievous mental suffering upon the other by one party of the marriage," a divorce should not be granted the wife on the ground of extreme cruelty because the husband, when intoxicated and in the presence of others, called her a "whore," and other vile names, where the evidence shows that she was not uniformly kind to him, and that the mental suffering endured by her did not injure her health.—Waldron v. Waldron, 85 Cal. 251, 24 Pac. 649, 858, 9 L. R. A. 487.

[e] Extreme cruelty may be a just cause for refusal of the wife to have matrimonial intercourse with her husband.—Fink v. Fink, 137 Cal. 559, 70 Pac. 628.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

25 L. R. A. 564, note. See, also, 14 Cyc. 629-635; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 465-474, §§ 145-159.

§ 22. Condonation.

[a] Acts tending to condone must be accompanied by express agreement to condone (construing Civil Code, section 118.)—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 189, 192, 48 Pac. 730.

[b] Condonation is forgiveness.—Thompson v. Thompson, 121 Cal. 12, 53 Pac. 403.

§ 23. —— Acts Constituting.

[a] Where the desertion of a husband or wife has continued for more than two years,

an offer made by the offending party to return and live and cohabit with the other will not defeat the action for a divorce, unless accepted and acted upon. An offer to receive the offending party may, until cohabitation, be withdrawn.—Benkert v. Benkert, 32 Cal. 467.

[b] A single act of sexual intercourse between husband and wife, after commencement of suit for divorce on the ground of adultery, is not alone sufficient to show "restoration of the offending party to all marital rights," as required by Civil Code, section 116, to constitute condonation.—Bohnert v. Bohnert, 95 Cal. 444, 30 Pac. 590.

[c] A voluntary promise by the wife, after separation from the husband on account of his extreme cruelty, to return to, and live with him does not alone constitute condonation, if such promise is not kept, and it has not the effect to remit his offenses nor to restore him to marital rights.—Wolff v. Wolff, 102 Cal. 433, 36 Pac. 767, 1037.

[d] Civil Code, section 118, provides that in actions for divorce conjugal kindness shall not be evidence of condonation of any of the acts authorizing divorce, unless accompanied by an express agreement to condone. Held, that where defendant had been guilty of inhuman and cruel treatment toward plaintiff, affectionate letters written to him thereafter by plaintiff were not sufficient to condone the offense.—Hunter v. Hunter, 132 Cal. 473, 64 Pac. 772.

[e] The original offense is not condoned by mere subsequent acquiescence of both parties in a separation, but it must be prosecuted with reasonable diligence, and if so prosecuted may be made a defense to an action for divorce by the one who has proffered a reconciliation and been refused. But if the cause of action for the original offense is not then subsisting, and is barred by the statute, it cannot be made a defense to such action.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112, 73 Pac. 808.

[f] Under Civil Code, sections 115, 116, a finding that plaintiff had not condoned her husband's matrimonial offense by subsequent cohabitation held not error.—Andros v. Andros, 32 Pac. 90.

14 Cyc. 638, 641; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 481-488, §§ 171-179.

§ 24. —— Revival of Condoned Offense.

[a] Where on condonation husband renews his former ill-treatment, the condonation is revoked and constitutes no bar to suit.—Andrews v. Andrews, 120 Cal. 188, 189, 52 Pac. 298.

[b] Condonation is revoked when condonee commits offense anew.—Thompson v. Thompson, 121 Cal. 12, 53 Pac. 403.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

14 Cyc. 641-643; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 490-493, §§ 185-187.

§ 25. Recrimination.

[a] Doctrine of recrimination, or compensatio criminum, applicable to suits for divorce, and the several offenses which, by the statute, constitute grounds of divorce, are pleadable in bar to such suits, the one to the other, within the principle of the doctrine.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

[b] Any proper ground of divorce is pleadable in bar.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 250, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

[c] To sustain recrimination, defendant must show proper ground of divorce from plaintiff.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 250, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

[d] Though desertion for a less period than two years is not sufficient, under the statute, to bar a decree where defendant's adultery is established, it may be considered by the court, in the exercise of its discretion, whether to decree an absolute divorce, or a separation from bed and board.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

[e] Under Civil Code, section 122, declaring that "recrimination is a showing by the defendant of any cause of divorce against the plaintiff, in bar of the plaintiff's cause of divorce," a defendant in a divorce action may allege and prove facts constituting a cause of divorce against plaintiff in bar of plaintiff's cause of divorce.—Cassidy v. Cassidy, 63 Cal. 352.

[f] Where defendant denies allegations of complaint, and files cross-complaint charging a ground of divorce against the plaintiff, if the court upon hearing the evidence finds the charges of both parties to be true, it may deny all relief to either party, and dismiss the action.—Brenot v. Brenot, 102 Cal. 294, 36 Pac. 672.

[g] A recriminatory plea by the husband, alleging desertion by the wife for not conforming to his choice of a reasonable place and mode of living, is not sustained where it appears that they had lived for years in a suitable home belonging to the wife, among her friends, and that his choice of a different home was not made in good faith, and that his offer of another suitable home elsewhere was not made until after her cause of action against him for a divorce became perfected.—Vosburg v. Vosburg, 136 Cal. 195, 68 Pac. 694.

§ 27. Civil Jurisdiction Under Mexican Law.

[a] By the Mexican law, marriage lawfully contracted in the face of the Catholic church, and between members thereof, cannot be dissolved by the civil tribunals. But the union of man and wife without the sanction of the church is regarded as a mere civil contract, and, as such, falls within the legitimate sphere of the ordinary jurisdiction of the court of first instance.—Harman v. Harman, 1 Cal. 215.

§ 28. Domicile or Residence of Parties.

[a] Under the act concerning divorce (Laws, p. 371), declaring that an applicant must have resided in the state "six months immediately preceding the application," the wife's residence is of no importance, provided her husband has resided within the state the requisite time, for her domicile follows her husband's.—Kashaw v. Kashaw, 3 Cal. 312.

[b] The desertion of the husband for a time sufficient to afford the wife a reason for an application of divorce entitles the wife to sue in her own domicile.—Moffat v. Moffat, 5 Cal. 280.

[c] Coming to the state to procure a divorce, with intention of returning when it is procured, is not a bona fide residence.—Bennett v. Bennett, 28 Cal. 600.

[d] When the husband begins a suit for divorce, the domicile of the wife ceases to be the domicile of the husband, and she may acquire a separate actual domicile by change of residence from one country to another, pending suit.—McGrew v. Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, 132 Cal. 85, 84 Am. St. Rep. 20, 64 Pac. 103.

[e] Where, in an action for divorce, plaintiff alleged residence in the state for more than ten years then last past, which defendant specifically denied, plaintiff's admission in the complaint that during a considerable part of that time she had lived on a yacht, and was sailing the high seas, going from port to port, was not inconsistent with her residence in the state.—De Tolna v. De Tolna, 135 Cal. 575, 67 Pac. 1045.

§ 29. Venue and Change Thereof.

[a] Civil Code, section 128, as amended by act of March 10, 1891, providing that a divorce must not be granted unless plaintiff has been a resident of the county "in which the action is brought three months next preceding the commencement of the action," does not prevent a change of the place of trial of an action for divorce to the county in which defendant resides, since Code of Civil Procedure, section 395, provides that "in all other cases (excepting actions relating to real property, for the recovery of penalties, and those against municipal corporations and public officers, etc.) the action must be tried in the county in which the defendants, or some of them, reside at the commencement of the action."—Warner v. Warner, 100 Cal. 11, 34 Pac. 523.

[b] A motion by defendant in divorce to change the place of trial to a county other than that in which the action was brought, on the ground that defendant resides in the former county, should be granted, where the affidavit of plaintiff creates no substantial conflict with defendant's as to his residence. Usher v. Usher, 36 Pac. 8.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 591-593; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 531-535, §§ 227-231.

§ 30. Limitations and Laches.

[a] Cause of action on ground of desertion is not barred by "unreasonable lapse of time," where it appears that defendant deserted plaintiff and continues such desertion without cause and against will and without consent of plaintiff.—Thompson v. Thompson, 121 Cal. 12, 53 Pac. 403.

[b] Civil Code, section 101, provides that consent to a separation is a revocable act, and that where one of the parties in good faith seeks reconciliation and restoration, but the other refuses it, such refusal is desertion. Held, that the limitation of an action for divorce for desertion begins to run

[b] Whether mortgagee of community property is proper defendant in divorce suit doubted. (McFarland, J., concurring.)—Cummings v. Cummings, 75 Cal. 442, 17 Pac. 442.

[c] A petition in divorce, improperly uniting a cause of action for recovery of community property, and joining as defendants the purchaser of such property from the husband defendant, said purchaser's mortgagee and another claiming interest in the premises is demurrable for misjoinder of parties.—Cummings v. Cummings, 14 Pac. 562.

§ 33. Death of Parties and Revival of Suit.

[a] After the death of a husband against whom a decree of divorce has been granted, a supplemental decree partitioning the common property will not affect interests of the husband's heirs, unless a revivor is had as to them.—Ewald v. Corbett, 32 Cal. 493.

[b] As an action for divorce does not survive upon the death of either party, Code of Civil Procedure, section 473, providing that, in case of service of summons by publication, defendant may, by leave of court, answer to the merits of the original action within a year after judgment therein, cannot be invoked on the death of plaintiff after the entry of a judgment, having no reference to the subject of property.—Kirschner v. [b] Marriage must be averred and if denied it must be proved.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 44, 16 Pac. 345.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 663; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 562-564, §§ 287-289.

§ 36. —— Grounds and Elements Thereof.

[a] Charge of adultery should be stated with reasonable certainty as to time and place, so as to enable the defendant to prepare to meet it on the trial.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

[b] Under Code, section 105, authorizing a divorce for a husband's neglect to support his wife while he is able to do so, or for his neglect to do so while he is unable to do so because of his idleness, profligacy, or dissipation, a divorce cannot be granted under a petition charging merely willful neglect without stating the kind of neglect.—Devoe v. Devoe, 51 Cal. 543.

[c] A wife sued for divorce on the ground of cruelty, alleging that the husband, in another action between them, filed a "false and malicious" affidavit charging her with unchastity, but did not aver that such action had been terminated in her favor, or at all. Held, that a demurrer should have been sustained.—Haley v. Haley, 74 Cal. 489, 16 Pac. 248.

[d] In pleading habitual intemperance as a ground for a divorce, it is not necessary that the complaint should allege the particular acts and conduct of the defendant, showing that he was intoxicated to the extent required by section 106 of the Civil Code. An allegation that the defendant had been habitually intemperate to such a degree as to reasonably inflict a course of great mental anguish upon the plaintiff is sufficient.—Forney v. Forney, 80 Cal. 528, 22 Pac. 294.

[e] Mental suffering produced by drunkenness, merely, cannot be considered under allegation of cruelty; it must be specially alleged. Waldron v. Waldron, 85 Cal. 264, 24 Pac. 649-858.

[f] As a ground for divorce, Civil Code, section 94, defines extreme cruelty as "the infliction of grievous bodily injury or grievous mental suffering upon the other by one party to the marriage." Held that, where the complaint shows that the acts complained of caused grievous mental suffering, it is sufficient without showing that such acts had an injurious effect on plaintiff's health.—Barnes v. Barnes, 95 Cal. 171, 30 Pac. 298, 16 L. R. A. 660, overruling Waldron v. Waldron (1890) 85 Cal. 251, 24 Pac. 649, 858, 9 L. R. A. 487.

[g] Each count of complaint setting forth cause of action must be complete, in an action for a divorce, though it is sufficient to adopt in one count the allegations made in another.—Reading v. Reading, 96 Cal. 4, 30 Pac. 803.

[h] Under Civil Code, section 94, declaring that extreme cruelty, as a ground for divorce, may consist either of the infliction of grievous bodily injury, or grievous mental suffering, an allegation that "during the last two years defendant has treated plaintiff in a cruel and inhuman manner," that defendant has applied the coarsest epithets to her (naming them), and has accused her of a want of chastity, states no cause of action.—Smith v. Smith, 124 Cal. 651, 57 Pac. 573.

[i] A complaint in an action of divorce alleging that on March 8, 1898, the defendant voluntarily separated himself from the plaintiff without any fault of plaintiff, with intent to desert her, and has continued to desert her, sufficiently states a cause of action under Civil Code, section 95, providing that willful desertion is the voluntary separation of one of the married parties from the other with intent to desert.—Sheridan v. Sheridan, 134 Cal. 88, 66 Pac. 73.

[j] A complaint for divorce, averring that defendant deserted the marriage bed, "and ever since said time has refused to have reasonable or any matrimonial intercourse with plaintiff, and has ever since occupied a separate room," etc., sufficiently charges a "persistent refusal," within Civil Code, section 96, declaring that "persistent refusal to have reasonable matrimonial intercourse as husband and wife, when health or physical condition does not make such refusal reasonably necessary, ... when there is no just cause for such refusal, is desertion."—Vosburg v. Vosburg, 136 Cal. 195, 68 Pac. 694.

[k] A complaint alleging extreme cruelty, in that "about three years ago" defendant, without cause, struck plaintiff, and since has continually, whenever they have been together, used vile language to her, is not demurrable as failing to specify the acts relied on.—Johnson v. Johnson, 35 Pac. 637.

[l] In an action for divorce, name of person with whom adultery was committed should be stated, if known.—Wilkerson v. Wilkerson (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 784.

[m] Complaint in action for divorce held to sufficiently allege places where acts of adultery were committed.—Wilkerson v. Wilkerson (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 784.

[n] In action for divorce on ground of adultery, time and place of offense should be alleged.—Wilkerson v. Wilkerson (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 784.

§ 37. Answer.

[a] To defeat plaintiff's cause, recriminatory answer must allege facts which, if proved, would authorize decree of divorce in defendant's favor.—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 189, 48 Pac. 730.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 584-588, §§ 310-318.

§ 38. —— Amendment.

[a] To allow defendant, in an action for divorce and division of property, to amend his answer by making a denial of an allegation concerning the property more specific, is not an abuse of discretion.—Sharon v. Sharon, 77 Cal. 102, 19 Pac. 230.

§ 39. Cross-complaint.

[a] A cross-complaint filed under Code of Civil Procedure, section 442, for a divorce in defendant's favor, is insufficient, where it fails to allege the fact of marriage or of residence in the state for six years, as a cross-complaint cannot be helped out by the allegations of the other pleadings, but must state facts entitling the holder to affirmative relief.—Coulthurst v. Coulthurst, 58 Cal. 239.

[b] There may be cross-complaint in action for divorce.—Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 81 Cal. 183-189, 15 Am. St. Rep. 38, 22 Pac. 648; Mott v. Mott, 82 Cal. 418, 22 Pac. 1140, 23 Pac. 1142.

[c] There may be a cross-complaint in an action for a divorce, upon which affirmative relief may be granted to the defendant upon a cause for divorce from the plaintiff.—Blakely v. Blakely, 89 Cal. 324, 26 Pac. 1072.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 14 Cyc. 672-674; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 590-591, §§ 322-327.

§ 40. Demurrer.

[a] An objection, in proceedings for a divorce, that the complaint is insufficient in not properly stating the facts showing the property to be common, must be raised by demurrer.—Gimmy v. Gimmy, 22 Cal. 633; Gimmy v. Doane, 22 Cal. 635.

[b] If there is any uncertainty in either count as to residence of the plaintiff, or as to other allegations, the objection should be taken by demurrer, on the ground of uncertainty.—Reading v. Reading, 96 Cal. 4, 30 Pac. 103.

[c] Court cannot strike out or overrule demurrer in divorce suit and refuse defendant right to answer.—Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 42, 65 Am. St. Rep. 147, 52 Pac. 122.

See 14 Cyc. 672; 17 Cent. Dig., col. 589, §§ 320, 321.

§ 41. Supplemental Pleadings.

[a] The rule requiring a supplemental complaint to refer to matter in aid of the case made by the original complaint, and occurring between the filing thereof and the judgment, applied, where the original action was brought to obtain a divorce and division of the common property, but the supplemental complaint sought to enforce an alleged trust arising out of an express contract between the parties while married, in performance of which the defendant, after the judgment, acquired title to property for the benefit of the plaintiff.—Gleason v. Gleason, 54 Cal. 135.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 14 Cyc. 674-677; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 591-597, §§ 328-339.

§ 42. Issues and Proof.

[a] Marriage of the parties is sufficiently proved by defendant's admission or failure to traverse the allegation of it in the complaint.—Fox v. Fox, 25 Cal. 587.

[b] Residence of the applicant in state for the preceding six months must be alleged in the complaint and proved on the trial, although it is not denied in the answer.—Bennett v. Bennett, 28 Cal. 599.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 14 Cyc. 679, 680; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 601-605, §§ 349-352.

§ 43. Waiver of Objections.

[a] Facts constituting a charge of adultery, with circumstances of time and place, should be averred specifically; but objection is waived by failure to demur.—Conant v. Conant, 10 Cal. 249, 70 Am. Dec. 717.

§ 44. Presumptions and Burden of Proof.

[a] The act of a husband in leaving the country three weeks after his marriage, and remaining absent for nine years without contributing to his wife's support, will raise a presumption of an intention to desert, justifying a divorce in favor of the wife on such ground, without any evidence of the circumstances and causes of the separation. Morrison v. Morrison, 20 Cal. 431.

[b] A plaintiff for divorce on the ground of desertion is not required to show negatively that no cause for the desertion existed.—Morrison v. Morrison, 20 Cal. 431.

[c] In an action for divorce on the ground of adultery, the fact that the husband enters a house of prostitution in the evening and remains all night, raises a presumption of adulterous intercourse, and casts on him the burden of showing that he is innocent.—Evans v. Evans, 41 Cal. 103.

[d] It will be presumed that charges made in complaint for divorce were untrue when action was voluntarily dismissed.—Cooper v. Cooper, 88 Cal. 48, 25 Pac. 1062.

[e] Though, in a suit for divorce, it appeared that prior to plaintiff's marriage to defendant she had been married to a third person, and that her former husband was living, it was not necessary for her to show that the former marriage had been dissolved, that fact being presumed from the solemnization of the second one.—McKibben v. McKibben, 139 Cal. 448, 73 Pac. 143.

§ 46. —— Confessions or Admissions.

[a] Confessions of defendant are admissible, but must be corroborated.—Baker v. Baker, 13 Cal. 88.

[b] The object of the rule requiring proof in corroboration of defendant's confessions is to guard against collusion; and when the entire testimony, confessions, and circumstances repel all suspicion of collusions, and leave no doubt of the truth of the confessions, the court should act upon them.—Baker v. Baker, 13 Cal. 87.

[c] Confessions or admissions of defendant can be given in evidence.—Evans v. Evans, 41 Cal. 103.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 612-614, §§ 365, 366, 368.

§ 47. —— Marriage.

[a] Evidence of cohabitation and repute is admissible to show marriage in action for divorce.—White v. White, 82 Cal. 450, 23 Pac. 276.

[b] In action on ground of adultery, where marriage between plaintiff and defendant is not sought to be proved by cohabitation, proof of defendant's marriage to co-respondent is inadmissible.—Kilburn v. Kilburn, 89 Cal. 51, 23 Am. St. Rep. 447, 26 Pac. 636.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., col. 614, § 367.

§ 48. Weight and Sufficiency.

[a] Where divorce is granted on grounds of extreme cruelty and willful neglect, failure of evidence to sustain charge of willful neglect is immaterial where finding as to extreme cruelty is supported by evidence.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 117 Cal. 408, 49 Pac. 574.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 687-700; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 624-674, §§ 392-456.

§ 49. —— Corroboration.

[a] Testimony of third persons that they witnessed a portion of the acts of cruelty of a husband as testified to by the wife is a sufficient corroboration thereof, as required by Civil Code, section 130.—Matthai v. Matthai, 49 Cal. 90.

[b] A divorce cannot be granted on the uncorroborated testimony of the parties. Held, that the wife's testimony as to her husband's cruelty in charging her with adultery was not sufficiently corroborated by an attorney's statements of communications which were made to him without cruel intent, and not shown to have produced any effect on the wife.—Haley v. Haley, 67 Cal. 24, 7 Pac. 3.

[c] In an action by the husband for divorce for desertion, the wife answered, charging that the husband's cruelty forced her to leave. There was no evidence to support plaintiff's testimony, except that defendant lived at some distance in a house owned by plaintiff, and had said she was not coming back to his farm, and also the record of a former suit by the wife for divorce for cruelty, where it was found he was not guilty of cruelty, and the divorce was denied, but the wife was allowed twenty-five dollars per month. Held not sufficient to warrant a divorce under Civil Code, section 130, providing that a divorce cannot be granted on the uncorroborated statements, admissions, or testimony of the parties.—Hagle v. Hagle, 74 Cal. 608, 16 Pac. 518.

[d] Court may believe uncorroborated testimony of wife as against that of husband on issue as to whether her desertion was justified by his cruelty.—White v. White, 86 Cal. 221, 24 Pac. 996.

[e] Plaintiff's testimony need not be corroborated on every fact and circumstance testified to if there be corroboration on fact or facts sufficient to support judgment.—Cooper v. Cooper, 88 Cal. 48, 25 Pac. 1062.

[f] In an action for divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty, plaintiff's testimony that defendant charged her with infidelity, called her vile names, and communicated to her a loathsome disease, was sufficiently corroborated, as required by Civil Code, section 130, by a letter written by defendant to plaintiff, charging her with having committed adultery with a certain person; by the testimony of a witness that plaintiff came to his store crying, and saying that defendant had threatened her, and called her vile names; that he (witness) sent for defendant, and informed him of his wife's complaints and charges, and that defendant did not deny them; and by the testimony of a physician that he treated plaintiff for the disease which she claimed defendant communicated to her. Venzke v. Venzke, 94 Cal. 225, 29 Pac. 499.

[g] Where the testimony of the plaintiff, in an action for divorce upon the ground of extreme cruelty, is sufficiently corroborated as to certain acts and declarations sufficient to constitute extreme cruelty, it is not material or necessary that her testimony should be corroborated as to all other distinct acts of cruelty alleged in the complaint.—Wolff v. Wolff, 102 Cal. 433, 36 Pac. 767, 1037.

[h] Where the evidence of extreme cruelty, upon which a divorce is partly based, consists wholly of the uncorroborated evidence of the party seeking a divorce upon that ground, there is no sufficient evidence to sustain the divorce upon that ground.—Reid v. Reid, 112 Cal. 274, 44 Pac. 564.

[i] Rule as to what constitutes corroboration laid down in Evans v. Evans, 41 Cal. 108, reaffirmed.—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 191, 48 Pac. 730.

[j] Principal object of rule requiring corroboration of plaintiff's testimony is to prevent collusion and when evident that there is no collusion very little corroboration is sufficient.—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 191.

[k] Section 130, Civil Code, does not require that there should be direct testimony of other witnesses to every act of cruelty sworn to by plaintiff.—Andrews v. Andrews, 120 Cal. 186, 52 Pac. 298.

[l] Main purpose of section 130, Civil Code, is to prevent collusion, and it is sufficient corroboration if considerable number of important facts are testified to by others or there is other evidence, circumstantial or direct, strongly tending to confirm plaintiff's testimony.—Andrews v. Andrews, 120 Cal. 186, 52 Pac. 298.

[m] Where plaintiff alone testifies as to personal abuse by his wife, and she explicitly denies the language alleged to have been used, no divorce can be granted under Civil Code, section 130, prohibiting the same on the uncorroborated statement of either party. Kuhl v. Kuhl, 124 Cal. 57, 56 Pac. 629.

[n] Object of section 130, Civil Code, requiring corroboration of plaintiff's evidence is to prevent collusion.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 119, 73 Pac. 808.

[o] The attitude of the defendant in refusing a reconciliation, or to cohabit with the plaintiff under any circumstances, and the declarations of the defendant to third parties at the time of and subsequent to the offer of reconciliation, are a sufficient corroboration of the plaintiff's evidence.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112, 73 Pac. 808.

[p] Under the express provisions of Civil Code, section 130, a divorce may not be granted on the uncorroborated evidence of either party.—Berry v. Berry, 145 Cal. 784, 79 Pac. 531.

[q] The provision of Civil Code, section 130, that "no divorce can be granted upon the uncorroborated . . . . testimony of the parties," has no application to a case where the wife seeks a divorce on the ground of a false and malicious charge against her by the husband of concealed pregnancy by another man at marriage, although she is the only witness who gave testimony as to what her feelings about the charge were. Where the court finds that the charge was false, and there is nothing in the record to negative the fact that the wife is a pure and virtuous woman, the presumption is that such a charge had its natural effect on such a woman, and caused her "grievous mental suffering."—Haley v. Haley, 14 Pac. 92.

[r] Statement as to corroboration required under Civil Code, section 130, in a divorce case.—Avery v. Avery (Cal. Sup.), 83 Pac. 967.

§ 50. —— Marriage.

[a] In an action for divorce for adultery, the marriage will not be inferred from matrimonial cohabitation with the reputation of being married persons, where the result of such inference is to prove defendant guilty of bigamy; for in such cases actual marriage must be proved.—Case v. Case, 17 Cal. 598.

§ 51. —— Residence of Plaintiff.

[a] Evidence in action for divorce held sufficient to show that plaintiff was resident of state.—Wilkerson v. Wilkerson (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 784.

§ 52. —— Adultery.

[a] In an action for divorce on the ground of adultery, the act of adultery, like any other fact, may be established by circumstantial proof.—Evans v. Evans, 41 Cal. 103.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 692-698; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 636-658, §§ 411-441.

§ 53. —— Cruelty.

[a] If, in an action for a divorce, the wife testifies to acts of personal violence committed by the husband, evidence of the husband attempting to excuse or apologize for such acts will not regarded as substantially contradicting her.—Matthai v. Matthai, 49 Cal. 91.

[b] Evidence that a husband attempted to excuse or apologize for acts of personal violence does not contradict the wife's testimony as to the commission of such violence, in an action by her for divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty.—Matthai v. Matthai, 49 Cal. 90.

[c] Refusal of trial court to grant a divorce sought on the ground of extreme cruelty will not be disturbed where the only evidence of cruelty was a letter written by the husband to the wife, in which he charged that she had communicated a venereal disease to him, when neither party actually had the disease, as appeared from the testimony of physicians, and her own testimony that she was sick for three or four days after receiving the letter, but that she did not call a doctor.—Hatton v. Hatton, 136 Cal. 353, 68 Pac. 1016.

[d] In divorce plaintiff testified that defendant often, in the presence of others, accused her of being intimate with other men; that he had a venereal disease, and accused her of giving it to him; that he many times threatened to take the minor child away from plaintiff, and on one occasion took the child away for about two weeks, and would not tell plaintiff where it was; that he called her a prostitute, and left her often without means of support; that she had to support herself; and that the conduct of defendant caused her mental suffering and bodily injury. Held, that such testimony sustained a finding of extreme cruelty.—Bryan v. Bryan, 137 Cal. xix, 70 Pac. 304.

[e] Plaintiff's physician testified, inter alia, that her nose had been flattened by a blow, that defendant admitted having struck her, but said he did not mean to, and seemed ashamed. Their son swore that he had heard his father call his mother insulting names as long as she lived with him. Since the assault, plaintiff had been generally sick in bed, and her husband's language seemed to make her worse. Held sufficient proof of "extreme cruelty," consisting of a blow and abusive language, to the injury of plaintiff's health.—Johnson v. Johnson, 35 Pac. 637.

[f] Evidence in a divorce case held sufficient to sustain a finding of extreme cruelty as defined by Civil Code, section 94.—Avery v. Avery (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 967.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 699; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 658-663, §§ 442-445.

§ 54. —— Desertion.

[a] A husband's abandonment of his wife, prolonged through many years, without provision for her support, is sufficient proof of an intent to desert.—Morrison v. Morrison, 20 Cal. 431.

[b] That parties have lived separate for years does not prove willful desertion.—Christie v. Christie, 53 Cal. 27.

[c] Evidence showing that the husband, without cause, separated himself from the marriage bed, and did not thereafter seek a renewal of matrimonial intercourse, for more than one year, is sufficient to show a persistent refusal thereof by him, and it is not required, in order to show such refusal, that the wife shall solicit his return to the marriage couch.—Vosburg v. Vosburg, 136 Cal. 195, 68 Pac. 694.

[d] The character of the separation between a husband and wife is not forever established by the status at the time they ceased to live together, but what was originally a separation without consent may become a separation by consent, and whether it has become such is a question of fact. Judgment (1902) 71 Pac. 108, reversed.—McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112, 73 Pac. 308.

[e] In an action for divorce for desertion evidence held insufficient to support a finding that the separation between plaintiff and defendant was voluntary, and with defendant's consent.—McMullin v. McMullin, 71 Pac. 108.

55. —— Nonsupport.

[a] A petition by a wife for a divorce on the ground of failure to support is not sustained by proof that she had lived with her parents for four years, and that he had supplied her with all the money and supplies for which she had made application.—Christie v. Christie, 53 Cal. 26.

[b] In divorce, evidence held insufficient to show that defendant had failed to support his wife to the best of his ability.—Berry v. Berry, 145 Cal. 784, 79 Pac. 531.

[b] Whether an offense has been condoned is question of fact.—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 188, 48 Pac. 730.

[c] Whether ill-treatment constitutes extreme cruelty is largely question of fact for trial court.—Andrews v. Andrews, 120 Cal. 187, 52 Pac. 298.

[a] What constitutes extreme cruelty, as a cause of divorce, is a matter of law; but whether the evidence shows such conduct is a question of fact. Ordinarily, what constitutes extreme cruelty is a mixed question of law and fact; and where the evidence, assuming it to be true, is not legally sufficient, the court may so decide as a question of law.—Kuhl v. Kuhl, 124 Cal. 57, 56 Pac. 629.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 706; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 694-695, §§ 494-495.

§ 60. —— Findings.

[a] In an action for divorce, where there is a failure to traverse the allegation of marriage in the complaint, it is not necessary the fact of the marriage should be found.—Fox v. Fox, 25 Cal. 587.

[b] Under Code, section 105, authorizing a divorce for a husband's neglect to support his wife while he is able to do so, or for his neglect to do so while he is unable to do so because of his idleness, profligacy, or dissipation, a divorce should not be granted under a finding that defendant failed to support his wife while able to do so, where the petition alleges failure to support because of dissipation.—Devoe v. Devoe, 51 Cal. 543.

[c] Where the statute requires that habitual intemperance shall have continued for a year to afford ground for a divorce, the fact that it has continued for a year must be found, or a judgment of divorce cannot be sustained.—Dunn v. Dunn, 62 Cal. 176.

[d] The finding "that the repeated acts of cruelty, as established by the evidence, upon the part of said defendant towards her said husband and children during the last several years, have inflicted upon the plaintiff grievous mental suffering," is but a conclusion of law, and does not find any fact in issue in the case.—Smith v. Smith, 62 Cal. 466.

[e] A recriminatory defense, under Civil Code, section 122, consisting of a cause of divorce against plaintiff, creates a material issue on which a finding is essential to sustain a degree for plaintiff.—Cassidy v. Cassidy, 63 Cal. 352.

[f] Civil Code, section 130, provides that no divorce can be granted upon the uncorroborated statement, admission, or testimony of the parties. A husband sought divorce for adultery and desertion, and the wife, by cross-complaint, sought it for adultery and extreme cruelty. The court found the wife innocent of both charges, and granted her a divorce for the adultery of her husband; but also found that the specific acts of extreme cruelty were mainly sustained by the wife's evidence, which was contradicted by the husband, and the corroborating circumstances were insufficient to establish them. Held that, while the court was restrained by the statute from finding cruelty as a ground of divorce, it was at liberty to find it as a justification for the desertion, and there was no conflict in the findings.—White v. White, 86 Cal. 219, 24 Pac. 996.

[g] Where, in an action for divorce, findings are made on issues raised by specific denials of allegations in the complaint of desertion and failure to support for a year prior to the action, a separate finding is unnecessary on an allegation in the answer of defendant's willingness and offer to support the plaintiff during the time.—Terrill v. Terrill, 109 Cal. 413, 42 Pac. 137.

[h] Finding that acts complained of "have never been condoned" is sufficient finding of fact.—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 188, 48 Pac. 730.

[i] Though defendant relies on a recriminatory answer, a failure to find on his charges is not reversible error, where, had the court found the several acts and things complained of in the language in which they were alleged by defendant, the findings would not have justified a decree of divorce; Civil Code, section 122, providing that "recrimination is a showing by defendant of any cause of divorce aginst plaintiff in bar of plaintiff's cause of divorce."—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 183, 48 Pac. 730.

[j] In an action for divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty, where defendant has pleaded extreme cruelty by plaintiff, and condonation of defendant's offense, and there are findings of fact for plaintiff, a conclusion of law that plaintiff is entitled to a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony, etc., is sufficient to support a judgment of divorce.—Smith v. Smith, 119 Cal. 183, 48 Pac. 730.

[k] A memorandum of decision in a divorce case which fails to show the jurisdictional fact of residence, or the facts constituting the grounds for divorce, and which does not contain a separate statement of facts and conclusions of law, and does not direct judgment, is insufficient, as a finding of fact, to sustain a judgment.—O'Brien v. O'Brien, 124 Cal. 422, 57 Pac. 225.

[l] Where the evidence shows condonation of the acts for which a divorce is sought, it is the duty of the court to find to that effect, though condonation was not pleaded.—Hunter v. Hunter, 132 Cal. 473, 64 Pac. 772.

[m] In an action for divorce for intemperance and cruelty, where the court found that the defendant was never habitually intemperate, nor so intemperate as to cause great mental anguish, and that defendant had not treated the plaintiff with extreme cruelty, and has not inflicted on her great mental suffering, nor inflicted on the plaintiff grievous bodily injury or mental suffering, it was unnecessary to make special findngs as to an allegation of abandonment and desertion in the complaint, merely intended to aid other allegations as to cruelty.—Kepfler v. Kepfler, 134 Cal. 205, 66 Pac. 208.

[n] Though the allegation of the complaint showed desertion under Civil Code, section 98, which is occasioned by the cruelty of one of the spouses driving the other away from their home, the findings given negativing the charge of cruelty also negative the alleged desertion, and special findings as to the facts stated in such allegation are unnecessary.—Kepfler v. Kepfler, 134 Cal. 205, 66 Pac. 208.

[o] Civil Code, section 101, relative to divorce, declares that consent to a separation is a revocable act, and if one of the parties afterward in good faith seeks a reconciliation and restoration, but the other refuses it, such refusal is desertion. Held, in a suit for divorce, where there had been a previous separation, and there was a finding that defendant had willfully deserted and abandoned plaintiff, that a finding that plaintiff had sought a reconciliation and that defendant had refused the same was not necessary, such fact being a probative fact, while the finding made was of an ultimate fact.—Howard v. Howard, 134 Cal. 346, 66 Pac. 367.

[p] Plaintiff in divorce alleged residence in the state for more than ten years prior to the suit, which was begun in September, 1900, which allegation was specifically denied by defendant. The complaint admitted that prior to April, 1899, plaintiff had lived with defendant on board a yacht on the high seas. Held, that the admissions, relating as they did to a time prior to one year before suit, were immaterial, and did not remove the issue as to plaintiff's residence from the suit, so as to make a finding thereon outside the issues.—De Tolna v. De Tolna, 135 Cal. 575, 67 Pac. 1045.

[q] Where, in an action for divorce, plaintiff alleged desertion on a certain date, and defendant in his answer alleged that plaintiff deserted him on that date, defendant cannot complain that there was no finding on his affirmative defense, it not appearing that there was any evidence offered as to such defense.—De Tolna v. De Tolna, 135 Cal. 575, 67 Pac. 1045.

[r] The finding that the defendant did not willfully or otherwise desert the plaintiff, is a finding upon a matter of fact, and not upon a conclusion of law.—Greer v. Greer, 135 Cal. 121, 67 Pac. 20.

[s] A finding in divorce that plaintiff had been guilty of willful desertion is a conclusion of law, not a finding of fact.—Fink v. Fink, 137 Cal. 559, 70 Pac. 628.

[t] In divorce the court found the allegations of the complaint as to extreme cruelty to be true, but that plaintiff had refused matrimonial intercourse and had been guilty of desertion, within Civil Code, section 96, and denied divorce, without finding that there was "no just cause for such refusal." Held, that the finding was insufficient to justify the conclusion, nor could the court on appeal say that the finding as to cruelty was a finding of cause for plaintiff's conduct.—Fink v. Fink, 137 Cal. 559, 70 Pac. 628.

[u] In divorce the court found that the allegations of the complaint and cross-complaint as to the date of marriage were true, but that the allegations of the supplemental cross-complaint were untrue. The supplemental cross-complaint set up a charge of adultery, and "re-alleged every allegation in the cross-complaint." Defendant contended the findings were inconsistent. Held, that the contention was of no merit, there being no issue as to the date of marriage, nor necessity for finding thereon.—Bryan v. Bryan, 137 Cal. xix, 70 Pac. 304.

[v] A finding "that the acts of the defendant, as alleged in the complaint, did not inflict upon the plaintiff grievous bodily injury or grievous mental suffering," is insufficient to support a judgment denying a wife a divorce, as the existence or nonexistence of facts is not thereby determined.—Franklin v. Franklin, 140 Cal. 607, 74 Pac. 155.

[w] A finding held not one that a wife returned to her husband within a year of desertion, necessary, under Civil Code, section 102, to cure the desertion.—Kusel v. Kusel, 147 Cal. 52, 81 Pac. 297.

[x] Under Civil Code, section 102, a finding to show cure of desertion by return held required to show a seeking of condonation in connection with the return.—Kusel v. Kusel, 147 Cal. 52, 81 Pac. 297.

[y] Findings in an action by a husband for divorce held not to support an order requiring him to pay permanent alimony to his wife.—Volkmar v. Volkmar, 147 Cal. 175, 81 Pac. 413.

§ 61. Reference.

[a] The whole issue in divorce cases cannot, even by stipulation of parties, be referred; and, where a reference is had, the referee cannot pass upon the testimony. If he make any statement or finding of facts the court is obliged to disregard it, and base its decree only upon the legal testimony taken.—Baker v. Baker, 10 Cal. 527.

[b] Under Statutes of 1858, section 240, providing that it shall not be lawful for the court to grant a divorce on any statement or finding of facts by a referee, but only on the legal testimony taken in the cause, where an action for divorce is referred to a court commissioner, the court should disregard the findings of fact filed by the commissioner, and determine the cause on the evidence reported by him.—Benkert v. Benkert, 32 Cal. 468.

See 14 Cyc. 707-710; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 683-686, §§ 478-483.

§ 62. New Trial.

[a] The rule authorizing the denial of a new trial for insufficiency of evidence, where the evidence of one party is directly contradicted by the other, applies in an action for divorce on the ground of cruelty.—Matthai v. Matthai, 49 Cal. 90.

[b] A motion for a new trial, made after an order for judgment and decree of divorce, but before a referee appointed to ascertain the amount of community property has made a report, is not premature, nor is the trial court without jurisdiction to hear the motion. Sharon v. Sharon, 79 Cal. 633, 22 Pac. 26, 131.

[c] There can be no new trial where defendant has defaulted; remedy is under section 473, Code of Civil Procedure.—Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 37, 65 Am. St. Rep. 147, 52 Pac. 122.

[d] Motion for new trial is not appropriate proceeding to review action of court in case where there has been no trial upon issues of fact; e. g., default case.—Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 36, 37, 65 Am. St. Rep. 147, 52 Pac. 122.

[e] Defendant in a divorce proceeding against whom a judgment had been rendered is precluded from obtaining a new trial by the acceptance of the alimony paid in compliance with the judgment.—Storke v. Storke, 132 Cal. 349, 64 Pac. 578.

[f] Plaintiff secured a judgment of divorce, and a few weeks after defendant served notice of a motion for a new trial on a statement of the case, the court ordering plaintiff to pay defendant a certain sum to defray the cost of transcribing the testimony. Plaintiff failed to make the payment, and on the day for the settlement of the statement the order continuing the same recited that plaintiff had not complied with the previous order because of his inability to do so. No further proceedings were ever taken to settle the statement. Held, that the failure of plaintiff to make such payment did not excuse the laches of the defendant in prosecuting her motion, and it was error four years after to refuse to dismiss the motion for a new trial made on the ground of the laches of the defendant.—Storke v. Storke, 132 Cal. 349, 64 Pac. 578.

[g] The acceptance of money by defendant in a divorce case under a prior decree of maintenance does not prevent defendant from assailing the decree of divorce on motion for a new trial.—Smith v. Smith, 145 Cal. 615, 79 Pac. 275.

[h] It appeared on a motion for a new trial in a divorce case that defendant conducted the defense in person, without an attorney; that after the commencement of the trial an adjournment of several days was had; that during the adjournment defendant was sick, but expected to be able to proceed with the trial until the morning of the adjourned day, when she discovered that she was unable to do so; that she immediately sent a letter to the judge, stating her condition, and asked an adjournment; that after discovering her condition there was insufficient time to call a physician and obtain his certificate, or an officer to prepare an affidavit. Held, to disclose sufficient diligence to justify a new trial, at least in an action for divorce.—Smith v. Smith, 145 Cal. 615, 79 Pac. 275.

§ 63. Sufficiency in General.

[a] A decree declaring that "it appears that all the allegations of the complaint are sustained; that the matter so alleged and proved in behalf of plaintiff is sufficient in law to entitle the plaintiff to the relief as prayed for in the complaint"—sufficiently declares "that the party in whose favor the court decides is entitled to a divorce," within Civil Code, section 131, providing that if the court decides that a divorce ought to be granted it shall enter such an interlocutory decree.—Claudius v. Melvin, 146 Cal. 257, 79 Pac. 897.

§ 64. Entry.

[a] Divorce decree rendered in favor of party during her life may be entered after her death.—Cook, In re, 77 Cal. 230, 17 Pac. 923, 19 Pac. 431.

[b] An order that a decree of divorce be entered is not such final decree as to divorce the parties, and render legal a subsequent marriage of one of them where such decree was never entered.—Cook's Estate, In re, 77 Cal. 220, 17 Pac. 923, 19 Pac. 431, 1 L. R. A. 567.

[c] Where an order for a decree was obtained, but the decree never entered, such decree cannot, after the death of the party who obtained it, be entered nunc pro tunc, and thus render the divorce, and a subsequent marriage of deceased, valid as against the heirs of defendant in the divorce suit.—Cook's Estate, In re, 77 Cal. 220, 17 Pac. 923, 19 Pac. 431, 1 L. R. A. 567.

[d] Statutes of 1897, page 34, chapter 36, amending Civil Code, section 61, provided that a marriage contracted by a divorced person during the life of the former spouse and within one year after divorce should be void. The supreme court decided that marriages contracted without the state under the conditions specified in the section were valid. The legislature in 1903 (Stats. 1903, pp. 75, 76, 176, cc. 67,158) again amended section 61, and added two new sections, numbered 131 and 132, to the Civil Code. Section 61 as last amended provides that in no case can a marriage of either of the parties contracted during the life of the other and within one year after the entry of an interlocutory decree of divorce be valid. Section 131 requires the court, if it determines that a divorce ought to be granted, to enter an interlocutory judgment, from which an appeal may be taken within six months. Section 132 provides that after a year from the entry of the interlocutory judgment the court may enter final judgment, unless appeal has been taken from the interlocutory judgment, or motion for new trial made, in which case final judgment shall not be entered until such motion or appeal has been disposed of. Held, that the purpose of this legislation was to prevent collusive divorces and hasty remarriages, and complications arising from such remarriages prior to the final disposition of the cause on motion for a new trial or appeal, and to effect this purpose a final judgment entered prior to the expiration of a year from the date of the interlocutory judgment, or without any interlocutory judgment, would be absolutely void, regardless of any considerations of waiver, consent, or acquiescence of the parties.—Grannis v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 146 Cal. 245, 79 Pac. 891.

[e] Where a decree of divorce embraced both an interlocutory and final judgment, and they were simultaneously entered, but the part purporting to grant an immediate divorce was void because at that time the year from the entry of the interlocutory judgment had not expired, the validity of the interlocutory judgment was not affected thereby.—Claudis v. Melvin, 146 Cal. 257, 79 Pac. 897.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 132, as amended, an interlocutory decree of divorce must be entered in the judgment book one year before final decree.—Smith v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 77 Cal. 336, 82 Pac. 79.

§ 65. Death After Rendition.

[a] Divorce decree may be entered nunc pro tunc after death of plaintiff.—Cook's Estate, 83 Cal. 417, 418, 23 Pac. 392.

[b] As an action for divorce does not survive upon the death of either party, Code of Civil Procedure, section 473, providing that, in case of service of summons by publication, defendant may, by leave of court, answer to the merits of the original action within a year after the rendition of a judgment therein, cannot be invoked on the death of plaintiff after the entry of a judgment of divorce having no reference to the subject of property.—Kirschner v. Dietrich, 110 Cal. 502, 42 Pac. 1064.

§ 66. Reserving Questions as to Property.

[a] Judgment may be rendered granting plaintiff divorce and reserving questions as to property until return of report of referee. Ambrose, Ex parte, 72 Cal. 401, 402, 14 Pac. 33.

§ 67. Amendment.

[a] Where a final decree was entered without mentioning alimony or attorney's fees, or reserving jurisdiction to make a supplemental decree, and the time to appeal had expired, the court had no authority to enter an order awarding plaintiff alimony and attorney's fees, since it had lost jurisdiction of both the parties and the subject matter.—O'Brien v. O'Brien, 130 Cal. 409, 62 Pac. 598.

§ 68. Opening or Vacating.

[a] Misrepresentation of husband that property acquired during marriage was his, inducing wife to allege that there was no community property, is not ground for relief from judgment.—Champion v. Woods, 79 Cal. 21, 22, 21 Pac. 534.

[b] Judgment granting divorce to husband cannot be vacated for non-compliance with order to pay wife's expenses on appeal or motion for new trial.—Storke v. Storke, 116 Cal. 51, 47 Pac. 869.

[c] Judgment granting divorce cannot be vacated or set aside except on such proceedings as authorize vacation of judgment in any other action.—Storke v. Storke, 116 Cal. 51, 47 Pac. 869.

[d] Where a valid interlocutory decree of divorce had been entered, and the time had passed for its vacation on appeal, by motion for new trial or otherwise, an order of the trial court purporting to set aside such interlocutory decree was without jurisdiction, and therefore void.—Claudius v. Melvin, 146 Cal. 257, 79 Pac. 897.

[e] Where a judgment was, in so far as it purported to grant an immediate divorce, void as being entered without any interlocutory judgment, as required by Civil Code, sections 131, 132, it was within the power of the superior court at any time, on motion of either party, or of its own motion, to vacate so much of the decree as awarded an absolute divorce, leaving the remainder of it, determining that the party was entitled to a divorce, unmodified and unaffected.—Grannis v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 146 Cal. 245, 79 Pac. 891.

§ 69. Setting Aside Default.

[a] No affidavit of merits is required to set aside default judgment in divorce suit.—McBlain v. McBlain, 77 Cal. 509, 20 Pac. 61; Cottrell v. Cottrell, 83 Cal. 457, 23 Pac. 531.

[b] Where application to set aside default shows that defendant was a nonresident and was not served, judgment should be set aside with leave to answer.—McBlain v. McBlain, 77 Cal. 510, 511, 20 Pac. 61.

[c] Court should be more liberal in relieving against defaults in divorce suits than in other cases.—Wadsworth v. Wadsworth, 81 Cal. 183, 15 Am. St. Rep. 38, 22 Pac. 648.

[d] It is not necessary, in setting aside a judgment obtained by default in divorce proceedings, to impose costs on defendant as a condition of relief.—Cottrell v. Cottrell, 83 Cal. 457, 23 Pac. 531.

[e] Default judgment procured against insane wife should be set aside on motion of her guardian.—Cohn v. Cohn, 85 Cal. 109, 24 Pac. 659.

[f] Upon application to set aside default in action for divorce an affidavit of merits by the defendant has no place as such, on grounds of public policy, but may nevertheless serve the purpose of a proposed answer, where it specifically denies the material allegations of the complaint.—Mulkey v. Mulkey, 100 Cal. 91, 34 Pac. 621.

[g] Where a wife living in California returns to Pennsylvania, and some years thereafter her husband obtains a divorce by publication, and six years after the divorce was obtained the wife returns to the place where her husband lives, and where the fact of his divorce is well known, a bill, filed four years after such return, alleging that she had just heard of the divorce, and that it was obtained by fraud, will not be sustained.—Prewett v. Dyer, 107 Cal. 154, 40 Pac. 105.

[h] An application to set aside a judgment for a divorce which was rendered by default is addressed to the sound legal discretion of the trial court.—Morton v. Morton, 117 Cal. 443, 49 Pac. 557.

[i] Where the evidence adduced on an application to set aside a default is conflicting, it is not an abuse of discretion to deny the motion.—Morton v. Morton, 117 Cal. 443, 49 Pac. 557.

§ 70. Collateral Attack.

[a] A decree of divorce, rendered by a court having general jurisdiction, cannot be collaterally attacked on the ground that the complaint in the action does not state facts entitling the plaintiff to the relief demanded and awarded.—James' Estate, In re, 99 Cal. 374, 37 Am. St. Rep. 60, 33 Pac. 1122.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 71. Construction and Operation.

[a] Where a term has two meanings differing in the degree merely, it is to be understood in its larger sense whenever it occurs, unless it appears from the context or otherwise to have been used in the narrower sense. Held, therefore, that a judgment and decree "that the plaintiff be divorced from the defendant" was a divorce from the bonds of matrimony.—Miller v. Miller, 33 Cal. 353.

[b] A judgment of divorce directed defendant to pay plaintiff one hundred dollars as counsel fees, and all her costs, and also the sum of fifteen hundred dollars alimony. It further provided "that defendant pay to plaintiff's attorney" said one hundred dollars "as counsel fees of plaintiff in this action," and to the clerk of court "for the use of plaintiff, as plaintiff's costs in this action, the sum of twenty-eight dollars and five cents." Held, that this was not a judgment in favor of the counsel or the clerk of court (persons not parties to the action), but was in favor of plaintiff, in whose name alone execution could issue.—Robinson v. Robinson, 79 Cal. 511, 21 Pac. 1095.

[c] A woman was twice married, and, having heard that her first husband was living, began proceedings to obtain a divorce from him. The proceedings were ex parte, defendant having been served with summons by publication, and a decree was entered as prayed. Held, that the proceedings were strictly in rem, and determined only that plaintiff was no longer the wife of defendant, and did not determine that defendant was then living, and that she was his wife at the time of entering the decree.—Hunter v. Hunter, 111 Cal. 261, 43 Pac. 756.

[d] A decree of divorce affirmatively shows that plaintiff therein had been a resident of the state for a year, and of the county for three months, when the action was commenced, so as to give jurisdiction; the complaint alleging that she was born in the state over forty years before, and had been a resident of the state all her life, and then was, and for the eighteen months last past had been, a resident of the county, and the decree reciting that all the allegations of the complaint are sustained by the testimony.—Buelna v. Ryan, 139 Cal. 630, 73 Pac. 466.

§ 72. Time of Taking Effect.

[a] The decree was signed by the judge, and delivered to the clerk for filing, who neglected to enter it for over a year. Held, that it became operative as to the parties from the date of its delivery to the clerk.—Newman's Estate, In re, 75 Cal. 213, 7 Am. St. Rep. 146, 16 Pac. 887.

[b] Divorce decree operates from time of rendition regardless of date of entry.—Cook, In re, 77 Cal. 226, 232, 17 Pac. 923, 19 Pac. 431.

[c] Divorce decree takes effect at time it is rendered regardless of time of entry.—Cook's Estate, 83, 417, 23 Pac. 392.

[d] Where an interlocutory decree of divorce is ordered entered nunc pro tunc, the year which must elapse before final judgment can be given begins to run from the time of the actual entry of the interlocutory judgment.—Claudius v. Melvin, 146 Cal. 257, 79 Pac. 897.

§ 73. Judgment as Bar.

[a] Judgment in a suit for divorce on the ground of desertion, in which it is found that the desertion had not continued for the statutory time when the suit was commenced, is no bar in a subsequent suit for the same cause.—Lowell v. Lowell, 55 Cal. 316.

[b] A judgment in favor of the husband, in an action by his wife for a divorce on the ground of his willful neglect to provide her with the common necessaries of life, is not a bar to a subsequent action brought by her for a divorce on account of his continued neglect to support her for a year, occurring after the entry of such prior judgment.—Wagner v. Wagner, 104 Cal. 293, 37 Pac. 935.

[c] A decree dismissing a bill filed by the wife for divorce, and also dismisssing the husband's cross-bill, because the charges of either party had been sustained, does not bar another bill by the wife against the husband on the ground that the charges in his cross-bill, which the court had found to be false, amounted to cruel and inhuman treatment.—Haley v. Haley, 14 Pac. 92.

[a] An action for divorce is a case in equity, within Constitution, article 6, section 4, giving the supreme court appellate jurisdiction, in such cases.—Sharon v. Sharon, 67 Cal. 185, 7 Pac. 456, 635, 8 Pac. 709.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 752-754, § 563.

§ 75. Decisions Reviewable.

[a] Since a new trial is "a re-examination of an issue of fact" (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 656), where no answer is filed in a divorce case controverting any fact, and judgment goes against defendant without a trial on issues of fact, a motion for a new trial is nugatory, and cannot be reviewed, though Civil Code, section 130, provides that no divorce can be granted on the mere default of defendant, and that the court shall in all cases "require proof of the facts alleged" before granting the relief, since under Code of Civil Procedure, sections 588, 590, an issue of fact arises only where a material averment of facts is made on one side and is controverted on the other.—Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 33, 65 Am. St. Rep. 147, 52 Pac. 122.

[b] An appeal may be taken from an order, made after final judgment in a divorce suit, requiring the defendant to pay an attorney's fee to plaintiff to enable her to contest a motion for a new trial.—Harron v. Harron, 128 Cal. 303, 60 Pac. 932.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 752-754, § 563.

§ 76. Preservation of Grounds.

[a] Where, with plaintiff's consent, defendant in divorce files an amended cross-complaint setting up adultery committed by plaintiff, since the beginning of the action, plaintiff after going to trial on the issues raised thereby cannot object for the first time on appeal that the amended cross-complaint contained no prayer for affirmative relief.—Kirsch v. The judgment for divorce having been vacated, the parties cannot be considered as divorced.—Smith v. Superior Court, 136 Cal. 17, 68 Pac. 100.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 79. Review.

[a] Where, in an action of divorce by husband against his wife, she sets up among other things that he, at the time of their marriage, was the husband of one Frances B., and asks a decree declaring the marriage null, and to prove the marriage with Frances, reads in evidence a letter from plaintiff to her, held, that assuming this letter affords proof of the marriage with Frances, it is not conclusive proof of the facts recited; it is but the admission of plaintiff; and other and contradictory proof being in evidence, and the jury having found the issue on this point against defendant, this court will not interfere.—Fuller v. Fuller, 17 Cal. 605.

[b] In an action for divorce by the wife for cruelty and adultery, the court found for the wife as to cruelty, and against her as to adultery, and granted a divorce, and made an order for an equal division of the community property. She appealed from the order of division, and from the finding on the question of adultery. Held, that as the same relief could be granted her, whether the issue of adultery was found for or against her, the finding would not be reviewed.—Brown v. Brown, 60 Cal. 579.

[c] Where, in an action for divorce on the ground of adultery, the only evidence of cruelty pleaded in recrimination was the firing of a pistol by plaintiff behind defendant many years before they quit living together, judgment will not be reversed for want of a finding on that issue.—White v. White, 82 Cal. 427, 23 Pac. 276, 7 L. R. A. 799.

[d] Refusal of trial court to consider cross-complaint in an action for a divorce, except by way of answer and defense, is error without injury where the record does not contain the evidence, and the findings show that the cause of action alleged in the cross-complaint cannot be true.—Blakely v. Blakely, 89 Cal. 324, 26 Pac. 1072.

[e] Whether certain acts cause such "grievous mental suffering" as to be a ground of divorce, within Civil Code, section 94, is a question of fact for the trial court, and is not a question of law.—Fleming v. Fleming, 95 Cal. 430, 29 Am. St. Rep. 124, 30 Pac. 566.

[f] A judgment cannot be reversed where there is one good count of the complaint, because of the insufficiency of another cause of action stated therein.—Terrill v. Terrill, 109 Cal. 413, 42 Pac. 137.

[g] Under Civil Code, section 148, authorizing the appellate court to revise the distribution of property made by the trial court in a divorce action, the distribution may be reversed without disturbing other portions of the judgment.—Reid v. Reid, 112 Cal. 274, 44 Pac. 564.

[h] Where the result of two considerations of a case by a trial court is a refusal in each instance to grant a divorce on the ground of mental cruelty, and the evidence is conflicting in all substantial matters, a new trial will not be ordered.—Blair v. Blair, 122 Cal. 57, 54 Pac. 369.

[i] To justify a reversal of the trial court in refusing to grant a divorce, the record upon appeal should show a great preponderance of evidence against the findings. Hatton v. Hatton, 136 Cal. 353, 68 Pac. 1016.

[j] Extreme cruelty as a ground of divorce is largely a question of fact, to be determined by the trial court; and its findings thereon will not be disturbed upon appeal unless the evidence in support of them is so slight as to indicate a want of good judgment and an abuse of discretion of the trial court. This rule is particularly applicable when the findings are against a divorce.—Hatton v. Hatton, 136 Cal. 353, 68 Pac. 1016.

[k] Sufficiency of evidence to sustain findings of fact as to continued desertion of the plaintiff by the defendant will not be reviewed upon appeal, where it appears that there is evidence fairly tending to support the findings, though this court might have reached a different conclusion. (Van Dyke, J., dissenting as to question of sufficiency.) McMullin v. McMullin, 140 Cal. 112, 73 Pac. 808.

[l] A finding in an action for divorce as to the bona fides of plaintiff's residence, based on conflicting evidence, cannot be disturbed on appeal.—Harding v. Harding, 140 Cal. 654, 74 Pac. 284.

H. FEES AND COSTS.

§ 80. Counsel Fees.

[a] In a divorce suit, a judgment for defendant may direct that he pay the plaintiff's attorney's fee.—Lowell v. Lowell, 55 Cal. 316.

[b] In an action for a divorce the court cannot in the final judgment make an allowance of additional counsel fees for past services of an attorney, such allowance not being necessary to enable the wife to prosecute the action.—Lacey v. Lacey, 108 Cal. 45, 40 Pac. 1056.

[c] Where the court found that the parties to a divorce suit were husband and wife, and granted a divorce, an order that defendant pay an attorney's fee and costs to plaintiff, to enable her to contest a motion for a new trial, was proper.—Harron v. Harron, 128 Cal. 303, 60 Pac. 932.

§ 81. Power to Award Costs.

[a] The question of costs in an action of divorce is a matter resting in the discretion of the trial judge.—Brenot v. Brenot, 102 Cal. 294, 36 Pac. 672.

[b] A decree awarding a divorce to plaintiff is sufficient to sustain the part of the decree awarding costs to her, though there are not findings to support the part of the decree setting apart a portion of the property to her.—Musselman v. Musselman, 140 Cal. 197, 73 Pac. 824.

[c] Costs in a divorce suit are within the discretion of the court.—White v. White, 33 Pac. 399.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 769-771, § 576.

§ 82. Costs on Appeal.

[a] A husband is entitled to have deducted from the costs allowed to a wife on the first trial of an action for divorce the amount awarded to him as costs on a successful appeal from the decree in the first action, after a second trial resulting in her favor.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 582.

[b] It is error to allow the wife, in a suit for divorce, costs of a prior appeal on a second trial of the action resulting in her favor, where the appeal resulted in favor of the husband.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 582.

§ 83. Nature and Purpose of Alimony.

[a] Alimony distinguished from allowance for future support.—Spencer, Ex parte, 83 Cal. 463, 464, 17 Am. St. Rep. 266, 23 Pac. 395.

[b] Alimony in its strict sense proceeds only from husband to wife and cannot exist where relation of husband and wife does not exist.—Spencer, Ex parte, 83 Cal. 463, 17 Am. St. Rep. 266, 23 Pac. 395.

[c] The purpose of alimony allowed in an action by a wife for maintenance or divorce is to give the wife support, and to enable her to conduct her side of the litigation pending the trial of the issues made by the pleadings, and the court cannot be compelled to try and determine an issue of insanity raised by the answer of the husband before it can allow alimony.—Storke v. Storke, 99 Cal. 621, 34 Pac. 339.

§ 84. Statute Construed.

[a] The provision for alimony, made in the statute concerning divorces, was not intended to be a prohibition to the granting of alimony in other cases.—Galland v. Galland, 38 Cal. 265.

§ 85. Jurisdiction to Grant.

[a] In an action for divorce brought by the wife, the judge of the court in which the action is pending has no jurisdiction to hear and determine, in the district court of an adjoining county of the same district, an application by the wife for an allowance pendente lite, and for the custody of the children of the marriage.—Bennett v. Southard, 35 Cal. 688.

[b] The power conferred on the court by the statute concerning divorce and alimony, to provide for the separate maintenance of the wife, pending an action for, or after, a final decree of divorce, does, by necessary implication, negative the power or jurisdiction of the court to decree an allowance for the separate maintenance of the wife, except when jurisdiction is acquired by the commencement of an action for divorce upon allegations of statutory cause therefor. (Per Sprague, J., dissenting; Sanderson, J., concurring.)—Galland v. Galland, 38 Cal. 265.

[c] Supreme court cannot make an order relative to alimony in a divorce suit pending in the supreme court upon appeal. The jurisdiction of the supreme court is appellate. The order should be applied for to the superior court.—Reilly v. Reilly, 60 Cal. 624.

[d] In an action by a wife for a divorce, the trial court ordered the defendant to pay plaintiff's counsel two hundred and fifty dollars, as counsel fees, from which order defendant appealed. Pending the appeal, the trial court ordered defendant to pay plaintiff's counsel an additional two hundred and fifty dollars, to meet the expense of the appeal. It appeared that plaintiff had no means of her own with which to meet such expenses, and that defendant's means were ample. Held, that the trial court had power to make the last-mentioned order. Ross, J., dissenting, on the ground that, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 946, the power to allow a wife counsel fees in the appellate court is vested in that court alone.—Winter, Ex parte, 70 Cal. 291, 11 Pac. 630.

[e] The provision for permanent alimony in an action for a divorce brought by the wife is ordinarily an incident to the judgment for divorce, and the jurisdiction of the court to make such provision is not dependent upon averments in the complaint as to the husband's resources.—Gaston v. Gaston, 114 Cal. 542, 55 Am. St. Rep. 86, 46 Pac. 609.

[f] The trial court held to have acquired jurisdiction in a divorce proceeding to determine a question as to the separate character of land and to quiet title to the rightful owner.—Glass v. Glass (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 734.

§ 86. —— On Service by Publication.

[a] In awarding a divorce on substituted service, where defendant and the minor children, though domiciled in the state, are living elsewhere, and defendant makes no appearance, the court has no jurisdiction to allow alimony.—De La Montanya v. De La Montanya, 112 Cal. 101, 53 Am. St. Rep. 165, 44 Pac. 345.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 789-790, § 593.

§ 87. Sufficiency of Pleadings.

[a] In action for a divorce, where the complaint states the existence of common property, the court, in addition to granting the divorce, may order a division of the common property, and that a homestead be set apart to the plaintiff, although no relief of this character is prayed for in the complaint.—Gimmy v. Gimmy, 22 Cal. 633.

[b] In an action for divorce, where the issues do not embrace the disposition of property, the court has no jurisdiction to enjoin the defendant from disposing of his property until the determination of the suit.—Remington v. Superior Court, 69 Cal. 633, 11 Pac. 252.

[c] If disposition of property is sought, issue as to it should be tendered by pleadings. Remington v. Superior Court, 69 Cal. 634, 11 Pac. 252.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 746, 747; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 790-793, §§ 594-598.

§ 88. Power to Dispose of Property Pending Suit.

[a] Pendency of action for divorce does not prevent husband from mortgaging his own interest in common property.—Perkins v. Center, 35 Cal. 723.

[b] Husband cannot dispose of separate property for purpose of defeating wife in anticipated application for alimony.—Spreckels v. Spreckels, 116 Cal. 345, 58 Am. St. Rep. 170, 48 Pac. 228.

[c] The pendency of proceedings for divorce does not of itself interrupt the exercise of the husband's power of disposition of the community property, or of his separate property, though he is held to good faith in the disposition of it, and cannot make a voluntary conveyance with intent to deprive the wife of her claim.—Sun Ins. Co. v. White, 123 Cal. 196, 55 Pac. 902.

§ 89. Injunction Against Disposition of Property Before Award.

[a] Divorce court has no power to enjoin disposition pending suit, of property not put in issue in divorce suit.—Remington v. Superior Court, 69 Cal. 634, 11 Pac. 252.

[b] In an action for divorce, the court has jurisdiction, in a proper case and on a proper showing, to grant an injunction pendente lite, restraining plaintiff from alienating his separate property.—White, In re, 113 Cal. 252, 45 Pac. 323.

[c] Receipt from plaintiff in a divorce suit, after a decree therein restraining him from disposing of or encumbering his property, except that he is permitted to carry on and pursue his usual and ordinary business, of money remaining unpaid on a note previously given by him and secured on his land, will, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be held within the exception.—Sun Ins. § 90. Authorizing Mortgage to Pay Costs.

[a] In an action for divorce by a husband against his wife, where a decree was rendered in favor of the wife, and a referee was appointed to take testimony and report thereon as to the character, condition and value of the property of the husbanrd, preliminary to a rendition of final judgment, and the decree required the costs and expenses of the reference to be paid by the husband, and the referee filed a petition to have the husband pay a certain sum into court for the payment of the costs of the reference, an order of court authorizing the husband to mortgage his realty for the purpose of securing the money is within the power of the court, and is a proper order.—White v. White, 97 Cal. 604, 32 Pac. 600.

[b] A motion in a divorce proceeding for permission to plaintiff to mortgage his property in order to pay alimony, counsel fees and other expenses of the litigation, is addressed to the discretion of the court.—White v. White, 33 Pac. 399.

§ 91. Property Subject to Claim for Alimony.

[a] Subsequent earnings of divorced husband may be taken for support of former wife.—Eidenmuller v. Eidenmuller, 37 Cal. 366. Apparently overruled in Spencer, In re, 82 Cal. 113, 23 Pac. 37.

[b] When divorce is granted for offense of husband, he may be compelled to pay wife certain sum monthly out of his future earnings, regardless of any common property then in esse.—Spencer, Ex parte, 83 Cal. 464, 465, 17 Am. St. Rep. 266, 23 Pac. 395 overruling Spencer, Ex parte, 82 Cal. 110.

[c] It is not essential to the validity of a decree for the payment by a husband of a monthly allowance to his divorced wife for her maintenance that the husband should be the owner of either separate or community property from which such payment could be enforced.—Gaston v. Gaston, 114 Cal. 542, 55 Am. St. Rep. 86, 46 Pac. 609.

[d] Deeds of gift made by a husband and his first wife, who joined therein, to their children, passed title to them which cannot be questioned by a second wife in an action by her for divorce; and the property so conveyed cannot be subjected to an order for alimony and counsel fees in such action.—Baker v. Baker, 136 Cal. 302, 68 Pac. 971.

B. TEMPORARY ALIMONY,

JURISDICTION TO GRANT, § 92.
DISCRETION OF COURT, § 93.
GROUNDS AND BASIS OF ALLOWANCE, § 94.
APPLICATION AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON, § 95.
AMOUNT, § 96.
ORDER, § 97.
TERMINATION, § 98.

§ 92. Jurisdiction to Grant.

[a] In suit for divorce, the court has power to order the husband to pay money to the wife for her support during the litigation, and for counsel fees and other legal expenses; and such order may be enforced by imprisonment for contempt in case of refusal to pay.—Perkins, Ex parte, 18 Cal. 60.

[b] Lower court may, after appeal taken by husband, order him to pay wife counsel fees to prosecute her action in appellate court.—Winter, Ex parte, 70 Cal. 293, 11 Pac. 630.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 137, authorizing alimony pendente lite to be granted to enable the wife to maintain or defend the action, the court may require the husband to pay the wife temporary alimony and reasonable attorney's fees.—Peyre v. Peyre, 79 Cal. 336, 21 Pac. 838.

[d] Section 137 of the Civil Code, which provides that while an action for divorce is pending the court may, in its discretion, require the husband to pay as alimony any money necessary to enable the wife to prosecute or defend the action, empowers the court to grant an allowance only as to expenses necessary to be incurred in the future prosecution or defense of the action, and does not authorize it to make an allowance for the payment of past expenses, except where the payment is necessary to be made in order to enable the wife to further prosecute or defend the action.—Loveren v. Loveren, 100 Cal. 493, 35 Pac. 87.

[e] Civil Code, section 137, provides that while an action for divorce is pending the court may, in its discretion, require the husband to pay as alimony any money necessary to enable the wife to support herself or her children, or to prosecute or defend the action; and Code of Civil Procedure, section 350, declares "that an action is commenced when the complaint is filed." Held, that where, in divorce, the complaint is filed, but no process is served on defendant, the action is not pending, for the purposes of section 137.—Baker v. Baker, 136 Cal. 302, 68 Pac. 971.

[f] The court has power to require a husband to pay alimony to the wife pending her appeal from a judgment granting him a divorce.—Gay v. Gay, 146 Cal. 237, 79 Pac. 885.

§ 93. Discretion of Court.

[a] Discretion of court in allowing temporary alimony is to be reasonably exercised.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 48, 16 Pac. 345.

[b] Discretion given court to allow alimony pending suit is not arbitrary, but must be exercised in view of circumstances of parties and their several necessities.—Turner v. Turner, 80 Cal. 144, 22 Pac. 72.

[c] Where husband's burdens and necessities are greater and his ability and means to sustain them less than wife's, it is an abuse of discretion to award temporary alimony.—Turner v. Turner, 80 Cal. 144, 22 Pac. 72.

[d] Order allowing alimony in a suit for divorce is discretionary.—Langan v. Langan, 91 Cal. 654, 27 Pac. 1092.

[e] The granting of alimony pending a wife's appeal from a judgment granting the husband a divorce is within the discretion of the trial court, and its action will not be interfered with unless clearly abused.—Gay v. Gay, 146 Cal. 237, 79 Pac. 885.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 137, the taking of evidence to ascertain the proper amount to be allowed a wife for alimony, suit money, etc., and the trial court's allowance are within its discretion.—Youree v. Youree, 1 Cal. App. 152, 81 Pac. 1023.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 749; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 800-801, § 613.

§ 94. Grounds and Basis of Allowance.

[a] On an application for temporary alimony and attorney's fees, it is not necessary to show that the husband had money or property with which to pay the amount ordered to be paid, since the allowance may be based on his earnings, or his ability to earn money.—Peyre v. Peyre, 79 Cal. 336, 21 Pac. 838.

[b] The authority given by Civil Code, section 137, to the court to require the husband, pending an action for divorce, to pay as alimony any money "necessary" to enable the wife to support herself and children, is not devested by the fact that he is paying all the bills contracted by the wife, or by his declaration that he is willing to pay them till the conclusion of the action.—Anderson v. Anderson, 137 Cal. 225, 69 Pac. 1061.

[c] In an action for divorce for cruelty, the fact that defendant had a home, in which he was willing plaintiff should live during the pendency of the action, was not material on the question of plaintiff's right to temporary alimony and counsel fees.—Kowalsky v. Kowalsky, 145 Cal. 394, 78 Pac. 877.

[d] In a suit for divorce, where plaintiff, in her affidavit for alimony, alleged that defendant owned property worth one hundred thousand dollars, and was in the receipt of an income of six hundred dollars per month, and defendant did not deny this allegation, further than to say that his property was not worth one hundred thousand dollars, and that his monthly income was not six hundred dollars, the fact that it also appeared that plaintiff was the owner of property of the value of seven hundred dollars, or thereabouts, did not preclude the court from awarding plaintiff temporary alimony and counsel fees.—Kowalsky v. Kowalsky, 145 Cal. 394, 78 Pac. 877.

[e] In an action for divorce an allowance may be granted the wife for the payment of expenses already incurred by her, if such an allowance is necessary to enable her to further prosecute or defend her case.—Gay v. Gay, 146 Cal. 237, 79 Pac. 885.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 95. Application and Proceedings Thereon.

[a] In an action instituted by a wife for a divorce, and for a division of the property of the defendant, an order was made pendente lite awarding the plaintiff a certain monthly allowance as alimony. Thereafter the court, having found that the plaintiff was entitled to a divorce, referred the action to a referee to take testimony and report upon certain questions relating to the property of the defendant. Subsequently, and while the reference was pending, the court filed additional findings of fact and conclusions of law, and directed that judgment be entered in favor of the plaintiff, reserving all questions as to the property. A judgment was accordingly entered for a divorce, containing a provision that "all questions as to property, and as to a suitable allowance to the wife for her support, are hereby reserved." Held, that the judgment was not final so far as the questions concerning the property were concerned, and did not render inoperative the prior order for alimony.—Ambrose, Ex parte, 72 Cal. 398, 14 Pac. 33.

[b] On application for alimony pendente lite, where marriage is denied, wife must show prima facie marriage, her needs and husband's ability.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 43, 16 Pac. 345.

[c] Application for temporary alimony may be made at any time—at least after answer.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 48, 16 Pac. 345.

[d] Under Civil Code, section 137, providing that the court may, in its discretion, require the husband to pay alimony pending proceedings, the court may, on application of a wife, make an order requiring the husband to appear, and show cause why it should not be granted, and no notice of the application to the husband is required previous to the making of such order.—Mudd v. Mudd, 98 Cal. 320, 33 Pac. 114.

[e] Where there is no issue as to the marriage in divorce proceedings, the merits of the case will not be considered on an application for temporary alimony further than is necessary to determine that the wife is proceeding in good faith.—Kowalsky v. Kowalsky, 145 Cal. 394, 78 Pac. 877.

[f] The question whether a wife's appeal from a judgment granting the husband a divorce is meritorious, so as to justify the allowance of alimony pending the appeal, is to be determined from the entire showing made on the hearing, so that the court may consider the wife's affidavit and the bill of exceptions served on the motion for a new trial.—Gay v. Gay, 146 Cal. 237, 79 Pac. 885.

[g] Where, after a judgment of divorce in favor of the husband, the wife's motion for alimony pending an appeal which she alleged she intended to take was denied, this order was not res judicata preventing the granting of the motion on its renewal after an appeal had been perfected.—Gay v. Gay, 146 Cal. 237, 79 Pac. 885.

[h] Where, on motion by a wife for alimony pending her appeal from a judgment granting a divorce to her husband, she filed an affidavit stating that the appeal was taken in good faith and on the advice of counsel that she had good grounds for appeal, and also filed notice of intention to move for a new trial, and served a bill of exceptions for use on this motion, there was a sufficient showing that the appeal was in good faith and meritorious to justify the trial court in granting the wife alimony pending the appeal.—Gay v. Gay, 146 Cal. 237, 79 Pac. 885.

[i] On an application of a wife for alimony and suit money in divorce, it was within the court's discretion to permit her attorney to file an affidavit at the hearing.—Youree v. Youree, 1 Cal. App. 152, 81 Pac. 1023.

[j] On an application for alimony, suit money, etc., in an action against a wife for divorce, refusal to permit plaintiff to file an affidavit at the hearing, in reply to an affidavit then filed by defendant, held not an abuse of discretion.—Youree v. Youree, 1 Cal. App. 152, 81 Pac. 1023.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 756; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 811-818, §§ 626-631.

§ 96. Amount.

[a] Allowance of seven thousand five hundred dollars as temporary alimony held excessive and an abuse of discretion.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 48, 49, 16 Pac. 345.

[b] Measure of temporary alimony is that which is necessary to provide for reasonable support according to wife's station in life.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 47, 48, 16 Pac. 345.

[c] Temporary alimony should, ordinarily, be less than permanent alimony.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 46, 16 Pac. 345.

[d] Actual conditions should be considered in fixing amount of temporary allowance.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 46, 16 Pac. 345.

[e] Plaintiff and defendant had been secretly married, and the wife agreed to keep the marriage secret. The husband agreed to allow the wife a certain amount of money per month until the marriage was acknowledged. Held, in an action for divorce, on application for temporary alimony, that it was an abuse of discretion to allow the wife more than the husband had agreed to allow her until the marriage was acknowledged.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 1, 16 Pac. 345.

[f] An order was made in a divorce suit requiring the husband to pay to his wife (defendant) alimony pendente lite, one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month, and two hundred dollars counsel fees. There was one son, aged twelve years, who lived with his mother. Defendant's father had conveyed to her a house and lot worth at present thirty thousand dollars, and yielding a rental of one hundred and thirty-five dollars per month. Two weeks after the suit was commenced, she conveyed it back to her father, without consideration, by deed, which was not recorded. The rents thereof were still paid to her. Plaintiff's net earnings were two hundred and seventy-five dollars per month; his personal expenses, one hundred and fifty dollars per month. He owed six hundred dollars, which he was paying in installments. Held, that the monthly allowance should be reduced to fifty dollars per month, to include the support and education of the son.—Meyer v. Meyer, 120 Cal. 225, 52 Pac. 486.

[g] Where, in divorce, defendant has no property, save some personalty, of the value of about four hundred and seventy dollars, and which, according to his testimony, could not be sold on forced sale for over three hundred dollars, an order for three hundred dollars alimony and counsel fees is excessive.—Baker v. Baker, 136 Cal. 302, 68 Pac. 971.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 97. Order.

[a] On suit by a wife for divorce she was granted two hundred and fifty dollars per month as alimony pendente lite, and on judgment granting the husband a divorce on his cross-complaint this order was revoked. On application by the wife for alimony pending appeal, the court granted her one hundred dollars per month, the order also reciting that, as she had received no alimony for three months, the payments should date from three months before the order and the husband immediately pay her three hundred dollars. Held, that it was a reasonable inference from the order that the allowance of three hundred dollars was made in order to enable the wife to further carry on her case.—Gay v. Gay, 146 Cal. 237, 79 Pac. 885.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 98. Termination.

[a] Though an absolute divorce obtained by a husband would relieve him from a prior judgment for maintenance obtained against him by his wife, a judgment awarding the divorce, when set aside by the trial court, cannot have that effect, even though the order setting it aside has been appealed from. Smith v. Superior Court in and for City and County of San Francisco, 136 Cal. 17, 68 Pac. 100.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[a] Civil Code, section 137, provides that during the pendency of the action the court may require the husband to pay any money to enable the wife to prosecute her action for divorce, Code of Civil Procedure, section 1049, provides that an action is deemed pending until time for appeal has passed. Held, that these sections are applicable to a proceeding to vacate a judgment in a divorce case under Code of Civil Procedure, section 473, granting the trial court power to relieve a party from judgment where application is made within six months from entry.—Grannis v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 143 Cal. 630, 77 Pac. 647.

§ 100. Condition of Cause.

[a] If, pending an action for divorce, the parties thereto admit a condonation, and ask that the action be dismissed, the court should order a dismissal, and thereafter the husband cannot be compelled to pay the counsel fees of the wife.—Reynolds v. Reynolds, 67 Cal. 176, 7 Pac. 480.

[b] The court had jurisdiction, in a divorce case, to order defendant to pay plaintiff twenty-five dollars per month alimony, though issue of fact had not been joined, and there was pending a demurrer to the complaint.—Langan v. Langan, 91 Cal. 654, 27 Pac. 1092.

§ 101. —— After Trial and Judgment.

[a] Under section 137 of the Civil Code the power of the trial court to make an allowance to the wife for her support as alimony, or for the purpose of defending or prosecuting an action for divorce, is not exhausted upon the rendition of the judgment, but may be exercised at any time during the pendency of an appeal.—Bohnert v. Bohnert, 91 Cal. 428, 27 Pac. 732.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 137, providing that the court may, while an action for divorce is pending, require the husband to pay, as alimony, money necessary to enable the wife to prosecute or defend the action, an allowance of counsel fees incurred during the trial cannot be made on final judgment.—Lacey v. Lacey, 108 Cal. 45, 40 Pac. 1056.

[c] The power of the court to compel the husband to pay the wife's counsel fees for services of her attorney in an action for divorce, where she is without means to pay them, is not exhausted by the granting of a final judgment.—Grannis v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 143 Cal. 630, 77 Pac. 647.

§ 102. Number of Counsel Allowed.

[a] Wife cannot, as of course, employ as many attorneys as she chooses and compel husband to furnish funds for whatever she is to pay them.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 39, 16 Pac. 345.

[b] It seems that where husband employs three attorneys to prosecute his case wife may employ equal number.—White v. White, 86 Cal. 215, 24 Pac. 996.

§ 103. Discretion of Court.

[a] Court has discretionary power to allow wife counsel fees pending appeal by husband from order directing him to pay her counsel fees, pending suit for support and maintenance.—Winter, Ex parte, 70 Cal. 293, 11 Pac. 630.

See 14 Cyc. 762; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 831-832, § 645.

§ 104. Time to Fix.

[a] The court cannot know, at the commencement of the action, the amount of labor that will be required, or the value of the services to be performed in the prosecution or defense of the action on behalf of the wife, and there is no rule of procedure which requires it to fix the entire amount of counsel fees at the beginning of the action, or to prevent it from making a new allowance from time to time, as the exigencies of the case shall seem to demand.—Rose v. Rose, 109 Cal. 544, 42 Pac. 452.

§ 105. Grounds.

[a] In an action for divorce, brought by a wife, where the marriage is denied, to entitle her to alimony and suit money she must prove it by a preponderance of the evidence; a mere prima facie showing is not sufficient. Judgment and order (1898) 55 Pac. 900, reversed.—Hite v. Hite, 124 Cal. 389, 71 Am. St. Rep. 82, 57 Pac. 227.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 762; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 833-834, § 646.

§ 106. Defenses and Objections.

[a] Where attorneys are prosecuting wife's cause on contingent fee basis, she is entitled to no allowance as counsel fees.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 42, 16 Pac. 345.

[b] It is proper to refuse alimony pendente lite to pay fees of attorney who has agreed to give his services for contingent fee.—White v. White, 86 Cal. 213, 215, 24 Pac. 1030.

[c] Fact that one of wife's attorneys gives his services for contingent fee does not preclude allowance to pay for services of others. White v. White, 86 Cal. 214, 217, 24 Pac. 1030.

[d] Under Civil Code, section 137, wife is not entitled to an order requiring her husband to pay her a sum of money for counsel fees, where counsel have agreed to render her their services gratuitously.—Mudd v. Mudd, 98 Cal. 320, 33 Pac. 114.

[e] Where application of divorced wife to modify decree is without merit, her application for counsel fees is properly denied.—Parkhurst v. Parkhurst, 118 Cal. 22, 50 Pac. 9.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 762; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 834-836, §§ 647-650.

§ 107. Application and Proceedings Thereon.

[a] On an application by a wife for an allowance for attorney's fees under Civil Code, section 137; authorizing the court to require the husband to pay as alimony any money necessary to enable the wife to prosecute or defend the action, no proof is necessary to assist the court in fixing the amount of the fees, as the court may determine, in its own discretion, from the facts and circumstances of the case as they appear to it, from the pleadings, and from the papers, what is reasonable fee.—Peyre v. Peyre, 79 Cal. 336, 21 Pac. 838.

[b] Where, in divorce, defendant is not served with process, and has no notice of an application for alimony and counsel fees, an ex parte order for the same is unauthorized and void.—Baker v. Baker, 130 Cal. 302, 68 Pac. 971.

[c] An order in a divorce suit that defendant, who had moved for a new trial, pay costs and attorney's fees, is not complied with by paying the reporter and sheriff, but not the attorney; and defendant is not entitled, upon such payment, to a discharge on habeas corpus from the imprisonment to which he had been sentenced for contempt in refusing to comply with the order.—Robinson, Ex parte, 13 Pac. 852.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 763, 764; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 836-837, § 651.

§ 108. Amount and Items.

[a] Allowance of one thousand dollars as attorney's fees held proper.—Kohler, Ex parte, 74 Cal. 38, 15 Pac. 436.

[b] Allowance of fifty-five thousand dollars counsel fees held excessive.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 42, 16 Pac. 345.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 137, providing that the court may, in its discretion, require the husband to pay as alimony any money necessary to enable the wife to prosecute or defend the action, it is not within the discretion of the court to allow the wife money for unnecessary counsel in the action. Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 1, 16 Pac. 345.

[d] It appearing that two thousand four hundred dollars had already been allowed for attorney's fees, and that this sum was more than had been paid by the husband to his attorneys, and more than half the amount that they were to receive in the suit, it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse a further allowance for that purpose to the wife.—White v. White, 86 Cal. 212, 24 Pac. 1030.

[e] Wife is entitled to such allowance out of community estate as is necessary to employ sufficient counsel to maintain her rights.—White v. White, 86 Cal. 214, 24 Pac. 996.

[f] Where the expenses of a divorce action have been incurred and paid by the wife with money borrowed by her entirely upon the strength of her own credit they cannot be made the basis of an order granting an allowance therefor, and compelling the husband to pay them.—Loveren v. Loveren, 100 Cal. 493, 35 Pac. 87.

[g] An allegation, in a complaint for divorce by a wife, that a certain sum was a reasonable allowance for counsel fees, does not prevent the court from ordering the payment of a greater sum.—Rose v. Rose, 109 Cal. 544, 42 Pac. 452.

[h] An order by the judge who tried a divorce case, granting one hundred dollars printer's fees and two hundred and fifty dollars counsel fee, on a pending appeal from a judgment in favor of the wife, and a contemplated appeal from an order denying a new trial, will not be reversed as excessive. Wolff v. Wolff, 37 Pac. 858.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 764, 765; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 838-841, §§ 653-654.

§ 109. Order.

[a] Money necessary to prosecute or defend suit should be ordered paid to wife; court cannot order husband to pay it to her attorneys.—Sharon v. Sharon, 75 Cal. 38, 39, 16 Pac. 345.

[b] An order to pay plaintiff alimony was not erroneous because the requirement to pay the amount fixed by it was not expressly limited to such time as the action should be pending.—Langan v. Langan, 91 Cal. 654, 27 Pac. 1092.

[c] An order awarding counsel fees "to the plaintiff or to her counsel" in a suit for divorce, while inaccurate in directing payment to be made to plaintiff's counsel, is not sufficiently irregular to justify a reversal.

Kowalsky v. Kowalsky, 145 Cal. 394, 78 Pac. 877.

[d] In a divorce action, the trial judge could vacate an order for the payment of attorney's fees made ex parte upon the wife's misrepresentation that she had no separate estate.—Glass v. Glass (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 733.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 766; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 841-842, § 655.

§ 110. Fees and Expenses of Appeal or Motion for New Trial.

[a] The superior court has power in an action of divorce, after an appeal has been taken by the wife from a judgment rendered against her, to compel the husband to pay her a reasonable sum of money for costs and counsel fees with which to prosecute the appeal.—Larkin v. Larkin, 71 Cal. 330, 12 Pac. 227.

[b] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1049, an action is pending from its commencement until final determination on appeal, or until the time for appeal has passed; and under Civil Code, section 137, providing that "when an action for divorce is pending the court may, in its discretion, require the husband to pay as alimony any money necessary to enable the wife to support herself or her children, or to prosecute or defend the action"—the court, in an action by the husband for divorce, may, after judgment for him, on the wife's showing that she wishes in good faith to appeal, and has no means, order the husband to pay for transcribing the testimony, and other costs, and to pay into court for the wife's attorney a certain sum for prosecuting appeal; such order being an allowance for the wife, and not a direct judgment in favor of persons not parties to the suit.—Bohnert v. Bohnert, 91 Cal. 428, 27 Pac. 732.

[c] Court may order husband in whose favor decree is entered to pay wife such money as it might deem necessary to enable her to prosecute motion for new trial or to appeal. Storke v. Storke, 116 Cal. 51, 47 Pac. 869.

[a] Allowance of permanent alimony is in discretion of court.—Wolff v. Wolff, 102 Cal. 433, 36 Pac. 767, 1037.

See 14 Cyc. 769; 17 Cent. Dig., col. 852, § 665.

§ 113. Right of Wife on Refusal of Divorce.

[a] Alimony cannot be awarded to wife upon granting to husband a divorce for her fault—as here, for her cruelty to him.—Everett v. Everett, 52 Cal. 383.

[b] Under section 136, Civil Code, court may refuse wife divorce and grant her maintenance.—Hagle v. Hagle, 68 Cal. 590, 9 Pac. 842.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 136, providing that, "though judgment of divorce is denied, the court may, in an action for divorce, provide for the maintenance of the wife and her children, or any of them, by the husband," alimony cannot be granted to the wife living apart as in a judicial separation, where there is no statutory ground for an absolute divorce.—(1888) Hagle v. Hagle, 74 Cal. 608, 16 Pac. 518; (1880) Reade v. Reade, 22 Pac. 284.

[d] Civil Code, section 136, providing that in an action for divorce, if relief be denied the plaintiff, the court may direct that the husband maintain the wife or children, does not authorize an allowance of permanent alimony in such a case upon the mere allegation by defendant of her husband's cruelty without proof.—Peyre v. Peyre, 79 Cal. 336, 21 Pac. 838.

[e] Under our code allowance for future support of wife is compensation for wrong done her and is allowed only when divorce is granted for offense of husband.—Spencer, Ex parte, 83 Cal. 464, 17 Am. St. Rep. 266, 23 Pac. 395.

§ 113½. After Final Judgment.

[a] Where a final judgment has been rendered in a divorce suit settling the property rights of the parties, without an award of alimony, and the time for appeal therefrom has expired, the court has no jurisdiction to make an order, or supplemental decree, granting alimony for the support of the wife and children.—Howell v. Howell, 104 Cal. 45, 43 Am. St. Rep. 70, 37 Pac. 770.

[a] When the court grants a divorce to the husband on account of the offense of the wife it cannot require the husband to pay to the wife, after the divorce, out of his separate property, a sum or sums of money for her support.—Everett v. Everett, 52 Cal. 383.

[b] Where a wife had, in a suit for maintenance, obtained a decree for monthly payments, the granting of alimony to the wife in a subsequent suit for divorce by the husband held error.—Smith v. Smith, 147 Cal. 143, 81 Pac. 411.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 856-859, §§ 670-672.

§ 115. Amount.

[a] Court, in granting a divorce, may direct the defendant to pay the plaintiff a monthly sum as alimony, and the allowance may be based on his earnings or upon his ability to earn money.—Eidenmuller v. Eidenmuller, 37 Cal. 364.

[b] Alimony of one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month to bedridden wife is not excessive where husband's income is four hundred and thirty-two dollars.—Schammel v. Schammel, 74 Cal. 37, 38, 15 Pac. 354.

[c] In fixing amount of future allowance, court may regard earnings of husband or his ability to earn, and may subsequently reduce or increase amount as circumstances warrant. Spencer, Ex parte, 83 Cal. 465, 17 Am. St. Rep. 266, 23 Pac. 395.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 116. Award of Gross Sum.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 139, providing that, when a divorce is granted for an offense of the husband, "the court may compel him to provide for the maintenance of the children of the marriage, and to make such suitable allowance to the wife for her support during life, or for a shorter period, as the court may deem just," etc., alimony may be decreed in gross.—Robinson v. Robinson, 79 Cal. 511, 21 Pac. 1095.

[b] Where defendant's property is worth five thousand dollars, there is no abuse of discretion in decreeing plaintiff alimony in the sum of fifteen hundred dollars for the support of herself and two small children.—Robinson v. Robinson, 79 Cal. 511, 21 Pac. 1095.

[c] Where the wife had declared a homestead upon the separate property of the husband, the court may set it apart to her for a limited period upon granting a divorce in her favor; but it is not compelled to do so, and may, in lieu thereof, adjudge a specific sum for permanent alimony, and charge it as a lien upon the premises.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 582.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 117. Lien of Claim or Judgment.

[a] A court has the power to make its judgment for the payment of alimony to a wife a lien on property of the husband, the provision of Civil Code, section 140, authorizing it to require a husband to give security for the payment of alimony, or to appoint a receiver, not being an abridgment of its general equity powers.—Gaston v. Gaston, 114 Cal. 542, 55 Am. St. Rep. 86, 46 Pac. 609.

[b] Under sections 139 and 140 of the Civil Code the court may make the wife's alimony a lien upon the husband's estate, and may enforce the lien by appointing a receiver to collect the rents and profits, and to proceed to sell the property and pay the several sums adjudged to be due to the plaintiff.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 582.

§ 118. New Trial.

[a] Allowance of alimony is an incident to an action for divorce, and the determination as to its allowance is not the trial of an issue in the case; and hence a new trial will not be granted for a re-examination of an allowance of alimony, a new trial being a re-examination of an issue of fact in the same court after a trial.—Hunter v. Hunter, 111 Cal. 261, 43 Pac. 756.

§ 119. Judgment or Decree.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 4, requiring the code to be liberally construed, with a view to promote justice, a permanent future allowance to a divorced wife will not be defeated because granted under the misnomer of "permanent alimony," where it is a lawful grant under Civil Code, section 139, which provides that where a divorce is granted for an offense of the husband the court may make a suitable allowance to the wife for her support for life, or for a shorter period.—Spencer, Ex parte, 83 Cal. 460, 17 Am. St. Rep. 266, 23 Pac. 395.

[b] Where, on rendering a decree of divorce, the question of alimony is reserved, a subsequent order awarding alimony is not void.—O'Brien, Ex parte (Cal.), 48 Pac. 71.

[c] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 580, the part of a default judgment for divorce which allows alimony held not void on the ground that the relief is in excess of that prayed for.—Cohen v. Cohen (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 267.

[d] A decree awarding alimony to a wife obtaining a divorce held prima facie based on the obligation of the husband to give her support, and not on any property rights possessed by her at the time of the divorce.—Cohen v. Cohen (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 267.

§ 120. Modification of Judgment.

[a] Order granting alimony may be increased or modified from time to time.—Cottrell, Ex parte, 59 Cal. 417.

[b] Provision of section 139, Civil Code, authorizing court from time to time to modify its orders for the maintenance and support of the wife and children, contemplates that the right to alimony as well as other property rights shall have been presented in the action and established by the judgment, and there can be no modification of an allowance for alimony where there is no allowance to modify.—Howell v. Howell, 104 Cal. 45, 43 Am. St. Rep. 70, 37 Pac. 770.

[c] On an application to modify a decree for alimony, the stipulation pursuant to which the decree was made was admissible.—Parkhurst v. Parkhurst, 118 Cal. 18, 50 Pac. 9.

[d] A decree in divorce awarded the custody of an infant daughter to the mother, with an allowance for its support. Thereafter the mother obtained a modification of the decree, giving the custody of the child to its maternal grandmother, but retained nearly all the allowance for the child's support for her own use; having subsequently remarried. At the age of three and one-half years the child had learned to swear and use vulgar language. The father was of ample means and of good character. Held to justify the modification of the decree so as to award the custody of the child to the father.—Crater v. Crater, 135 Cal. 633, 67 Pac. 1049.

§ 121. Vacation or Setting Aside Judgment.

[a] Where a divorce has been granted without personal service on defendant, who was not in the state when suit was brought, and made no appearance, a motion to vacate that part of the judgment allowing alimony will lie; and defendant need not seek relief under Code of Civil Procedure, section 473, by offering to appear and plead on the merits.—De La Montanya v. De La Montanya, 112 Cal. 101, 53 Am. St. Rep. 165, 44 Pac. 345.

[b] The discharge of an order for alimony, on the ground of the husband's inability to pay, will not be disturbed where, from the uncontradicted affidavits, it does not appear that the court's discretion was not well exercised.—Smith v. Smith, 142 Cal. 636, 76 Pac. 489.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 139, the court, on the re-marriage of a wife who had been awarded alimony in a judgment for divorce, may vacate the decree as to the alimony.—Cohen v. Cohen (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 267.

[d] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1963, a husband liable to pay alimony to his divorced wife is presumptively entitled to a vacation of the decree as to alimony on proving a remarriage of the wife.—Cohen v. Cohen (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 267.

§ 121½. Assignment of Alimony.

[a] An assignee of sums due a divorced wife under the decree awarding to her as alimony a specified sum per month is entitled only to the rights the wife had.—Cohen v. Cohen (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 267.

[b] Court acquired jurisdiction herein to determine question of separate character of land and to quiet title to the rightful owner. Glass v. Glass (Cal. App.), 88 Pac. 734.

§ 124. Stipulations and Agreements of Parties.

[a] In action by wife for divorce on ground of extreme cruelty, in which she waives all claim to the community property, the court has power, under subdivision 3 of section 146 of the Civil Code, in the judgment granting her the divorce, to set aside a homestead which had been declared upon community property to the husband.—Stockton v. Knock, 73 Cal. 425, 15 Pac. 51.

[b] In an action for divorce, the court, in making disposition of the community property, may disregard an agreement between the parties as to a division of the property, and a separate suit to set aside the same is not necessary.—Loveren v. Loveren, 106 Cal. 509, 39 Pac. 801.

§ 125. Estates and Interests Subject to Disposal or Division.

[a] Where land claimed as a homestead has never been the residence of the family, it is common property, and is to be treated as such upon judicial division of the property after divorce.—Elmore v. Elmore, 10 Cal. 224.

[b] Where a husband took title to lots purchased out of his separate funds in the name of children by a former marriage, and built a house thereon with community funds, the building is community property, so far as to give his wife her share on a divorce, but the husband can claim nothing as against the children.—Smith v. Smith, 12 Cal. 216, 73 Am. Dec. 533.

[c] Section 146, Civil Code, does not authorize court to divide common property in possession of mortgagee and adjudge that proportionate share of debt be chargeable against share of each spouse.—Cummings v. Cummings, 75 Cal. 439, 17 Pac. 442.

[d] Civil Code, section 141, which prescribes that in executing the provisions of section 139, providing for the maintenance of the wife in case of divorce, the court shall resort first to the community property, and then to the separate property of the husband, does not embrace the earnings of the husband after divorce.—Spencer, In re, 82 Cal. 110, 23 Pac. 37.

[e] In an action for divorce, the court has no jurisdiction over the separate property of the wife.—Reid v. Reid, 112 Cal. 274, 44 Pac. 564.

§ 126. Restoration of Property to Wife.

[a] Where the court, upon decreeing a divorce in favor of the wife, finds that there is a judgment outstanding against her in favor of the husband, and that the judgment, which was wrongfully rendered, was for money which he had given her in consideration of the relinquishment by her of her rights in the homestead, so that he might sell it, the court may order the judgment to be assigned to her.—Haley v. Haley, 14 Pac. 92.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 790; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 902-907, §§ 706-708.

§ 127. Assignment of Homestead.

[a] In case of divorce, a homestead established on the common property of husband and wife may be set apart to one of the parties, in the division of the common property. Gimmy v. Doane, 22 Cal. 635.

[b] Court has no authority to assign homestead or any equitable interest in it, in trust for any purpose.—Simpson v. Simpson, 80 Cal. 241, 22 Pac. 167.

[c] The power of the court, in an action of divorce, to assign for a limited period the homestead selected from separate property cannot extend beyond the life of the innocent party to whom the property is awarded; and in construing the decree it must be presumed that the court intended to keep within its powers, and the decree must be read in the light of the law as having a life limitation inseparately connected with it.—Neary v. Godfrey, 102 Cal. 338, 36 Pac. 655.

[d] Where a divorce is granted to the husband on the ground of the extreme cruelty of the wife, and a homestead selected from her separate property has been assigned to him for a period of years, his right to the use of the homestead terminates upon his death before the expiration of the term of years designated by the decree of the court. Neary v. Godfrey, 102 Cal. 338, 36 Pac. 655.

[e] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 146, subdivision 4, providing, with reference to a divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty or adultery, that, "if a homestead has been selected from the separate property of either, it shall be assigned to the former owner of said property, subject to the power of the court to assign it for a limited period to the innocent party," such "limited period" cannot exceed the life of the innocent party.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 117 Cal. 407, 49 Pac. 574.

§ 128. Division of Property.

[a] It is in the discretion of the court, in a divorce for adultery, to award all the common property to the prevailing party.—Miller v. Miller, 33 Cal. 353.

[b] The inference to be derived from sections 146 and 147 of the Civil Code is, that if a divorce is granted on the ground of adultery or extreme cruelty, the injured party is entitled to more than one-half of the common property.—Eslinger v. Eslinger, 47 Cal. 62.

[c] Where a divorce is granted on ground of extreme cruelty the guilty party is entitled to receive only so much of the community property as the court may deem just under the facts of the case; and the discretion of the court in dividing the property is subject to revision on appeal.—Eslinger v. Eslinger, 47 Cal. 62.

[d] On granting divorce to wife on ground of adultery court may award whole community property to her, though exact extent of husband's resources is unknown.—White v. White, 86 Cal. 222, 24 Pac. 996.

[e] On granting a wife a divorce for extreme cruelty, where it appears that the husband is a shoemaker, earning from forty to sixty dollars per month, the entire community property, consisting of a house and lot worth two thousand dollars, and the household furniture, should be awarded to the wife, as this will still leave her to earn her own support, and that of her minor daughter, awarded to her custody.—Strozynski v. Strozynski, 97 Cal. 189, 31 Pac. 1130.

]f] Where a divorce is properly granted to a wife for willful neglect of the husband to provide the necessaries of life, the court has power to divide the community property upon which a homestead has been declared, and it has a wide discretion in making the division. The homestead need not be divided in severalty.—Smith v. Smith, 124 Cal. 651, 57 Pac. 573.

[g] In an action for a divorce, it is not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to set off to plaintiff the homestead and a small amount of personalty from the community property, leaving to defendant all other community property; section 146, subdivision 1, Civil Code, providing: "The community property shall be assigned to the respective parties in such proportion as the court, from all the facts of the case and the condition of the parties, may deem just."—Boyd v. Boyd, 31 Pac. 1108.

[h] Plaintiff being an invalid, and defendant more than able to make his living, it was proper for the court, while allowing no permanent alimony, to give plaintiff, besides most of the household furniture, the whole community house and lot, which was worth only three thousand dollars, and was subject to a mortgage of two thousand five hundred dollars.—Johnson v. Johnson, 35 Pac. 637.

§ 129. Application and Proceedings Thereon.

[a] The statute defining the common property of husband and wife, and providing for the division of common property, in case of divorce, is a mere regulation of a right of property, and does not provide a new right of action, and a proceeding for a division of such property need not conform with the strict requirements governing statutory actions.—Gimmy v. Doane, 22 Cal. 635.

[b] Welfare of children is a matter of paramount importance in determining division of property and alimony.—Eidenmuller v. Eidenmuller, 37 Cal. 365.

[c] Sale of community property under section 147, Civil Code, does not require confirmation where order of sale does not require it.—Kimble v. Conroy, 75 Cal. 414, 415, 17 Pac. 546.

[d] When on issue of community property husband introduces antenuptial contract that all property acquired after marriage should remain separate property of husband, wife may attack its validity for any cause.—White v. White, 86 Cal. 223, 24 Pac. 996.

[e] Upon the issue as to the character of the property to be disposed of by the court, in an action by the wife for divorce on the grounds of the extreme cruelty and habitual intemperance of the husband, a paper signed by the husband, in which he offered to divide the property, and described it as community property, is admissible in evidence against him as a declaration or admission of its community character, though the offer was made by way of compromise, the declaration not being essential to the purpose of the compromise, or to be regarded as a concession made for that purpose, but being the statement of an independent fact. Rose v. Rose, 112 Cal. 341, 44 Pac. 658.

§ 130. Judgment or Decree.

[a] In the course of a suit for divorce, the parties having agreed upon a certain plan of division of the community property, if the wife, relying upon the false representations of the husband, was wronged in such division, the court will annul the division, and decree another, notwithstanding that the wife or her attorney had, in the first instance, the means of knowing the true state of the case.—Senter v. Senter, 70 Cal. 619, 11 Pac. 782.

[b] In an action for divorce and an accounting, plaintiff alleged that a conveyance, purporting to be a deed, was voluntary and made with intent to defraud plaintiff; but the trial court found that the conveyance was a mortgage, based upon a valuable consideration. Held, that a decree ordering a division of the mortgaged property in payment of alimony is inconsistent with the case made and should be reversed.—Cummings v. Cummings, 75 Cal. 434, 17 Pac. 442.

[c] A decree for divorce awarded the homestead, as to which the wife had prior thereto executed and recorded a declaration of homestead, to her absolutely, gave her the custody of the children, and ordered that the homestead be held by her "in trust for her support and that of her children." Held, that the latter clause did not create a trust in the property nor qualify her absolute estate, especially in view of Civil Code, section 146, subdivision 3, which only authorizes the court in case of a divorce, where the homestead has been selected from the community property, to assign it to the innocent party, either absolutely or for a limited time, subject in the latter case to the future disposition of the court.—Simpson v. Simpson, 80 Cal. 237, 22 Pac. 167.

[d] Under Civil Code, section 146, providing that, in case of divorce, if the homestead has been selected from the separate property of either, it shall be assigned to the former owner, subject to the power of the court to assign it for a limited period to the innocent party, the court cannot assign it to the innocent party for a longer period than his life, and an assignment to him for ten years is on the implied condition that he lives that long.—Neary v. Godfrey, 102 Cal. 338, 36 Pac. 655.

[e] A judgment for a divorce adjudged certain land to have been community property, and vested the same in the husband absolutely and ordered that he pay the wife a certain sum upon her delivery of a quitclaim to the premises, and that on failure of the wife to execute the deed, the husband should be relieved from the payment of such sum. The wife failed to execute the deed. Shortly before the entry of the judgment, the husband conveyed the land to another, who subsequently brought ejectment against both husband and wife. In the ejectment suit, the wife demurred to the husband's cross-complaint, and the demurrer was sustained, and, on failure of the husband to amend, a judgment for costs was entered against him in favor of the wife. Held, in a proceeding by the husband against the wife for a writ of assistance to recover possession of the land, that the absoluteness of the husband's title was not made to depend upon the payment of the money to the wife, but, on the contrary, the wife's right to the money was made to depend on the condition precedent that she execute the deed.—Kirsch v. Kirsch, 113 Cal. 56, 45 Pac. 164.

[f] Where decree of divorce provides for payment of alimony, etc., to innocent party, grantee of husband to whom he had fraudulently conveyed real estate holds same subject to lien of wife, but cannot be compelled to reconvey to husband.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 117 Cal. 410, 411, 49 Pac. 574.

§ 131. —— Operation and Effect.

[a] After a decree of divorce directing that the property held in community by the husband and wife shall be equally divided, such property is held by them thereafter as tenants in common, eo nomine.—McLeran v. Benton, 31 Cal. 29.

[b] Where, pending an appeal from a judgment for a wife in divorce proceedings, involving community property rights, the wife conveys the property secured to her by the trial court's judgment, and dies before the affirmance thereof by the supreme court, the interests of the wife pass to the grantees under her deed.—Smith v. Smith, 64 Pac. 302, judgment affirmed, 66 Pac. 81.

[c] Where a wife dies pending an appeal from a judgment of divorce in her favor, together with an adjudication as to certain rights to community property, and the supreme court affirms the trial court's judgment, such decision will govern in a subsequent action brought by the husband to recover such community property on the ground that the action abated on the death of the wife.—Smith v. Smith, 64 Pac. 302, judgment affirmed 66 Pac. 81.

[a] Where the wife's alimony was made by the decree of divorce a charge and lien upon the property conveyed by the husband, and thereafter the husband and wife remarried, the decree for alimony was thereby extinguished, and the lien discharged, and the grantees continued to hold the legal title freed from the lien.—Tully v. [d] Petition for discharge from imprisonment for nonpayment of alimony held properly denied hearing before lapse of ten days after hearing to determine ability to pay.—Spencer v. Lawler, 79 Cal. 216, 21 Pac. 742.

[e] A decree for a divorce, pursuant to Civil Code, section 139, granted for an offense of the husband, and awarding alimony to be paid during the life of the plaintiff, or until modified by the court, is not void for uncertainty as to the period during which alimony is to be paid, and hence can be enforced by process of contempt.—Hart, Ex parte, 94 Cal. 254, 29 Pac. 774.

[f] Disobedience of an order, in an action for divorce, requiring the husband to pay a certain amount to a third person for the support of his child, is contempt of court, for which the court has power to imprison.—Gordan, Ex parte, 95 Cal. 374, 30 Pac. 561.

§ 135. Dismissal, Striking Out, or Stay of Proceedings on Nonpayment.

[a] A defendant in an action for a divorce cannot be denied the process provided by law for procuring the testimony of witnesses residing beyond the jurisdiction, on the ground that he has not obeyed the order of the court requiring him to pay the plaintiff her costs and counsel fees.—Johnson v. Superior Court of San Francisco, 68 Cal. 578.

[b] Court may refuse to proceed with trial of suit for maintenance until defendant has complied with order directing him to pay counsel fees to plaintiff.—Winter v. Superior Court, 70 Cal. 295, 11 Pac. 633.

[e] Section 1991, Code of Civil Procedure, authorizing court to refuse defendant's right to file answer, is unconstitutional and inapplicable to divorce cases.—Foley v. Foley, 120 Cal. 42, 65 Am. St. Rep. 147, 52 Pac. 122.

§ 136. Execution.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 139, providing that, on granting a divorce for an offense of the husband, the court may compel him to provide for the support of the wife and children, and Code of Civil Procedure, section 1007, providing that an order by a court for the payment of money may be enforced by execution, an execution in such case is not void because issued without an order for defendant to show cause why he had not obeyed the order of the court.—Van Cleave v. Bucher, 79 Cal. 600, 21 Pac. 954.

[b] A judgment for alimony, to be paid to a divorced wife monthly is not within the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure, section 681, limiting the right to the issuance of execution on a judgment to five years from the date of its entry.—Gaston v. Gaston, 114 Cal. 542, 55 Am. St. Rep. 86, 46 Pac. 609.

[a] Court has no power to appoint receiver of common property in possession of mortgagee who has not abused his trust.—Cummings v. Cummings, 75 Cal. 439, 440, 17 Pac. 442.

[b] Civil Code, section 140, provides that the court may require the husband in a divorce case to give reasonable security for alimony, and may enforce the same by the appointment of a receiver. Held, that a receiver appointed in such case takes the property of the husband subject to all prior liens, and that the holders of such liens may take such proceedings elsewhere as the law exacts for preserving and enforcing the liens, according to their priority, without regard to the mere volition of the court or judge making the appointment.—Petaluma Sav. Bank v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 111 Cal. 488, 44 Pac. 171.

[c] Evidence that the husband has failed to ay alimony pursuant to orders of the court, nd that he has attempted to dispose of his roperty for the purpose of preventing the ife from getting any part of it, authorizes he appointment of a receiver on her appli- ation, and after notice to him, under Civil ode, section 140, which provides that the ourt may enforce the payment of alimony y the appointment of a receiver.—Huell- nantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 82.

[d] A receiver may be appointed to en- orce the decree for maintenance, where the leadings admit that the husband has en- leavored and is endeavoring to sell, or en- umber his property in this state, and that e is a resident of another state, to which e is attached by large holdings of property herein, and cannot give personal attention o his properties in this state.—Anderson v. nderson, 124 Cal. 48, 71 Am. St. Rep. 17, 6 Pac. 630, 57 Pac. 81.

[f] Code of Civil Procedure, section 564, ubdivision 3, provides that the court may ppoint a receiver after judgment, to carry he judgment into effect. Respondent was warded a divorce from her husband and ne hundred thousand dollars alimony. A eceiver had been previously appointed to ake charge of his property, but had not taken ossession. The final judgment continued the eceivership. Thereafter the court ordered eceiver to sell certain premises, and respon- nt became the purchaser at the sale. Held, n a petition for a writ of assistance to ain possession, that, as the judgment for imony was a final judgment, the court had o jurisdiction to continue the receivership enforce its collection; the statute being pplicable only when specific property was af- cted. [a] In an action by the wife against the husband to obtain a divorce, and to have property which the husband has deeded to a third person decreed to be held in trust for the husband, and adjudged to be community property, and awarded to her, the facts that such third person is a brother of the husband, that the latter held a letter of attorney from the former, who lived in the Atlantic states, that the husband managed the property as he pleased, and the brother took little or no interest in it, that the brother was a man of small means at his own home, while the property here was valuable, and that the brother was not present at the trial in which his title was involved, are some evidence tending to show that the husband is the true owner, and that the sale to the brother was fraudulent.—Brown v. Brown, 41 Cal. 88.

[b] In an action for divorce, and to set aside a conveyance of land owned by her husband, made to deprive plaintiff of her homestead rights, a decree which cancels the deed, and decrees that plaintiff have judgment for a certain sum in lieu of her homestead rights, and makes such judgment a lien on the land, is erroneous, in so far as it annuls the deed from the husband to his codefendants, other than for the purpose of subjecting it to the lien of the judgment, as, between the parties thereto, such conveyance is valid.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 582.

[c] Under Civil Code, section 3439, declaring that every transfer of property made with intent to delay or defraud any creditor or other person on his just demand shall be void, the transfer of certain property by a husband to his daughter after his wife had commenced suit for a divorce, but before himself or his daughter had any knowledge of such action or its contemplation, was valid.—Tuers v. FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., col. 963, § 766.

§ 142. Bonds and Stay.

[a] An order in relation to payment of alimony and counsel fees is in the nature of a final judgment, and the statute as to undertakings to stay proceedings on a final judgment applies; and, under such statute (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 942), an undertaking for double the whole amount of alimony and counsel fees allowed is sufficient.—Sharon v. Sharon, 67 Cal. 185, 8 Pac. 709.

§ 143. Record.

[a] A division of the property between parties to a divorce case rests primarily with the trial court, and will not be disturbed, except for a palpable abuse of discretion.—(1883) Bovo v. Bovo, 63 Cal. 77; (1896) Rose v. Rose, 112 Cal. 341, 44 Pac. 658.

[b] An order for payment of alimony and attorney's fees to a wife pending an action for divorce against her husband, where the affidavits upon which it is based are conflicting, will not be reversed.—White v. White, 73 Cal. 105, 14 Pac. 393; Schammel v. Schammel, 74 Cal. 36, 15 Pac. 364.

[c] Civil Code, section 137, empowering the court, in its discretion, to require the payment of alimony by a husband to a wife pending an action for a divorce, when necessary to the support of herself or children, or the prosecution or defense of the action, invests the court with nothing but a legal discretion, reviewable on appeal, and an order granting such alimony will be reversed when it appears that the wife occupies the homestead, which yields a good income; that she is in no immediate need of money; that the property enjoyed by her is more valuable and productive than that held by the husband; and that he is maintaining the greater number of their children.—Turner v. Turner, 93 Cal. 141, 22 Pac. 72.

[d] An order granting alimony and counsel fees will not be disturbed on appeal unless it clearly shows that the court abused its discretion.—Bohnert v. Bohnert, 91 Cal. 428, 27 Pac. 732.

[e] Civil Code, section 148, which provides that the division of community property by the trial court in granting a divorce to the spouses is subject to revision on appeal in all particulars, including those in the discretion of the trial court, empowers the appellate court to review the action of the trial court for any degree of error, though not amounting to an abuse of discretion.—Strozynski v. [f] An order allowing counsel fees as alimony pending an appeal from a previous order, "in lieu" of the alimony appealed from, which is modified, before an appeal is taken therefrom, by striking out the "lieu" clause, and leaving it as a new order for further counsel fees, will be affirmed upon appeal.—Storke v. Storke, 99 Cal. 621, 34 Pac. 339.

[g] Discretion of superior court in disposing of community property, where a divorce is granted for the extreme cruelty of the husband will not be interfered with upon appeal, where there is no palpable abuse of discretion, though the disposition may be somewhat harsh and inequitable, if the discretion rested primarily with the appellate court.—Rose v. Rose, 112 Cal. 341, 44 Pac. 658.

[h] Civil Code, section 146, subdivision 1, provides that, on divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty, the community property shall be assigned in such proportions as the court may deem best. Subdivision 2 provides that, on divorce on any other ground than that of adultery or extreme cruelty, community property shall be equally divided. Section 148 provides that the disposition of the property shall be subject to revision on appeal. Held, that where, on a divorce on a ground of extreme cruelty, the innocent spouse was awarded seven-twelfths of the community property, it being evident that the trial court had exercised discretion, the apportionment would not be disturbed on appeal.—Gorman v. Gorman, 134 Cal. 378, 66 Pac. 313.

[i] On appeal from an order denying a new trial in divorce the supreme court has no power to modify the provision of the decree providing for the support of a minor child until its maturity.—Bryan v. Bryan, 137 Cal. xix, 70 Pac. 304.

[j] A husband's discharge from payment of alimony will not be disturbed on the grounds urged by the wife, where the evidence does not support her contentions.—Smith v. Smith, 142 Cal. 636, 76 Pac. 489.

See 14 Cyc. 804; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 971, 972, § 773.

§ 147. Jurisdiction of Person of Child.

[a] In awarding a divorce on substituted service, where defendant and the minor children, though domiciled in the state, are living elsewhere, and defendant makes no appearance, the court has no power to award the custody of the children to plaintiff.—De La Montanya v. De La Montanya, 112 Cal. 101, 53 Am. St. Rep. 165, 44 Pac. 345.

[b] A decree rendered upon publication of summons, in an action brought by a mother to secure the custody of the children, who have been removed from the state by the father, awarding to the plaintiff the exclusive custody of the children, is without jurisdiction, and should be vacated upon motion of the defendant.—De La Montanya v. De La Montanya, 112 Cal. 131, 44 Pac. 354.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 804; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 972-973, § 774.

§ 148. Sufficiency of Pleadings.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 138, providing that in an action of divorce the court may give such direction for the custody of the children as may seem necessary, such order may be given, though neither party prays for the custody of the child, nor alleges the unfitness of the other in that respect.—Gordon, Ex parte, 95 Cal. 374, 30 Pac. 561.

§ 149. After Final Decree.

[a] Court may make order for maintenance of children, under proper petition, long after final decree has been entered.—McKay v. Superior Court, 120 Cal. 146, 52 Pac. 147.

[b] Where a decree of divorce makes no provision for the maintenance of the children of the marriage, the court is without jurisdiction subsequently to make any order compelling either party to pay the other for such maintenance.—Shattuck v. Shattuck, 135 Cal. 192, 67 Pac. 45.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 805; 17 Cent. Dig., col. 975, § 778.

§ 150. On Denial of Divorce.

[a] Where a wife, having left her husband without cause, and taken with her the minor children, applies for a divorce, the court may, although it denies the application, direct that the children be given to the custody of the husband; and the fact that the husband lives in an adjoining county can make no difference, since, under Civil Code, section 156, he is the head of the family, and may choose any reasonable place or mode of living.—Luck v. Luck, 92 Cal. 653, 28 Pac. 787.

[b] In an action of divorce the question as to the proper custody of the minor child is entirely incidental to the main relief sought, and dependent alone upon the divorce proceedings; and when a decree of divorce is denied to both parties the court is not required to make any order as to the care and custody of the minor child.—Brenot v. Brenot, 102 Cal. 294, 36 Pac. 672.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 151. Discretion of Court.

[a] Naturally and presumptively the mother is entitled to the custody and care of minor children of tender years; yet, where she brings an action against the father for a divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty, and for the custody and control of such children on the ground that the father is not a fit person to have the care, custody, or control of them, it is for the trial court to say, upon all the evidence, whether she is in fact more worthy of such a trust than the father.—Luck v. Luck, 92 Cal. 653, 28 Pac. 787.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 808; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 975, 976, § 779.

§ 152. Stipulations of Parties.

[a] Where by stipulation of parties wife is given ten thousand dollars worth of community property while husband retains only sufficient to pay his debts, and custody of children is awarded to wife to be maintained by her wife's application to so modify decree as to have husband support children should be denied.—Parkhurst v. Parkhurst, 118 Cal. 20-22, 50 Pac. 9.

[b] Stipulation of parties to divorce suit cannot devest parent, as against children, of duty to support them.—Parkhurst v. Parkhurst, 118 Cal. 22, 50 Pac. 9.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 808; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 976, 977, § 780.

§ 153. Forfeiture of Rights.

[a] Although a wife, by her fault in the matters involved in an action for a divorce, may forfeit her own claim to be supported by her husband, she cannot forfeit the claims of their children to such support.—Gordon, Ex parte, 95 Cal. 374, 30 Pac. 561.

§ 154. Grounds for Award of Custody.

[a] Female child of tender years should be awarded to wife, if successful, with privilege of husband to see it at convenient times. People v. Lee, 14 Cal. 512.

[b] A wife divorced from her husband for extreme cruelty on his part is entitled to the custody of their female child of tender years, the wife being blameless. The father has a right to see the child at all convenient times. Wand v. Wand, 14 Cal. 512.

[c] The interest of the child is the leading, if not the paramount, consideration in determining in whose custody a child shall be placed after divorce.—Wand v. Wand, 14 Cal. 512.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 805-808; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 977-984, §§ 781-787.

§ 155. Modification of Decree Awarding Custody.

[a] Since Civil Code, section 224, provides that the consent to the adoption of a child is not necessary from a father or mother adjudged guilty of adultery or of cruelty, and "for either cause divorced," where, after a decree awarding the custody of a child to its mother on a divorce from its father for cruelty, the mother consents to its adoption, the court awarding the divorce cannot, under section 138, modify the decree so as to give the custody of the child to the father. Younger v. Younger, 106 Cal. 377, 39 Pac. 779.

[b] Under Civil Code, sections 138, 139, providing that the court may, before or after judgment, give directions for the custody of the children, and, when the divorce is granted for the husband's offense, compel him to provide for their maintenance, and may from time to time modify its orders, where the original decree, granted for the husband's fault, awarded the custody of the children to the mother, but made no provision for their maintenance, the court cannot thereafter modify the decree, and compel the husband to pay for their past or future maintenance.—McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 65, 57 Pac. 677.

[c] Court may upon sufficient showing modify decree awarding custody of child to mother, award same to the father.—DeLemos v. Siddal, 143 Cal. 313.

[d] Under Civil Code of 1903, section 138, power of court to modify decree in divorce held not abridged by reason of adoption of agreement of parties as to the disposition of children of the marriage.—Black v. Black (Cal. Sup.), 86 Pac. 505.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 810; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 987-991, §§ 793-795.

§ 156. Death of Parent as Terminating Right to Custody.

[a] Upon the death of the parent to whom is awarded the custody of a minor child by the decree divorcing the parents, the other parent becomes entitled to the custody of the child.—Schammel v. Schammel, 105 Cal. 258, 38 Pac. 729.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 809; 17 Cent. Dig., col. 991, § 796.

§ 157. Grounds for Award of Support.

[a] Under Civil Code, section 209, providing that, "if the husband receives his wife's children by a former husband into his family and supports them, it is presumed he does so as a parent," a divorced father of children in the lawful custody of their mother is not liable for their support in the family of her second husband.—McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 65, 57 Pac. 677.

[b] Under Civil Code, section 138, providing that "the court may before or after judgment give such direction for the custody, care and education of the children as may be necessary," where children in the lawful custody of their divorced mother have been supported by the voluntary act of herself or her second husband, their father cannot be compelled to pay therefor.—McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 65, 57 Pac. 677.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Liability of father for support of child awarded to mother in a decree of divorce: 47 Am. St. Rep. 314, note. See, also, 14 Cyc. 811, 812; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 991, 992, § 798.

158. Order for Support.

[a] Where, by a decree of divorce, the custody of a child has been awarded to the other, the court may thereafter, on her petition, make an order of allowance for the past as well as future support of the child; and a stipulation of the parties, made at the time of entering the decree, that the wife shall receive a sum certain as her part of the common property, and shall have the custody of the infant child, and that such sum shall be in full for her allowance for the support of the child, does not deprive the court from afterwards, on her petition, making such an allowance.—Wilson v. Wilson, 45 Cal. 399.

[b] In an action by a husband against the wife for divorce, an order requiring him to pay a certain amount to a third person for the support of his child is authorized by Civil Code, sections 196, 197, making it primarily the husband's duty to support his minor children, and hence may be issued, though the husband is not in fault in the matters involved in the case.—Gordan, Ex parte, 95 Cal. 374, 30 Pac. 561.

[c] Though an order in an action for divorce, requiring the husband to pay a certain amount to a third person for the support of his child, describes the child by a wrong name, it is valid if it sufficiently identify the child.—Gordan, Ex parte, 95 Cal. 374, 30 Pac. 561.

[d] In an action for divorce, an order requiring the husband to pay a certain amount to a third person for the support of his child is not a judgment in favor of a stranger to the action, but is a valid order for the payment of money to an agent of the court charged with the duty of carrying its decree into effect.—Gordan, Ex parte, 95 Cal. 374, 30 Pac. 561.

[e] Under Civil Code, sections 138, 139, empowering the court in divorce to provide for the care and custody of the minor children, the court cannot require a defendant husband to pay money for the support of his child to its legal guardian other than its mother. Schammel v. Schammel, 105 Cal. 258, 38 Pac. 729.

[f] In an action for divorce, where the custody of the children was awarded to the wife without any provision in the decree for their maintenance, the court, though having no jurisdiction to act subsequently under section 139 of the Civil Code, has jurisdiction, under section 138 of that code, to give a subsequent direction "for the custody, care, and education of the children," and to provide for the expenses reasonably to be incurred for their "care and education."—McKay v. McKay, 125 Cal. 65, 57 Pac. 677.

[g] Where, on an application for an allowance for the support of a child, the plaintiff made affidavit that thirty dollars per month was required, and that defendant's income was two hundred and fifty dollars per month,—all of which defendant denied by his affidavit,—held, that an allowance by the court of twenty dollars per month was not excessive.—Rogers v. Rogers, 31 Pac. 157.

[a] Court may modify divorce decree in proper case so as to provide that parent support and educate children.—Parkhurst v. Parkhurst, 118 Cal. 22, 50 Pac. 9.

[b] The court, in modifying the decree as to the custody of a child, proceeds upon new facts, considered in connection with facts formerly established, including the change of circumstances, the conduct of the parties, the morals of the parents, their financial condition, subsequent marriage, the age of the child, and the devotion of either parent to its best interest and the good of the child, which is the controlling force in directing its custody.—Crater v. Crater, 135 Cal. 633, 67 Pac. 1049.

[c] The court has power to vary and modify a decree of divorce as to the custody of minor children from time to time, as circumstances change; and its legal discretion in exercising such power, and the conclusion reached by it, will not be disturbed upon appeal, unless it clearly appears that its discretion has been abused.—Crater v. Crater, 135 Cal. 633, 67 Pac. 1049.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 14 Cyc. 813; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 995, 996, § 803.

§ 160. —— Enforcement.

[a] The refusal of the husband to pay money for the support of a minor child, which the court, in an action for divorce, has ordered to be paid to its grandmother, to whom the custody of the child was awarded, is a contempt of court, punishable by imprisonment until the money is paid, if the husband is found to have the ability to do so.—Gordan, Ex parte, 95 Cal. 374, 30 Pac. 561.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 14 Cyc. 814; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 997, § 805.

§ 161. Appeal.

[a] An order denying a petition for custody of children, in proceedings for divorce, will not be disturbed unless it clearly appears from the evidence that the denial was an abuse of discretion.—Dickerson v. Dickerson, 108 Cal. 351, 41 Pac. 475.

[b] Appeal from order modifying decree of divorce so as to take custody of children from mother suspends power of court to enforce it.—Queirolo, Ex parte, 119 Cal. 636, 51 Pac. 956.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 14 Cyc. 814; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 997-999, § 806.

§ 162. Costs.

[a] Upon appeal by father from order for maintenance of children made after decree of divorce, court may compel him to pay wife's necessary costs on appeal.—McKay v. Superior Court, 120 Cal. 145, 147, 52 Pac. 147.

[b] A wife in a suit for divorce is, after the determination of an appeal in her favor, entitled to interest on amounts awarded her for suit money and alimony on the trial below from the date of the decree awarding the suit money, and the date when the alimony became due.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 582.

[c] A wife is not entitled to interest on sums awarded in her favor as costs upon the first trial of an action for divorce, when the action was reversed after the first trial on appeal by the husband.—Huellmantel v. Huellmantel, 124 Cal. 583, 57 Pac. 582.

VII. OPERATION AND EFFECT OF DIVORCE AND RIGHTS OF DIVORCED PERSONS.

§ 163. In General.

[a] Where husband and wife are divorced, and the decree also directs an equal division of the common property, and both afterwards die, the former husband leaving a will, and the former wife intestate, the executors of the last will of the former husband cannot exclude from the lands formerly held in community the heirs of the former wife.—McLeran v. Benton, 31 Cal. 29.

[b] After divorce a separate suit may be brought for division of community property not adjudicated.—Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157.

[c] Decree of divorce is not an estoppel as to rights of property, if not adjudicated.—Godey v. Godey, 39 Cal. 157.

[d] On grant of divorce to wife without adjudging property rights, her title in homestead existing on her separate property becomes absolute.—Burkett v. Burkett, 78 Cal. 317, 12 Am. St. Rep. 58, 20 Pac. 715.

[e] Where the court, in an action for a divorce, assigns all the community property to the wife, leaving the husband without separate property, the property so assigned is taken subject to the equitable claim of existing contract creditors whose demands are due, or to become due, on account of credit extended to the husband for the benefit of the community during the existence of the marital relation.—Frankel v. Boyd, 106 Cal. 608, 39 Pac. 939.

[f] Where husband and wife acquire an estate by the entirety, and are afterward divorced, they then become tenants in common.—Kirschner v. Dietrich, 110 Cal. 502, 42 Pac. 1064.

§ 164. Right to Remarry.

[a] Where a court dissolves the bonds of matrimony it has no power to impose any restraint upon a second marriage, in the absence of express statute conferring it.—Barber v. Barber, 16 Cal. 378.

§ 165. Foreign Divorces.

[a] An Indiana divorce, obtained upon the appearance of an attorney without the knowledge or consent of the defendant, is not void, but at most only voidable, at the election of the defendant, and cannot be impeached in California by the plaintiff, at whose instance the appearance was entered and the divorce obtained.—Elliott v. Wohlfrom, 55 Cal. 384.

[b] Where one has obtained a valid divorce in one state, the fact that his wife afterward brings an action in another state for divorce from bed and board, and for support, and obtains judgment therefor, he not pleading his decree of divorce, will not change his status of a single man.—James' Estate, In re, 99 Cal. 374, 37 Am. St. Rep. 60, 33 Pac. 1122.

[c] A decree of divorce which has been regularly obtained in one state by a citizen thereof against a nonresident defendant, constructively served with process by publication of summons, and without other notice, and which is valid and effectual in the state in which such decree is rendered, is equally valid in a sister state.—James, Estate of, 99 Cal. 374, 37 Am. St. Rep. 60, 33 Pac. 1122.

[d] It is competent collaterally to impeach a judgment of divorce rendered in another state by extrinsic evidence showing that the facts necessary to give the court pronouncing it jurisdiction to proceed did not exist, notwithstanding a recital of such facts in the judgment, but where, upon such collateral attack, the evidence is conflicting as to whether the plaintiff was a bona fide resident of the state for the length of time required to give jurisdiction to the court, a finding of the court that he was such resident for a sufficient length of time will not be disturbed upon appeal.—Estate of James, 99 Cal. 374, 37 Am. St. Rep. 60, 33 Pac. 1122.

[e] Plaintiff was served with process in a divorce action in Hawaii, brought by her husband's guardian, on the ground of adultery, and appeared therein by attorney, but before judgment removed to California to make it her permanent home. The judgment was merely a decree for divorce, and did not deal with property rights; but a statute of Hawaii provided that, when a divorce was decreed for the adultery of the wife, the husband should hold her personal estate forever. Held, in an action in California on a policy of insurance on her husband's life, payable to plaintiff, that she was entitled to recover, since, as she was domiciled in California at the time of the judgment for divorce, the statute of Hawaii had no operation on her or her personal property.—McGrew v. Mutual Life Ins. Co of New York, 132 Cal. 85, 84 Am. St. Rep. 20-n, 64 Pac. 103.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 91, providing that the effect of a judgment decreeing a divorce is to restore the parties to the state of unmarried persons, and section 61, providing that a subsequent marriage contracted by any person during the life of a former husband or wife of such person with any person other than such former husband or wife is void unless the former marriage has been annulled or dissolved, provided that in case it be dissolved the decree of divorce must have been rendered at least one year prior to such subsequent marriage, where a woman, within five months after obtaining a divorce in California, was married in Nevada, to a citizen thereof, in accordance with the laws of that state, the marriage was valid in California, the prohibition of remarriage in the statute having no extraterritorial force. Wood's Estate, In re, 137 Cal. 129, 69 Pac. 900; Appeal of Wood, 137 Cal. 129, 69 Pac. 900.

[g] Where a judgment in a suit for maintenance brought by a wife against her husband in another state was entered on stipulation, and recited that the stipulation admitted that the separation was without any fault on the part of the wife, and such judgment would not have estopped the husband, in the state where it was rendered, to recontest the question of the wife's desertion in another suit, it could not have such effect in a suit for divorce brought by the husband in California on the ground of desertion.—Harding v. Harding, 140 Cal. 690, 74 Pac. 284.

§ 2. Inmates of Public Institutions.

[a] The fact that the petitioner was an inmate of a soldiers' home was as much in accord with his claim of residence as if he had lived elsewhere in the state. It is no disproof of his residence in this state that the petitioner, who was seventy-four years of age, was married and had children living in Massachussetts, where there is no evidence that he had a wife living, or that his children were living in a family home when he came to this state. They cannot be presumed to be minors, or to need a father's care, neither is it any disproof of intention to reside in this state that the petitioner never registered as a voter therein.—Gordon, Estate of, 142 Cal. 125, 75 Pac. 672.

§ 3. Change of Domicile.

[a] Where a domicile has been once obtained, it will not be lost by a temporary absence with the intention to return.—Dow v. Gould & Curry Silver Min. Co., 31 Cal. 630.

[b] Union of act and intent are necessary to make a change of residence; and where one has been in the state but three days, nothing can be inferred from his presence in the state for so short a time, and it is for the court to determine from the whole of his Loss or change of domicile: 32 Am. Dec. 427, note.

Where is domicile, and how may be lost or changed: 48 Am. St. Rep. 711, note.

§ 4. —— Facts Showing Change Generally.

[a] Political Code, sections 52, 1239, provide that a person's residence is the place where he remains when not called elsewhere for labor or other temporary purpose, and to which he returns in seasons of repose, and in which his habitation is fixed, and to which he intends to return when absent; but, if he removes to another state with the intention of remaining an indefinite time, he loses his residence, notwithstanding his intention of returning at some future time. Held, where a husband and wife remove from the state for a temporary purpose, intending to return within a year and a half or two years, and take all their property with them, and remain away nearly five years, although the work which called them away is completed several months previous to their return, that they lose their residence upon leaving the state.—Weed's Estate, In re, 120 Cal. 634, 53 Pac. 30.

[b] Decedent, for several years prior to his death, had been a resident of L., in Alameda county, where he owned and operated a farm. Having been unsuccessful in an attempt to join a lodge in L., he came to S. F., and had his name placed on the great register as a voter; claiming in his application to be a resident of the latter city. Subsequently he voted in the general and judicial elections in S. F., and there joined a lodge, claiming in his application to be a resident of the city. Most of his time he spent at L., coming to S. F. about once a week, engaging a room at a hotel; but it did not appear that he had such room except when in the city. He died in S. F. Held, that his alleged residence in S. F. was false, and claimed for the purpose of imposing on the lodge he wished to join; that his residence was in L.; and that proceedings for the appointment of an administrator at S. F. should be vacated.—Samuel's Estate, In re, Myr. Prob. 228.

[c] A public officer of the city and county of S., having acquired a country residence in an adjoining county, was in the habit of repairing to it frequently for pleasure and recreation. Saturdays and Sundays were spent at such residence, and he frequently repaired to it during the week; in the summer time spending most of his nights there, and returning to the city in the morning for business. He voted, however, in the city, and had rooms continuously at a hotel, where he and his wife stayed when in the city. Held, that the husband was a resident of S.—Austin's Estate, In re, Myr. Prob. 237.

§ 5. Regaining Lost Domicile.

[a] Where a husband and wife have lost their residence in this state, the wife cannot regain her residence immediately by returning to the state on the death of her husband. Weed's Estate, In re, 120 Cal. 634, 53 Pac. 30.

§ 6. Status of Persons as Determining Domicile—Married Women.

[a] The domicile of the husband is the domicile of the wife.—Kashaw v. Kashaw, 3 Cal. 312; Beard v. Knox, 5 Cal. 252, 63 Am. Dec. 125; Dow v. Gould & Curry Silver Min. Co., 31 Cal. 630.

Domicile of wife, when different from that of her husband: 84 Am. St. Rep. 27, note.

§ 7. —— Children or Wards.

[a] Where children under fourteen years of age abandoned by their father, live with and are supported by their grandmother for several years, the residence of the grandmother is that of the children.—Vance, In re, 92 Cal. 195, 28 Pac. 229.

[b] Where the father subsequently removes such children to another county, against the will of their grandmother, the residence of the children is not changed.—Vance, In re, 92 Cal. 195, 28 Pac. 229.

[c] A guardian of wards domiciled in California obtained an order permitting him to remove them to another state, "there to remain until the further order of the court." Subsequently the guardian was discharged without being required to return the wards to California. Held, that the domicile of the wards continued to be California, since the wards themselves were incapable of changing their domicile, and the order of the court permitting their removal indicated no intention to surrender jurisdiction of their persons.—Henning's Estate, In re, 128 Cal. 214, 79 Am. St. Rep. 43, 60 Pac. 762.

§ 8. —— Persons Engaged in Official or Military Service.

[a] Constitution, article 2, section 4, declaring that "no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States," does not deprive a person of his privilege of acquiring a residence in a county to which he removes while in such service, if it be his intention so to do.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

§ 9. Evidence and Determination—Admissibility of Evidence.

[a] Residence of a person at a particular time cannot be proved by evidence of common report.—Pfister v. Dascey, 68 Cal. 572, 10 Pac. 117.

§ 10. —— Weight and Sufficiency of Evidence.

[a] Evidence of defendant's intention to take up his place of abode in a certain city, unaccompanied with acts calculated to carry such intention into effect, other than the mere placing of his wife in the home of her father, in such city, and defendant's occasional vists to her, was insufficient to establish his residence in such city.—Sheehan v. Scott, 145 Cal. 684, 79 Pac. 350.

§ 11. —— Questions for Court.

[a] Whether a person is a resident of the state is a mixed question of law and fact, to be determined by the court.—Weed's Estate, In re, 120 Cal. 634, 53 Pac. 30.

§ 1. Statutory Abolition.

[a] The statute in this state has done away with the common-law right of dower, and substituted a half interest in the common property.—Beard v. Knox, 5 Cal. 252, 63 Am. Dec. 125.

[b] There is no estate in dower in California. Estate in dower is abolished by Civil Code, section 173.—Stewart, In re, 74 Cal. 103, 15 Pac. 445.

§ 1. General Right to Establish.

[a] Legislature has constitutional power to compel local improvements, which, in its judgment, will promote the health of the people and abate nuisances, and it may open canals for irrigating arid districts, and build levees for draining lands, and impose local assessments to pay for such works.—Hagar v. Supervisors of Yolo County, 47 Cal. 222.

[b] Act of 1868 (Stats. 1867-68, p. 514), which provides for the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands, is not limited to swamp and overflowed lands acquired by the state under the Arkansas act, but applies to all swamp and overflowed lands in the state, even if the title was derived from a Mexican grant.—Hagar v. Yolo County Supervisors, 47 Cal. 222.

[a] Under the provisions of the Political Code for the reclamation of swamp lands, where the district is situated in different counties, the assessment upon such tract of land is to be paid into the treasury of the county in which the particular tract is situated, and is to be paid out upon the warrants of the trustees approved by the board of supervisors of that county.—Cosner v. Colusa County Supervisors, 58 Cal. 274.

§ 3. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions.

[a] The act of April 23, 1880, entitled "An act to promote drainage," is unconstitutional, in that it creates no relation between the taxes to be levied within any district which the state board may choose to establish, and the benefits received by such district.—People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624.

[b] Act of April 23, 1880, to promote drainage, is unconstitutional because it delegates to a board of executive officers, called "drainage commissioners," the power to divide the state into drainage districts according to their own discretion. Such division is necessarily a legislative duty.—People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624.

[c] The act of April 23, 1880, entitled "An act to promote drainage," is not obnoxious to article 4, section 24, of the constitution. (Myrick, J., concurring.) (People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624.

[d] The act of April 23, 1880, entitled "An act to promote drainage," is not so clearly unconstitutional as to authorize the court to oust from office a director of a drainage district, or to enjoin the letting of contracts under the act, or to adjudge that one of said drainage districts was illegally formed. (Sharpstein, J., dissenting.)—People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624.

[e] The drainage act of 1881 is not repealed by the County Government Act of March 14, 1883.—Holley v. County of Orange, 106 Cal. 42, 39 Pac. 790.

[f] Law in regard to reclamation districts is not void because it requires property qualifications for voters for trustees of district.—People v. Reclamation District, 117 Cal. 123, 48 Pac. 1016.

§ 4. —— Effect of Repeal of Law.

[a] Where the evidence showed that no reclamation district was organized under Statutes of 1878, page 911, a repeal of such act by the legislature in 1880 destroyed any rights which might have been acquired under the original statute.—People v. Reclamation District No. 551, 117 Cal. 114, 48 Pac. 1016.

§ 5. —— Operation.

[a] Statutes of 1893, page 342, chapter 229, section 6, authorizing the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands, and declaring that such reclamation should be subject to all the provisions of law regulating the reclamation of such lands, to the extent that such laws provided that, after the reclamation had been completed, purchasers should be repaid the amount of their payments made for the purchase of the land, constituted a contract between them and the state, which the state could not disregard.—McCord v. Slavin, 143 Cal. 325, 76 Pac. 1104.

§ 6. Purposes for Which Drains may be Established.

[a] The storage of debris and the promotion of the drainage of a district of country are things essentially different. The former is in its nature a private enterprise, while the drainage of a state is a public purpose.—People v. Parks, 58 Cal. 624.

[b] Statutes of 1893, page 342, chapter 229, section 6, provides that any of the swamp lands designated in the act, which, by reason of periodical overflow, need and are susceptible of reclamation, may be reclaimed in the same manner and subject to all the provisions of law regulating the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands, provided that the board of supervisors of the county in which the land, or the greater part thereof, shall be situated, must first determine that such reclamation is necessary and advisable. Held, that the purpose of such section was to enable the holders of land needing and susceptible of reclamation to avail themselves of the provisions of Political Code, sections 3446-3491, providing a scheme for the reclamation of such lands, and that the limitation of the privilege to lands needing reclamation "by reason of periodical overflow" was a mere statutory designation of the test to be applied for the determination of what lands were "swamp and overflowed lands" within the meaning of act of Congress of September 28, 1850, chapter 84, 9 Stats. 519.—McCord v. Slavin, 143 Cal. 325, 76 Pac. 1104.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 14 Cyc. 1025, 1026; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1538-1540, § 2.

§ 7. Drainage and Reclamation Districts—Nature.

[a] Reclamation district is public corporation for municipal purposes.—People v. Reclamation District No. 108, 53 Cal. 346; Heke v. Perdue, 62 Cal. 545; People v. La Rue, 67 Cal. 526; Swamp Land District No. 150 v. Silver, 98 Cal. 51.

[b] Reclamation districts are not corporations of any kind, but public agencies which cease to exist when there is no further function for them to perform.—People v. Reclamation District, 117 Cal. 121, 48 Pac. 1016.

[c] Reclamation districts marked out under act of 1861 were not public corporations.—People v. Reclamation District, 117 Cal. 118-120, 48 Pac. 1016.

[d] Reclamation districts are not corporations organized under provisions of Civil Code.—Hensley v. Reclamation Dist., 121 Cal. 97, 53 Pac. 401.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 1026; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1541-1544, §§ 4-6.

§ 8. —— Creation and Existence.

[a] Reclamation district, as a public corporation, may be created by special act or implication of law from legislative recognition, without regard to defects in its organization.—People v. Reclamation Dist., 53 Cal. 346; People v. Williams, 56 Cal. 647.

[b] A reclamation district can be created not only by the means and in the manner provided by the general law, but also by special act or implication.—Reclamation District No. 124 v. Gray, 95 Cal. 601, 30 Pac. 779.

[c] The creation of a reclamation district may be shown by acts recognizing its existence.—Swamp Land District No. 150 v. Silver, 98 Cal. 51, 32 Pac. 866.

[d] In an action for an assessment levied on defendant's land by the commissioners of a reclamation district, evidence of legislative recognition of the district is conclusive proof that the district existed from the time of such recognition, and it cannot be contended that the assessment, made after such legislative recognition, was invalid, on the ground that the district was not legally organized.—Reclamation Dist. No. 124 v. Gray, 95 Cal. 601, 30 Pac. 779.

[e] "Inhabitants" are not necessary to organize a reclamation district, and such organization does not affect "residents" who own no land within the district.—People v. Reclamation District, 117 Cal. 120, 48 Pac. 1016.

[f] The fact that a reclamation district has for twenty years expended its means in reclaiming the land does not estop the state from asserting that the corporation had no legal existence.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 136, 121 Cal. 522, 50 Pac. 1068.

[g] An insufficient petition for the formation of a reclamation district was approved by the board of supervisors. No business was transacted by the district for fifteen years. Thereafter the supervisors were requested to call an election of trustees, and trustees were chosen. They employed an engineer to make plans, and his report was approved. The supervisors later appointed persons to assess the land. No further business was transacted. The trustees joined with other persons, and formed the defendant district, embracing the same lands, and commenced reclamation. Held, on quo warranto proceedings setting up the prior district as a bar to the defendant's organization, that a finding against the former's defacto existence was supported by the evidence.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 556, 130 Cal. 607, 63 Pac. 27.

[h] A reclamation district regularly organized under section 3446 of the Political Code has a legal existence which cannot be successfully assailed in quo warranto if there is no existing swamp land or reclamation district within its limits.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 556, 130 Cal. 607, 63 Pac. 27.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1542-1544, § 5.

§ 9. —— Reclamation and Irrigation Districts Distinguished.

[a] Reclamation districts are unlike irrigations districts created under Wright act.—People v. Reclamation District, 117 Cal. 123, 48 Pac. 1016.

§ 10. —— Collateral Attack.

[a] Where, under act of March 30, 1874 (Stats. 1873-74), providing that immediately after the passage of the act, owners of land in swamp-land district No. 150 may elect trustees, and proceed in the work of reclamation, as provided in the code, the land owners organized the district by electing trustees, and making and recording by-laws, the organization was complete; and an attack on the validity of such organization could not be considered in an action by such district to recover assessments against land of persons lying within such district.—Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Silver, 98 Cal. 51, 32 Pac. 866; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Bump, 32 Pac. 867; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Cornish, 32 Pac. 867; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Winter, 32 Pac. 867.

[b] Plaintiff instituted quo warranto proceedings against a reclamation district, claiming that it included land within an earlier district, but failed to show that the latter had a de jure existence. Plaintiff then relied on a de facto organization. Held, that defendant was not precluded from controverting the de facto organization by the rule prohibiting collateral attacks.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 556, 130 Cal. 607, 63 Pac. 27.

§ 11. —— Reorganization.

[a] In reorganizing a reclamation district under the act of 1868 the approval of the board of supervisors was not required.—Reclamation District No. 3 v. Goldman, 65 Cal. 635, 4 Pac. 676.

[b] Under act of 1868, section 43, requiring that a meeting of land owners for the purpose of reorganizing a reclamation district be called by the clerk of the board of supervisors, the swamp land clerk, created by section 46 of said act, may call the meeting.—Reclamation Dist. v. Goldman, 65 Cal. 635, 4 Pac. 676.

[c] A California swamp land and reclamation district is a public corporation, and, when acting as such de facto in good faith under an attempted compliance with the law, may, under the statute, be united, consolidated and reorganized, so as to form a new corporation in all respects valid.—People v. La Rue, 67 Cal. 526, 8 Pac. 84.

§ 12. —— Territorial Extent and Annexation or Inclusion of Land.

[a] The board of supervisors of a county may be empowered by the legislature to include within a reclamation district lands situated in another county.—Reclamation District No. 108 v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 945.

[b] Fact that reclamation district incorporated under section 3446, Political Code, includes lands included in former district does not invalidate its organization if such former district was not a subsisting corporation. People v. Reclamation Dist., 117 Cal. 117, 48 Pac. 1016; Reclamation Dist. v. Sels, 117 Cal. 165, 49 Pac. 131.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1545-1547, §§ 7-10.

§ 13. —— Powers.

[a] Reclamation districts are public agencies having only such powers and liabilities as are prescribed by law which creates them. Hensley v. Reclamation Dist., 121 Cal. 97, 53 Pac. 401.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 1027-1029; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1547-1549, § 11.

§ 14. —— Enlargement or Subdivision.

[a] A petition for the division of a swamp land district, formed prior to March 28, 1868, and for the formation of a new district out of a part of the old district, must state that the petitioners are the owners of all the land within the proposed new district, and that they are the holders of certificates of purchase or patents for the lands claimed by them within the district, and the land to be included in the proposed new district must be described by legal subdivisions or other boundaries.—Ralston v. Sacramento County Supervisors, 51 Cal. 592.

[b] Act of April 15, 1880, as amending Political Code, section 3481, providing that the owners of more than two-thirds of any body of lands within any reclamation or swamp land district, and in which the lands have not been reclaimed, desiring to have said body of lands set off from the district, must show that said body of lands is capable of independent reclamation, does not authorize the setting off of an independent district within the limits of a reclamation district formed before the adoption of the Political Code, and not reorganized under the Code.—People v. Parvin, 74 Cal. 549, 16 Pac. 490.

[c] The act of April 15, 1880, does not authorize the setting apart of a new and independent reclamation district, within the limits of a district formed or organized prior to the adoption of the Political Code, and which has not reorganized under the Political Code.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Parvin, 74 Cal. 549, 16 Pac. 490.

[d] Political Code, section 3481, provides that the requisite number of owners of "lands within any reclamation or swamp land district, and in which the lands have not been reclaimed, may have said body of lands set off from such district." Held, that this did not repeal the prior laws, or affect the assessment proceedings thereunder, and applied to all future cases, whether the existing district was organized under the code or not.—People v. Parvin, 14 Pac. 783.

§ 15. —— Drainage, Warrants and Orders.

[a] The provisions of code, section 3456, requiring that money collected on a judgment for the reclamation of swamp land shall be paid out by the reclamation district trustees upon warrants approved by the board of supervisors of the county, vest in the county board the same discretion and power of adjudication with respect to warrants drawn upon their county, where the district extends beyond a single county, as has the board where the whole district is included in one county.—Cosner v. Colusa County Supervisors, 58 Cal. 274.

§ 16. —— By-laws.

[a] Under acts of 1868, page 507, it was not necessary that the by-laws of swamp land district should be signed by holders of certificates of purchase or patents. It was sufficient if they were signed by holders of "other evidences of title" to the requisite amount.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

§ 17. —— Actions Against.

[a] Reclamation districts cannot be sued. Hensley v. Reclamation Dist., 121 Cal. 97, 98, 53 Pac. 401.

§ 18. Establishment by Land Owners Over Lands of Others.

[a] Person has no right to construct ditch through inclosure of another without his consent.—Weimer v. Lowery, 11 Cal. 104.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1536-1540, §§ 1-2.

§ 19. Proceedings for Establishment—Petition.

[a] A petition for the organization of a reclamation district is not void upon its face merely because the names of some of the owners of land were attached to it by other parties. If the names were signed by proper authority, the signatures were those of the owners.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 136, 121 Cal. 522, 50 Pac. 1068, 53 Pac. 1085.

[b] A petition to the board of supervisors for the organization of a district for the reclamation of lands must be signed by owners of one-half the acreage in the district, to give such board jurisdiction.—Reclamation Dist. No. 537 of Yolo County v. Burger, 122 Cal. 442, 55 Pac. 156.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

60 L. R. A. 161, note. See, also, 14 Cyc. 1029-1050; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1553-1600, §§ 16-54.

§ 20. —— Notice.

[a] Section 3447, Political Code, requires publication of petition for swamp land district once in every seven days for four weeks before the hearing.—Williams v. Sacramento County, 58 Cal. 237.

[b] If there are two intervals of more than one week in the publication, board of supervisors have no jurisdiction to organize.—Williams v. Sacramento County, 58 Cal. 237.

[c] Under Statutes of 1867-68, page 507, section 30, requiring publication of a petition for the formation of a reclamation district "for four weeks next preceding the hearing thereof, in some newspaper published in the county," a publication in a daily paper "once a week for four weeks, commencing on the fifth day of December, ... to and including the second day of January," is a sufficient publication for a hearing on January 3d.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 136, 121 Cal. 522, 53 Pac. 1085.

[d] Under act of March 28, 1868, providing for the organization of reclamation districts, and that a petition for the same shall be published "for four weeks next preceding the hearing thereof in some newspaper published in the county," a publication in a daily newspaper once a week for four weeks is insufficient.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 136, 121 Cal. 522, 50 Pac. 1068.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 21. —— Answer.

[a] If the petition for the formation of a swamp land district under the act of March 28, 1868, is signed by persons purporting to be holders of certificates of purchase, patents, or other evidences of title, representing at least one-half of the land in the proposed district, and if the petition is approved and the district organized by the board of supervisors. in an action to enforce an assessment, an averment in the answer that there were a large number of land owners in the district who did not sign the petition is immaterial, and may be stricken out.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

§ 22. —— Appointment of Special Commissioners and Viewers.

[a] A person appointed a commissioner to view and assess the lands in a reclamation district is a "disinterested person," within Political Code, section 3456, where he owns no land in the district, and has no pecuniary interest that could have affected the assessment, although he was secretary of the board of trustees of the district, and received a salary as such.—Lower Kings River Reclamation Dist. No. 531 v. Phillips, 108 Cal. 306, 39 Pac. 630.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 23. —— Proceedings of Commissioners and Viewers.

[a] If a board of commissioners is created by statute to assess a tax upon swamp and overflowed land for the purpose of reclaiming the same, and the statute requires such board to jointly view and assess the land, all the commissioners must be present, and they must jointly view and assess, or the assessment will be void.—People v. Coghill, 47 Cal. 361; People v. Hagar, 49 Cal. 229.

[b] Under the act of March 28, 1868, it is not necessary that the commissioners of assessment should jointly go in person upon each and every acre in the district; and it will be sufficient if the commissioners jointly make such an examination of the land as will enable them to form an intelligent judgment as to the benefits which will accrue to each and every acre.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[c] An assessment of swamp lands under the act of 1868 is void, unless the commissioners jointly view them. This rule is not changed by Political Code, section 3456.—People v. Ahern, 52 Cal. 208.

[d] Section 33 of the act of March 28, 1868, requiring the commissioners to "jointly view and assess upon each and every acre to be reclaimed or benefited thereby a tax," etc., means that the three commissioners, acting jointly or together, shall view and assess.—Reclamation District No. 3 v. Parvin, 67 Cal. 501, 8 Pac. 43.

[e] Under section 3456 of the Political Code, the commissioners appointed to make an assessment for the reclamation of swamp land need not act jointly in viewing the lands within the district.—Swamp Land District No. 307 v. Gwynn, 70 Cal. 566, 12 Pac. 462.

[f] Commissioners appointed to make assessments for swamp land purposes, whose statutory duty was to view the land in question, proceeded to the lands which were mostly covered with water, and went to a point where they could look over the whole area, and see every part except a few parcels along its eastern margin, hidden by trees. Held, that the finding of the court that they viewed all the lands, and each and every tract thereof, was not, as a matter of law, erroneous.—Swamp Land Dist. No. 307 v. Gwynn, 70 Cal. 566, 12 Pac. 462.

[g] The commissioners of swamp land assessments were verbally sworn before viewing the land, but it did not appear that they subscribed their oath, and filed it in the county clerk's office, as required of all "officers" by Political Code, sections 904, 909. Held, that whether the commissioners were or were not "officers," within the meaning of those sections, a failure of strict compliance with their requirements would not avoid official acts fully performed.—Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Wilcox, 75 Cal. 443, 17 Pac. 241, affirming judgment 14 Pac. 843; Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Ruble, 17 Pac. 246.

§ 24. —— Report of Engineer.

[a] Report of engineer containing detailed statement of character and amount of ditch work to be done with estimates of cost thereof, and also cost of proposed pumping plant are sufficient basis for assessment though ditches and pumping plant are not located.—Reclamation Dist. v. Sels, 117 Cal. 166, 49 Pac. 131.

§ 25. —— Hearing and Determination of Questions.

[a] On the hearing of a petition for the formation of a swamp land reclamation district, the board of supervisors have jurisdiction to determine what lands will be benefited by the proposed reclamation, and to include such lands within the district.—Reclamation District No. 108 v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 59, 4 Pac. 945.

[b] A party being present at the hearing of the petition for the formation of a reclamation district, and making no objection, admits the truth of the facts stated in it, and is estopped to deny the same.—Reclamation Dist. v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 945, 949, 950; Reclamation Dist. v. Martin, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 945, 949, 950.

[c] Proof of the existence of a reclamation district as a de facto corporation does not entitle it to proceed to assess an owner of land within such district without a hearing on notice of the petition to create the district. Reclamation Dist. No. 537 of Yolo County v. Burger, 122 Cal. 442, 55 Pac. 156.

For Authorities from Other States:

§ 26. —— Evidence.

[a] In an action for a swamp land assessment, an entry in the record of the board of supervisors, which is conceded to have been altered without authority by one who was, at the time of the entry, but not at the time of the alteration, clerk of the board, is admissible, where the record as altered conforms to the original entry-book, and the person who made the alteration testifies that it was done to amend a clerical error.—Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Wilcox, 75 Cal. 443, 17 Pac. 241, reversing 14 Pac. 843; Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Ruble, 17 Pac. 246.

[b] Where a petition for the formation of a reclamation district has been granted by the board of supervisors, and the names of some of the subscribers appear to have been signed by third persons, it is conclusively presumed that such board found that they were authorized and genuine signatures.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 136, 121 Cal. 522, 53 Pac. 1085.

§ 27. —— Conclusiveness of Proceedings of Board of Supervisors.

[a] In the absence of any showing of fraud, the decision of the commissioners of assessment, as to the benefit which the several parcels of swamp land would receive from the reclamation, is conclusive in a collateral action.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[b] The board of supervisors had power to decide upon the genuineness of the signatures to the petition for the organization of the reclamation district; and the approval of the petition by the board was conclusive adjudication of that fact.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 136, 121 Cal. 522, 50 Pac. 1068, 53 Pac. 1085.

[c] The board of supervisors is authorized to determine whether a petition for the organization of a reclamation district is sufficiently signed, and their finding is conclusive. Reclamation Dist. No. 537 of Yolo County v. Burger, 122 Cal. 442, 55 Pac. 156.

[d] The action of county supervisors in forming a reclamation district is conclusive that the lands therein are of the character for the reclamation of which such district is authorized by statute to be formed.—Lower Kings River Reclamation Dist. No. 531 v. McCullah, 124 Cal. 175, 56 Pac. 887.

§ 28. —— Appeal.

[a] In appeals to the superior court from the order of the board of supervisors as to the formation of a drainage district, the judgment of the court is final, and no further appeal lies to the supreme court.—Appeal of Bixler, 59 Cal. 550.

For Authorities from Other States:

See 14 Cyc. 1044-1048; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1584-1593, §§ 44-50.

§ 29. —— Review on Certiorari.

[a] When the proceedings of a board of supervisors in organizing a district for the reclamation of swamp lands are reviewed on certiorari, and it appears that the petition to organize the district was defective, on account of not stating with precision what lands in the district had been sold, yet, if the petitioner for the writ appeared before the board and did not raise the objection, and waited several months before applying for the writ, and mischievous consequences might follow from a reversal of the proceedings, the court will dismiss the writ.—Hagar v. Yolo County Supervisors, 47 Cal. 222.

[b] Order of board of supervisors creating swamp land district is not a judicial act, and cannot be reviewed upon certiorari.—Williams v. Supervisors, 65 Cal. 160.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 1048; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1593, § 51.

§ 30. —— Injunction to Restrain Proceedings.

[a] In view of Political Code, title 8, chapter 2, and under Civil Code, section 3423, in relation to reclamation districts, held, that a court of equity had no jurisdiction to restrain a board of supervisors from proceeding on an application for the formation of a reclamation district.—Glide v. Superior Court of Yolo County, 1 Cal. App. 152, 81 Pac. 225.

§ 31. Forfeiture and Dissolution.

[a] The fact that the reclamation of the lands of the district is impracticable is not a ground for judgment of forfeiture of the corporation.—People v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 53 Cal. 346.

§ 32. Construction—Deviation.

[a] A deviation from approved plans in making the reclamation, where no injury results therefrom, is a discretion vested by statute in the trustees; and a work of reclamation, with a deviation justifiable under the circumstances, is a substantial compliance with the original approved plan.—Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Goldman, 65 Cal. 635, 4 Pac. 676.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 1051, 1052; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1601, 1602, § 55.

§ 33. Damages and Injuries—Compensation for Lands Taken and Damages.

[a] Laws of 1885, page 78, provided (section 3) that "all persons having claims, 'unaudited by the state board of drainage directors,' for work done or materials furnished under the provisions of 'An act to promote drainage,' approved April 23, 1880 [and which had been declared unconstitutional], are authorized to present their claims to the state board," and have them allowed. Plaintiff, in proceedings to compel the state comptroller to draw a warrant for his claim as audited, the basis of which claim was a judgment condemning his land for drainage purposes under the act of 1880, alleged that by that judgment it was adjudged that the land should be condemned, and that plaintiff should recover therefor the sum of, etc. Held, that even assuming that land so taken can be regarded as "material furnished," within the meaning of the act of 1885, yet, as it is not shown that the award was for "damages" sustained, but rather for the proposed "taking" of the land, nor that any final order of condemnation was made or recorded, as required by Code of Civil Procedure, section 1253, which provides that "thereupon" the property shall vest in the corporation, and, as the award was never paid, the title to the land condemned never vested in the drainage district, and hence nothing was "furnished," and plaintiff is not entitled to payment.—Callahan v. Dunn, 78 Cal. 366, 20 Pac. 737.

[b] An allegation that the award was "as compensation for the property condemned and taken, and as damages thereby done to his property not taken," evidently refers to an injury which would result to the residue of plaintiff's tract from segregation of the portion condemned; but as there was no taking, and so no segregation, that element of damages did not accrue.—Callahan v. Dunn, 78 Cal. 366, 20 Pac. 737.

§ 34. —— Deduction or Setoff of Benefits.

[a] By-law providing that value of work already done should be included in estimate is inconsistent with the provisions of the code upon the subject.—Swamp and Overflowed Land District No. 110 v. Feck, 60 Cal. 403.

[b] The "benefits" which are to be taken into account by the commissioners in apportioning the charge or assessment are those benefits only which spring from the system of works which such assessment is levied to construct or maintain.—Reclamation Dist. v. West, 129 Cal. 622, 62 Pac. 272.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 1057; 17 Cent. Dig., col. 1616, § 68.

§ 35. Liabilities of District or Land Owner for Expenses or Damages.

[a] In an action to recover one-fifth of the cost of a drainage ditch, evidence held to support a finding that defendant fully consented to the scheme and promised to defray her part of the expense.—Showers v. Zanone (Cal. App.), 85 Pac. 857.

—— APPEAL, § 53.

§ 37. Assessment or Levy—Power to Assess or Levy in General.

[a] The legislature has the constitutional power to provide that lands benefited by drains shall be assessed to pay for the expense incurred.—Hagar v. Yolo County Supervisors, 47 Cal. 222.

[b] Reclamation districts can levy assessments and issue warrants for one purpose only: for works of reclamation.—Hensley v. Reclamation Dist., 121 Cal. 98, 53 Pac. 401.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1620-1623, §§ 72, 73.

§ 38. —— Applicability of Constitutional Provisions Governing Taxation.

[a] Those clauses in the constitution which provide that taxation shall be equal and uniform, and prescribe the mode of assessment, and the officer by whom it shall be made, and that all property shall be taxed, have no application to assessments levied for local improvements.—Hagar v. Supervisors of Yolo County, 47 Cal. 222.

§ 39. —— Restrictions and Limitations.

[a] The assessment of lands to pay for local improvements benefiting such lands, such as drains and levees to reclaim them, is not strictly taxation, and such assessment need not conform to the general rules regulating taxation.—(Cal. 1874) Hagar v. Yolo County Supervisors, 47 Cal. 222.

[b] It is not essential to the validity of an assessment for drainage that it should have been made by a municipal corporation.—Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 945, 949, 950; Reclamation District No. 108 v. Martin, 4 Pac. 950.

[c] Assessments upon lands benefited by the drainage for swamp lands, fixed in proportion to the benefits received, are not a "tax" within proviso to act of 1883, section 25, subdivision 13, that no tax shall be levied upon any district until the proposition shall have been approved by the qualified electors; and such proviso did not repeal the act of March 3, 1881, providing a system of drainage, in so far as it authorizes a levy of the assessment without first submitting the question to popular vote.—Holley v. Orange County, 106 Cal. 420, 39 Pac. 790.

§ 40. —— Amount and Apportionment.

[a] Whether or not the mode of assessment in a reclamation district is in accordance with proper apportionment, or equality of burden or benefit, is for the consideration of the legislative department, in the absence of a palpable violation of private rights.—Reclamation Dist. v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 945, 949, 950; Reclamation Dist. v. Martin, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 950.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1626-1630, § 75.

§ 41. —— Proceedings for Assessment.

[a] Where a board of commissioners is created by statute to assess a tax upon swamp and overflowed land for the purpose of reclaiming the same, and the statute requires such board to jointly view and assess the land, their report, stating that they had jointly viewed and assessed the land, when in fact they were not all present, is not conclusive of the question if the statute does not require them to thus report, nor even prima facie evidence of the fact, but the assessment may be attacked in a collateral action to recover the tax.—People v. Hagar, 49 Cal. 229.

[b] Political Code, title 8, chapter 1, provides for drainage districts, and section 3471 thereunder provides that "districts formed under laws in force prior to May 28, 1868, may reorganize under the provisions of this chapter." Held, that a district formed under such prior laws, and not reorganized under the provisions of the said chapter, cannot make an assessment based on the provisions of such chapter.—Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Kennedy, 58 Cal. 124.

[c] The fact that drainage assessments are made against land without notice to the owner does not make the assessments unconstitutional, since the owner may contest the assessment in the action to collect it.—Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Evans, 61 Cal. 104.

[d] The Political Code did not repeal act of March 28, 1868; hence a reclamation district formed under the provisions of such act may make its assessment in accordance with such act, and not in conformity to the code.—Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Goldman, 61 Cal. 205.

[e] Political Code, section 3456, provides that assessments for swamp land improvements shall be proportionate to the resulting benefit, and section 3461 provides, among other requisites, that the list must contain "the amount of the charge assessed against each tract." The list in question conformed to the requirements of section 3461. Held, that the commissioners were not required to report that, in making the assessment, they had complied with section 3456; and that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, they must be presumed to have regularly performed their official duty.—Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Ruble, 14 Pac. 846; Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Wilcox, 75 Cal. 443, 17 Pac. 241, affirming judgment, 14 Pac. 843.

[f] In an action for an assessment, it appeared that, in the assessment list, there was no dollar mark before the figures opposite defendant's name, under the heading "Amount of Charges Assessed," but such mark preceded the figures in the same column, in other places. Held, that the figures must be construed to represent dollars.—Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Wilcox, 75 Cal. 443, 17 Pac. 241, affirming judgment, 14 Pac. 843.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 1061-1064; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1630-1640, §§ 76-83.

§ 42. —— Mode of Assessment.

[a] Under Political Code, section 3461, requiring certain assessment lists to contain "a description, by legal subdivisions, swamp land surveys, or natural boundaries," a description naming the adjoining proprietors on the respective boundaries is sufficient.—Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Wilcox, 14 Pac. 843; Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Ruble, 14 Pac. 846; Swamp Land Reclamation Dist. No. 407 v. Wilcox, 75 Cal. 443, 17 Pac. 241.

[b] Where a swamp land assessment named a person as the owner, no liability is created against anybody else, and none against the person named, unless such person is the owner of the property.—Gwynn v. Dierssen, 101 Cal. 563, 36 Pac. 103.

[c] A swamp land assessment to a party named and to unknown owners is void.—Gwynn v. Dierssen, 101 Cal. 563, 36 Pac. 103.

[d] The lands included in a reclamation district assessment are sufficiently described in a list which contains such abbreviations as are uniformly used in such lists, and which must have been understood by all taxpayers who examine them.—Lower Kings River Reclamation Dist. No. 531 v. Phillips, 108 Cal. 306, 39 Pac. 630.

[e] Political Code, section 3628, relating to tax assessments in general, and providing that no mistake in the name of the owner or supposed owner of real property shall render the assessment thereof invalid, has no application to an assessment by a reclamation district.—Weinreich v. Hensley, 121 Cal. 647, 54 Pac. 254.

[f] Under Political Code, section 3461, requiring reclamation assessment lists to contain "the names of the owners of each tract, if known, and, if unknown, that fact," and section 3466, authorizing suits for the collection of such assessments to be commenced "against the person to whom the same is assessed, and, if assessed to unknown owners, then against the real owners," where the assessment was made against only one of two owners, the judgment for enforcement thereof was not binding on the other owner.—Weinreich v. Hensley, 121 Cal. 647, 54 Pac. 254.

[g] Under Political Code, section 3461, providing that the assessment list for the expense of reclaiming lands must contain a description by legal subdivisions, of each tract assessed, the number of acres, the name of the owner, and the amount assessed against each tract, the land need not be described in the smallest legal subdivisions. Lower Kings River Reclamation Dist. No. 531 v. McCullah, 124 Cal. 175, 56 Pac. 887.

[h] In an assessment for the expense of reclaiming lands, a description of a tract gave the east boundary as the east line of section 26 of a certain township, and the west boundary as the division line between the southeast quarter and the southwest quarter of said section 29; thence south, on such line, to a certain point. If the second and third calls were followed, the last point would not be reached; and if the second call was followed, and the course of the third call rejected, other land than that of the person named as owner would be included; but, if section 26 were substituted for 29, the description would close, and include no other land. Held, that the call for section 29 was a clerical error, and the description was sufficient to sustain the assessment.—Lower Kings River Reclamation Dist. No. 531 v. McCullah, 124 Cal. 175, 56 Pac. 887.

§ 43. —— Reassessment.

[a] Where a board of supervisors appointed three commissioners to view and assess swamp lands for the purpose of reclaiming the same, under the act of 1868 for the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands, who undertook to make an assessment, but which was void, they are not authorized to appoint new commissioners, or direct the old commissioners to make a further assessment. Harris v. Colusa County Supervisors, 49 Cal. 662.

[b] If an assessment is levied on the swamp land of a district for the purpose of reclaiming it according to the plan presented by the trustees, and the work is performed, and the assessment is insufficient to pay for the same, a new assessment may be made, under the act of March 30, 1874, to pay the deficiency due on the work already done.—Hagar v. Yolo County Supervisors, 51 Cal. 474.

[c] The reclamation district being situated wholly in Sacramento county, held, that the estimates for an additional assessment as authorized by the act of 1868 were properly presented to the board of supervisors of that county.—Reclamation District No. 3 v. Goldman, 65 Cal. 635, 4 Pac. 676.

[d] Where original assessment proves inadequate, an additional assessment may be made.—Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 945.

[e] Political Code, section 3459, as amended by act of March 30, 1874, provides that if the original assessment is insufficient for the reclamation of the district lands, or if further assessments are necessary to maintain the reclamation work, the trustees must present to the board of supervisors by which the district was formed a statement of the work "done" or "to be done." Held, that an assessment levied for work "to be done" was not invalid because the trustees, in their statement to the board of supervisors, did not specify the work already done.—Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Silva, 98 Cal. 51, 32 Pac. 866; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Bump, 32 Pac. 867; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Cornish, 32 Pac. 867; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Winter, 32 Pac. 867.

[f] Political Code, section 3459, as amended by act of March 30, 1874, provides that if the original assessment is insufficient for the reclamation of the district lands, or if further assessments are necessary to maintain the reclamation work, the trustees must present to the board of supervisors by which the district was formed a statement of the work "done" or "to be done." Held, that an assessment levied for work "to be done" was not invalid because it included incidental expenses, and the sum of thirty-three thousand four hundred dollars for erecting and maintaining a pump.—Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Silva, 98 Cal. 51, 32 Pac. 866; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Bump, 32 Pac. 867; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Cornish, 32 Pac. 867; Swamp Land Dist. No. 150 v. Winter, 32 Pac. 867.

§ 44. —— Apportionment of Benefits and Expenses.

[a] Assessments must be proportionate to benefit received.—Doane v. Weil, 58 Cal. 334, 624.

[b] The trustees are authorized to cause surveys, plans and estimates of cost to be made, and the commissioners may assess upon each acre of the district a tax proportionate to the whole expense.—Reclamation District No. 108 v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 59, 4 Pac. 945.

[c] Although the assessment books of commissioners appointed to make assessments for swamp land purposes might be considered prima facie evidence of the facts therein recited, under sections 1920, 1926, Code of Civil Procedure, making entries in official books and records prima facie evidence of facts recited, yet this rule does not operate to prevent the introduction of evidence in contradiction, to show that the commissioners did not in fact, as recited in the assessment books, assess their charges against a tract of land in proportion to the whole expense and the benefits to result from the work, as required by law, but arrived at their charge by arbitrarily assuming that each acre of the tract would be benefited a certain sum, and multiplying this sum by the number of acres in the tract.—Swamp Land Dist. No. 307 v. Gwynn, 70 Cal. 566, 12 Pac. 462.

[d] Under Political Code, section 3456, which provides for the assessment of the cost of works constructed by a reclamation district upon the lands of the district, such assessment to be "proportionate to the whole expense, and to the benefits which will result from such works," the benefits to be taken into account in making an assessment on particular lands are those only which spring from the system of works which such assessment is levied to construct or maintain: and where some of the lands of a district are subject to overflow from a river only, while others are also subject to overflow from streams on the other side to such an extent as to render them wholly unproductive, the latter cannot legally be assessed equally with the others for the cost of a levee along the river, on the theory that such levee, in connection with contemplated works for their protection on the other side, will effect their reclamation.—Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v West, 129 Cal. 622, 62 Pac. 272.

[e] Commissioners appointed to assess charges for the reclamation of lands in a district, in arriving at each owner's proportionate share, added the estimated value of an old levee bordering the district to the estimated cost of the new work, and, using the aggregate as a basis of calculation, ascertained that each owner should pay according to the number of acres he owned, crediting him with the estimated value of the portion of the levee on his land. Held, that the assessment was improper, as each owner's land should have been assessed in proportion to the benefits resulting from the work.—Reclamation Dist. No. 537 of Yolo County v. Burger, 122 Cal. 442, 55 Pac. 156.

§ 45. —— Appeal or Certiorari.

[a] The superior court cannot review, by certiorari, the action of a county board of supervisors in vacating an order, previously made by the board, directing a supplemental assessment to be made in a swamp land reclamation district. In such case, the power exercised by the board is not a judicial power.—Bixler v. Sacramento County Supervisors, 59 Cal. 698.

[b] Under the swamp land reclamation acts, the board of supervisors, having authority to determine what lands will be benefited, and to assess them, the court will not consider whether certain land was in fact benefited, or to what extent.—People v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 59, 4 Pac. 951.

§ 46. Proceedings to Confirm or Establish Validity.

[a] In a proceeding by a reclamation district to establish the validity of an assessment by it, defendant may show that the assessment of his property is excessive and unfair.—Reclamation Dist. No. 551 v. Runyon, 117 Cal. 164, 49 Pac. 131.

[b] Proceedings by a reclamation district under Political Code, section 3493½, to establish the validity of an assessment by it, wherein all objections are heard before the bringing of an action on the assessment, is in the nature of a proceeding in rem, and hence a plea of consular privilege is not available therein.—Reclamation Dist. No. 551 v. Runyon, 117 Cal. 164, 49 Pac. 131.

[c] On a proceeding to determine whether property in a reclamation district was properly assessed, it is incompetent to ask witnesses their opinion as to whether the assessments made were in proportion to the benefits.—Reclamation Dist. No. 537 of Yolo County v. Burger, 122 Cal. 442, 55 Pac. 156.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1630-1640, §§ 76-83.

§ 47. Collection and Enforcement—Lien.

[a] An assessment on swamp land for the purpose of reclaiming the same, under the act of 1868, may be enforced by a lien on the land.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

§ 48. —— Payment.

[a] It is not error to make an assessment on a swamp land district payable in gold coin.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[b] The provision of section 3466 of the Political Code, that if an installment of an assessment upon property in a reclamation district remains unpaid twenty days after it becomes due, the whole of the assessment "shall become due and payable at once, and may, in the discretion of the board, be collected immediately, in one and the same action," is for the benefit of the reclamation district, and to insure prompt payment of installments as called for by the board, and may be waived by it.—Reclamation Dist. No. 536 v. Hall, 131 Cal. 662, 63 Pac. 1000.

[c] A notice of protest to the payment of taxes in a drainage district stated that the drainage district was not legally formed and that the assessment was not legally made; that the commissioners did not make any assessment of the land in question, and return the same to the board of directors; that no certified assessment-rolls had ever been returned to the tax collector of any assessment in said district; and that the tax was wholly void. Held, that the notice showed that protestant was under no legal compulsion to pay the tax, and hence the payment was voluntary, giving him no right to recover the same.—Justice v. Robinson, 142 Cal. 199, 75 Pac. 776.

[d] Political Code, section 3819 (Stats. 1893, p. 32, c. 20), providing that a payment of taxes under protest shall not be regarded as voluntary, and that, if taxes so paid are recovered, and such taxes, or a portion thereof, may have been paid by the county treasurer into the state treasury, it shall be regarded as an amount due the county, applies only to county and state taxes, and not to those of drainage districts.—Justice v. Robinson, 142 Cal. 199, 75 Pac. 776.

§ 49. —— Interest Penalty for Nonpayment.

[a] In enforcing the lien of an assessment on swamp land, for reclaiming the same, under the act of 1868, the court cannot award interest on the delinquent assessment.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

§ 50. —— Acceptance of Part of Delinquent Assessment as Waiver of Right of Action for Entire Assessment.

[a] Under Political Code, section 3466, providing that, if any installment of an assessment due a reclamation district shall remain unpaid at the expiration of twenty days from the date of the order directing its payment, a right of action for the entire assessment shall accrue, the acceptance by the district of an installment so delinquent is a waiver of its right of action thereunder for the entire assessment, so that the right of action for the remainder of the assessment is not barred in three years from the time such installment became delinquent.—Reclamation Dist. No. 536 v. Hall, 131 Cal. 662, 63 Pac. 1000.

§ 51. —— Actions.

[a] An action to recover an assessment levied for reclamation purposes in a swamp land district, organized under the act of March 28, 1868, may be prosecuted in the name of the people of the state.—People v. Hagar, 52 Cal. 171.

[b] In an action to enforce an assessment upon lands in a reclamation district, after judgment and after the expiration of forty days from the publication of summons and posting within which anyone claiming an interest may appear and answer, one claiming an interest, but who has neglected to answer, may move to vacate the judgment. Ignorance of the pendency of the action will excuse his neglect to answer.—Reclamation Dist. No. 124 v. Coghill, 56 Cal. 607.

[c] An action to recover an assessment upon a swamp land district should be brought in the name of the district, not in the name of the people, and, if brought in the name of the latter, a demurrer will lie, no cause of action having been stated.—People v. Haggin, 57 Cal. 579.

[d] The complaint in an action to recover an assessment upon a swamp land district stated that the petition for the formation of the district was published for four weeks, ending with February 25th, and that on May 2d thereafter, at the next meeting of the board of supervisors, the board made an order approving the petition, which order was signed by the president and attested by the clerk. Held, that the complaint was insufficient in not showing that the publication was made for four weeks next preceding the hearing, and in not showing that the board noted its approval on the petition.—People v. Haggin, 57 Cal. 579.

[e] In an action by a drainage district to collect assessments, the fact that the plaintiff is not duly organized cannot be taken advantage of by demurrer.—Swamp etc. Land Dist. No. 110 v. Feck, 60 Cal. 403.

[f] Two assessments for drainage made on the same lands at different times may be recovered in the same action.—Swamp etc. Land Dist. No. 110 v. Feck, 60 Cal. 403.

[g] Where an action for the assessment is brought in the name of the reclamation district instead of the people, and the real party in interest is the reclamation district, the substantial rights of the parties are not affected, and such error or defect will not be ground for a reversal.—Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Hager, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 945, 950; Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Martin, 4 Pac. 950.

[h] Where a statute requires that commissioners shall "jointly view and assess upon each and every acre to be reclaimed or benefited thereby a certain tax," etc., the complaint in an action to recover such assessment is sufficient if it alleges that "the commissioners jointly viewed the lands in the district, and jointly assessed upon each and every acre to be reclaimed or benefited thereby the amount of the assessment in proportion to the whole expense, and to the benefits resulting from the works of reclamation, and that they made a list showing the amount of the charges assessed against each tract." Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Parvin, 67 Cal. 501, 8 Pac. 43.

[i] A reclamation district, as the real party in interest, may sue in its own name to recover delinquent assessments for the reclamation of swamp lands.—Reclamation Dist. No. 3 v. Parvin, 67 Cal. 501, 8 Pac. 43.

[j] When, in an action to collect a swamp land assessment, defendant admits ownership of the land described, the fact that the land did not contain the acreage alleged is immaterial, where it is not shown that the assessment was levied by acreage.—Swamp Land Dist. No. 307 v. Glide, 112 Cal. 85, 44 Pac. 451.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 52. —— Defenses.

[a] It is not a defense to an action to recover an assessment for reclamation purposes that the state, by accepting the grant under the Arkansas act, assumed the burden of reclaiming the land, and therefore could not impose it upon the grantees of the state. Reclamation District No. 108 v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac 945.

[b] The nature of the indebtedness in a reclamation district is determined by the trustees, and by the board of supervisors in making the order for the assessment, and when determined to have been proper, and such as the law contemplated, the action of the trustees and board of supervisors cannot be contradicted or impeached in a suit to recover the assessment.—Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Hagar, 66 Cal. 54, 4 Pac. 945, 949, 950; Reclamation Dist. No. 108 v. Martin, 4 Pac. 950.

[c] A land owner, assessed for drainage ditches, may defend an action to enforce the assessment by showing that the assessment is unjust or excessive, provided there is no opportunity to make such defense when the assessment is made. Such an attack on the assessment is only apparently, not really, collateral.—Reclamation Dist. No. 307 v. Glide, 41 Pac. 278; Lower Kings River Reclamation Dist. No. 531 v. Phillips, 108 Cal. 306, 41 Pac. 335, affirming on rehearing (1895) 39 Pac. 630.

§ 53. —— Appeal.

[a] In an action on a swamp land assessment the objection that there is a difference in the acreage of defendant's land embraced in the exterior lines of the district and that in the assessment-roll cannot be considered upon appeal for the first time; nor is there any presumption in favor of the accuracy of the former over the latter; and where ownership of the tract of land described in the complaint is admitted, it is immaterial whether the acreage is correctly described, where it does not appear that the assessment was levied upon the lands by acreage. Swamp Land District No. 307 v. Glide, 112 Cal. 85, 44 Pac. 451.

[b] In an action by a reclamation district to determine the validity of an assessment, where there is a substantial conflict in the evidence as to the character of the land assessed for benefits, the finding of the court in favor of the assessment will not be disturbed on appeal.—Lower Kings River Reclamation Dist. No. 531 v. McCullah, 124 Cal. 175, 56 Pac. 887.

§ 1. Nature and Elements of Rights.

[a] Grant of easement is always made for benefit of other premises, which are described in the grant.—Wagner v. Hanna, 38 Cal. 111, 99 Am. Dec. 354.

[b] An easement to real estate granted is a privilege off and beyond the local boundaries of the lands or tenement conveyed.—Cave v. Crafts, 53 Cal. 135.

[c] Easement is permanent interest in another's land, with right at all times to enter and enjoy it.—Emerson v. Bergin, 76 Cal. 201, 18 Pac. 264.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 14 Cyc. 1139-1144; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1707-1726, §§ 1-12.

§ 2. —— Easement or Fee.

[a] A deed to R, "his heirs and assigns, for the sole purpose of an alleyway, to be used in common with the owners of other property adjoining said alleyway," conveys only an easement, and dedicates the land for use as an alleyway.—Pellissier v. Corker, 103 Cal. 516, 37 Pac. 465.

[b] A deed conveying "a road and right of way over and across" land, "to be forever appurtenant to" adjoining land of the grantee, and providing that neither party shall, "nor shall his successors in interest, grant or give to any other person a right of way over said road," conveys only an easement for a right of way, and not a fee simple title.—Peterson v. Machado, 43 Pac. 611.

§ 3. Easements Appurtenant or in Gross.

[a] Principal distinction between easement and right of way in gross is, that in the first there is, and in the second there is not, a dominant tenement.—Wagner v. Hanna, 38 Cal. 111, 99 Am. Dec. 354.

[b] Whether the grant of a right of way be in gross or appurtenant to some other estate must be determined from the grant itself, and not by matters aliunde.—Wagner v. Hanna, 38 Cal. 111, 99 Am. Dec. 354.

[c] Where the owner of a tract of land sells one-half of it, reserving a right of way across it, such right is not appurtenant to the unsold tract, and does not pass with the title, but is a right of way in gross.—Wagner v. Hanna, 38 Cal. 111, 99 Am. Dec. 354.

[d] Right of way in gross is personal, cannot be assigned and dies with the person.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 65, 11 Pac. 879.

[e] Section 801, Civil Code, merely defines easements appurtenant and makes no pretense of prescribing or regulating manner of acquiring them.—McDaniel v. Cummings, 83 Cal. 517, 23 Pac. 795.

[f] If an easement becomes appurtenant to an estate, it follows every part of the estate into whosoever hands the same may come by purchase or descent.—Currier v. Howes, 103 Cal. 431, 37 Pac. 521.

[g] Where the owner of land to which a right of way is appurtenant sells or devises it in separate parcels to different persons, each of such persons acquires a right of way as appurtenant to his particular part of the land.—Currier v. Howes, 103 Cal. 431, 37 Pac. 521.

§ 5. —— "Ancient Lights."

[a] The English doctrine of "ancient lights" does not obtain in this country; and the legislature cannot vest in an adjoining proprietor the right to prevent his neighbor from building upon his own land such structure as he may see fit, provided it is not a nuisance.—Ingwersen v. Barry, 118 Cal. 342, 50 Pac. 536.

Easement of light and air: 7 Am. Dec. 49, 32 Am. Dec. 412, notes.

Acquisition of easements by adverse possession: 11 Am. Dec. 663, note.

§ 6. Creation and Existence in General.

[a] Right of way does not originate in mere convenience. It must spring from an express grant, or from an implied reservation, or from a user for a length of time sufficient to create a prescription or a bar under the statute of limitations, either of which is presumptive evidence of a grant.—Carey v. Rae, 58 Cal. 159.

[b] Right of way may be created by prescription, grant, statute or necessity.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 64, 11 Pac. 879.

[c] Easement must be founded upon grant by deed or writing, or upon prescription.—Emerson v. Bergin, 76 Cal. 201, 18 Pac. 264.

§ 7. Impossibility of Easement in One's Own Property.

[a] There can be no dominant and servient estate between two tracts owned by same person.—Quinlan v. Noble, 75 Cal. 252, 17 Pac. 69.

§ 8. Creation by Prescription.

[a] A grant of an easement will not be presumed from adverse enjoyment, unless such enjoyment was uninterrupted, and with the knowledge and acquiescence of the owner of the servient estate.—American Co. v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 360.

[b] The fact that an easement has been granted in land does not prevent the grantor from entering; consequently the statute of limitations will run in favor of one who enters and claims possession adversely to the grantor.—City and County of San Francisco v. Calderwood, 31 Cal. 585, 91 Am. Dec. 542.

[c] To establish a prescriptive right to an easement, the user must have been continuous, adverse, under claim of title, and with the knowledge and acquiescence of the owner of the servient estate.—Richard v. Hupp, 37 Pac. 920.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Easement of lateral support, prescriptive right to: 7 Am. Dec. 62, 29 Am. Rep. 399, notes; 53 L. R. A. 900, note. See, also, 14 Cyc. 1145-1157; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1726-1760, §§ 13-34.

§ 9. —— Light and Air.

[a] The doctrine that a proprietor of land may by user acquire an easement over adjoining land for the passage of light and air does not prevail in this country, and merely owning the adjoining lot cannot give the proprietors such an easement.—Western Granite etc. Co. v. Knickerbocker, 103 Cal. 111, 37 Pac. 192.

§ 10. —— Projecting Roof.

[a] Projection of roof over adjoining lot may become an easement by prescription.—Gillispie v. Jones, 47 Cal. 264.

§ 11. —— Pipe-lines.

[a] The continuous, uninterrupted use of a pipe-line by plaintiff with others under a claim of right will ripen into a permanent and several right to use the same.—Collins v. Gray (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 983.

[b] A finding that for more than five years plaintiff and others used a pipe-line as often as required by them for irrigating purposes, held a sufficient finding of continuous use.—Collins v. Gray (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 983.

§ 12. —— Right of Way.

[a] In order to maintain a right of way acquired by parol license, as against a purchaser from the one who gave the license, the one claiming such right of way must show a right based on prescription.—Barbour v. Pierce, 42 Cal. 657.

[b] The acquisition of a right of way by prescription is not affected by the fact that occasionally, when the ground was soft, the adverse users turned out of the way at a certain point, and made several distinct tracks there.—Cheney v. O'Brien, 69 Cal. 199, 10 Pac. 479.

[c] In order to acquire a right of way by prescription, the claimant must have been in the adverse, continuous, open, and peaceable occupancy thereof for five years under a claim of right, and not merely by the consent, permission, or indulgence, express or implied, of the owner of the alleged servient estate.—Thomas v. England, 71 Cal. 456, 12 Pac. 491.

[d] Private right of way over land is an easement, and an interest in the land which may be acquired by prescription.—Patchett v. Pacific Coast Ry. Co., 100 Cal. 505, 35 Pac. 73.

[e] Failure to pay taxes does not affect the title to a right of way in adjoining land, acquired by use for the requisite period, where the right of way was not assessed separately from such land.—Humphreys v. Blasingame, 104 Cal. 40, 37 Pac. 804.

[f] Where a land owner claimed a right of way over lands of another, the fact that a lessee of the dominant estate was at the same time the lessee of the servient estate did not interrupt the running of the statute of limitations in favor of the dominant estate.—Franz v. Mendonca, 131 Cal. 205, 63 Pac. 361.

[g] Where plaintiff pre-empted government land, his right of sole possession and use was sufficient estate in him, without a patent, to start the statute of limitations running as to a right of way claimed in behalf of such lands over lands of another.—Franz v. Mendonca, 131 Cal. 205, 63 Pac. 361.

[h] Prescriptive right to a private way cannot be acquired if the user is not adverse, but with the permission of the owners of the land over which it is claimed.—Franz v. Mendona, 131 Cal. 205, 63 Pac. 361.

[i] One who was allowed by silent permission of the owner to pass over his uninclosed land for five years, and who never, at any time, communicated to the owner a claim of a right of way over such land, has no prescriptive right thereto.—Clarke v. Clarke, 133 Cal. 667, 85 Am. St. Rep. 242, 66 Pac. 10.

[j] One in adverse possession of land may acquire a right of way over the same by prescription.—Cavanaugh v. Wholey, 143 Cal. 164, 76 Pac. 979.

§ 13. Creation by Deed, Grant or Reservation.

[a] Right of way is interest in lands, to be conveyed only by an instrument in writing, which must describe the interest conveyed. If it is appurtenant to another tract it must be so described, together with the tract of land to which it is appurtenant.—Wagner v. Hanna, 38 Cal. 111, 99 Am. Dec. 354.

[b] If there be two tracts of land, in one of which the owner or vendor reserves and in the other grants a right of way, each becomes the dominant tract in respect to the right of way secured across the other. (Per Crockett, J.)—Wagner v. Hanna, 38 Cal. 111, 99 Am. Dec. 354.

[c] Reservation of an easement is equivalent to a grant by the grantee.—Wagner v. Hanna, 38 Cal. 111, 99 Am. Dec. 354; Neil v. McNear, 57 Cal. 424.

[e] Ordinarily, easement is created by contract between owners of different parcels of land, by grant express or implied.—McDanial v. Cummings, 83 Cal. 518, 23 Pac. 795.

[f] The word "road" is word of greater significance than word "way," and is uniformly applied to open and unobstructed roads, unless qualified by some other word, such as the adjective "private," and a deed granting a right of way over a "road" to be laid out should be construed as entitling the grantee to a way without gates or bars where there is nothing in the description or circumstances to indicate a different intention.—Smith v. Worn, 93 Cal. 206, 28 Pac. 944.

[g] Under a deed expressly granting a right of way, and designating the exact piece of land over which the easement is to extend, no act is required of the grantee to show an acceptance by him.—Smith v. Worn, 93 Cal. 206, 28 Pac. 944.

[h] An agreement by a turnpike company to give the owner of a ranch the right to use the road free of toll for all the purposes of the ranch, in consideration of his giving the company a right of way over the ranch, does not give the ranch owner an easement in the road.—Kellett v. Ida Clayton & G. W. Wagon Road Co., 99 Cal. 210, 33 Pac. 885.

[i] The grantee in a deed of right of way across a lot acquires no rights thereunder when he knows that the grantor had previously conveyed the lot to another, though the deed of the lot has not been recorded.—Clarke v. Clarke, 133 Cal. 667, 85 Am. St. Rep. 242, 66 Pac. 10.

§ 14. Creation by Implication.

[a] Where an owner of land sells a lot described as bounding on a certain street or way, the purchaser acquires the right of the use of the way in front of his lot.—Breed v. Cunningham, 2 Cal. 361.

[b] Owner of building leased portion of it. There was access to the part reserved without going through the part leased. Held, that the lessor had no implied right of way to the part reserved through any portion of the lessee's premises.—Ramirez v. McCormick, 4 Cal. 245.

[c] The conveyance of a lot bounded by a street or alley as shown upon the map or plat referred to gives the grantee a right to the use of such street or alley.—Kittle v. Pfeiffer, 22 Cal. 484.

[d] In every deed of a part of the grantor's land, without express provision on the subject, there is an implied grant of easements of necessity for the enjoyment of the part conveyed.—Cave v. Crafts, 53 Cal. 135.

§ 15. —— Light and Air.

[a] Under the common law, as adopted in California, a grant by deed of premises does not carry with it an implied easement to light and air over contiguous land retained by the grantor.—Kennedy v. Burnap, 120 Cal. 488, 52 Pac. 843, 40 L. R. A. 476.

[b] Grantee of land in a conveyance acquires no easement by implication to light and air passing over land, immediately contiguous thereto, retained by the grantor. Kennedy v. Burnap, 120 Cal. 488, 52 Pac. 843, 40 L. R. A. 476.

§ 16. —— Ways of Necessity.

[a] Where one grants land to another, which is wholly surrounded by other land of the grantor, or partly by land of the grantor and partly by land of a stranger, "a way of necessity" arises in favor of the grantee over the land of the grantor.—Taylor v. Warnaky, 55 Cal. 350.

[b] The impassability of a road gives no right to an easement over the land of another. It confers a personal temporary right, but not one which is appurtenant to his estate.—Carey v. Rae, 58 Cal. 159.

[c] One cotenant cannot by grant of adjoining land held in severalty establish a way of necessity over lands held in common. McDonald v. McElroy, 60 Cal. 484.

[d] There can be no right way of necessity over lands in which the grantor is only a tenant in common.—McDonald v. McElroy, 60 Cal. 484.

[e] A right of way of necessity may be acquired over the land of another, although the road to which the way leads is not a county road, but a mere byroad open to the public.—Cheney v. O'Brien, 69 Cal. 199, 10 Pac. 479.

[f] Way of necessity may be designated by grantor and in event of his failure to do so, by grantee.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 65, 11 Pac. 879.

[g] Conveyance of land entirely inclosed by other land carries right of way of necessity over grantor's land.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 64, 11 Pac. 879.

[h] Way of necessity exists only in cases of strict necessity.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 65, 11 Pac. 879.

[i] Way of necessity exists when grantee has no means of access except over grantor's land.—Barnard v. Lloyd, 85 Cal. 132, 133, 24 Pac. 658.

[j] Where land allotted by order of the court in a proceeding for partition is so situated that one of the parties would be entitled to a way of necessity, if an allotment were made by deed from all the other tenants in common, the effect of the allotment by order of the court is to create the way of necessity. Blum v. Weston, 102 Cal. 362, 41 Am. St. Rep. 188, 36 Pac. 778.

[k] The easement of a way of necessity, resulting by operation of law from the fact that a parcel of land is cut off from the county road by other subdivisions of the original tract, attaches to that parcel as an appurtenance, and passes with each successive transfer of title, whether such transfer is by deed or by sale under execution. Blum v. Weston, 102 Cal. 362, 41 Am. St. Rep. 188, 36 Pac. 778.

[m] It is unnecessary that there should be a reservation in terms of a way of necessity, which would confer no further right than would be conferred by operation of law without those words.—Blum v. Weston, 102 Cal. 362, 41 Am. St. Rep. 188, 36 Pac. 778.

[n] It is immaterial whether the owners of the land over which the way of necessity exists have designated a road or way; and if they have not, the owners of the dominant estate may designate it.—Blum v. Weston, 102 Cal. 362, 41 Am. St. Rep. 188, 36 Pac. 778.

[o] One claiming lands under a mortgage foreclosure sale, to which access cannot be had except over the lands of third persons, or over the homestead of the mortgagor, which was included in the mortgage, but was not sold, because the proceeds of the other lands were sufficient to pay the debt, is entitled to a way of necessity over such homestead, though the declaration of homestead was filed prior to the decree of foreclosure, and though Civil Code, sections 1240-1242, provide that a homestead can only be encumbered or conveyed by an instrument signed by both husband and wife, and is exempt from execution or forced sale. San Joaquin Valley Bank v. Dodge, 125 Cal. 77, 57 Pac. 687.

[a] Plaintiff's grantor purchased land which could only be reached by going over land of defendant, his grantor, or over that of strangers. There had been a way from plaintiff's land over defendant's land, and the latter, deeming it inconvenient to have this way open, had, prior to plaintiff's purchase, designated another way, and pointed it out to plaintiff as the way by which the land which he was about to purchase could be reached. Held, that the use of the way pointed out, to which plaintiff acquired a right, was sufficient notice of his right to purchasers of the servient estate.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 62, 11 Pac. 879.

[b] Grantee of lands takes subject to easements existing at time of transfer.—Smith v. Corbit, 116 Cal. 591, 48 Pac. 725.

[c] The owner of three lots built a house on one, and constructed a sewer therefrom across the other lots to a public sewer in the street. He then sold the house and one lot to plaintiff, and the other lots to another person. Such purchaser borrowed money to pay the purchase price, and the deed was made to the lenders as security, but with power in such purchaser to sell. Such purchaser then sold one of such lots to plaintiff, the purchaser and such lenders joining in the deed. In a separate instrument, such purchaser granted to plaintiff an easement on the remaining lot for the perpetual maintenance of such sewer. Thereafter such purchaser sold such remaining lot to defendant, who, in erecting a building thereon, destroyed such sewer and refused to permit it to be reconstructed. Held that, plaintiff, when he purchased the first lot, acquired an easement for the sewer across defendant's lot for the benefit of such first lot, and, on the purchase of the second lot from defendant's grantor, plaintiff acquired such easement in favor of such second lot.—Jones v. Sanders, 138 Cal. 405, 71 Pac. 506.

[d] The execution of such grant by defendant's vendor furnished conclusive evidence that such vendor had knowledge of the quasi easement at the time he conveyed the second lot to plaintiff, and it was immaterial whether such lenders had knowledge thereof, as their interest was merely as security.—Jones v. Sanders, 138 Cal. 405, 71 Pac. 506.

§ 18. Severance and Transfer of Right.

[a] Where a party uses a way over land belonging to another, by agreement with the owner of the land, and the land is sold to a third party without notice of the arrangement as to the right of way, the third party is not bound by the arrangement.—Barbour v. Pierce, 42 Cal. 657.

[b] Grant of a part of lands includes all such easements in remaining part as are necessary to reasonable enjoyment of part granted in form it assumes at time of transfer.—Smith v. Corbit, 116 Cal. 591, 48 Pac. 725.

[c] An owner of three lots who constructed a private sewer from his dwelling upon one of them across the other two lots to a street sewer had a quasi easement for the sewer on the other two lots for the benefit of the residence lot; and upon severance thereof by a devise of the other two lots to his widow, she took with the burden imposed upon them by her devisor, and an easement in them for the benefit of the dwelling-house lot was thereby created.—Jones v. Sanders, 138 Cal. 405, 71 Pac. 506.

§ 19. Duration.

[a] In an action for trespass on land a written instrument was introduced, by which plaintiff sold intervener certain standing timber, to be removed within four years. Plaintiff then granted a right of way, for logging purposes, through a creek and over the premises then owned by plaintiff, for a term of ten years. Finally the instrument provided that the party of the first part (plaintiff) "does hereby grant unto the said party of the second part the right of way, for logging purposes, over and through that certain tract of swamp and overflowed land" described in plaintiff's complaint. Held, that the last grant was not limited in time. Robinson v. Crescent City Mill Co., 93 Cal. 316, 28 Pac. 950.

§ 21. —— By Nonuser or Abandonment.

[a] Where the grantor of a right of way and his successors in interest have always recognized the continuance of the easement, the fact that a railroad company built a railroad track and inclosed it with fences across the strip of land over which the right of way was granted, even if such act is considered hostile to the owner of the easement, would not operate to the advantage of the owner of the servient tenement, or permit him to claim that the right to enforce the opening of the road had been lost by adverse possession.—Smith v. Worn, 93 Cal. 206, 28 Pac. 944.

[b] Easement acquired by deed is not lost by mere nonuser. The nonuser must be accompanied with an express or implied intention of abandonment, and the owner of the servient estate, acting upon the intention of abandonment and the actual nonuser, must have incurred expenses upon his own estate. The three elements, nonuser, intention to abandon, and damage to the owner of the servient estate, must concur in order to extinguish the easement.—Smith v. Worn, 93 Cal. 206, 28 Pac. 944.

[c] The acts of the owner of a dominant tenement in case of nonuser, or to prevent him from claiming an easement acquired by grant, must be of a character so decisive and conclusive as to indicate a clear intent to abandon the easement.—Smith v. Worn, 93 Cal. 206, 28 Pac. 944.

[d] When an easement is acquired by deed no length of time of mere nonuser will operate to impair or defeat the right; and nothing short of a use by the owner adverse to the enjoyment of the easement, for the space of time requisite to create a prescriptive right, will restore the right granted. Currier v. Howes, 103 Cal. 431, 37 Pac. 521.

[e] Section 811 of the Civil Code, which provides that when a servitude is acquired by enjoyment, disuse thereof by the owner of the servitude for the period prescribed for acquiring title by enjoyment extinguishes the servitude, deals only with the extinguishment of servitudes resting upon prescriptive right, and not of one conferred by express grant from the United States to a prior appropriator.—Smith v. Hawkins, 110 Cal. 122, 42 Pac. 453.

[f] Under Civil Code, section 811, subdivision 4, a finding that plaintiff had not lost right to use of private road by disuse held sustained by evidence.—Franz v. Mendonca, 146 Cal. 640, 80 Pac. 1078.

§ 22. —— By Estoppel.

[a] Rule that grantee will not be permitted to resume easement granted, where his acts have led other persons to treat the servient state as free from the servitude, does not apply where no one has been misled to his prejudice by the acts of such grantee.—Smith v. Worn, 93 Cal. 206, 28 Pac. 944.

§ 23. —— By Disclaimer of Easement.

[a] Where the owner of two adjoining mining claims, across one of which a water ditch extended to and upon the other, mortgaged the claim over which the ditch extended, and, in an action to foreclose the mortgage, subsequent mortgagees of the other claim were made parties defendant, and, instead of asserting their lien on the right to use the ditch in the former claim, disclaimed all interest in that claim, the judgment rendered against them on such disclaimer extinguished their lien on the easement.—Dixon v. Schermeier, 110 Cal. 582, 42 Pac. 1091.

§ 24. Extinguishment of Right of Way of Necessity.

[a] Way of necessity only continues while necessity exists.—Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 65, 11 Pac. 879.

[b] The necessity ceases when another way has been acquired, or when, by the acquisition of other lands the owner can reach the public road without traversing the land of others.—Blum v. Weston, 102 Cal. 362, 41 Am. St. Rep. 188, 36 Pac. 778.

§ 25. —— By Judgment Establishing Way.

[a] When right of way is established by the judgment for benefit of owners, every other right of way ceases to exist.—Carey v. Rae, 58 Cal. 160.

§ 26. Actions to Establish—Pleading.

[a] Mode of pleading prescriptive right to easement stated.—Anderson v. Goff, 72 Cal. 76, 1 Am. St. Rep. 34, 13 Pac. 73.

[b] In pleading easement created by agreement it is not necessary to allege that agreement was written.—Emerson v. Bergin, 76 Cal. 202, 18 Pac. 264.

[c] A complaint to establish a way of necessity over lands is not insufficient because it alleges that defendant is the owner and entitled to possession of the lands over which the way is sought to be established, where it sets forth the ownership by the parties and plaintiff's right to the way. San Joaquin Valley Bank v. Dodge, 125 Cal. 77, 57 Pac. 687.

§ 27. Evidence—Presumptions.

[a] Where a way of necessity once existed, it will be presumed to exist until some fact is shown establishing nonexistence.—Blum v. Weston, 102 Cal. 362, 41 Am. St. Rep. 188, 36 Pac. 778.

[b] Though an easement, like a right of way, may be created by a grant in gross attached to the person of the grantee, this is never presumed when it can be fairly construed to be appurtenant to the adjoining land of the grantee.—Hopper v. Barnes, 113 Cal. 636, 45 Pac. 874.

§ 28. —— Burden of Proof.

[a] One who claims a prescriptive right to a private way over the lands of another person has the burden of proof to establish all of the elements essential to constitute such right. He must prove a user which was adverse to the true owner and hostile to his title, and which was actual, continued, open, and under a claim of right, asserted in such manner that the owner might know of the claim.—Clarke v. Clarke, 133 Cal. 667, 66 Pac. 10.

§ 29. —— Admissibility of Evidence.

[a] In case of a dispute concerning the existence and location of a right of way claimed as a way of necessity, the declarations of the original owner of both the dominant and servient estates, who designated the way to be used at the time of his conveyance of the dominant estate, are admissible. Kripp v. Curtis, 71 Cal. 62, 11 Pac. 879.

[b] On an issue as to whether plaintiff had acquired a right of way over defendant's land by five years' use thereof, the deeds under which each holds are competent evidence to show the ownership of the tracts of land involved, and the dates of transfer. Humphreys v. Blasingame, 104 Cal. 40, 37 Pac. 804.

[c] On an issue whether the owner of a parcel of land was entitled to a way of necessity over adjoining lands, testimony whether or not there was a well-defined road along a creek adjoining the land for which the way was claimed is admissible.—San Joaquin Valley Bank v. Dodge, 125 Cal. 77, 57 Pac. 687.

[d] In an action to establish a way of necessity, evidence as to the most convenient way to reach the highway from the lands for which the way is claimed is admissible. San Joaquin Valley Bank v. Dodge, 125 Cal. 77, 57 Pac. 687.

§ 30. —— Weight and Sufficiency.

[a] In an action to quiet title, a finding that a certain deed under which the defendant claimed did not carry with it an easement attached to the land conveyed, the right to maintain the water ditch in controversy, and to use for irrigation the waters flowing therein, held supported by the evidence. Riverside Land etc. Co. v. Jensen, 73 Cal. 550, 15 Pac. 131.

[b] Plaintiff owned two tracts of land, separated by land of defendant. For five years before defendant purchased the land plaintiff had used a road over it, connecting his tracts, and continued to do so for eight years thereafter, without asking defendant's permission, and without opposition on his part. Held, that the evidence sustained a finding that plaintiff had used the road under a claim of right, and not by permission of defendant, so as to perfect his easement by occupancy.—Humphreys v. Blasingame, 104 Cal. 40, 37 Pac. 804.

§ 31. Trial.

[a] A finding that plaintiff had an interest in a pipe line located over defendant's land, and as to the extent thereof held a sufficient finding of an easement and plaintiff's ownership thereof to the extent claimed.—Collins v. Gray (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 983.

§ 33. Extent of Rights Acquired.

[a] Grantee of easement has no right of entry upon, nor has he any right to possess the land as such. The fee of the soil and right of entry remain in the grantor subject to the easement.—San Francisco v. Calderwood, 31 Cal. 585, 91 Am. Dec. 542.

[b] Where an owner of land lays off an alley extending into such land, marking its boundaries by fences, and conveys lots bordering thereon with an express grant of right of way through such alley, the rights of purchasers are presumed to extend to the limits of the alley so designated.—Currier v. [c] Where the owner of land establishes an alley extending across the rear of a lot subsequently conveyed, with a right of way "to and from said lot," through such alley, the right of way extends along the whole rear of such lot.—Currier v. Howes, 103 Cal. 431, 37 Pac. 521.

[e] Rights acquired by prescription are stricti juris, and cannot extend beyond the user; and the extent of an easement so acquired is fixed and determined by the user under which it was gained.—North Fork Water Co. v. Edwards, 121 Cal. 662, 54 Pac. 69.

[f] The owners of a tract of land, which they had platted, and on which a lake is situate, conveyed a part thereof, with a reservation of the right to reclaim by drainage all or any portion of the land conveyed, or any other lands liable to overflow from the lake, and for that purpose to enter on the land conveyed, and construct a dam or ditch, and do anything necessary to reclaim any or all of such lands from overflow; the reclamation to inure to the benefit of the grantee. Held to reserve to the grantor and his grantees of adjoining tracts an easement over the land of the grantees for the purpose of constructing a ditch or other means of reclaiming the land, as well as the right to draw water from the grantee's land by a ditch constructed on their land, and to the grantee an easement on the lands of the grantor and his grantees for the continuance and maintenance of a drainage ditch existing at the time of the grant.—Hohenshell v. South Riverside Land etc. Co., 128 Cal. 627, 61 Pac. 371.

[g] The owner of a servient tenement held not limited in the number or character of the easements to which he may subject his land. Galletly v. Bockius (Cal. App.), 82 Pac. 1109.

Edwards, 121 Cal. 662, 54 Pac. 69.

§ 36. —— Alterations Resulting in Benefit to Servient Estate.

[a] Where alteration in mode and manner of using easement is so substantial as to result in the creation and substitution of a different servitude from that which previously existed, it is immaterial that the alteration will benefit the servient estate, and convenience the dominant estate.—Allen v. San Jose Land etc. Co., 92 Cal. 138, 28 Pac. 215.

§ 37. Obstruction.

[a] An obstruction of a private way is a nuisance, being an obstruction to the free use of the property (Code Civ. Proc., sec. 731), and it is no defense to an action to enjoin it and for damages, brought under the statute, that a defendant has no interest in the land over which the way is claimed.—Hardin v. 41. Evidence.

a] In an action to enjoin defendant from terfering with plaintiff's use of a private ad, plaintiff's evidence held consistent with eory that he based a claim of right to the e of the road on a gift from the owner of e land, and not to show merely permissive e.—Franz v. § 1. Nature of Remedy.

[a] Action of ejectment is merely possessory action, and is confined to cases where the claimant has a possessory title; that is, to say, a right of entry upon the lands. To support it four things are necessary, viz., title, lease, entry and ouster.—Payne v. Treadwell, 5 Cal. 310.

[b] In ejectment, the subject matter of the litigation is not the land itself, but the right of possession.—Porter v. Garrissino, 51 Cal. 559.

[c] A mortgagee who purchases the mortgaged premises at foreclosure sale is not precluded from bringing ejectment by the court's refusal to grant him a writ of assistance.—Dickey v. Gibson, 121 Cal. 276, 53 Pac. 704.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 12-15; 20 Cyc. 666; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1948-1953, §§ 1-6.

§ 2. Other Adequate Remedy at Bar.

[a] Right to writ of assistance does not bar right to maintain ejectment.—Trope v. Kerns, 83 Cal. 554, 23 Pac. 691.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 15; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1951, 1952, § 5.

§ 3. Property Which May be Subject to Action.

[a] A road or right of way is an incorporeal hereditament, and ejectment is maintainable only for corporeal hereditaments.—Wood v. Truckee Turnpike Co., 24 Cal. 474.

[b] Ejectment will not lie for an incorporeal hereditament.—Mahon v. San Rafael Turnpike Co., 49 Cal. 269; Coburn v. Ames, 52 Cal. 385, 28 Am. Rep. 634; Swift v. Goodrich, 70 Cal. 103, 11 Pac. 561; Southern Pac. Co. v. Burr, 86 Cal. 279, 24 Pac. 1032.

[c] Ejectment was brought by city for land claimed as street.—Eureka v. Armstrong, 83 Cal. 624, 22 Pac. 928, affirmed in 23 Pac. 1085.

[d] Ejectment may be maintained by a municipal corporation for possession of a street wrongfully possessed by an individual, whether the fee is owned by the corporation or the adjoining proprietor.—City of Eureka v. Gates, 120 Cal. 54, 52 Pac. 125.

[e] Where a street railway's use of a street under its franchise is interfered with by another railway company, ejectment is not the proper remedy.—Fresno St. R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 135 Cal. 202, 67 Pac. 773.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 15, 16; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 1954-1956, §§ 7-11.

§ 4. —— Watercourses.

[a] Ejectment will not lie to recover possession of a watercourse.—Swift v. Goodrich, 70 Cal. 106, 107, 11 Pac. 561.

§ 5. —— Land Under Water.

[a] The state may maintain ejectment for a wharf constructed without authority beyond low-water mark.—Coburn v. Ames, 52 Cal. 385, 28 Am. Rep. 634.

§ 6. Right of Plaintiff to Possession.

[a] Ejectment is a possessory action, and does not necessarily involve title. The party having the right to present possession is always entitled to recover.—(Cal. 1859) Curtis v. Herrick, 14 Cal. 117, 73 Am. Dec. 632.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 50; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2051-2054, §§ 63, 64.

§ 7. —— Necessity for Right.

[a] Plaintiff must have a right to the possession of the land at the time of the commencement of the action.—Owen v. Fowler, 24 Cal. 192; Owen v. Morton, 24 Cal. 373; Hawxhurst v. Lander, 28 Cal. 331.

[b] To entitle plaintiff to recover, he must not only have a right of entry at the time of the trial, but must have had it when the suit was brought. Such right obtained pendente lite is not sufficient.—Kile v. Tubbs, 32 Cal. 332.

[c] In ejectment plaintiff must have a right of entry when the action is commenced, as well as when it is tried.—(Cal. 1873) Meeks v. Kirby, 47 Cal. 168.

[d] Plaintiff must have right to possession at commencement of suit.—Sauer v. Meyer, 87 Cal. 36, 25 Pac. 153.

§ 8. Ouster of Plaintiff—Necessity.

[a] To enable the plaintiff in ejectment to recover on prior possession he must allege and prove an actual ouster.—Payne v. Treadwell, 5 Cal. 310; Watson v. Zimmerman, 6 Cal. 46.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

13 L. R. A. 664, note. See, also, 15 Cyc. 51-55; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2054-2066, §§ 65-73.

§ 9. —— Sufficiency of Ouster.

[a] Where plaintiff claimed possessory rights to a tract of land, after an entry with full notice of plaintiff's rights during a temporary removal of an inclosure of the land, made for the purpose of replacing it with a better one, the action cannot be defended on the ground that the land was uninclosed. Sweetland v. Hill, 9 Cal. 556.

[b] If the owner of land used and occupied by another as a toll road is excluded from the same unless he pays toll, and then is allowed to use it only for the purpose of passing over it, the exclusion is a disseisin. Mahon v. San Rafael Toll Road Co., 49 Cal. 270.

[c] Where plaintiff is in possession, and defendant erects a house on the land, and incloses it all but a few acres, on which plaintiff's house stands, and assumes and exercises control over it, there is a sufficient ouster to enable plaintiff to bring an action of ejectment on the ground of prior possession.—Gruell v. Spooner, 71 Cal. 493, 12 Pac. 511.

[d] Where tenant in common sued by cotenant to be admitted into possession denies latter's title and right of entry, this is equivalent to ouster as of date of commencement of suit.—Plass v. Plass, 121 Cal. 133, 53 Pac. 448.

§ 10. —— Time of Ouster.

[a] An allegation of the exact time of the alleged ouster is not material, especially where there is no claim for or recovery of damages.—Collier v. Corbett, 15 Cal. 183.

§ 11. Possession by Defendant.

[a] To sustain ejectment, it must appear that defendant was in possession of the premises when the action was commenced.—Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268; Owen v. Fowler, 24 Cal. 192; Owen v. Morton, 24 Cal. 373; Buhne v. Corbett, 43 Cal. 264; Shaeffer v. Matzen, 59 Cal. 652; Partridge v. Shepard, 12 Pac. 351.

[b] It is indispensable to recovery in ejectment that defendant was, at commencement of action, in possession of some part of land sued for.—Dillon v. Center, 68 Cal. 564, 10 Pac. 176.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 51-55; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2054-2066, §§ 65-73.

§ 12. —— Sufficiency of Possession.

[a] It is not necessary to show actual, as distinguished from constructive, possession in defendant.—Crane v. Ghirardelli, 45 Cal. 235.

§ 13. —— Nature of Entry and Possession.

[a] An entry by a stranger on the estate of a deceased tenant in common with the consent of the administrator is not tortious, and a cotenant is not entitled to a judgment in ejectment for possession of all the land, but only for his undivided interest.—Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346.

§ 14. —— Scope of Possession.

[a] The mere fact of entry on a portion of public land, and building a house and corral, and even cutting hay on a part, no claim being made under the possessory act or under the United States pre-emption laws, will not extend the possession beyond the premises actually occupied.—Garrison v. Sampson, 15 Cal. 93.

[b] Under the rule that, to warrant a recovery in ejectment, plaintiff must prove that at the commencement of the suit defendant was in possession of some portion of the land to which plaintiff establishes a title, if plaintiff relies on a confirmed Mexican grant as his source of title, he must prove defendant's possession of some part of the premises included within the decree of confirmation. To show that the grant has been confirmed as to some other portion of the lands embraced in it is not enough; for confirming a portion of a grant to a purchaser of such portion from the grantee does not have the effect of confirming to the grantee and purchasers from him the entire grant.—Brown v. Brackett, 45 Cal. 167.

[c] If two owners in severalty of adjoining tracts by mutual consent inclose them by a fence around the exterior boundaries of both, the inclosure constitutes possession by each of the tract claimed by him, as against a mere intruder who brings ejectment; and it is immaterial whether the land is public or private.—Reay v. Butler, 95 Cal. 206, 30 Pac. 208.

§ 15. —— Possession by Agent.

[a] In an action of ejectment, defendants in their sworn answer denied being or having been in possession of the lands claimed, though in another defense, separately pleaded, they set up that they were in charge, as employees of the United States, of a lighthouse on the premises. On the trial, plaintiff, relying on the answer to show possession, offered no evidence to show the possession of defendants. Held, that a nonsuit for failure to show possession in defendants was correct.—Buhne v. Corbett, 43 Cal. 264.

§ 16. Claims of Title or Acts of Ownership of Unoccupied Lands.

[a] Ejectment will only lie against a party out of possession, claiming title, when the premises are unoccupied, and with his claim he exercises acts of ownership, such as inclosure, cultivation, and the like.—Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 56; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2066-2068, §§ 74, 75.

§ 17. Demand or Notice to Quit—Necessity.

[a] Demand of rent upon or after last day which lessee has to pay is essential to complete forfeiture and enable landlord to maintain ejectment.—Sauer v. Myer, 87 Cal. 37, 25 Pac. 153.

[b] One acquiring title to real property, who is not in possession, is entitled to be let into possession on demand, and, until such demand, he cannot maintain an action to obtain possession against a person who is lawfully in possession.—McNally v. Connolly, 9 Pac. 169.

[c] A demand is not necessary before bringing suit to recover land, where defendants deny plaintiff's title and set up title in themselves.—Webb v. Winter, 65 Pac. 1028.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 56; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2068-2075, §§ 76-80.

§ 18. —— Wrongful Possession.

[a] Where vendee is out of possession for five years after default in his payments, then re-enters, no demand is necessary.—Connolly v. Hingley, 82 Cal. 643, 23 Pac. 273.

§ 19. —— Possession by Permission.

[a] No notice to quit, or any demand of possession, is necessary from an heir before bringing ejectment to recover possession of lands against person holding them without title, although he had permissive occupancy of premises during lifetime of decedent from whom they were inherited.—Joy v. McKay, 70 Cal. 445, 11 Pac. 763.

§ 19½. —— Waiver of Right to Demand or Notice.

[a] Where defendant denies plaintiff's title or right of possession, notice to quit is not necessary.—McCarthy v. Brown, 113 Cal. 15, 45 Pac. 14.

§ 20. Joinder of Causes.

[a] Distinct causes of action for separate pieces of land affecting all the parties, not requiring separate places of trial, may be joined.—Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 151.

[b] Under the code, plaintiff in ejectment cannot join a claim for damages done by defendant to other property than that sued for. Furlong v. Cooney, 72 Cal. 322, 14 Pac. 12.

[c] Two actions of ejectment between same parties, for different pieces of property, may be consolidated.—Smith v. Smith, 80 Cal. 324, 21 Pac. 4, 22 Pac. 186.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 60; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2154, § 125.

§ 22. —— Executors and Administrators.

[a] Patent issued to administrator vests legal title in him and enables him to recover premises in his own name in ejectment suit.—Burling v. Thompkins, 77 Cal. 262, 19 Pac. 429.

§ 23. —— Municipal Corporations.

[a] City may maintain ejectment for dedicated property.—Napa v. Howland, 87 Cal. 85-88, 25 Pac. 247.

[b] A municipal corporation can maintain ejectment for the recovery of possession of a street which has been dedicated to public use by the owner of the fee.—City and County of San Francisco v. Grote, 120 Cal. 59, 65 Am. St. Rep. 155, 52 Pac. 127.

§ 24. —— Mortgagors.

[a] Mortgagor cannot maintain ejectment against mortgagee until debt is paid.—Peshine v. Ord, 119 Cal. 314, 51 Pac. 536, 63 Pac. 131.

§ 25. —— Remaindermen.

[a] Code of Civil Procedure, section 1452, authorizing heirs to sue for the recovery of real estate, held inapplicable to a remainderman who has no present right of possession.—Pryor v. Winter, 147 Cal. 554, 82 Pac. 202.

§ 26. Persons Against Whom Actions may be Brought.

[a] Ejectment is a possessory action, and must be brought against the occupant; it determines no rights but those of possession at the time, and it matters not who has, or claims to have, the title of the premises.—Garner v. Marshall, 9 Cal. 268.

[b] Ejectment lies only against a party in possession.—Klink v. Cohen, 13 Cal. 623.

[c] The action of ejectment must be brought against the actual occupant of the premises, if there be one; but, if he be a tenant, his landlord may appear and defend in his name, or be substituted in his place.—Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609, 82 Am. Dec. 765.

—— WHAT CONSTITUTES EQUITABLE TITLE, § 52.
TITLE FROM COMMON SOURCE, § 53.
—— SUPERIORITY OF TITLE, § 54.

§ 27. Legal Title in General.

[a] Where party sues for lot in former pueblo of San Francisco, and deraigns title from city, he is prima facie entitled to recover.—Seale v. Mitchell, 5 Cal. 401.

[b] Pending proceedings to obtain a patent confirming a Mexican grant, plaintiff conveyed the premises, taking a mortgage, and subsequently commenced an action to foreclose, and before decree assigned the mortgage. Plaintiff obtained the patent, and at a sale of the premises under decree of foreclosure bid them off, and received a sheriff's deed therefor. Held, in ejectment, that the title was revested in plaintiff by said deed. Pioche v. Paul, 22 Cal. 105.

[c] Where the legal title held by plaintiff in ejectment is only opposed by a mere naked possession by defendant, plaintiff is entitled to the possession.—Shaeffer v. Matzen, 3 Pac. 95.

§ 28. Necessity for Title or Interest in Plaintiff.

[a] By the civil law a party cannot maintain a possessory action when he has no title, unless he has been evicted by force, fraud, violence, or artifice; but, if he has been thus evicted, he will be entitled to be restored to possession, without inquiring whether he has title. (Per Bennett, J.)—Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 254.

[b] To recover in ejectment, plaintiff must show legal title at the time of beginning the suit.—Payne v. Treadwell, 5 Cal. 310.

[c] Though plaintiff cannot recover except on proof of title in himself, yet where the parties claim under conflicting title, and the only question is which of the two is good, the one having the best title must recover.—Busenius v. Coffee, 14 Cal. 91.

[d] One contracting for the purchase of land received the possession, with a bond for a deed on payment of the purchase money, containing a stipulation that the purchaser was in possession and entitled to the rents and profits. Held, in ejectment by a subsequent purchaser from the vendor with notice against the vendee remaining in possession, that no recovery could be had, though the purchase money was unpaid, since plaintiff, to recover, must show both a legal and equitable title or right of possession.—Willis v. Wozencraft, 22 Cal. 607.

[e] A city cannot maintain ejectment for recovery of possession of a street dedicated to the public by user, without showing ownership in the fee.—City and County of San Francisco v. Grote, 47 Pac. 938, 36 L. R. A. 502.

§ 29. Sufficiency of Title in General.

[a] Plaintiff must recover, if at all, on the strength of his own title, and not because of the weakness or want of title in defendant.—Woodworth v. Fulton, 1 Cal. 295; Moore v. Tice, 22 Cal. 513; Cox v. Hayes, 7 Pac. 761.

[b] Plaintiff in ejectment, who owns an undivided interest in the demanded premises, to recover, if he holds an interest in common with others in the premises.—Mahoney v. Middleton, 41 Cal. 41.

[c] In an action of ejectment legal title will always prevail against equitable one if no equitable defense is pleaded.—Dorn v. Baker, 96 Cal. 206, 31 Pac. 37; Hartley v. Brown, 46 Cal. 201.

[d] Plaintiff must recover on strength of his own title and not on weakness of that of adversary.—Smith v. Smith, 80 Cal. 325, 21 Pac. 4, 22 Pac. 186.

[e] Plaintiff in ejectment must recover upon strength of his own title, and the presence or absence of title in defendants is not material.—Gage v. Downey, 94 Cal. 241, 29 Pac. 635.

[f] In an action of ejectment the plaintiff must rely upon the strength of his own title, no matter how weak the title of his opponent may be.—Reay v. Butler, 95 Cal. 206, 30 Pac. 208.

[g] The plaintiff in ejectment must recover upon the strength of his own title, and not upon the weakness of his adversary's title; and where the plaintiff shows no title, the defendant in possession is entitled to judgment, regardless of whether he has acquired a prescriptive title by adverse possession or not.—Sousa v. Pereira, 132 Cal. 77, 64 Pac. 9.

[h] In ejectment, defendants' motion for a nonsuit is properly denied where it appears that plaintiffs bought the property from the owner, taking a bond for deed, under which they held possession, claiming title for more than two years before being ousted by defendants.—Stephens v. Hambleton (Cal.), 47 Pac. 51.

§ 30. Easement or License.

[a] Ejectment does not lie for a right of way, or other easement.—(Cal. 1864) Wood v. Truckee Turnpike Co., 24 Cal. 474.

[b] A grant by the legislature, authorizing the grantee to build and erect a wharf, and conveying the right "to the use and occupancy of the adjoining land," with a promise that "it shall be used for none other than wharf purposes" for a specified time, confers such an interest in the land as entitles the grantee to recover the possession of a party who intrudes on it and deprives him of the possession.—Frisbie v. McClernin, 38 Cal. 568.

[c] There can be no possession of an easement such as can be made basis for ejectment.—Swift v. Goodrich, 70 Cal. 106, 11 Pac. 561.

[d] Ejectment will not lie for mere easement except when right of entry exists and interest is tangible, so that possession can be delivered.—Southern Pacific Co. v. Burr, 86 Cal. 286, 24 Pac. 1033.

§ 31. —— Fee Subject to Easement.

[a] Ejectment lies to recover the possession of land occupied as a toll road, when the action is brought to recover the land itself, and not the right of way over it.—Mahon v. San Rafael Turnpike Road Co., 49 Cal. 269.

[b] The owner of the fee of land subject to an easement of a public highway may maintain ejectment against an intruder who takes possession of it, and uses it for other than road purposes.—(Cal. 1877) Coburn v. Ames, 52 Cal. 385, 28 Am. Rep. 634.

[c] Owner of fee to soil of street or highway may maintain ejectment against mere intruder.—Weyl v. Sonoma V. R. R., 69 Cal. 206, 10 Pac. 510; Porter v. Pacific Coast Ry. Co., 18 Pac. 428.

[d] Ejectment cannot be maintained by an abutting owner against a railroad company operating its road on his half of a public street under permission from the city, he having no present right of possession, of which he has been deprived.—Montgomery v. Santa Ana etc. Ry. Co., 104 Cal. 186, 43 Am. St. Rep. 89, 37 Pac. 786, 25 L. R. A. 654.

§ 32. Title Acquired After Action Brought.

[a] A patent for land given to plaintiff after he has commenced suit in ejectment is not admissible in evidence to show his right to recover.—Hestres v. Brennan, 37 Cal. 385.

[b] In ejectment the admission in evidence of a patent of the United States issued to plaintiff after the commencement of the action, is erroneous.—Sacramento Sav. Bank v. Hynes, 50 Cal. 195.

§ 33. Adverse or Prior Possession.

[a] The prior possession of plaintiff, or parties through whom he claims, is sufficient evidence of title to support ejectment.—Hutchinson v. Perley, 4 Cal. 33, 60 Am. Dec. 578; Hicks v. Davis, 4 Cal. 67; Plume v. Seward, 4 Cal. 94, 60 Am. Dec. 599; Bird v. Lisbros, 9 Cal. 1, 70 Am. Dec. 617; Nagle v. Macy, 9 Cal. 426; Leonard v. Flynn, 89 Cal. 543, 26 Pac. 1099; Zilmer v. Gerichten, 111 Cal. 73, 43 Pac. 408.

[c] Possession is evidence of seisin in fee, and no further or higher evidence is required, to enable a plaintiff in ejectment to recover, until defendant has shown an anterior possession, or has traced title from a paramount source.—Keane v. Cannovan, 21 Cal. 291, 82 Am. Dec. 738.

[d] Plaintiff's grantor, holding under a state patent, was in the actual possession of land, and was ousted by defendant. In an action to recover the possession, the defense was, that the land at the time of the state location was within the limits of a pending Mexican claim, and the patent therefore void. The court found that defendant was a qualified pre-emptor, and had entitled himself to the rights of a pre-emption claimant, provided the land was subject to pre-emption at the time of his entry. Held, that plaintiffs, by virtue of their prior possession, were entitled to recover; that defendant was a mere intruder; and that it was unnecessary to inquire into the validity of plaintiff's title.—Fletcher v. Mower, 56 Cal. 421.

[e] Facts held to establish plaintiff's prior possession.—Foot v. Murphy, 72 Cal. 105, 13 Pac. 163.

[f] Where an action of ejectment, commenced within the statutory period of limitation, is prosecuted to a final judgment for the plaintiff, and the defendant is evicted under a writ of possession issued thereunder, the latter, although he has remained in possession during the pendency of the action, and five years have elapsed from the time at which he first took possession until his eviction, does not acquire a new or independent title by prescription, which either he or his grantee can afterward enforce, notwithstanding his eviction under the judgment in ejectment.—Breon v. Robrecht, 118 Cal. 469, 62 Am. St. Rep. 247, 50 Pac. 689, 51 Pac. 33.

§ 34. —— Necessity for Prior Possession.

[a] In this state a plaintiff, claiming as heir at law, can recover in an action of ejectment without an entry upon the premises after the death of his ancestor. It is sufficient that he show his title as heir to the premises demanded.—Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

[b] Where plaintiff has failed to establish a title, he cannot recover unless he shows a prior possession.—Polack v. McGrath, 32 Cal. 15; Page v. O'Brien, 36 Cal. 559; Wolfskill v. Malajowich, 39 Cal. 276; Stevens v. Quirk, 60 Cal. 161.

§ 35. —— Sufficiency of Possession in General.

[a] To constitute a possession sufficient to maintain ejectment, there must be an actual bona fide occupation, or possessio pedis, a subjection of it to the will and control of the possessor, as contradistinguished from the mere assertion of title, and the exercise of casual acts of ownership, such as recording deeds, paying taxes, etc.; and occupation of a portion of land marked by distinct boundaries will carry possession of the whole tract. It is not necessary that the property should be cultivated, nor is any particular kind of inclosure required. It is sufficient if it is subjected to his use in the manner indicated. Plume v. Seward, 4 Cal. 94, 60 Am. Dec. 599.

[b] Mere survey and marking lines of boundary, without inclosure of the premises, is not a possession in law, unless made so by complying with the statute in reference to the mode of maintaining possessory actions on public lands.—Bird v. Dennison, 7 Cal. 297.

[c] What acts done on land will constitute such a possession as will enable a party to maintain an action of ejectment against one afterward entering may depend on the intent on which such acts were done, to be gathered from the acts themselves and other surrounding circumstances.—Hunton v. Schumaker, 21 Cal. 453.

[d] The fact that a person incloses land by a substantial inclosure sufficient to protect growing crops constitutes such prior possession as is requisite for recovery in ejectment. Polack v. McGrath, 32 Cal. 15.

[e] Where it appears that plaintiff inclosed land on which defendant was residing, and defendant removed his residence from the inclosure but continued to pasture his cattle therein, and would not permit plaintiff to use it for pasturage, prior possession sufficient to enable plaintiff to maintain the action is not shown.—Page v. O'Brien, 36 Cal. 559.

[f] Evidence that the defendants in an action of ejectment, and their predecessors, received all the rents of the property, and paid all taxes assessed against it, for over twenty years, and paid all street improvement assessments charged thereon, and that the predecessor of the defendants entered under an administrator's deed of the land, and always claimed to be the owner of the property, and that his claim was open and notorious, and generally known to the community, warrants the court in finding an ouster of alleged cotenants, and that they had notice of his claims of exclusive ownership, and that his possession was adverse to them.—Alvarado v. Nordholt, 95 Cal. 116, 30 Pac. 211.

[g] While T. was in possession of land, plaintiff, claiming under a deed from one in whom he did not even suppose there was title, entered and began to build a shanty, but T., when he learned of it, tore it down, and drove him off. A few days afterward, plaintiff again attempted to build the shanty, and slept there without bedding, but T. again tore it down before completion, and drove him off. Nothing further was done by plaintiff for three years, when he brought ejectment against T. Held, that plaintiff had no such title or possession as entitled him to maintain the action.—Reay v. Butler, 95 Cal. 206, 30 Pac. 208.

§ 36. —— Sufficiency as Against Intruder.

[a] Where one in peaceable possession of land is ousted by a bare trespasser, who enters without claim of title, he may recover in ejectment on proof of prior possession, though such possession was not held for the time and in the manner required for a prescriptive title.—Hutchinson v. Perley, 4 Cal. 33, 60 Am. Dec. 578; Potter v. Knowles, 5 Cal. 88.

[b] Possession gives a right of action against a mere trespasser, even where title may be shown to exist in another.—Bequette v. Caulfield, 4 Cal. 278, 60 Am. Dec. 615.

[c] One who has built a fence of any kind around land, which, together with natural barriers, is sufficient to turn cattle, and has used it for pasturage, can maintain ejectment to recover it from a mere intruder, who enters without right or title.—Southmayd v. Henley, 45 Cal. 101.

[d] Where plaintiff's grantor, while in possession of the demanded premises, sold the same to plaintiff, who thereafter and up to the entry of defendant occupied the same as pastures for his cattle, and defendant shows no title or right of entry, plaintiff is entitled to recover.—Pierce v. Stuart, 45 Cal. 280.

[e] Code of Civil Procedure, section 325, providing that title by adverse possession cannot be established unless the party claiming it has occupied the land for five years, and paid all taxes thereon during that time, applies only to actions between the holder of the legal title and the party claiming adversely, and not to actions by an adverse claimant against a trespasser.—Shanahan v. Tomlinson, 103 Cal. 89, 36 Pac. 1009.

[f] Proof by plaintiff that his grantors held undisputed possession of the land in controversy for more than five years before they were dispossessed by defendant entitles him to recover against defendant in possession who offers no evidence in support of his right to the land, or the title of those under whom he claimed.—Goodwin v. Scheerer, 106 Cal. 690, 40 Pac. 18.

[g] Where, in ejectment, defendant is found to be a mere trespasser, plaintiffs are entitled to possession of the entire property, though they own only an undivided one-half. McGuire v. Lynch, 126 Cal. 576, 59 Pac. 27.

[h] Where plaintiff took possession of a river bed after a new channel had been cut by the river during a freshet, and cleared and cultivated such parts as were suitable therefor, pastured other parts not suitable for cultivation, on which grass grew, sold gravel from other parts, and timber and logs from parts on which they were lodged, rented the river bar for fishing purposes, and inclosed the whole tract by fences and natural barriers sufficient to turn stock, such acts of possession were sufficient to support a judgment for plaintiff as against another claiming only a possessory interest in the land.—Hanson v. Stinehoff, 139 Cal. 169, 72 Pac. 913.

[i] Where one claims possession of state lands, natural barriers may be sufficient in place of an inclosure by fences.—Smith v. Hicks, 139 Cal. 217, 73 Pac. 144.

[j] On an issue whether one has had possession of certain state lands, he may avail himself of a barrier which also incloses other lands in his possession, but owned by other third persons, in addition to, and in the same inclosure with, the lands in controversy.—Smith v. Hicks, 139 Cal. 217, 73 Pac. 144.

[k] In an action to recover land, title to which is in the state, plaintiff may maintain his case, on proof of prior peaceable possession under a claim of right, as against all but the true owner.—Smith v. Hicks, 139 Cal. 217, 73 Pac. 144.

[l] In an action to recover possession of lands belonging to the state, plaintiff, claiming to have been in possession of the same, may maintain his case by proof of actual occupation and use, to the exclusion of use and occupation of others, though there were no barriers sufficient of themselves to turn stock.—Smith v. Hicks, 139 Cal. 217, 73 Pac. 144.

§ 37. —— Title to Support Possession.

[a] Where a plaintiff in ejectment seeks to recover upon prior possession, and does not show a compliance with the statute concerning possessory actions in this state, he can only recover upon proof of actual bona fide occupation.—Murphy v. Wallingford, 6 Cal. 648.

[b] A mere entry without color of title, accompanied by survey and marking of boundaries, is not sufficient.—Murphy v. Wallingford, 6 Cal. 648.

[c] Though an action of ejectment may be based upon prior possession, in case of wrongful eviction therefrom, yet, where such action is based on title, and the plaintiff offers proof of title, and does not prove an actual possession at the time of the defendant's entry, he must fail if he does not show a valid title or right of possession.—Harris v. Kellogg, 117 Cal. 484, 49 Pac. 708.

§ 38. —— Constructive Possession Under Title.

[a] The act prescribing the mode of maintaining and defending possessory actions (Wood's Digest, p. 526) was intended for the benefit of actual settlers, and does not protect one who, for four months after location of his claim, does not reside on it, although he may have put improvements thereon.—Gird v. Ray, 17 Cal. 352.

[b] Where plaintiff's grantor had actual possession of public land, and inclosed it with a substantial fence, and by a valid deed conveyed it to plaintiff, the latter, though he himself never took actual possession of the land, but cultivated a portion of it through his employees, has constructive possession of the whole, and may maintain ejectment against an intruder on any part thereof.—Dodge v. Yates, 76 Cal. 251, 18 Pac. 323.

[c] A person may be in possession of land without a personal residence thereon, and without having personally cultivated it.—Dodge v. Yates, 76 Cal. 251, 18 Pac. 323.

§ 38½. —— Possession of Part of Entire Tract.

[a] Possession does not extend beyond occupation, without title or color of title under deed from grantor, having constructive possession.—Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 255.

[b] In an action to recover the possession of land leased by plaintiff to defendant, it is not error to refuse to charge that, if plaintiff had a title by prior possession without written title, he could recover only that portion which is included in the inclosure. A party's possession is not confined to his actual inclosure.—Castro v. Gill, 5 Cal. 40.

[c] Where a party takes possession of a tract of land, and incloses it with a fence consisting of posts seven feet apart, and one board, six inches wide, nailed on to the posts, and the same is not sufficient to turn cattle, and the land is not cultivated, such possession is not sufficient to sustain an action of ejectment as against a party in possession of a part of the tract under a deed to the whole.—Baldwin v. Simpson, 12 Cal. 560.

[d] One who enters into the actual possession of part of a tract of land under a deed describing the entire tract, and claims the whole, acquires possession of the entire tract, as against one afterward entering without color of title.—McKee v. Greene, 31 Cal. 418.

[e] Where one sues in ejectment to recover land on the ground of prior possession, and shows an actual possession by inclosure of a portion only of the premises, he is entitled to recover such portion.—Slaughter v. Fowler, 44 Cal. 195.

[f] B. took possession of the lot in controversy in 1858, and it continued in possession of his successive grantees until 1874, when it was sold to plaintiff's intestate under a probate order, to pay debts of a subsequently deceased grantee. In 1874 defendant fenced the north part of the lot, but recognized plaintiff's title to the remainder, and defendant's possession subsequent to that date was not such as would affect plaintiff's ownership. Held, that the title of plaintiff's intestate deraigned from B.'s adverse possession was unimpeachable.—Baum v. Roper, 132 Cal. 42, 64 Pac. 128.

§ 39. —— Superiority of Title by Possession.

[a] As between two parties who rely on possession solely, the presumption is in favor of the first possessor; and proof of possession by a claimant, however short, will entitle him to recover, unless the defendant can account for such possession, or show a prior possession or title in himself or a third person.—Potter v. Knowles, 5 Cal. 87.

[b] In ejectment, the general rule that the claimant must recover on the strength of his own title is so far modified that, when the owner of the true title neither objects nor consents to the possession of either party, the court regards the better right, as between the parties, to be vested in the first possessor and grantees claiming through him.—Hubbard v. Barry, 21 Cal. 321.

[c] Where the title rests in possession only, the party having the prior possession must prevail.—Ayres v. Bensley, 32 Cal. 620.

§ 40. —— Waiver of Right to Claim Possession.

[a] An occupant of public land who is ousted by a stranger will not be presumed to have abandoned his right to possession, where, after a contest for a year, he ceases to contend against a superior force maintaining an armed resistance.—Daubenbiss v. White, 31 Pac. 360.

§ 41. Interest in Public Lands.

[a] Where a person with intention to take up a tract of public land filed his affidavit of location, and ninety days thereafter hauled lumber on the ground for a house, which lumber was removed during the night, and the claimant driven off by a band of armed men on attempting to replace it the next day, he has no rights sufficient to maintain ejectment against those who drove him off.—Crowell v. Lanfranco, 42 Cal. 654.

[b] A person who is not a beneficiary under act of Congress July 1, 1870, by which the United States relinquished to the city of San Francisco, Point San Jose Military Reservation, in trust to grant and convey the same to the persons actually in possession or entitled to the possession thereof, cannot raise the question whether a grantee in a deed from the city was a beneficiary, and entitled as such to the conveyance; and the deed is conclusive evidence in the grantee's favor, against one having no claim to the title of the city.—Palmer v. Galvin, 72 Cal. 183, 13 Pac. 476.

[c] Where it appears that plaintiff has made a homestead entry on land according to law, he shows title to the whole tract as against the defendant, a mere trespasser in actual possession of all but a few acres, and is entitled to recover, under act of March 23, 1874, providing that every qualified homestead claimant residing on public lands, who shall have made his original entry in accordance with the United States laws, shall, from the date of such entry, be deemed to have title to and to be in possession of all the land described in such entry, as against trespassers, etc.—Whitaker v. Pendolia, 78 Cal. 296, 20 Pac. 680.

[d] Where the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment, claims under a valid patent of the United States, issued within six months prior to the commencement of the action, a plea of the statute of limitations cannot prevail. Irvine v. Tarbat, 105 Cal. 237, 38 Pac. 896.

[e] A plaintiff in ejectment must fail, where he claims under a swamp land patent from the state, which confers no title, where the field-notes of the government survey of the township and the corrected plat thereof show that there is not such tract of land as that described in the patent; and it is immaterial that such tract appears upon the original plat of the survey.—Harrington v. Boehmer, 134 Cal. 196, 66 Pac. 214, 489.

§ 42. —— Entry, Certificate, or Warrant.

[a] A certificate of location of school or lieu land issued under act of April 27, 1863, is not evidence of legal title.—True v. Thompson, 42 Cal. 293.

[b] When the answer denies the allegations of the complaint, the mere findings by the court that, on a day named, before the commencement of the action, plaintiff paid to the receiver of public lands at a local land office the amount due the United States government for the demanded premises, and took his receipt therefor, having theretofore made the necessary proofs before the land officers, are not sufficient to show any title or right of entry in plaintiff.—Lynch v. Brigham, 47 Cal. 137.

[c] A certificate of purchase from the state of state lands is not void, though the application and affidavit are defective and such certificate is sufficient to maintain ejectment. Cucamonga Fruit etc. Co. v. Moir, 83 Cal. 101, 22 Pac. 55, 23 Pac. 359.

§ 43. —— Validity of Grant or Patent.

[a] If, after the death of the grantee of an unconfirmed Mexican grant, his heirs petition for and obtain a confirmation of the title to them, and the patent issues to them, they become vested with the legal title; and, if the administrator of the grantee sells the land under an order of the probate court, the patentees will prevail in ejectment against the purchaser at such sale, if defendant does not set up and establish an equitable defense.—Hartley v. Brown, 51 Cal. 465.

§ 44. —— Priority or Superiority of Interest or Title.

[a] Under act of Congress, September 28, 1850, section 4, vesting the undisposed swamp lands in California in the state, without any patent, the state has the right to dispose of the same prior to the issuing of the patent from the United States, so as to convey to the patentee a vested title as against a trespasser.—Owens v. Jackson, 9 Cal. 322.

[b] In ejectment for mining lands, the fact that the claims of the plaintiffs were first located is not, of itself, sufficient to entitle them to recover. And where defendants were, and had been for a long time, in possession of the ground, and actually working the mines, they were held not to be required to show anything beyond this, until a prior right was shown to exist in plaintiffs.—Pennsylvania Min. Co. v. Owens, 15 Cal. 135.

[c] The survey of land in making and recording an affidavit, in accordance with the possessory act of 1852, does not invest the claimant with a right to recover the land from one who was already in actual possession.—Hawxhurst v. Lander, 28 Cal. 331.

[d] Where pueblo lands are confirmed to a town, and the decree excludes from the confirmation certain rentals granted by the Mexican government within the exterior of pueblo, the confirmee cannot maintain ejectment as against those claiming under the excepted grants until they have been finally confirmed and located by the approved survey; nor can the action be maintained while an appeal to the supreme court is pending from an order of the district court confirming the survey of the excepted portions.—City of San Jose v. Uridias, 37 Cal. 339.

[e] Under the act of Congress of 1866, ceding swamp lands to the state, and requiring certification by the general land office over to the state before the lands would vest in the latter, one who took title to such lands from the state after the designation and selection thereof by the state cannot maintain ejectment against one holding a patent for the same from the United States issued prior to certification.—Wright v. Roseberry, 63 Cal. 252.

[f] A plaintiff in ejectment cannot recover upon proof of a homestead claim entered in the land department of the United States, and of a receiver's receipt for the land in controversy, where it appears that, prior to the filing of the homestead claim, the title to the land had passed from the United States by grant to a railroad company, within its primary limits, upon approval of a final government survey, made long prior to such filing.—Sousa v. Pereira, 132 Cal. 77, 64 Pac. 90.

§ 45. —— Grant of Railroad Lands.

[a] Act of Congress of July 1, 1862, granting to the Central Pacific Railroad Company a right of way two hundred feet wide on each side of its road, was a conclusive legislative determination that so much land was necessary to the use of the road, and gave an exclusive right of possession to the full width, and the company can maintain ejectment therefor against one who occupied without title before the grant.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Burr, 86 Cal. 279, 24 Pac. 1032; Southern Pac. Co. v. Meyer, 24 Pac. 1033.

§ 46. Paper Title—Source of Title.

[a] A deed by the city authorities of land lying within the city limits, and held by the city as trustee for the parties in possession thereof, is conclusive in favor of the grantee in ejectment, against one who has no claim to the title of the city.—McCreery v. Sawyer, 52 Cal. 257.

§ 47. —— Quitclaim Deed.

[a] Ordinary quitclaim deed is sufficient to enable the grantee to maintain ejectment if the grantor could have done so.—Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291.

[b] A quitclaim deed is sufficient to enable the grantee to maintain an action of ejectment, if the grantor could have maintained such an action.—Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114.

[c] A quitclaim deed will support ejectment. Lawrence v. Ballou, 37 Cal. 518.

[d] A quitclaim deed executed even prior to act of February 22, 1854, making quitclaim deeds conveyances, will enable the grantee to maintain ejectment if his grantor could.—Rego v. Van Pelt, 65 Cal. 254, 3 Pac. 867.

§ 48. —— Decree or Judgment or Deed Thereunder.

[a] Where a plaintiff in ejectment claims title through an attachment, if it appears that the officer to whom it was directed failed to comply with the requirements of Code of Civil Procedure, section 542, the omissions on the part of the officer in the action.—Schwartz v. Cowell, 71 Cal. 306, 12 Pac. 253.

§ 49. —— Validity of Instrument or Title.

[a] Actual possession of a small portion of a large tract of land, with a claim of title to the whole, will not, under the law of Mexico, entitle the party to maintain a possessory action, when it appears on the face of the papers under which he claims that his title is void.—Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 254.

[b] A sale of land of the city of San Francisco by a portion of the board of commissioners of the funded debt does not pass a legal title upon which ejectment can be maintained.—Leonard v. Darlington, 6 Cal. 123.

[c] One who as agent has sold lands, received payment, and delivered a deed from which one lot is by mistake omitted, cannot, on discovery of the mistake, obtain a deed for that lot and eject the former vendee, who, without notice of the mistake, has gone into possession and made improvements.—Meeker v. Dalton, 75 Cal. 154, 16 Pac. 764.

§ 50. —— Priority or Superiority of Instruments.

[a] Where both parties rely on a paper title, the possession of defendant cannot be disturbed, unless plaintiff shows a better title. Irwin v. Towne, 42 Cal. 326.

[b] Since plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title, if both parties claim under a common grantor, a prior deed to plaintiff cannot be enlarged by a subsequent deed to defendant.—Cox v. Hayes, 7 Pac. 761.

§ 51. Equitable Title.

[a] Possession with an equitable title is as good as a legal title.—Morrison v. Wilson, 13 Cal. 494, 73 Am. Dec. 593.

[b] An equitable title is not available to plaintiff in ejectment.—(Cal. 1868) Felger v. Coward, 35 Cal. 650; (1874) Buhne v. Chism, 48 Cal. 467.

[c] Though owner of equitable title cannot maintain technical action of ejectment against owner of legal title, he may maintain action to establish his equitable right and be let into possession.—Murphy v. Crowley, 140 Cal. 149, 73 Pac. 820.

§ 52. —— What Constitutes Equitable Title.

[a] A partnership mortgaged property to A, and subsequently mortgaged the same property to plaintiff. One of the partners conveyed his interest, the deed stating the interest to be sold subject to the mortgages; and the grantee sold it to defendant, the deed containing the same recital. The first mortgage was foreclosed, and defendant became the purchaser; taking a sheriff's deed and possession. The second mortgage was foreclosed, and plaintiff became the purchaser, and brought ejectment against defendant on his sheriff's deed. Held, that he could not maintain the suit, as his remedy against defendant, because of the recitals, in the deeds, was in equity.—Brown v. Winter, 14 Cal. 31.

[b] A party who has a right of entry upon lands, and who has entered by force of fraud, cannot be turned out of possession by an action of ejectment.—Depuy v. Williams, 26 Cal. 309.

[c] Defendant agreed in writing to convey to plaintiff an undivided interest in a mining claim, on the fulfillment of certain conditions by plaintiff, which conditions were duly performed, but defendant refused to convey as stipulated. Held, that plaintiff's appropriate remedy was by action for specific performance, and, as incidental thereto, a delivery of possession.—Felger v. Coward, 35 Cal. 650.

[d] Whatever may be the exact nature of the interest which a partner takes under a deed of land to the firm, he takes a sufficient interest to enable him to maintain ejectment against a mere intruder.—Smith v. Smith, 80 Cal. 323, 21 Pac. 4, 22 Pac. 186, 549.

§ 53. Title from Common Source.

[a] Where both parties claim title under the same grantor, it is sufficient to prove a title derived from him without proving his title, as neither party can deny such title.—(Cal. 1857) Ellis v. Jeans, 7 Cal. 409; (1871) Irwin v. Towne, 42 Cal. 326; (1873) Whitman v. Steiger, 46 Cal. 256; (1875) Speet v. Gregg, 51 Cal. 198; (1884) Rego v. Van Pelt, 65 Cal. 254, 3 Pac. 867.

Ejectment where all the parties claim under a common source of title: 47 Am. St. Rep. 72, note. See, also, 15 Cyc. 47-50; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2042-2051, §§ 59-62.

§ 54. —— Superiority of Title.

[a] H. conveyed a certain tract of land to S., who conveyed to divers persons undivided interests therein. Other mesne conveyances of these interests were afterward made, and plaintiff in ejectment traced his title back through them to S. and H. Defendant claimed title under H. by a title subsequent to the conveyance to S., and unconnected with it or with any of the conveyances of undivided interests. Held, that plaintiff, having proved a valid deed of H. to S., and an unbroken series of valid conveyances of an undivided interest from S. down to himself, might recover the whole premises, without proving a valid title in any of the other undivided interests.—Touchard v. Crow, 20 Cal. 150, 81 Am. Dec. 108.

[b] A title derived under a lien elder in its origin is prima facie superior to a title from a common source purporting to be derived under a lien junior in point of time, though the judicial sale under the latter may have preceded that under the former.—Littlefield v. Nichols, 42 Cal. 372.

§ 55. In General.

[a] An entry while the fence is removed for the rebuilding of a better one, with full notice of plaintiff's claim, cannot be defended on the ground that the land was uninclosed.—Sweetland v. Hill, 9 Cal. 556.

[b] In ejectment by the grantee in a quitclaim deed of the premises in controversy against his grantor, who was not shown to be the owner of the lot, it was held that the grantor might defend by showing that, subsequently to the execution of his deed, he was put in charge of the premises as agent of the true owner, and that he continued in possession as such agent.—Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175, 87 Am. Dec. 111.

[c] It is no defense that plaintiff and defendant's grantors entered into a partnership to acquire lands and make improvements thereon, and that he had purchased the interest of his grantors, and no settlement of the partnership affairs had been made, especially where it appears that plaintiff filed on the land in his own name, and paid for it with his own funds; that it was the understanding of the partners that each should secure and own his own land; and that the improvements made by each claimant were not to be considered a part of the partnership property.—Burgess v. Rice, 74 Cal. 590, 16 Pac. 496.

[d] Act of Congress of July 1, 1862, granting to the Central Pacific Railroad Company a right of way two hundred feet wide on each side of its road, gave a conclusive right of possession to the full width. Held, in ejectment by the company against one who occupied without title before the grant, that the fact that the company offered to lease to such person for a nominal rent the land occupied by him does not affect its right of recovery.—Southern Pac. Co. v. Burr, 86 Cal. 279, 24 Pac. 1032; Southern Pac. Co. v. Meyer, 24 Pac. 1033.

[e] In an action of ejectment by the grantee of land against the grantor, where the grantor sets up as a defense that the deed was intended as a mortgage, it is not necessary that he pay or offer to pay the amount of the alleged mortgage debt, which he admits to be due, in order to avail himself of such defense. Locke v. Moulton, 96 Cal. 21, 30 Pac. 957.

[f] Defendant claiming the right to retain possession as against the owner of land must establish such right as matter of affirmative defense.—F. A. Hihn Co. v. Fleckner, 106 Cal. 95, 39 Pac. 214.

[g] A verbal understanding that a hired man who took charge of his employer's ranch was to remain in possession of the property, and to have a lien thereon until he was paid, is no defense to the owner's action for recovery of possession.—Todhunter v. Armstrong, 53 Pac. 446.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 61-79; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2076-2145, §§ 81-116.

§ 56. Sufficiency of Title in General.

[a] The Van Ness ordinance of the city of San Francisco, whereby the state relinquished and granted all its right, title, and claim to the lands, with certain exceptions, to the parties in the actual possession thereof on or before January 1, 1855, provided such possession was continued up to the introduction of the ordinance in the common council, or, if interrupted by an intruder or trespasser; had been, or might be, recovered by legal process, cannot be invoked by a defendant in ejectment, in possession on January 1, 1855, when the question at issue is whether he acquired such possession by an intrusion on the prior rights of plaintiff.—Keane v. Cannovan, 21 Cal. 291.

[b] The purchase of land at a sale on execution is no defense to an action of ejectment for the same, if the time for redemption has not expired.—McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238.

[c] A part of a tract of land was conveyed to a corporation, and afterward the grantor conveyed the entire tract to O., from whom, by mesne conveyances, plaintiff derived title. Defendants claimed that O, took the deed for their benefit; but it appeared that one of defendants, who was a grantee from O., and a director and superintendent of the corporation, had conspired with the other defendants to defeat the title of the corporation by this deed to O. Held, that the equitable claim of defendants, being founded on fraud, could not stop the flow to plaintiff of the legal title to that part of the land which had not been conveyed to the corporation.—Pekin Min. etc. Co. v. Kennedy, 81 Cal. 356, 22 Pac. 679.

[d] Outstanding title barred by statute is not such present, live and effective title as will defeat plaintiff's case.—Allen v. McKay & Co., 120 Cal. 339, 52 Pac. 828.

§ 57. Title Acquired Since Action Brought.

[a] Plaintiff cannot object to defendant's introducing deeds in evidence, on the ground that they were dated after the commencement of the action.—Moore v. Tice, 22 Cal. 513.

[b] A defendant in ejectment may show a title acquired after the commencement of the suit.—Tustin v. Faught, 23 Cal. 237.

[c] Defendant cannot, on the trial avail himself of a title acquired pendente life, unless it is set up by a supplemental answer.—Thompson v. McKay, 41 Cal. 221.

[d] A deed to defendant, executed subsequent to the commencement of the action, is admissible in evidence if a supplemental answer is filed, setting up the title acquired through the deed.—Roper v. McFadden, 48 Cal. 346.

§ 58. Former Adjudication.

[a] In an ordinary complaint in ejectment, a plea of former adjudication can have no place, the estoppel being available to plaintiff only to defeat a claim which defendant might or might not prefer.—Clink v. Thurston, 47 Cal. 21.

§ 59. Superiority of Title or Right of Possession.

[a] Defendant, claiming under an invalid executor's deed, may plead the executor's title, where plaintiff's right of action is based on mere prior possession.—Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 591.

[b] Right to possession under valid homestead entry by one who paid sums required is sufficient to defeat ejectment based upon mere prior possession.—Goodwin v. McCabe, 75 Cal. 587, 588, 17 Pac. 705.

§ 60. Want of Seisin in Plaintiff's Grantor.

[a] Where the plaintiff relies solely on the possession of his grantor, having no other title, the defendant will be allowed to show that the grantor of the plaintiff, prior to conveying to plaintiff, had abandoned the land.—Bird v. Lisbros, 9 Cal. 1, 70 Am. Dec. 617.

§ 61. Want of Ouster or Possession by Defendant.

[a] An answer by one of several defendants in ejectment, disclaiming all right, title, and interest in the premises, but containing a general denial of plaintiff's allegations, and averring that "he was and still is awfully seised and in possession" of the premises, is no defense to a demand for judgment for the possession and damages for the detention of the land. Being in possession, he is a necessary party to the action, and properly made a defendant with the others.—Pioche v. Paul, 22 Cal. 105.

[b] The possession of the premises at the time the action was brought being put in issue, the fact that defendant was seen in possession by plaintiff's agent, and claimed to be in possession, does not estop him from saying that he was not in possession when the action was commenced, notwithstanding plaintiff brought the action acting on information that his agent had obtained by sight and word of mouth from defendant.—Pope v. Dalton, 31 Cal. 218.

§ 62. Several Defenses.

[a] Defendant in ejectment cannot set up in the same case inconsistent lines of defense, such as that he is in by deed absolute, by a contract for a conveyance, and by license requiring a notice to quit.—Blum v. Robertson, 24 Cal. 127.

§ 63. Adverse or Prior Possession.

[a] Where plaintiff in ejectment shows title, and defendant relies on adverse possession and only shows an adverse possession of a part of the demanded premises, a judgment in favor of the latter for all the demanded premises is erroneous.—Hayes v. Martin, 45 Cal. 559.

[b] In ejectment, where defendant proves that for a series of years plaintiff did not assert his title to the land in possession of another, plaintiff cannot introduce evidence that he consulted with a person about recovering possession, if such consultation was not communicated to the person in possession. Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2091-2096, §§ 94-98.

§ 64. —— Necessity for Title to Support.

[a] Where a party can show nothing but prior possession, that reliance may fail if it be shown that he voluntarily abandoned his possession without the purpose of returning. Bequette v. Caulfield, 4 Cal. 278, 60 Am. Dec. 615.

§ 65. —— Sufficiency of Title to Support.

[a] Where defendants claimed under the statute of limitations, held, that there was no error of which plaintiffs could complain to instruct the jury, in effect, that plaintiffs were entitled to prevail on the strength of their paper title, unless defendants went into possession under a tax deed claiming title, and maintained such possession under claim of title openly, notoriously, and visibly, as against the whole world, for a sufficient length of time prior to the date when the act of 1878, amendatory of Code of Civil Procedure, section 325, took effect, to render the bar of the statute of limitations effectual.—Reynolds v. Lincoln, 73 Cal. 191, 14 Pac. 674.

§ 65½. —— Time of Possession.

[a] If a grantor subsequent to the conveyance holds continuous adverse possession of the premises for five years, he can set up the statute of limitations in defense to an action of ejectment by his grantee.—Franklin v. Dorland, 28 Cal. 175, 87 Am. Dec. 111.

[b] One who is brought in on motion of plaintiff, as an additional defendant, after the suit has been pending a long time, may claim the benefit of the statue of limitations up to the day he is made a party.—Lawrence v. Ballou, 50 Cal. 258.

[c] After foreclosure sale, but before execution of sheriff's deed, the mortgagor's interest in the land was attached. Judgment was not rendered till nine years later, and the land was sold a year after that. Four months after attachment, the judgment debtor, being still in possession, deeded the land to defendant, who thereupon took and kept possession, and paid taxes regularly thereafter. Held, that defendant could plead adverse possession running from the time he took possession, against plaintiff claiming under the sale in the attachment suit. This defense was not in effect a plea of outstanding title under the foreclosure sale, within the rule that in ejectment for lands purchased on execution against a debtor in possession when the lien attached defendant and his vendees cannot show that he had no title, or that the true title is outstanding.—Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675, 34 Pac. 120.

§ 66. Right to Show Outstanding Title.

[a] In ejectment, evidence is inadmissible to show that the fee of the land is in the government of the United States, or that the title is in a third party, as well as any attempt to impeach the deed from plaintiff's grantor.—Winans v. Christy, 4 Cal. 70, 60 Am. Dec. 597.

[b] In ejectment by a purchaser at a sheriff's sale against the judgment debtor in possession, the latter cannot show an outstanding title in another, to defeat the action.—(Cal. 1854) Redman v. Bellamy, 4 Cal. 247.

[c] Title in a third person is a good defense, though defendant does not connect himself with it.—(Cal. 1857) Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165; (1863) Simson v. Eckstein, 22 Cal. 580; (1871) Cranmer v. Porter, 41 Cal. 463.

[d] In action of ejectment, where the plaintiff claimed by virtue of his prior possession, the defendant will not be allowed to show that a third party had an older and better claim to the land than that of plaintiffs.—Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22, 70 Am. Dec. 692.

[e] A defendant in ejectment, entering under a deed executed by order of a court of competent jurisdiction, enters under color of title. He is not a naked trespasser, and may set up an outstanding title in a third person. Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 591.

[f] The execution cannot defeat the recovery of possession by the purchaser at the execution sale by setting up a title in some third person.—McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393, 83 Am. Dec. 123.

[g] That the plaintiff shows possession in himself, or a right of possession as between him and defendant at the time of defendant's entry, the latter will not be permitted to defend by showing title in a stranger.—Carleton v. Townsend, 28 Cal. 219.

[h] A mere intruder on real property, having no privity with the former owner, cannot set up, in defense to ejectment by such owner's grantee, any right which such owner may still have to the property under the statute of frauds.—Ryan v. Tomlinson, 39 Cal. 639.

[i] One who is in possession as a mere trespasser or intruder cannot protect himself by setting up an outstanding title in a stranger. (Cal. 1872) Southmayd v. Hurley, 45 Cal. 101.

[j] Defendant in ejectment may show a title outstanding in third parties, although he does not connect himself with such title, where plaintiff does not appear to have been on the land for thirty years, and has no claim of title except through his father who then died, and who does not appear to have been in possession of any particular parcel of the land.—Trenouth v. Gordon, 63 Cal. 379.

[k] It is no defense to an action by a settler on public land under the possessory act of 1852 that the title to the land is in the United States; the rule being that, the owner of the true title not objecting or consenting to the possession of either of the parties, the court regards the better right, as between the parties, to be vested in the first possessor.—Gray v. Dixon, 74 Cal. 508, 16 Pac. 305.

[l] Where the plaintiff in ejectment claimed title under a probate sale of the real property of an intermediate grantor, the fact that at the time of the sale there was an outstanding trust deed, made by the decedent to secure the payment of a debt, cannot be availed of by the defendant as an outstanding title, as against the plaintiff, where it appears that the property was reconveyed during the same year, which was eighteen years before the commencement of the action.—Baum v. Roper, 132 Cal. 42, 64 Pac. 128.

§ 67. —— What Constitutes Outstanding Title.

[a] A person under whom defendant claimed had been let into possession under a judgment in ejectment by him against a person who afterward conveyed to plaintiff. The judgment was afterward reversed. Held, that the possession of the person under whom defendant claimed was sufficient, until taken from him by due course of law, to break the force of the claim derived from the mere fact of plaintiff's grantor's prior possession; and hence defendant might set up the outstanding title in the person under whom he claimed, as against the present plaintiff.—Gregory v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 591.

[b] An outstanding title which will defeat an action of ejectment must be one that is subsisting and superior at the commencement of the action and at the trial.—(Cal. 1893) Robinson v. Thornton, 31 Pac. 936.

§ 68. —— Conveyance or Encumbrance.

[a] The transfer by plaintiff in ejectment of his title to the demanded premises during the pendency of the action does not affect his right to recover, which will inure to his grantee.—(Cal. 1867) Barstow v. Newman, 34 Cal. 90; (1873) Clink v. Thurston, 47 Cal. 21.

§ 69. —— Equitable Title in Third Person.

[a] Pending proceedings to obtain a patent confirming a Mexican grant, plaintiff in ejectment conveyed the premises, taking a mortgage, and subsequently commenced an action to foreclose, and before decree assigned the mortgage. Plaintiff obtained the patent, and at a sale of the premises, under decree of foreclosure, bid them off, and received a sheriff's deed therefor. Held, in ejectment, that the equitable rights of the assignee afforded defendants no ground for impeaching the deed.—Pioche v. Paul, 22 Cal. 105.

§ 70. Equitable Defenses.

[a] Under code or statutory provisions eliminating the distinction between legal and equitable forms of action, equitable defenses are available in actions to recover land to defeat a legal title.—Morrison v. Wilson, 13 Cal. 494, 73 Am. Dec. 593; Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547, 6 Am. Rep. 624; Arguello v. Bours, 67 Cal. 447, 8 Pac. 49; Meeker v. Dalton, 75 Cal. 154, 16 Pac. 764; Smith v. Smith, 80 Cal. 323, 21 Pac. 4, 22 Pac. 186, 549; Pekin Min etc. Co. v. Kennedy, 81 Cal. 356, 22 Pac. 679; Connolly v. Hingley, 82 Cal. 642, 23 Pac. 273; Hyde v. Mangan, 88 Cal. 319, 26 Pac. 180.

[b] Perfect equity united with possession is, under our system, equivalent for all purposes of defense to a legal title.—Morrison v. Wilson, 13 Cal. 494, 73 Am. Dec. 593.

[c] A mere equitable title to land, if it is of such a character as entitles the holder to the possession in equity, is a sufficient defense, under the system of state practice, to an action for the possession brought even by the holder of the legal title.—Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal. 248; Meador v. Parsons, 19 Cal. 294; Lestrade v. Barth, 19 Cal. 660; Willis v. Wozencraft, 22 Cal. 607; Cadiz v. Majors, 33 Cal. 288; McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355.

[d] Person in possession under a perfect equity may defend ejectment, though right to affirmative relief may be lost for any reason. Arguello v. Bours, 67 Cal. 451, 8 Pac. 49.

[e] Loss of right to affirmative relief from lapse of time or otherwise will not preclude owner of a perfect equity in possession from defending ejectment.—Arguello v. Bours, 67 Cal. 451, 8 Pac. 49.

[f] Vendee in possession under contract for sale may be ejected without offering to return money paid by him.—Oakland Paving Co. v. Tompkins, 72 Cal. 2, 12 Pac. 801.

[g] Equitable title may be set up as defense in ejectment suit if coupled with possession or right to possession.—Meeker v. Dalton, 75 Cal. 158, 16 Pac. 764.

[h] When the plaintiff in an action of ejectment is the owner of the legal title to the property, and the defendants rely upon an equitable defense, they must, in order to prevent a recovery, make out a complete equitable title and the right of possession thereunder.—Wallace v. Maples, 79 Cal. 433, 21 Pac. 860.

[i] Equitable title, such as entitles holder to possession in equity, is good defense to ejectment by holder of legal title.—Hyde v. Mangan, 88 Cal. 325, 26 Pac. 180.

[j] Defendant took possession of lands purchased from plaintiff, to be paid for in three payments. Two payments having been made, the period for the third payment was extended under an agreement that plaintiff was to be relieved from his obligations and defendant should forfeit all payments within sixty days after its maturity. Defendant refused to make the last payment because plaintiff's title was not good. Defendant had made valuable improvement upon the land. He refused to either pay or surrender possession. Held, that plaintiff could recover in ejectment, and whatever cause of action defendant had to recover the purchase money and the value of the improvements was no defense.—Haile v. Smith, 128 Cal. 415, 60 Pac. 1032.

[k] The legal title will prevail in an action of ejectment unless an equitable defense is pleaded and proved. The defendants cannot base any equitable defense under a contract of purchase which they have failed and refused to perform when a deed was tendered to them, and which they do not offer to perform.—Howard v. Hewitt, 139 Cal. 614, 73 Pac. 414.

[b] An equitable defense available against owner of legal title held available in ejectment brought by person having title quieted against such holder.—King v. Dugan (Cal. Sup.), 88 Pac. 925.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 71-77; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2115-2141, §§ 107-113.

§ 71. —— What Constitutes Equitable Defense in General.

[a] Defendant in ejectment holding pueblo lands in the city of San Francisco, merely by possession, may set up the invalidity of sales on execution against the city or plaintiff's title derived therefrom to defeat plaintiff's action.—Hart v. Burnett, 15 Cal. 530.

[b] Real estate belonging to a partnership can be treated as partnership stock only in equity proceedings, and therefore it is no defense in ejectment by the holder of the legal title that defendant has an equitable estate in the premises as a partner.—Lowe v. Alexander, 15 Cal. 296.

[c] Agreement to pay for improvements no defense to ejectment. Remedy is by action upon agreement.—Norris v. Hoyt, 18 Cal. 217.

Digitized by Google

[d] An equitable defense set up in an action of ejectment must meet the present claim of plaintiff to the possession, and the equity presented must be of such a character that it may be ripened by the decree of the court into a legal right to the premises or such as will estop plaintiff from the prosecution of the action.—Lestrade v. Barth, 19 Cal. 660.

[e] Defendant in ejectment, relying solely on possession, may set up in defense the invalidity of a title to San Francisco city lands in the pueblo of Yerba Buena, acquired under a sale on an execution against the city.—Fulton v. Hanlow, 20 Cal. 450.

[f] Plaintiff in ejectment claimed under a state patent issued on a school warrant location. Defendant in possession admitting the lands to be public, and property of the United States, deraigned no title from this source. Held, that he could not contest the validity of the location, nor the efficacy of the patent.—Rhodes v. Craig, 21 Cal. 419.

[g] In ejectment the legal title must control. The plaintiff, establishing in himself the legal title, cannot be defeated by showing that such title was acquired by fraud or is held by him in trust. These are considerations for a court of equity, which will control the legal title in his hands so as to protect the just rights of others.—Clark v. Lockwood, 21 Cal. 220.

[h] Where defendant relies on an equitable title, the equity presented must be such that it may be ripened by the decree into a legal title, or such as would estop plaintiff from prosecuting the action in ejectment.—Blum v. Robertson, 24 Cal. 128.

[i] A person who had purchased and was in possession of a portion of "Suscol Rancho" prior to the rejection of the Vallejo claim to the same, and who refused to join with the co-terminous purchasers in an application for a patent under the Suscol right, and made no effort to avail himself of the privilege granted by that act, cannot, in ejectment against him by such co-terminous purchasers, convert them into trustees holding the legal title for his benefit.—Sheehy v. True, 45 Cal. 236.

[j] Defendant in ejectment, who is a stranger to the title, cannot object, where plaintiff derives his title from a municipal corporation, that plaintiff has not proved otherwise than by recitals in his deed, that he was one of the parties to whom the corporation was permitted by law to sell; nor where the corporation is authorized to sell its realty to certain persons or their assigns, and conveys to an assignee, who is plaintiff, will he, on the trial, be allowed to question the fact that plaintiff was such assignee.—Low v. Lewis, 46 Cal. 549.

[k] Lands granted to the city of San Francisco by Act of Congress, March 8, 1866, had been awarded to T. as successor of defendant R. having ejected plaintiff, this action was brought for possession, and defendant claimed that said deed was void, because neither plaintiff nor his predecessors had complied with certain requirements of said act. Held, that the defense was inadmissible, since the decree directing the city to convey to plaintiff necessarily adjudicated that all the requirements of the act had been fully complied with by plaintiff or his predecessors.—Forbes v. Reilly, 57 Cal. 302.

[l] In ejectment, an answer alleging that a mistake was made in drawing a deed from plaintiff to defendant, whereby the land sued for was excepted from its operation, is a defense.—Walker v. Brem, 67 Cal. 599, 8 Pac. 320.

[m] Where land intended to be conveyed is omitted from deed by mistake, grantee may set up facts as defense without praying for reformation.—Meeker v. Dalton, 75 Cal. 158, 16 Pac. 764.

[n] An agreement by plaintiff, in an action to recover land, to convey part of it to his attorneys when recovered in compensation for services is not a defense to the action, whether the agreement is void or not.—Gage v. Downey, 79 Cal. 140, 21 Pac. 527, 855.

[o] Plaintiff and his assignor, who were the owners of certain premises, contracted to convey the same to H., who executed a mortgage thereon to plaintiff for the price, and then conveyed the property to defendant. Before an action to recover the property, plaintiff tendered a deed to defendant, and on the trial waived all claim for damages, and offered to convey on payment of the purchase money, without interest, which was refused. Held, that plaintiff's contract to convey, which defendant had failed to perform and did not offer to perform, did not constitute an equitable defense to the action.—Howard v. Hewitt, 139 Cal. 614, 73 Pac. 414.

§ 72. —— Liens.

[a] A verbal contract partly performed, as where the party has entered into possession and in good faith made valuable improvements, may be set up, under our practice, as a defense to ejectment by the vendor.—Arguello v. Edinger, 10 Cal. 150.

[b] Defendant had a lease of certain premises with a right of purchase, and entered into possession. Afterward the owner directed his agent by letter to reform the lease, and to give defendant a bond on certain specified terms, which was done. Still later, on payment of a balance, the attorney of the owner made a deed to defendant. Afterward the owner conveyed to plaintiffs with notice of defendant's rights. Held, that defendant had a sufficient equitable title on which to defend in ejectment.—De Rutte v. Muldrow, 16 Cal. 505.

[c] A vendee in possession under an executory contract, the conditions of which have been performed on his part, may avail himself of his equitable title as a defense to an

[a] In this state a plaintiff, claiming as heir at law, can recover in an action of ejectment without an entry upon the premises after the death of his ancestor. It is sufficient that he show his title as heir to the premises demanded.—Soto v. Kroder, 19 Cal. 87.

[b] Where plaintiff has failed to establish a title, he cannot recover unless he shows a prior possession.—Polack v. McGrath, 32 Cal. 15; Page v. O'Brien, 36 Cal. 559; Wolfskill v. Malajowich, 39 Cal. 276; Stevens v. Quirk, 60 Cal. 161.

§ 35. —— Sufficiency of Possession in General.

[a] To constitute a possession sufficient to maintain ejectment, there must be an actual bona fide occupation, or possessio pedis, a subjection of it to the will and control of the possessor, as contradistinguished from the mere assertion of title, and the exercise of casual acts of ownership, such as recording deeds, paying taxes, etc.; and occupation of a portion of land marked by distinct boundaries will carry possession of the whole tract. It is not necessary that the property should be cultivated, nor is any particular kind of inclosure required. It is sufficient if it is subjected to his use in the manner indicated. Plume v. Seward, 4 Cal. 94, 60 Am. Dec. 599.

[b] Mere survey and marking lines of boundary, without inclosure of the premises, is not a possession in law, unless made so by complying with the statute in reference to the mode of maintaining possessory actions on public lands.—Bird v. Dennison, 7 Cal. 297.

[c] What acts done on land will constitute such a possession as will enable a party to maintain an action of ejectment against one afterward entering may depend on the intent on which such acts were done, to be gathered from the acts themselves and other surrounding circumstances.—Hunton v. Schumaker, 21 Cal. 453.

[d] The fact that a person incloses land by a substantial inclosure sufficient to protect growing crops constitutes such prior possession as is requisite for recovery in ejectment. Polack v. McGrath, 32 Cal. 15.

[f] Evidence that the defendants in an action of ejectment, and their predecessors, received all the rents of the property, and paid all taxes assessed against it, for over twenty years, and paid all street improvement assessments charged thereon, and that the predecessor of the defendants entered under an administrator's deed of the land, and always claimed to be the owner of the property, and that his claim was open and notorious, and generally known to the community, warrants the court in finding an ouster of alleged cotenants, and that they had notice of his claims of exclusive ownership, and that his possession was adverse to them.—Alvarado v. Nordholt, 95 Cal. 116, 30 Pac. 211.

[g] While T. was in possession of land, plaintiff, claiming under a deed from one in whom he did not even suppose there was title, entered and began to build a shanty, but T., when he learned of it, tore it down, and drove him off. A few days afterward, plaintiff again attempted to build the shanty, and slept there without bedding, but T. again tore it down before completion, and drove him off. Nothing further was done by plaintiff for three years, when he brought ejectment against T. Held, that plaintiff had no such title or possession as entitled him to maintain the action.—Reay v. Butler, 95 Cal. 206, 30 Pac. 208.

§ 36. —— Sufficiency as Against Intruder.

[a] Where one in peaceable possession of land is ousted by a bare trespasser, who enters without claim of title, he may recover in ejectment on proof of prior possession, though such possession was not held for the time and in the manner required for a prescriptive title.—Hutchinson v. Perley, 4 Cal. 33, 60 Am. Dec. 578; Potter v. Knowles, 5 Cal. 88.

[b] Possession gives a right of action against a mere trespasser, even where title may be shown to exist in another.—Bequette v. Caulfield, 4 Cal. 278, 60 Am. Dec. 615.

[c] One who has built a fence of any kind around land, which, together with natural barriers, is sufficient to turn cattle, and has used it for pasturage, can maintain ejectment to recover it from a mere intruder, who enters without right or title.—Southmayd v. Henley, 45 Cal. 101.

[d] Where plaintiff's grantor, while in possession of the demanded premises, sold the same to plaintiff, who thereafter and up to the entry of defendant occupied the same as pastures for his cattle, and defendant shows no title or right of entry, plaintiff is entitled to recover.—Pierce v. Stuart, 45 Cal. 280.

[e] Code of Civil Procedure, section 325, providing that title by adverse possession cannot be established unless the party claiming it has occupied the land for five years, and paid all taxes thereon during that time, applies only to actions between the holder of the legal title and the party claiming adversely, and not to actions by an adverse claimant against a trespasser.—Shanahan v. Tomlinson, 103 Cal. 89, 36 Pac. 1009.

[f] Proof by plaintiff that his grantors held undisputed possession of the land in controversy for more than five years before they were dispossessed by defendant entitles him to recover against defendant in possession who offers no evidence in support of his right to the land, or the title of those under whom he claimed.—Goodwin v. Scheerer, 106 Cal. 690, 40 Pac. 18.

[g] Where, in ejectment, defendant is found to be a mere trespasser, plaintiffs are entitled to possession of the entire property, though they own only an undivided one-half. McGuire v. Lynch, 126 Cal. 576, 59 Pac. 27.

[h] Where plaintiff took possession of a river bed after a new channel had been cut by the river during a freshet, and cleared and cultivated such parts as were suitable therefor, pastured other parts not suitable for cultivation, on which grass grew, sold gravel from other parts, and timber and logs from parts on which they were lodged, rented the river bar for fishing purposes, and inclosed the whole tract by fences and natural barriers sufficient to turn stock, such acts of possession were sufficient to support a judgment for plaintiff as against another claiming only a possessory interest in the land.—Hanson v. Stinehoff, 139 Cal. 169, 72 Pac. 913.

[i] Where one claims possession of state lands, natural barriers may be sufficient in place of an inclosure by fences.—Smith v. Hicks, 139 Cal. 217, 73 Pac. 144.

[j] On an issue whether one has had possession of certain state lands, he may avail himself of a barrier which also incloses other lands in his possession, but owned by other third persons, in addition to, and in the same inclosure with, the lands in controversy.—Smith v. Hicks, 139 Cal. 217, 73 Pac. 144.

[k] In an action to recover land, title to which is in the state, plaintiff may maintain his case, on proof of prior peaceable possession under a claim of right, as against all but the true owner.—Smith v. Hicks, 139 Cal. 217, 73 Pac. 144.

[l] In an action to recover possession of lands belonging to the state, plaintiff, claiming to have been in possession of the same, may maintain his case by proof of actual occupation and use, to the exclusion of use and occupation of others, though there were no barriers sufficient of themselves to turn stock.—Smith v. Hicks, 139 Cal. 217, 73 Pac. 144.

§ 37. —— Title to Support Possession.

[a] Where a plaintiff in ejectment seeks to recover upon prior possession, and does not show a compliance with the statute concerning possessory actions in this state, he can only recover upon proof of actual bona fide occupation.—Murphy v. Wallingford, 6 Cal. 648.

[b] A mere entry without color of title, accompanied by survey and marking of boundaries, is not sufficient.—Murphy v. Wallingford, 6 Cal. 648.

[c] Though an action of ejectment may be based upon prior possession, in case of wrongful eviction therefrom, yet, where such action is based on title, and the plaintiff offers proof of title, and does not prove an actual possession at the time of the defendant's entry, he must fail if he does not show a valid title or right of possession.—Harris v. Kellogg, 117 Cal. 484, 49 Pac. 708.

§ 38. —— Constructive Possession Under Title.

[a] The act prescribing the mode of maintaining and defending possessory actions (Wood's Digest, p. 526) was intended for the benefit of actual settlers, and does not protect one who, for four months after location of his claim, does not reside on it, although he may have put improvements thereon.—Gird v. Ray, 17 Cal. 352.

[b] Where plaintiff's grantor had actual possession of public land, and inclosed it with a substantial fence, and by a valid deed conveyed it to plaintiff, the latter, though he himself never took actual possession of the land, but cultivated a portion of it through his employees, has constructive possession of the whole, and may maintain ejectment against an intruder on any part thereof.—Dodge v. Yates, 76 Cal. 251, 18 Pac. 323.

[c] A person may be in possession of land without a personal residence thereon, and without having personally cultivated it.—Dodge v. Yates, 76 Cal. 251, 18 Pac. 323.

§ 38½. —— Possession of Part of Entire Tract.

[a] Possession does not extend beyond occupation, without title or color of title under deed from grantor, having constructive possession.—Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 255.

[b] In an action to recover the possession of land leased by plaintiff to defendant, it is not error to refuse to charge that, if plaintiff had a title by prior possession without written title, he could recover only that portion which is included in the inclosure. A party's possession is not confined to his actual inclosure.—Castro v. Gill, 5 Cal. 40.

[c] Where a party takes possession of a tract of land, and incloses it with a fence consisting of posts seven feet apart, and one board, six inches wide, nailed on to the posts, and the same is not sufficient to turn cattle, and the land is not cultivated, such possession is not sufficient to sustain an action of ejectment as against a party in possession of a part of the tract under a deed to the whole.—Baldwin v. Simpson, 12 Cal. 560.

[d] One who enters into the actual possession of part of a tract of land under a deed describing the entire tract, and claims the whole, acquires possession of the entire tract, as against one afterward entering without color of title.—McKee v. Greene, 31 Cal. 418.

[e] Where one sues in ejectment to recover land on the ground of prior possession, and shows an actual possession by inclosure of a portion only of the premises, he is en-tenant of another, it is proper to join the latter as party defendant.—Moore v. Moore, 94 Pac. 90.

§ 81. —— Joinder of Parties.

[a] An executor, and those who are tenants in common with him, are properly joined as plaintiffs in an action for the possession of real property.—Touchard v. Keyes, 21 Cal. 202.

[ab] Acts of ouster committed, and possession thereby acquired, by one person with the knowledge and consent of another, for their joint benefit, are the acts and possession of both, so that ejectment may be maintained against both.—Treat v. Reilly, 35 Cal. 129.

[b] Where possession is held by tenants, landlord may be joined as defendant.—Oakland Gas Light Co. v. Dameron, 67 Cal. 663, 8 Pac. 595.

§ 82. —— Election Between Defendants.

[a] Plaintiff in ejectment may elect to sue one or more defendants.—Winans v. Christy, 4 Cal. 70, 60 Am. Dec. 597.

§ 83. —— Notice to Landlord, and Leave to Defend.

[a] In ejectment against a tenant, where the landlord appears to defend, his appearance and substitution should be entered of record on notice to the parties.—Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609, 82 Am. Dec. 765.

[b] Where, in ejectment against a tenant, the landlord has been allowed to appear and to be substituted, his right to conduct the proceedings extends to the final disposition of the case, on appeal or otherwise.—Dutton v. Warschauer, 21 Cal. 609, 82 Am. Dec. 765.

[c] A landlord has a right to defend in the name of the tenant in an action of ejectment. —(Cal. 1867) Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 488.

[d] In actions of ejectment, even though commenced prior to the adoption of section 379 of the Code of Civil Procedure, where the defendant answers averring that he is the tenant of one who asks permission to defend the action, the latter, as landlord and owner, will be permitted to defend, as a matter of course, on notice and motion.—Reay v. Butler, 69 Cal. 572, 11 Pac. 463.

[e] In an action of ejectment against a tenant, where his landlord intervenes, he may set up any equitable defenses which he might have to the action.—Reay v. Butler, 69 Cal. 572, 11 Pac. 463.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2177-2180, § 144.

§ 84. —— Intervention.

[a] The purchasers of defendant's title at sheriff's sale may be allowed to defend, if they rely wholly on defendant's title and do not deny his possession.—McFadden v. Wallace, 38 Cal. 51.

[b] A person unconnected with the right of possession asserted by plaintiff or by defendant, but asserting a title paramount to both, cannot intervene.—Porter v. Garissino, 51 Cal. 559.

[c] If, in an action of ejectment, a third party intervenes, and his petition to be allowed to intervene does not state facts sufficient to entitle him to do so, and, without making the objection, the plaintiff and intervener agree upon the facts, and stipulate that the claim of the intervener shall be determined upon the legal effect of the stipulated facts, the plaintiff cannot afterward raise the objection that the case is not one in which an intervention can be made, or that the pleadings are insufficient for that purpose.—Donner v. Palmer, 51 Cal. 629.

[d] A third person cannot intervene in ejectment to get the court to quiet his title, as against the plaintiff, to another tract of land not in dispute between the plaintiff and defendant.—Rosecrans v. Ellsworth, 52 Cal. 509.

[e] A person who does not claim to have derived title from both plaintiff and defendant in ejectment, but asserts title in himself paramount to both, cannot intervene in such action.—Reay v. Butler, 7 Pac. 669.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 85. —— Substitution.

[a] Where, in an action of ejectment, a new plaintiff is substituted in place of the original, the issues are not changed, but the title to be tried is the title of the original plaintiff, and the new plaintiff cannot deraign an independent title, but must rely on the title which the first plaintiff had at the commencement of the action.—Barrett v. Birge, 50 Cal. 655.

[b] Court could substitute landlord in action of ejectment prior to adoption of section 379, Code of Civil Procedure.—Reay v. Butler, 69 Cal. 574, 111 Pac. 463.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 87; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2184-2186, § 146.

§ 86. Estrepement.

[a] In a complaint in ejectment, parties may seek, in addition to a recovery of the premises, an injunction restraining the commission of trespass in the nature of waste pending the action.—Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

§ 87. Notice of Lis Pendens.

[a] Prior to May 1, 1872, on which date the act of March 2, 1872, took effect, the provisions of the Practice Act in relation to filing notice of the pendency of actions did not apply to the action of ejectment.—Partridge v. Shepard, 71 Cal. 470, 12 Pac. 480.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 89; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2191, § 150.

89. Form and Requisites in General—Form.

[a] In a complaint in ejectment parties may ask, in addition to a recovery of the premises, an injunction restraining the commission of trespass in the nature of waste pending the action, but the grounds of equity interposition should be stated subsequently to and distinct from those upon which the judgment at law is sought.—Natoma Water etc. Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544.

[b] Complaint in ejectment may be for two separate and distinct pieces of land; but the two causes of action must be separately stated, affect all the parties to the action, and not require different places of trial.—Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 150.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See, also, 15 Cyc. 90, 91; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2194-2201, §§ 154-157.

§ 89½. —— Requisites in General.

[a] Where the allegations of a complaint in the district court are that the plaintiff was in possession, and lawfully entitled to the possession, at the time he was evicted by the defendant, held, that the complaint must be treated as a declaration in ejectment.—Ramirez v. Murray, 4 Cal. 293.

[b] Notwithstanding our statute has dispensed with the old form of pleading, and it is no longer necessary to allege a fictitious demise, still facts sufficient must be pleaded to show the plaintiff's right to recover, and it will not do to state conclusions of law in place thereof.—Payne v. Treadwell, 5 Cal. 310.

[c] A complaint in ejectment, with general averments in the usual form, is sufficient, without a specific averment of the facts. To set out the facts connected with the title and the wrongful acts of the defendant would produce confusion without benefit.—Garrison v. Sampson, 15 Cal. 93.

[d] A complaint in ejectment, averring that plaintiff was in the actual possession of the premises by inclosure and cultivation, that defendants, on a certain day, entered upon the same, and ousted the plaintiff, and that defendant is still in possession, is sufficient.—Boles v. Weifenback, 15 Cal. 144.

[e] Complaint in ejectment averring prior possession in plaintiff, entry and ouster by defendant, and that he is still in possession, sufficient.—Boles v. Cohen, 15 Cal. 150.

[f] Complaint should only aver that on some day designated plaintiffs were possessed of the land, describing it; that, while thus possessed, defendant entered upon the same and ousted them, and has ever since withheld the possession from them, to their damage, specifying such sum as might cover the value of the use and occupation from the date of the ouster.—Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 567.

[g] A complaint in ejectment which avers that the plaintiffs the the owners in fee as tenants in common of the premises, and that the defendants are in possession and withhold it from the plaintiffs, is sufficient, and an allegation of lawful right in the plaintiff, and that "unlawfully" and "wrongfully" he withholds the possession, will not vitiate the pleading.—Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220.

[h] A complaint which avers that on a certain day plaintiff was, and ever since has been, and still is, owner in fee simple, seised and possessed, etc., and that on a day there after named, and while plaintiff was so the owner in fee simple, defendants entered and ousted him, and from thence hitherto have and do withhold the same, is good, unless demurred to on the ground that it is ambiguous, unintelligible, and uncertain.—Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82.

[i] A complaint is sufficient if it avers that plaintiff owns land, and that defendant is in possession adversely to him, and withholds the same.—Keller v. Ruiz De Ocana, 48 Cal. 638.

[j] In ejectment for nonpayment of the purchase price under contract of sale, where the complaint states facts constituting a cause of action, it is not demurrable because it also states facts which give defendant an opportunity to redeem, and to avoid the effect of a judgment of restitution by performing the contract.—Kerns v. Dean, 77 Cal. 555, 19 Pac. 817.

[k] In ejectment, a complaint alleging that plaintiff is seised in fee of the realty, and defendant is in possession, and against plaintiff's will detains and withholds the possession thereof, is sufficient on demurrer.—(Cal. 1891) Hihn v. Mangenberg, 89 Cal. 268, 26 Pac. 968.

[l] In the complaint of the harbor commissioners in the action of ejectment, it was not necessary to specify the use to which the commissioners propose to put the premises when recovered. That question does not concern a defendant who has no right to the possession or control of the property.—People v. Mullender, 132 Cal. 217, 64 Pac. 299.

[m] Where a complaint in ejectment by a vendor against a vendee avers ownership in the plaintiff, the making of a contract for the sale thereof to defendant, the payment of a part of the contract price by defendant, his entry into possession, the tender of a deed, demand and refusal of payment, notice of rescission of contract by plaintiff, tender to the defendant of the money paid with interest, and demand of possession, which was refused, it is sufficient.—Gates v. McLean, 9 Pac. 938.

§ 90. —— Allegation of Tender of Deed by Vendor.

[a] A complaint in ejectment by a vendor against a purchaser need not set out the deed tendered to the defendant, and the averment that he tendered a good and sufficient deed of grant, bargain, and sale to the property shows a compliance with his part of the agreement.—Haile v. Smith, 113 Cal. 656, 45 Pac. 872.

§ 90½. Description of Property—Description by Name, Quantity, and Tract.

[a] Where a declaration describes land by a certain name, this is as good a description as one by metes and bounds, if it can be rendered sufficiently certain by evidence.—Castro v. Gill, 5 Cal. 40.

[b] A tract of land known by a particular name may be described by such name in the complaint.—Hildreth v. White, 66 Cal. 542, 6 Pac. 454.

§ 91. —— Designation of Boundaries.

[a] A description by metes and bounds is required in ejectment only so far as is necessary to identify with certainty the property. In this case, a reference to the corner of the streets, the number of feet on each street, the running back to an alley, and the reference to the plot of the town where it was laid out, were held to indicate sufficiently the bounds of the premises.—Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432.

[b] Section 58 of the Practice Act, that, "in an action for the recovery of real property, such property shall be described, with its metes and bounds, in the complaint," is directory only, for a failure to comply with which the complaint is liable to a special demurrer; but, if the complaint describes the premises sufficiently otherwise to identify them according to the general rules on this subject, the plaintiff may, after verdict, take judgment, and the court cannot set it aside on motion of defendant on account of this defect of pleading.—Whitney v. Buckman, 19 Cal. 300.

[c] A complaint in ejectment described the southwest corner as "the source of W. creek." Held, that a demurrer could not be sustained on the ground of insufficiency or uncertainty, as the possible facts of the nonexistence of such a creek, or of the existence of several sources of it, could not be presumed, but must be shown by proof at the trial.—Carpentier v. Grant, 21 Cal. 140.

[d] A description is sufficient which calls for a lot of land one hundred varas square, bounded on three sides by well-known streets on the plat of the city properly laid out, and on the other by the unsurveyed lands.—Garwood v. Hastings, 38 Cal. 216.

[e] A complaint in ejectment sufficiently describes the property as two hundred and eight chains twenty links east of the corner to townships 1 and 2 north, ranges 4 and 5 west, Mount Diablo meridian, where the starting point is the only one answering to that description.—Sherman v. McCarthy, 57 Cal. 507.

[f] A complaint sufficiently describes the land in controversy by calling for a well-ascertained beginning point, from whence the land is to be run to a designated monument, a "station fence post," and then giving the course of every other call in the description. Muir v. Meredith, 82 Cal. 19, 22 Pac. 1080.

[g] Where, in ejectment, the land is described as being in S. township, S. C. county, California, and bounded on the northeast by Bay avenue, on the southeast by the land of M. E. Land, and on the southwest and northwest by S. creek, the description is sufficient on special demurrer.—Hihn v. Mangenberg, 89 Cal. 268, 26 Pac. 968.

[h] A complaint in ejectment, in describing the land sued for, need not specify the character in which a surveyor mentioned in such description established lines referred to. Pierce v. Hilton, 102 Cal. 276, 36 Pac. 595.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 92-95; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2202-2210, §§ 158-164.

§ 92. —— Description by Reference to Documents, Plats, or Records.

[a] A complaint in ejectment for a portion of a rancho, describing the land sued for as "tracts A and B, as designated on the map accompanying the referee's report in the partition suit of said rancho," in the superior court, is not bad for insufficiency of description.—Pierce v. Hilton, 102 Cal. 276, 36 Pac. 595.

§ 93. Title, Estate, and Possession of Plaintiff.

[a] A complaint alleging that plaintiff was the owner and entitled to possession of certain land sued for, that defendant was a tenant at will and refused to surrender possession after notice, etc., held to state a cause of action in ejectment.—Hayden v. Collins, 1 Cal. App. 259, 81 Pac. 1120.

[b] The allegation of possession at the time of the ouster complained of is a sufficient allegation of title to sustain the declaration.—Hutchinson v. Perley, 4 Cal. 33, 60 Am. Dec. 578.

[c] The declaration must allege title or at least actual possession, not merely occasional use, by the plaintiff, and a continued adverse holding by the defendant.—Steinback v. Fitzpatrick, 12 Cal. 295.

[d] A plaintiff in ejectment may state his title in general terms in his complaint, but, if he undertakes to set forth the particular facts on which it rests, he must allege all that he could have been called upon to prove under his general averment, in order to recover.—Castro v. Richardson, 18 Cal. 478.

[e] An allegation that on a day named the plaintiff "was possessed of certain lands therein described, which said premises the said plaintiff claims in fee simple absolute," followed by a further allegation that he, "being possessed thereof, and being so the owner thereof as aforesaid," the defendant entered, etc., must be construed to amount to an averment of title in fee simple absolute.—Marshall v. Shafter, 32 Cal. 176.

[f] An allegation that plaintiff is the owner of land sued for is substantially an allegation of seisin in fee.—Garwood v. Hastings, 38 Cal. 216.

[g] A complaint by an executor is not necessarily defective because it does not allege title in testator, as neither title nor right of possession may have been in the testator at the time of his death, but may have been afterwards acquired by the executor in his representative capacity.—Salmon v. Wilson, 41 Cal. 595.

[h] Where plaintiff contracted to sell land, and has received the purchase money, and the contract is rescinded, he must allege repayment, or tender of the amount, in an action of ejectment to recover the land.—Bohall v. Diller, 41 Cal. 532.

[i] Allegation that plaintiff is "owner" is of an ultimate fact and sufficient when not stated as conclusion from other facts.—Herser v. Miller, 77 Cal. 193, 19 Pac. 375.

[j] Where the complaint in ejectment simply sets forth a deraignment of title, and then alleges that "while plaintiff was the owner, and entitled to possession, as hereinbefore mentioned and set forth, the defendant entered," the allegation as to ownership will be disregarded, as stating a mere conclusion. Hutchinson v. McNally, 23 Pac. 132.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 95-97; 17 Cent Dig., cols. 2211-2221, §§ 165-174.

§ 94. —— Grant, Sale, or Foreclosure.

[a] In an action to recover the possession of real estate, the title thereto may, and ought to, be pleaded without alleging seriatim the chain of conveyances by which it is to be proved.—(Cal. 1860) Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 567.

§ 95. —— Estates of Decedents.

[a] Plaintiff claiming under a will must aver and prove its probate.—Castro v. Richardson, 18 Cal. 478.

[b] The complaint having alleged that the homestead was set apart to the widow, and that plaintiff, as devisee under decedent's will, and as owner of the land, became and was entitled to possession on her death, the possibility that the homestead was set off to the family for a time extending beyond the widow's death is precluded.—Hutchinson v. McNally, 85 Cal. 619, 24 Pac. 1071, reversing (1890) 23 Pac. 132.

[c] A complaint alleged that the land was devised to plaintiff; that it was the homestead of decedent and his wife, and was selected from the separate property of decedent without his consent; that, after decedent's death, an order was made setting off said homestead to decedent's widow, and that she continued in possession until after her death. By Civil Code, section 1265, a homestead in the separate properly of the husband can be set apart to the widow for a limited period, not longer than during her life. Held, that the complaint was not demurrable on the ground that it did not show that the homestead to which plaintiff's estate was subject had ceased to exist at the time the action was brought, as it would not be presumed against plaintiff that the court set apart the homestead for a longer time than that allowed by law.—Hutchinson v. McNally, 85 Cal. 619, 24 Pac. 1071, reversing (1890) 23 Pac. 132.

§ 96. —— Possession and Right to Possession.

[a] In a possessory action it is sufficient for the plaintiff to state that he was lawfully entitled to the possession of the premises without setting out the evidence of his right.—Gladwin v. Stebbins, 2 Cal. 103.

[b] In an action of ejectment, the plaintiff need not aver title. An averment of prior possession and an ouster is sufficient, for prior possession is evidence of title, and cannot be made to yield to mere color of title.—Norris v. Russell, 5 Cal. 249.

[c] The mere averments in a complaint that the plaintiffs have lawful title as owners in fee simple of the premises, and that the defendant is in possession, and unlawfully withholds the same, are insufficient to maintain an action of ejectment.—Payne v. Treadwell, 5 Cal. 310.

[d] The allegation of possession in an action of ejectment is too broad to defeat the rights of a person who has, in good faith, located upon public mineral land for the purpose of mining.—Smith v. Doe, 15 Cal. 100.

[e] In ejectment of a landlord against a tenant at sufferance, the complaint need not state the tenancy and its termination.—McCarthy v. Yale, 39 Cal. 585.

[f] An allegation that plaintiff assumed and did exercise acts of control over a portion of land is not equivalent to an amendment that he had actual possession of the land or any part of it.—Brennan v. Ford, 46 Cal. 7.

§ 97. —— Time of Title or Right to Possession.

[a] A complaint which alleges ownership in fee in plaintiff, and an ouster by defendant on a day named, before commencement of the action, is sufficient, without further alleging that plaintiff was the owner in fee at the commencement of the action.—(1884) Salmon v. Symonds, 24 Cal. 260; (1885) Allen v. Holt, 7 Pac. 421.

§ 97½. Ouster and Possession of Defendant — Necessity and Sufficiency in General.

[a] A complaint against several defendants is not defective because it alleges that defendant committed the ouster.—Fay v. McKeever, 59 Cal. 307.

[b] A complaint which avers that "defendants are in possession of said lands and the whole thereof, withhold the possession of the same from plaintiff, and exclude him from the same," sufficiently alleges an ouster by defendants, in the absence of special demurrer.—Rego v. Van Pelt, 65 Cal. 254, 3 Pac. 867.

[c] A complaint otherwise sufficient is not vitiated by an allegation that the entry was made willfully, fraudulently, maliciously, and forcibly.—Hildreth v. White, 66 Cal. 549, 6 Pac. 454.

[d] A complaint in ejectment alleging the leasing of the premises to defendant; that the lease had expired; and that defendant refused to vacate the premises, and "has withheld, and still withholds, the possession thereof from the plaintiff,"—sufficiently avers that defendant is in possession.—McKissick v. Ashby, 98 Cal. 422, 33 Pac. 729.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 98, 99; 17 Cent. Dig., cols 2221-2224, §§ 175-179.

§ 98. —— Time of Ouster.

[a] In the modified form in which ejectment is known under our practice, the allegation of the time of ouster is material only on the question of mesne profits; therefore it is no objection that it is laid before the plaintiff had a good legal title.—Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465.

[b] Complaint in ejectment need not state the exact time of the alleged ouster, especially when no claim is made for damages and no recovery had for them.—Collier v. Corbett, 15 Cal. 183.

[c] A complaint in ejectment, filed December 4, 1889, which alleges that on December 20, 1888, plaintiff was the owner and in possession of the premises sued for, and "that on the twenty-fourth day of December, 1889, plaintiff being so seised and possessed, defendant wrongfully entered and ousted plaintiff from the possession thereof, and now witholds wrongfully the possession," is not objectionable on general demurrer as alleging ouster subsequent to the filing of the complaint, as it is evident that this was a clerical error merely, and is inconsistent with the allegation that defendant "now withholds," etc.—Cole v. Segraves, 88 Cal. 103, 25 Pac. 1109.

§ 99. Demand and Notice.

[a] Where a vendee of land, having entered under a bond for a deed and a contract that if he failed to pay interest, the vendor might take possession without process of law, subsequently makes default in the payment of the interest, and notifies the vendor that he claims an adverse title, and records an instrument declaring that he surrenders to the vendor the bond for a deed, and all rights conferred thereby, a complaint by the vendor to recover the land need not aver a demand and refusal.—Coates v. Cleaves, 92 Cal. 427, 28 Pac. 580.

§ 100. Defects Cured by Answer.

[a] A complaint in ejectment, defective for failure to allege that plaintiff was entitled to possession at the commencement of the action, is cured by a denial in the answer that plaintiff was entitled to possession.—Vance v. Anderson, 113 Cal. 532, 45 Pac. 816.

DENIALS AND ADMISSIONS IN PLEADING, § 110.
—— POSSESSION AND OUSTER, § 110½.

§ 101. Answer—Form and Requisites in General.

[a] Answer to complaint in ejectment should contain matter constituting legal or equitable defense.—Hoffman v. Remant, 72 Cal. 2, 12 Pac. 804.

[b] An answer averring a tender of the purchase money on or about a certain date is sufficient as against a general demurrer, in the absence of a special demurrer for uncertainty; and it is sufficient that the answer shows a tender of the purchase money while the plaintiff was treating the agreement in force, though the tender was made after the date fixed by the contract.—Haile v. Smith, 113 Cal. 656, 45 Pac. 872.

[c] In an action of ejectment, where the defendants in their answer merely deny that they unlawfully entered upon the lands described in the complaint, or that they unlawfully withhold possession thereof from plaintiff, such answer admits the possession by the defendants of lands within the tract described in the complaint.—Los Angeles etc. Co. v. Thompson, 117 Cal. 594, 49 Pac. 714.

[d] An answer in an action of ejectment which does not deny the plaintiff's ownership, but denies that he was at any time in the possession, or entilted to the possession, of the land and premises in controversy, and sets up a contract under which the defendants were lawfully in possession, presents a sufficient defense to the action.—Weeks v. Link, 137 Cal. 502, 70 Pac. 548.

[e] Answers, though not denying the possession of the plaintiff, which denied that the plaintiff was at any time the owner of any right, title, or interest in or to the premises, or any part or parts thereof, and denied that the defendants had no estate, right, title, or interest in the lands, and affirmatively alleged that at the commencement of the action two of the defendants named owned, and still own, the title in fee to the premises, raised issues upon which the defendants were entitled to be heard.—Butterfield v. Graves, 138 Cal. 155, 71 Pac. 510.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 99; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2225-2235, §§ 181-189.

§ 102. —— General Issue.

[a] An answer that the defendant "is not guilty if the supposed trespasses and ejectment in the complaint mentioned, nor of any part thereof," amounts to a general denial only, and, when the complaint is sworn to, raises no issue.—Schenk v. Evoy, 24 Cal. 104.

[b] In ejectment, the recitals in the answer of the series of facts through which defendant claims a right to the land, are mere averments of evidence, and amount to no more than a general denial.—Clink v. Thurston, 47 Cal. 21.

[c] In an action of ejectment, an answer by a defendant affirmatively setting up title in himself in detail is to be construed as a general denial of the plaintiff's title, and not as a cross-complaint requiring an answer from the plaintiff.—Phillips v. Hagart, 113 Cal. 552, 54 Am. St. Rep. 369, 45 Pac. 843.

§ 102½. —— Special Pleas.

[a] A plea of a former recovery in ejectment against one of the several plaintiffs is bad if pleaded as a general defense to the whole action.—Anderson v. Fisk, 36 Cal. 625.

[b] After pleading the general issue, the defendant need not set up title in himself.—Bruck v. Tucker, 42 Cal. 346.

§ 103. —— Equitable Title and Defenses.

[a] Where the defendant in an action of ejectment relies upon a verbal contract for the sale of the land, accompanied with acts of part performance sufficient to take the contract from the operation of the statute of frauds, an answer disclosing such contract is not demurrable.—Arguello v. Edinger, 10 Cal. 150.

[b] An equitable defense in an action of ejectment must be distinctly pleaded.—Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal. 248; Lestrade v. Barth, 19 Cal. 660; Cadiz v. Majors, 33 Cal. 288; McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355.

[c] If a defendant in an action of ejectment desires to avail himself of an equitable defense as a bar, he must set it up with the same particularity that is observed in a bill in equity.—Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114.

Digitized by Google

[d] An equitable title set up in the answer in ejectment must be sufficiently pleaded to warrant the court in granting a decree which will stop the further prosecution of the action.—Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114; Blum v. Robertson, 24 Cal. 127.

[e] The party relying upon an equitable estoppel in pais in an action at law must inform the adverse party of the nature of the cause of action or defense which he will be obliged to meet, and to do this he must plead it with the same fullness and particularity as is required in cases involving like subjects of inquiry in suits in equity.—Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 23, 85 Am. Dec. 157.

[f] Whether an answer in ejectment states a case within the equity jurisdiction of the court or not must be determined by the answer itself.—Bodley v. Ferguson, 30 Cal. 511.

[g] Where defendant relies on an equitable defense, he must set up the facts fully in his answer.—Tormey v. True, 45 Cal. 105.

[h] An equitable defense in an action of ejectment should contain, in substance, the elements of a bill in equity.—Kentfield v. Hayes, 57 Cal. 409.

[i] Where defendant in ejectment relies upon equities as a defense, he must set forth the facts on which he relies in the answer as fully as it would be necessary to state them in a bill of equity praying a decree for a conveyance of the legal title.—Arguello v. Bours, 67 Cal. 447, 8 Pac. 49.

[j] An answer denying generally all material allegations of the complaint, and after using the words, "further answering, by way of cross-complaint," setting up matters constituting an equitable defense, is good on general demurrer; the character of the pleading being determined by the court, by the facts alleged, and not by what it might be called by the pleader.—Meeker v. Dalton, 75 Cal. 154, 16 Pac. 764.

[k] Defendant set up in his answer that the deed under which plaintiff claimed was only a mortgage, and that the debt had been fully paid; but he did not ask for any affirmative relief from the mortgage. Held, that the answer was in effect only a denial of plaintiff's title; that whether the debt had been paid or not was immaterial; and that plaintiff was not entitled to proceed first with the trial of the question as to whether the deed was a mortgage, on the ground of an equitable defense.—Smith v. Smith, 80 Cal. 323, 21 Pac. 4, 22 Pac. 186.

§ 104. —— Answer of Intervener.

[a] Where, after defendant has answered raising issues on the question of title, his attorney appears for a person not made defendant, and by stipulation the answer is considered as the answer of this latter person, he must connect himself by evidence with the title of the original defendant before he can introduce evidence as to the issues.—Baldwin v. Bornheimer, 48 Cal. 433.

§ 105. —— Want of Title or Right to Possession in Plaintiff.

[a] The averment of forfeiture is a legal conclusion upon which no issue can be taken. The facts should be taken so as to enable the court to determine whether the forfeiture did accrue.—Dutch Flat Water Co. v. Mooney, 12 Cal. 534.

[b] Where, in an action of ejectment, the complaint did not directly aver a seisin or ownership of the premises by plaintiff, but alleged that the plaintiff, by location, survey, and certain other acts, acquired possession; and the answer denied these acts, except the survey, and denied that plaintiff acquired possession by location "or in any other manner," held, that the allegation of any prior possession was sufficiently denied by the answer.—La Rue v. Oppenheimer, 20 Cal. 517.

[c] An answer in ejectment should aver possession and title in defendant to the lands demanded adverse to plaintiff's claim.—Anderson v. Fisk, 36 Cal. 625.

[d] In an action of ejectment, where the answer denies the averments of the complaint with respect to the plaintiff's ownership and right of possession, further allegations therein with respect to the ownership of the grantors of the plaintiff are immaterial and need not be denied.—Morgan v. Tillottson, 73 Cal. 520, 15 Pac. 88.

[e] Defendant set up in his answer that the deed under which the plaintiff claimed was only a mortgage, and that the debt had been fully paid; but he did not ask for any affirmative relief from the mortgage. Held, that the answer was in effect only a denial of plaintiff's title; that whether the debt had been paid or not was immaterial.—Smith v. Smith, 80 Cal. 323, 21 Pac. 4, 22 Pac. 186, 549.

[f] In ejectment, a portion of defendant's answer, alleging that plaintiffs' claim of title arises from a pretended entry of the land in the United States land office as a placer mining claim, and a certificate of purchase based thereon, which they induced the local land office to issue to them by means of false affidavits and testimony, and that defendant had filed a protest against the allowance of the entry in the general land office, is properly stricken out, since it does not show that any question as to the validity of plaintiffs' entry and purchase was then pending and undecided in the land office.—McTarnahan v. Pike, 91 Cal. 540, 27 Pac. 784.

[g] An answer in ejectment denying "that said plaintiff on said second day of January, 1899, or at any other time, was possessed or entitled to the possession of said land and premises," is a sufficient denial of plaintiff's possession or right of possession.—Weeks v. Link, 137 Cal. 502, 70 Pac. 548.

[h] Where the complaint in ejectment alleges title in fee in plaintiff, and the answer denies such title, allegations in the answer setting forth various links in plaintiff's title, and declaring them defective, are properly struck out as surplusage.—Nelson v. O'Brien. 139 Cal. 628, 73 Pac. 469.

§ 106. —— Limitations and Laches.

[a] A plea of the statute of limitations which states that plaintiff was not seised or possessed of the land within five years before the commencement of the action is fatally defective in not stating that neither plaintiff, his predecessor, nor grantor was thus possessed.—Sharp v. Daugney, 33 Cal. 505.

§ 107. —— Disclaimer—Requisites and Sufficiency in General.

[a] A disclaimer of title and possession in ejectment does not authorize a judgment by confession, for it does not confess possession which is necessary to found a judgment upon. Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 576.

[b] The defendant in ejectment, wishing to defend as to part only of the premises, and to obtain a proportionate reduction in the damages awarded as mesne profits, should frame his defense accordingly, specifying the portion of the lot for which it was intended to defend, and disclaiming as to the balance; otherwise he has no remedy, though the finding be against him for the whole.—Guy v. Hanly, 21 Cal. 397.

[c] Disclaimer is unknown in actions of ejectment.—Ellis v. Jeans, 26 Cal. 272.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 102; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2237-2239, §§ 193-196.

108. Cross-complaints.

[a] Defendants in ejectment, who are the executors of the estate of the grantor of the plaintiff, cannot claim a decree annulling the deed of the testator to the plaintiff, on the ground that it is fraudulent and void as against creditors of the estate, except upon the allegations of a cross-complaint praying for affirmative relief.—Hills v. Sherwood, 48 Cal. 386.

[b] Where defendant in ejectment alleges equities as a defense in a cross-bill, and bases on them a prayer for equitable relief, he must set forth the facts as fully as it would be necessary to state them in a bill in chancery, praying a decree for a conveyance of the legal title.—Arguello v. Bours, 67 Cal. 17, 8 Pac. 49.

[c] Cause of action against vendee for recovery of money paid on failure of vendor's title cannot be set up by way of cross-complaint.—Hoffman v. Remant, 72 Cal. 4, 12 Pac. 804.

[d] Facts set up in pleading, and not name even it, determine its character as an answer or cross-complaint.—Meeker v. Dalton, 50 Cal. 154, 16 Pac. 764.

[e] Defendant may set up contract to convey as defense and have it specifically enforced by way of cross-complaint.—Nunez v. Morgan, 77 Cal. 431, 19 Pac. 753.

[f] In an action of ejectment a cross-complaint to quiet the title of the defendant is unnecessary, and matter of defendants' title constituting a defense should not be pleaded as a cross-complaint; and any attempt to make allegations by way of a cross-complaint to quiet title constitutes a mere answer to plaintiff's complaint. The character of the pleading is to be determined by the court regardless of what defendants call their pleading.—Mills v. Fletcher, 100 Cal. 142, 34 Pac. 637.

[g] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 442, providing that a defendant who seeks affirmative relief affecting the property to which the action relates may file a cross-complaint setting up the relief asked, a cross-complaint may be filed, in ejectment by a city for possession of a street, to reform deeds to land, the description in which is claimed to show a dedication of the land in controversy.—City of Eureka v. Gates, 120 Cal. 54, 52 Pac. 125.

[h] Where a plaintiff brings one action of ejectment for two separate parcels of land, defendant may, in one cross-complaint, seek affirmative relief as to each parcel separately, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 442, providing that a defendant who seeks affirmative relief affecting the property in suit may file a cross-complaint therefor.—City of Eureka v. Gates, 120 Cal. 54, 52 Pac. 125.

[i] A cross-complaint in ejectment, alleging title in defendant, and asking that it be quieted against plaintiff, is unnecessary, and may be struck out without injury to defendant.—Nelson v. O'Brien, 139 Cal. 628, 73 Pac. 469.

[j] Under Code of Civil Procedure, section 442, defendant in ejectment held entitled to file a cross-complaint.—Martin v. Molera, (Cal. App.), 87 Pac. 1104.

§ 109. Reply.

[a] An averment in an answer that plaintiff's grantor had made a prior sale to defendant amounts only to a denial of plaintiff's title, and need not be replied to. Thompson v. Thompson, 52 Cal. 154.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 104; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2241-2243, §§ 199, 200.

§ 110. Denials and Admissions in Pleadings.

[a] Where a complaint avers ownership in plaintiff and ouster by defendant, and the answer admits possession, avers fee in defendant, and deraigns title from an administrator's sale, the answer amounts to an admission of plaintiff's title if the sale was void.—Pryor v. Madigan, 51 Cal. 178.

[b] In ejectment for two and twelve one hundredths acres of land plaintiffs alleged they were owners, and that defendant excluded them from possession. Defendant's answer denied every allegation "except as hereinafter stated," and then admitted defendant was in possession of one and sixty-five one hundredths acres, and that he withheld the same from plaintiffs; but denied the possession or withholding of the remainder. Held, that the answer did not admit that plaintiffs owned forty-seven one hundredths of an acre of the land.—Stites v. Gater, 45 Pac. 185.

[c] In ejectment a cross-complaint alleging possession in defendants which is not denied by plaintiff is a sufficient proof of ouster.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

§ 110½. —— Possession and Ouster.

[a] A denial that the defendant unlawfully possessed is no denial, and consequently is an admission of the material allegation that he was in possession.—Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403.

[b] Where a complaint in ejectment avers defendants to be in possession, and the answer does not deny, but affirmatively shows it, then, though the allegation of possession be immaterial, and therefore not requiring a denial, the fact of possession becomes a matter of admission or agreement between the parties, as an independent fact, not in issue by the pleadings, but affecting the whole case; and hence it is not necessary to show that defendant was in possession when suit was commenced.—Powell v. Oullahan, 14 Cal. 114.

[c] An answer, filed twelve days after the complaint, which avers that the defendant is not in possession of the land claimed by the plaintiff, and that he does not withhold, nor has he ever withheld, the same, etc., is not a sufficient denial of the charge that he was in possession at the time when the action was brought, and therefore that allegation must be taken as confessed.—Schenk v. Evoy, 24 Cal. 104.

[d] If, in ejectment, the entry and ouster are denied in the answer, the withholding of possession at the commencement of the action is not admitted by the pleadings, although it be not specially denied.—Hawkins v. Reichert, 28 Cal. 534.

[e] Where five years' adverse possession is pleaded, and the parties stipulate that plaintiff was never in possession, but the stipulation admits title to have been in plaintiff, it will be construed as referring to actual possession.—City and County of San Francisco v. Fulde, 37 Cal. 349, 99 Am. Dec. 278.

[f] Where an answer puts in issue plaintiff's title and right of possession, but does not deny that defendant was in possession, it amounts to an admission of ouster.—Salmon v. Wilson, 41 Cal. 595.

[g] Where, in ejectment, the answer admits the possession by the defendant of a portion of the premises, the plaintiff need not prove it.—McCreery v. Everding, 44 Cal. 284.

[h] If, in ejectment, the parties are tenants in common, and the defendant in his answer denies the plaintiff's title and right of entry, the denial is proof of an ouster.—Spect v. Gregg, 51 Cal. 198.

[i] In ejectment by a widow, who had sold her interest in community property, and by her daughter, to get possession of their homestead right, defendant cannot contend that he has not contested the right of the daughter to possession as a tenant in common with him, so that there has been no ouster, when the complaint avers title in plaintiffs and ouster by defendant, and the answer denies every material allegation of the complaint, and pleads the statute of limitations, and when the agreed statement of facts admits that on a given date the widow, on behalf of herself and daughter, demanded of defendant that they be let into possession, but that defendant refused, and has since withheld possession from plaintiffs.—Phelan v. Smith, 100 Cal. 158, 34 Pac. 667.

[j] In ejectment, if the defendant in his answer admits acts amounting to an ouster, but denies plaintiff's title or right to possession, plaintiff is not bound to prove ouster, and, if he prove title and right to possession in himself, is entitled to recover.—Ketchum v. Barber, 12 Pac. 251.

[k] In an action in the nature of ejectment, where the evidence tends to prove that defendants were in possession of the premises when the action was commenced, an answer denying plaintiff's title and right of possession is sufficient evidence of ouster.—Moore v. Moore, 34 Pac. 90.

3. Demurrer, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings and Motions.

DEMURRER, § 111.
AMENDED PLEADINGS, § 112.
SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS, § 112½.
MOTIONS FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS, § 113.
MOTIONS TO STRIKE OUT, § 114.

§ 111. Demurrer.

[a] The defense of the statute of limitations cannot be made by a demurrer which states in general terms that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, but it must distinctly state the statute.—Brown v. Martin, 25 Cal. 82.

[b] The specification in a special demurrer to a complaint for uncertainty, in that it could not be ascertained therefrom "what was the character of the alleged possession of plaintiff of the property described," though not very clear, is sufficient to put the plaintiff upon notice that the complaint is objected to for not specifically alleging actual possession.—Knowles v. Crocker Estate Co., 125 Cal. 264, 57 Pac. 998.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 107, 108; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2249-2251, § 204.

§ 112. Amended Pleadings.

[a] If a defendant in ejectment desire to set up a title acquired pending the action, he can do so only by amending his answer, and averring that the title was acquired since the commencement of the action.—Reily v. Lancaster, 39 Cal. 354.

[b] In ejectment, there is no error in denying an application to amend the answer by setting up a judgment of a county court as a bar to the action; such courts having jurisdiction of no action, a judgment in which would bar an action in ejectment.—Kirsch v. Smith, 64 Cal. 13, 27 Pac. 942.

[c] Plaintiffs may be permitted to amend the number of the range described in their complaint. Such amendment corrects a mistake, and does not substitute a new cause of action.—Heilbron v. Heinlen, 72 Cal. 376, 14 Pac. 24.

[d] Where defendant settled on land under application to purchase, and plaintiff applied for and secured the same land by fraudulently representing that defendant had abandoned it, in ejectment by plaintiff it was not error to allow defendant to amend his cross-complaint by pleading a tender of the purchase price, and offer to deposit in court, as Code of Civil Procedure, section 473, permits amendments of pleadings in conformity with justice.—Crosby v. Clark, 132 Cal. 1, 63 Pac. 1022.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 108-111; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2251-2261, §§ 205-214.

§ 112½. Supplemental Pleadings.

[a] In an action of ejectment, a title acquired by the defendant pending the suit should be set up by a supplemental answer. McMinn v. O'Connor, 27 Cal. 238.

[b] Title acquired by defendant pendente lite, and other matters of defense arising subsequent to the commencement of suit, must be set up by a supplemental answer. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468.

[c] A title acquired by sheriff's deed executed after the commencement of an action of ejectment can only be made available by defendant by setting it up by supplemental answer.—Bagley v. Ward, 37 Cal. 121, 99 Am. Dec. 256.

[d] Supplemental answer will be presumed to have been filed by leave of court.—Roper v. McFadden, 48 Cal. 346.

§ 113. Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.

[a] A motion for a judgment on the pleading will not be granted where the answer raises an issue as to some portion of the property, though such answer may be demurrable for uncertainty.—Chester v. Field, 87 Cal. 422, 25 Pac. 493.

[b] Where the complaint in ejectment alleged that the plaintiff was seised in fee of the premises, and that defendant was in the unlawful and wrongful possession thereof, and wrongfully withheld the possession from plaintiff, and defendant denied merely that his possession and withholding were wrongfully and unlawful, it was proper to find for plaintiff.—F. A. Hihn Co. v. Fleckner, 106 Cal. 95, 39 Pac. 214.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 112; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2264, 2265, § 218.

§ 114. Motions to Strike Out.

[a] Averments in a complaint in an action of ejectment, which are immaterial or matters of evidence, should be stricken out as irrelevant, even where they consist of a deraignment of title.—Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 560.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2266-2268, § 220.

§ 116. Issues as to Title, Possession or Right to Possession.

[a] When the possession of the premises is put in issue by the answer of the defendant in an action of ejectment, the possession of the premises at the time the action was commenced becomes a material issue, which the plaintiff is bound to prove before he is entitled to recover.—Pope v. Dalton, 31 Cal. 218.

[b] The allegations as to time of seisin or ouster are not material, and the denial of them raises no issue, except where the mesne profits are in question.—Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414.

§ 117. Necessity of Proof of Title, Possession or Right to Possession—Source and Validity of Title.

[a] If the defendant in ejectment relies on a deed claimed to have been given to him by the plaintiff, but lost, he must prove, not only the existence of the deed, but its contents.—Sais v. Sais, 49 Cal. 264.

[b] Where both parties claim title from same source, plaintiff need not prove conveyance to person having source of title.—Frink v. Roe, 70 Cal. 305, 306, 11 Pac. 820.

[c] Where it appears by the verified answer that both parties claim title through a common source, the plaintiff need not prove title in his grantor.—McGorray v. Robinson, 135 Cal. 312, 67 Pac. 279.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 114-118; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2269-2281, §§ 222-228.

§ 118. —— Nature and Extent of Title.

[a] Possession, coupled with color of title, must prevail, except where a better title is shown in the defendants; and, where a plaintiff in ejectment pleads a fee-simple title, he is not compelled to prove the same; but can properly rely upon prior possession, if he choose to do so.—Winans v. Christy, 4 Cal. 70, 60 Am. Dec. 597.

[b] A plaintiff who bases his claim to property, or its possession, upon a legal title, cannot recover on the strength of an equitable title.—(Cal. 1867) Seaton v. Son, 32 Cal. 481.

§ 119. —— Time of Title or Right of Possession.

[a] Plaintiff in ejectment need only prove his right to possess and occupy at the beginning of the suit, and a variance between the proof and the allegation, both, however, fixing a date prior to suit brought, is immaterial.—Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361.

§ 120. Particular Elements or Requisites in Deraignment of Title.

[a] One deraigning title to property through a corporation must prove the legal existence of the corporation, as the recitals in deeds that the grantor was a corporation do not prove such corporate existence as against one claiming the property through another source of title.—Sonoma County Water Co. v. Lynch, 50 Cal. 503.

§ 121. Necessity of Proof of Title in all Coplaintiffs.

[a] Where a suit in ejectment is brought by four persons, and title is only shown as to three of them, judgment for all four will not be given.—Tormey v. Pierce, 42 Cal. 335.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 114; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2282, 2283, § 229.

§ 122. Evidence Admissible Under the Pleadings.

[a] Under general denial defendant may prove any fact which shows or tends to show that plaintiff had no right of entry when suit was brought.—Sparrow v. Rhoades, 76 Cal. 210, 9 Am. St. Rep. 197, 18 Pac. 245.

[b] A new plaintiff was substituted for the original plaintiff, who had conveyed to him pending the suit, by an order which declared that all the allegations and denials of the pleadings should apply to such new plaintiff. Among the allegations of the complaint to which the new plaintiff was thus committed was one that plaintiff at the time the action was brought was entitled to the possession of the land in dispute. Held, that it was error to admit in evidence the deed from the original plaintiff to the new one, as it was irrelevant to any issue made by the pleadings. Northern Ry. Co. v. Jordan, 87 Cal. 23, 25 Pac. 273.

[c] Under general denial defendant may show that deed by which plaintiff claims title is a mortgage and gives him no title. Hyde v. Mangan, 88 Cal. 325, 26 Pac. 180.

[d] In ejectment certain evidence held to constitute an equitable defense not admissible where not pleaded.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 119-123; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2283-2297, §§ 230-236.

§ 123. —— Title in General.

[a] Where party in ejectment relies upon documentary evidence of title and prior possession, if he fail in the former, he may still rely upon the latter. The failure to prove the paper title does not impair the just force and effect of the possession.—Morton v. Folger, 15 Cal. 275.

[b] Under an allegation of seisin in a complaint in ejectment, the plaintiff may establish any interest in the premises entitling him to possession.—Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 361.

[c] Plaintiff in ejectment describing property as a pre-emption claim, is not precluded from relying on any other title.—Coryell v. Cain, 16 Cal. 567.

[d] In ejectment under a denial of the plaintiff's possession, at the time of the alleged entry by the defendant, the latter may show that before his entry the plaintiff's previous title had been lost by abandonment or forfeiture.—Bell v. Brown, 22 Cal. 671.

[e] When a complaint in ejectment makes no mention of tax deeds as the foundation of the plaintiff's title, which are afterward offered in evidence, the defendants under the general denial of their answer may introduce any evidence, allowed by statute, to show the invalidity of the tax deeds, or the title acquired under them.—Roberts v. Chan Tin Pen, 23 Cal. 259.

[f] In an action of ejectment, when the plaintiff avers that he is owner of the premises, and the answer denies the fact, the defendant may show that the plaintiff has executed a deed to a third party before bringing the suit, although the defendant does not connect himself with the title of the third party.—Dyson v. Bradshaw, 23 Cal. 528.

[g] When the plaintiff in an action of ejectment proves his title by a patent granting the premises in controversy as "swamp and overflowed," the defendant cannot show that they are dry and fit for cultivation, if he has not brought, or offered to bring, himself into relations with the state or the United States.—Carder v. Baxter, 28 Cal. 99.

[h] Upon trial of an action of ejectment, the defendant cannot prove a conveyance of the land by the plaintiff after the commencement of the action, unless such defense is set up by the original or supplemental answer. Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467.

[i] Proofs will not be admitted under an answer in ejectment setting up title to only a portion of the demanded premises, unless it particularly describes such portion.—Anderson v. Fisk, 36 Cal. 625.

[j] In an action by a divorced wife against the administrator of the estate of her deceased husband to recover the possession of certain land which was formerly community property, and on which the husband during the marriage had filed a declaration of homestead, the judgment-roll in the action of divorce setting aside the land to the husband, together with a stipulation filed therein authorizing such disposition, and the will of the husband devising the land to third persons, are admissible in evidence under the general issue.—Stockton v. Knock, 73 Cal. 425, 15 Pac. 51.

[k] Under general denial defendant may show that deed from him to defendant, under which latter claims title, was void.—Sparrow v. Rhoades, 76 Cal. 211, 9 Am. St. Rep. 197, 18 Pac. 245.

[l] Under a denial of the title and ownership of the plaintiff the defendant may show, as a defense to an action of ejectment based upon the deed, that it was intended as a mortgage, without being required to plead an equitable defense.—Locke v. Moulton, 97 Cal. 21, 30 Pac. 957.

[m] Where a complaint stated a cause of action in ejectment, evidence of plaintiff's title was properly admitted, though the action was designated in the complaint as forcible entry and detainer.—Hayden v. Collins, 147 Cal. 259, 81 Pac. 1120.

§ 124. —— Limitation and Adverse Possession.

[a] In ejectment, plaintiff, under an averment of ownership in fee and of right to the possession at the commencement of the action, may prove that his grantor had been in adverse possession for more than five years before the commencement of the action.—Gillespie v. Jones, 47 Cal. 259.

[b] If the plaintiff in ejectment relies, to recover, only on the fact that the secretary of the interior awarded him the land as pre-emptor in a contest with the defendant, and that he paid for the land and obtained the receipt of the receiver of the local land office, and that he had cultivated and improved a part of the land, the defendant may prove that, when the plaintiff entered on the land, a large portion of it was, and ever since has been, in the adverse possession of the defendant or his grantors.—Conlan v. Quinby, 51 Cal. 412.

[c] If in ejectment the answer of the defendant is a mere denial of the allegations contained in the complaint, the defendant is not entitled to prove that he has been for five years in the adverse possession of the demanded premises.—McCreery v. Duane, 52 Cal. 262.

[d] In ejectment, where defendant pleads the statute of limitations by reference to the Code section relied on, as authorized by Code of Civil Procedure, section 458, he may show all facts necessary to constitute adverse possession under such section.—Hagely v. Hagely, 68 Cal. 348, 9 Pac. 305.

[e] Code of Civil Procedure, section 437, provides an answer must contain a denial of the allegations of the complaint and statement of any new matter constituting a defense or counterclaim. Held, that in a suit for possession of realty a claim of title by prescription, in order to be taken advantage of, should be pleaded.—Allen v. McKay & Co., 70 Pac. 8.

§ 125. —— Possession and Right to Possession.

[a] Under allegation of ouster a holding over by the defendant may be shown.—Garrison v. Sampson, 15 Cal. 93.

[b] In an action of ejectment, it is not requisite to the admission of evidence in favor of the plaintiff for the purpose of proving fraud in the entry of the defendant that such fraud should be alleged in the complaint. Depuy v. Williams, 26 Cal. 309.

[c] Where the strict legal title is not involved, and the plaintiff relies upon a right to recover premises founded upon a naked possession, the defendant may, under a simple denial of the plaintiff's right of possession, without pleading abandonment, prove abandonment by the plaintiff before the defendant's entry.—Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192.

[d] Where the plaintiff in an action to recover possession of land relies on a prior possession, he may introduce in evidence a judgment he recovered against a third party before the defendant's entry, and the acts of the officer thereunder, putting him in possession.—Moon v. Rollins, 36 Cal. 333, 95 Am. Dec. 181.

[e] Under a general denial, defendant may prove any fact going to show that plaintiff had no right of entry at the time the action was commenced.—Semple v. Cook, 50 Cal. 26.

[f] A right of possession in a defendant in ejectment, as administrator of an estate, may be proved under denials in the answer, that the plaintiffs are the owners or entitled to the possession of the demanded premises. Burgel v. Prisser, 89 Cal. 70, 26 Pac. 787.

[g] Where the complaint merely alleges plaintiff's ownership and right to possession, and that defendant is in possession, and refuses to surrender the same, and the answer denies the ownership and right to possession, defendant may prove any facts showing that plaintiff had no right of entry or possession when the action was commenced.—Jacob v. Carter, 36 Pac. 381.

§ 126. —— Equitable Defenses.

[a] Where defendant relies on an equitable title, he must plead it.—(Cal. 1867) Cadiz v. Majors, 33 Cal. 288; (1871) Kenyon v. Quinn, 41 Cal. 325.

[b] Where a husband brings ejectment, and relies on a deed to his wife making the demanded premises her separate property, and no equitable defense is set up, no issue is raised as to the legal effect of the deed. Swain v. Duane, 48 Cal. 358.

[c] Where defendant in ejectment relies on a superior equitable title arising on an executed parol gift which he is entitled to have specifically performed, such defense must be pleaded.—Manly v. Howlett, 55 Cal. 94.

§ 127. Stipulations.

[a] An executor, suing in ejectment, produced a stipulation, signed by the attorneys of both parties, admitting "that plaintiff's testator was owner of the premises prior to defendant's entry; that defendant entered under him, and now claimed the premises as her property, and is in possession; that defendant does not design by this to admit a tenancy at any time." Held, that this was prima facie sufficient to maintain the action; and that the legal effect of the facts admitted could not be qualified by the closing provision of the agreement.—Haight v. Green, 19 Cal. 113.

[b] The parties to an action in ejectment stipulated for a reference, and that plaintiff would within a certain time convey a portion of the disputed premises to defendant. On trial, in pursuance of such stipulation, judgment was rendered for plaintiff for possession of the entire tract. Held, that defendant had an equitable title to the land agreed to be conveyed to him by the stipulation.—Killey v. Wilson, 33 Cal. 690.

§ 128. Judicial Notice.

[a] An answer to an ejectment setting up forfeiture by noncompliance by the plaintiff with the mining rules should set out those rules, as the court will not judicially notice them.—Dutch Flat Water Co v. Mooney, 13 Cal. 534.

[b] For the purpose of supplying a complaint in ejectment omitting to allege seisin at the date of the commencement of the action held that the court, under Code of Civil Procedure, section 1875, subdivision, 8, will take notice of the fact that in Riverside county possession in 1905 for the purpose of putting in a crop would include the month of April, when the complaint was filed.—McGillivray v. Miller (Cal. App.), 84 Pac. 778.

§ 129. Presumptions as to Title.

[a] Under Statutes of 1861, page 589, and section 180 of the Practice Act, as amended in 1866, from a finding in ejectment that the defendants were in possession of the premises, and that the plaintiff deraigns title thereto under a patent from the United States issued to his grantor, and that the plaintiff was the owner thereof, and entitled to possession, and the defendants were trespassers thereon, though no fact is stated respecting defendants' claim of title, it will be presumed that the title was in plaintiff.—Morrill v. Chapman, 35 Cal. 85.

§ 130. Presumptions as to Possession or Right to Possession.

[a] Under Statutes of 1861, page 589, and section 180 of the Practice Act, as amended in 1866, from a finding in ejectment that defendants were in possession of the premises, and that plaintiff deraigns title thereto under a patent from the United States, issued to his grantor, and that plaintiff was the owner thereof and entitled to possession, and defendants were trespassers thereon, though no fact is stated respecting the defendants' claim of title, it will be presumed that plaintiff was entitled to possession.—Morrill v. Chapman, 35 Cal. 85.

[b] Where plaintiff in ejectment leased the premises before the action was brought, and, when defendants were found in possession, authorized the lessee to sue in plaintiff's name, it will be presumed that the lease was abandoned by mutual consent, and it cannot be urged as a defense that plaintiff was not entitled to possession.—Brandt v. Philippi, 82 Cal. 640, 23 Pac. 122.

[c] Where the findings show title in plaintiff, the right of present possession is presumed, as a matter of law.—McCarthy v. Brown, 113 Cal. 15, 45 Pac. 1.

§ 131. Burden of Proving Title.

[a] If the tenant can refuse to surrender to the landlord the premises leased, at the termination of the lease, on the ground that the landlord does not have the paramount title, and that the owner of the paramount title has made a demand on him for a surrender of the premises, it devolves on the tenant, in ejectment brought by the landlord, to prove both the paramount title, and that such demand was made before the landlord commenced his action.—Camarillo v. Fenlon, 49 Cal. 202.

[b] A recital in a patent that plaintiff's claim to the land in controversy was established "pursuant to the act of Congress of May 20, 1862, to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain, and the acts supplemental thereto," does not impose on him the burden of showing that the homestead was not acquired under laws requiring actual settlement and residence by the claimant.—Grant v. Oliver, 91 Cal. 158, 27 Pac. 596, 861.

[c] When the plaintiff in an action of ejectment proves a paper title his case is made out, and, if the defendant relies upon adverse possession under the statute of limitations he must prove either that no taxes were levied or assessed upon the land, or that he paid all taxes which were levied and assessed thereon.—Baldwin v. Temple, 101 Cal. 636, 35 Pac. 1008.

[d] Where prima facie legal title is shown by the plaintiff, such as would protect the defendant if judgment were obtained upon it, and the defendant claims another to be the real owner, he must support his right to make that claim by showing that he has some equity or defense against the real owner which he cannot maintain against the prima facie legal owner.—Giselman v. Starr, 106 Cal. 651, 40 Pac. 8.

[e] Where the city under which defendant holds as lessee, before the making of the lease, granted all its rights in occupied lands within a territory including the disputed premises, the burden of showing that the lands in controversy were unoccupied, and so not included in the grant, is on defendant relying on that fact as an affirmative issue. Goodwin v. Scheerer, 106 Cal. 690, 40 Pac. 18.

[f] The burden of proof is upon all persons coming into possession subsequent to the commencement of the action of ejectment to show affirmatively that their possession is rightful, and under a title not determined in the action, and was not taken by collusion with the defendants; and in the absence of a showing to the contrary, it will be presumed that they came in under the defendants. This presumption is not overthrown by showing that they came in under a stranger to the action, unless it is also shown that such stranger was in possession at or prior to the commencement of the action.—Scheerer v. Goodwin, 125 Cal. 154, 57 Pac. 789.

hearsay, does not appear to be erroneous. Beattie v. Crowdson, 124 Cal. 577, 57 Pac. 463.

[c] The admission of certain evidence held not error, where similar evidence had previously been given without objection.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

§ 134. —— Plats and Surveys.

[a] In an action of ejectment brought against a pre-emption claimant by a patentee from the state as of swamp and overflowed lands, the plat of the survey of the town in which the land is located is admissible for the purpose of showing the lines of the subdivisions, including the land.—Robinson v. Forrest, 29 Cal. 317.

[b] In an action of ejectment where the question in controversy was the position of the red line, or waterfront of San Francisco, held, that a diagram, made by the county surveyor and believed by him to be correct, though not an official plat, was admissible in evidence for the purpose of showing what the party offering it claimed to be the true position of the line.—People v. Klumpke, 41 Cal. 263.

[c] In an action of ejectment by the state for land in San Francisco claimed to be outside of the red line, or waterfront, a map purporting to have been made in 1864 by order of the state harbor commissioners, but not shown to have been approved or adopted by them, is not competent evidence in their favor to show the true location of the red line.—People v. Klumpke, 41 Cal. 263.

[a] The payment of taxes assessed on the demanded premises, by the defendant, is not evidence, in an action of ejectment, to show abandonment or disclaimer on the part of plaintiff.—Davis v. Perley, 34 Cal. 630.

[b] In an action of ejectment, where the plaintiff claims title under a deed executed to him on a given date, a prior deed of trust executed by his grantors, as security for an indebtedness due from them, is admissible in evidence as tending to show that they did not have the legal title to the premises at the time of the deed to the plaintiff; and the question whether the indebtedness has been paid and a reconveyance made by the trustees does not affect its admissibility.—Partridge v. Shepard, 71 Cal. 470, 12 Pac. 480.

[c] An occupant of land claimed possession from the administrator of an estate to the rights of which he succeeded. Held not error to admit evidence of the probate proceedings through which occupant claimed.—Avila v. Pereira, 120 Cal. 589, 52 Pac. 840.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 134-143; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2321-2366, §§ 254-277.

§ 136. —— Deeds.

[a] A deed of trust is a conveyance of the legal title; and, where the plaintiff claims under a conveyance made June 15, 1872, a deed of trust executed by his grantors January 29, 1872, is admissible, as tending to show that the title was not in plaintiff's grantors at the time his conveyance was made. The questions of the payment of the debt which the deed of trust was given to secure, and of the reconveyance of the land, do not affect the admissibility of the deed. Partridge v. Shepard, 71 Cal. 470, 12 Pac. 480.

§ 137. —— Public Lands.

[a] In an action to recover land, against one in possession of it as the public land of the United States under a pre-emption right, testimony which the defendant offers to establish, in part, his pre-emption right should not be rejected because his offer does not embrace every fact necessary to establish the defense.—Tyler v. Green, 28 Cal. 406, 87 Am. Dec. 130.

[b] When the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment, claims the premises under a title from the United States, and the defendant under a patent from the state as swamp and overflowed land, ceded by the United States, the former may introduce oral testimony to show that such land is not swamp and overflowed.—Thornton v. Thompson, 28 Cal. 602.

[c] In an action of ejectment brought against a pre-emption claimant by a patentee from the state as of swamp and overflowed lands, the plat of the survey of the town in which the land is located is not admissible for the purpose of proving, by the surveyor's descriptive notes found on the plat, that such subdivisions are swamp and overflowed.—Robinson v. Forrest, 29 Cal. 317.

[d] A certificate of the United States register that the grantor of plaintiff, as the agent of the state, has located land at his office in part satisfaction of lands granted to the state, is not admissible in evidence of the plaintiff's right to recover in ejectment.—Slaughter v. Fowler, 44 Cal. 195.

[e] An entry made by an alcalde in San Francisco, in 1846, of the presentation to him, by the claimants, of title papers to a lot made by a former alcalde, is evidence in ejectment tending to show that the claimants then made an open adverse claim to the lot. Sill v. Reese, 47 Cal. 294.

[f] An offer by defendant to show that the land in controversy was within the exterior boundaries of a Mexican grant when the declaratory statement of plaintiff's grantor was presented, and not, therefore, subject to homestead entry, was properly excluded, as too indefinite.—Grant v. Oliver, 91 Cal. 158, 27 Pac. 596, 861.

§ 138. —— Sale and Purchase Under Execution.

[a] If a sheriff's deed recites enough to identify the judgment, and to show the authority of the officer to sell, that is, that the sale was made by virtue of an execution issued upon a judgment in an action wherein —— was plaintiff and —— was defendant, it is admissible in evidence as proof of transmission of title.—Montgomery v. Robinson, 49 Cal. 258.

[b] Plaintiff claiming under execution sale must introduce judgment on which execution issued.—Leviston v. Henninger, 77 Cal. 462, 19 Pac. 834.

[c] In an action of ejectment, where the defendant claims the right to the possession of the property through a sale under an execution, it is necessary for him to introduce in evidence the judgment as the basis of the execution, and, if the enforcement of the judgment has not been stayed, the fact that an appeal therefrom has been taken does not prevent the judgment from being received in evidence and considered as a collateral fact in support of the execution.—Colton Land etc. Co. v. Swartz, 99 Cal. 278, 33 Pac. 878.

[d] Where, in ejectment, title was claimed under an execution sale on a judgment against one to whom a patent had issued, and who was shown to have been in possession until shortly before commencement of the action, it was error to exclude from the evidence the judgment-roll showing such judgment, the execution, levy, sale and sheriff's deed.—Robinson v. Thornton, 129 Cal. 12, 61 Pac. 946.

§ 139. —— Contracts to Convey.

[a] Conveyances executed by the owners of different lots of land, in pursuance of a verbal agreement to exchange the same, are admissible in evidence in an action by one claiming under one of the original grantees against an intruder who sets up by way of defense a want of title in the plaintiff, owing to the agreement to exchange having been verbal. The conveyances show that the contract has been carried into effect, and is not, therefore, void, under the statute of frauds.—Ryan v. Tomlinson, 39 Cal. 639.

[b] Defendant is entitled to prove contract of sale under which he took possession and erected improvements, whereby he became equitable owner and as such agreed with plaintiff's grantor as to division line.—Helm v. Wilson, 76 Cal. 484, 485, 18 Pac. 604.

§ 140. —— Mortgage.

[a] Plaintiff in ejectment claimed by succession to the estate of B. in the premises. Defendant set up a mortgage to himself from C., and foreclosure thereof. Held, that plaintiff might show an executory contract for the sale of the land by B. to C., and C.'s failure to comply with the terms thereof.—Palmer v. McCafferty, 15 Cal. 334.

§ 141. —— Partition or Division by Cotenants.

[a] An adjudication, in partition of a rancho, that certain defendants were owners in fee of the whole, held to be admissible evidence in a subsequent action of ejectment by one of them for a parcel thereof against persons claiming title under parties to the partition.—Hancock v. Lopez, 53 Cal. 362.

§ 142. —— Purchase Under Foreclosure.

[a] Plaintiff claiming under deficiency judgment must introduce the docketed deficiency judgment and return of sheriff on foreclosure showing what deficiency was.—Leviston v. Henninger, 77 Cal. 463, 19 Pac. 834.

[b] Plaintiff could not introduce a deed from the assignee of the purchaser on the foreclosure sale, executed after this suit was begun, on the ground that defendant had put the foreclosure in evidence as an outstanding title. There was no issue of outstanding title, and the foreclosure was only introduced to show that the lien on which plaintiff's title was based had been extinguished.—Robinson v. Thornton, 102 Cal. 675, 34 Pac. 120.

§ 143. —— Adverse Possession.

[a] The payment of taxes assessed on demanded premises by the defendant is not evidence in an action of ejectment to show possession and claim of title on his part.—Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630.

[b] In support of his plea of limitations, defendant introduced evidence of adverse possession in his landlord for the requisite period of time. Held, that a judgment in plaintiff's favor in an action brought against one claiming under the same landlord, accompanied by evidence that, pending that action, the landlord disclaimed any interest in the land, was admissible in plaintiff's behalf.—Dillon v. Center, 68 Cal. 561, 10 Pac. 176.

[c] In ejectment, evidence that plaintiff and his grantor paid the taxes on the land in suit is admissible to show the claim of title, and that it had not been abandoned.—Baum v. Reay, 96 Cal. 462, 29 Pac. 117, 31 Pac. 561.

§ 144. —— Right of Possession.

[a] In ejectment, evidence offered by plaintiff to prove that defendant entered with permission, and as tenant of plaintiff, is admissible.—Heath v. Wallace, 53 Cal. 436.

[b] Where neither party claims under a paper title, evidence offered by defendant tending to show that, prior to plaintiff's taking possession, the land had been in the possession of other parties, is immaterial and inadmissible.—Foot v. Murphy, 72 Cal. 104, 13 Pac. 163.

[c] In ejectment defendants offered in evidence the record of a judgment in favor of the administrator of one from whom they derived title against plaintiff's tenant for possession of the land in controversy. Plaintiff objected to its admission on the ground that he was not a party to the action. Held that, while the judgment was not admissible as bearing on the title, it was admissible to show where the right of possession was from the service of summons in the action.—Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 155, 24 Pac. 738.

§ 145. —— Prior Possession.

[a] The plaintiff in ejectment may show that when he was in possession be always claimed title, as that goes to explain his possession as being independent and not subordinate.—Piercy v. Sabin, 10 Cal. 22, 70 Am. Dec. 692.

[b] In an action to recover real estate, a written contract for the sale and conveyance of the land in question by the plaintiff to the defendant, and signed by both of them, is admissible in evidence to show that the plaintiff had the prior possession of the premises and that the defendant received the possession from him.—Frisbie v. Price, 27 Cal. 253.

[c] On the issue of prior possession in ejectment, the judgment-rolls in prior actions between the grantors of the plaintiff and the defendant are admissible in evidence as tending to prove title.—McCourtney v. Fortune, 57 Cal. 617.

§ 145½. —— Necessity or Sufficiency of Preliminary or Supplementary Proof.

[a] Constable's deed under execution where execution was against third party, cannot be read in evidence in an ejectment suit unless title is shown in the defendant in execution at the time of the levy and sale, or the counsel offering it connects it in some way with the issue between the parties to the suit.—McGarrity v. Byington, 12 Cal. 426.

[ab] Where a sheriff's deed is executed by a deputy in the name of the sheriff, whose term of office had expired at the time of the execution of the deed, the authority of the deputy must be shown to authorize such deed to be read in evidence in an action of ejectment.—Cloud v. El Dorado County, 12 Cal. 128, 73 Am. Dec. 526.

[b] Where no power is given executors to sell land, their deed is not admissible in evidence, except on proof of a compliance with the statutory provisions relating to sales by executors.—White v. Moses, 21 Cal. 43.

[c] A deed recited that the executors, the grantors therein, were authorized by the will "to sell his [the testator's] property in California, as therein mentioned and contained." Held inadmissible, without proof of the taking of the preliminary steps, or production of the will sufficient to prove the deed valid.—White v. Moses, 21 Cal. 43.

[d] Where there is evidence of the former possession of the party under whom defendant claims, the deed of such party is admissible on defendant's behalf.—Roper v. McFadden, 48 Cal. 346.

§ 146. Possession and Ouster.

[a] The plaintiff in an action of ejectment may offer in evidence a deed to the defendant to explain the latter's possession.—McMinn v. Mayes, 4 Cal. 209.

[b] Plaintiff has right to prove what part of land in dispute was occupied by one of the defendants in an action of ejectment against several defendants.—Ellis v. Janes, 10 Cal. 456.

[c] On the trial of an action of ejectment, a judgment rendered for the defendant in an action of forcible entry and detainer brought by a tenant of the plaintiff in ejectment against the defendant is not admissible in evidence to show actual possession in the defendant at that time, although that suit was conducted and expenses paid by the landlord, the plaintiff in ejectment.—Davis v. Perley, 30 Cal. 630.

[d] In an action against a county for land claimed by defendant to have been dedicated to the public use, evidence is admissible on plaintiff's behalf to prove that a certain person had been employed by the board of supervisors to look after fences on the property and to keep them in repair, and that in performing this service he acted as a servant of the county, since it tends to show the possession of the county.—Barry v. Sonoma County, 43 Cal. 217.

[e] If the defendant sets up limitations, evidence that he leased the land to a tenant, and instructed him to keep stock of other people off the land, is admissible as tending to sustain his allegation of possession.—Lucas v. Richardson, 68 Cal. 618, 10 Pac. 183.

[f] It is error to exclude evidence showing that defendant had torn down a part of plaintiff's house, as the erection and occupation of the house by plaintiff is important in determining the character of his possession, and any interference therewith is important on the issue of ouster.—Gray v. Dixon, 74 Cal. 508, 16 Pac. 305.

[g] In ejectment to recover possession of premises from a tenant, it was proper to show that defendant had continued in the occupancy of the land, and was withholding possession.—McKissick v. Ashby, 93 Cal. 422, 33 Pac. 729.

[h] In ejectment held proper to admit in evidence the assessment-roll, showing that the property was assessed to plaintiff.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

[i] In ejectment held proper to permit plaintiff to testify that he had paid taxes.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

§ 147. Title and Right to Possession.

[a] If plaintiff in ejectment shows that defendant accepted a lease of the premises from plaintiff, this is presumptive evidence of plaintiff's title, and is not overcome by proof that defendant was in possession when he executed the lease.—Abbey Homestead Assn. v. Willard, 48 Cal. 614.

[b] Defendant contended on appeal that plaintiff's deraignment of title in ejectment was defective because of an outstanding trust deed executed by M. The record contained a recital that plaintiff introduced a reconveyance, wherein all the interest which had been conveyed by the deed of trust executed by M. was reconveyed. The date of the reconveyance was eighteen years prior to the action of ejectment. Held, that the evidence did not show any outstanding title available against plaintiff at the time of the commencement of the action.—Baum v. Roper, 132 Cal. 42, 64 Pac. 128.

[c] Where plaintiffs in ejectment claimed that a deed from a prior owner, under which defendants, who were in possession, claimed title, was in fact a mortgage, and that plaintiffs had succeeded by a conveyance to the rights of the mortgagor, plaintiffs were not entitled to possession, in the absence of proof that the debt which the alleged mortgage was given to secure had been paid.—Hooper v. Young, 140 Cal. 274, 74 Pac. 140.

[d] In ejectment, held only necessary for plaintiff to show a better title from the common source.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

[e] The rule that plaintiff must recover on the strength of his own title held not applicable in an action based solely on the prior actual possession of plaintiff as against a mere trespasser, or one claiming only under a later possession.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

[f] Plaintiff held entitled to recover on a showing of occupancy as against defendants showing no title through any source within the exceptions in Civil Code, section 1006.—Dondero v. O'Hara (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 985.

§ 148. —— Grant, Conveyance or Deed.

[a] Recitals, in a deed given by a trustee, of facts showing that the grantee is one of the beneficiaries to whom the trustee, by the terms of the trust, was required to convey are prima facie evidence of such facts, in ejectment by the grantee against one not claiming to be beneficiary under the trust.—McCreery v. Duane, 52 Cal. 293.

[b] The production of a power of attorney authorizing the sale and conveyance of property, and a deed executed by the attorney purporting to be a grant, bargain and sale deed, reciting a consideration, makes a prima facie case sufficient to support a verdict in favor of the grantee, against the heirs of the grantor, in the absence of evidence to overcome it.—Mowry v. Mowry, 103 Cal. 314, 37 Pac. 398.

§ 149. —— Adverse Possession.

[a] Plaintiff in ejectment had inclosed the premises with a brush fence from two to three feet high, but offered no proof that he or his grantors had ever subjected them to any uses whatsoever. Held, that he was properly nonsuited.—Hutton v. Schumaker, 21 Cal. 453.

[b] A judgment, in an action of forcible entry and detainer, in favor of the plaintiff, has no tendency to prove abandonment by the defendant in an action of ejectment for those premises brought against the plaintiff in the first action by the defendant's grantees, or to prove that the original plaintiff had taken possession under color of title.—Roberts v. Unger, 30 Cal. 676.

[c] Where the plaintiff showed clearly a chain of title to the demanded premises, reaching back to the patent from the government, and there was at least substantial conflict as to whether the defendants, who claimed by adverse occupation, had occupied for such time, and in such manner, as would enable them to set up the statute of limitations, held, there was sufficient evidence to support a verdict for the plaintiff.—Hancock v. Burton, 73 Cal. 52, 14 Pac. 392.

[d] Where defendant in ejectment alleges, and introduces evidence to prove, adverse possession by himself at the time of its location by plaintiffs, who claimed under a certificate of purchase, from the federal government pursuant to such location, a failure by the court to find as to such adverse possession is reversible error, since Code of Civil Procedure, section 1925, which renders a certificate of purchase or location of land, issued by the federal government, prima facie evidence of title in the holder, also provides that such evidence may be overcome by proof that at the time of the location the land was in the adverse possession of the adverse party.—McTarnahan v. Pike, 91 Cal. 540, 27 Pac. 784.

§ 150. —— Mortgage or Foreclosure Sale.

[a] If one who has obtained a certificate of purchase from the state for a sixteenth or thirty-sixth section conveys the same, and the grantee gives him a mortgage to secure the purchase money, and he assigns the mortgage and debt to a third party, who forecloses and obtains a sheriff's deed, evidence of such fact tends to show that the right which was granted by the state by the certificate of purchase had vested in the holder of the sheriff's deed, and that he thereby became entitled to the possession of the premises.—Daniels v. Henderson, 49 Cal. 245.

§ 151. —— Descent or Demise.

[a] Where it appeared that the land had been the community property of the plaintiffs' father and mother; that the father died, and plaintiffs inherited one-half of the land, and their mother the other half; that the mother subsequently married the defendant, and afterward died, whereupon plaintiffs inherited from her two-thirds of her half, and the defendant the other third—a judgment that plaintiffs recover an undivided five-sixths of the land, instead of merely that plaintiffs were tenants in common of an undivided five-sixths of the land with the defendant, and should be let into possession thereof as such, is error, as being against evidence.—Burgel v. Prisser, 89 Cal. 70, 26 Pac. 787.

§ 152. —— Tax or Execution Sale.

[a] A deed of land under a tax sale is only prima facie evidence that no redemption was had, and a party who made a redemption may, in ejectment based on the title acquired by the deed, prove the fact of such redemption.—Cooper v. Shepardson, 51 Cal. 298.

[b] In ejectment against an execution debtor, plaintiff claimed under the sheriff's deed. Held, that plaintiff, to make out a prima facie case, need only show the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, the execution issued thereon, and the sheriff's deed; and that it was immaterial that the judgment was not entered or docketed at the time of the issue of the execution.—Los Angeles County Bank v. Raynor, 61 Cal. 145.

[c] Where, in ejectment, the plaintiff gives in evidence a judgment-roll showing a judgment in his favor and against defendants, an execution duly issued thereon, a sale to plaintiff, an attachment and sheriff's return showing a levy which had never been released, and evidence of possession subsequent to the levy and prior to the judgment in the first suit, and defendants offer no evidence, a finding for plaintiff is supported by the evidence.—Royon v. Guillee, 3 Pac. 672.

§ 153. —— Public Lands.

[a] The certificates of location and purchase of lands issued under the state laws are prima facie evidence of title in the holders, in the courts of that state.—Richter v. Riley, 22 Cal. 639.

[b] The recitation in a patent issued by the United States to one as heir of a homestead claimant, that such person is the heir of the homestead claimant and has performed the necessary conditions to perfect the homestead claim, is sufficient proof of the facts recited in an action of ejectment brought by the patentee.—Chant v. Raynolds, 49 Cal. 213.

[c] If a patent to land is issued to a railroad company under a grant made by Congress of alternate sections along the line of its route, and ejectment is brought on the patent against one who had settled on the land and acquired a pre-emption right before the land had been withdrawn from market, and he depends on the ground that the land officers were misled by false and fraudulent testimony of the agent of the railroad company, the facts that such agent swore that the land was vacant and unappropriated, and that the land officers did not know that the defendant was on the land, tend to show that the land officers were so misled.—Campbell v. Buckman, 49 Cal. 362.

[d] A certificate of location of state school lands, in the hands of the person to whom it is issued, or his vendees, is prima facie evidence of legal title, upon which they are entitled to recover in ejectment, as against one who does not show a better title.—Stanway v. Rubio, 51 Cal. 41.

[e] Where certificates of purchase of lands are surrendered, as required by law, for the purpose of obtaining a patent therefor, the issue of a patent for a portion of the land only, on the surrender of such certificate, does not destroy their effect as evidence of the ownership of the remainder, in the absence of evidence as to why the patent was not issued for the whole.—Wright v. Roseberry, 81 Cal. 87, 22 Pac. 336.

[f] Certificates of purchase of lands, and indorsements thereon, showing that patents have issued for part of the land described therein, together with the testimony of the surveyor general that patents have issued as noted in such indorsements, is sufficient proof of the patents to establish a prima facie case of ownership of the land patented, in the absence of an objection that the evidence is secondary, or on motion for nonsuit. Wright v. Roseberry, 81 Cal. 87, 22 Pac. 336.

§ 154. —— Equitable Title and Defense.

[a] An equitable defense in an action of ejectment must be distinctly proved.—Estrada v. Murphy, 19 Cal. 248; Lestrade v. Barth, 19 Cal. 660; Cadiz v. Majors, 33 Cal. 288; McCauley v. Fulton, 44 Cal. 355.

§ 155. —— Identity of Parties in Chain of Title.

[a] In ejectment upon the question of identity between the grantor in a deed and the holder of the title under a patent from the United States, in the deed the grantor described himself as "of the Island of Hawaii, Sandwich Islands," and the property as situated in Yuba county, and known as "Johnson's Ranch," and as having been originally granted to Pablo Gutieras by the Mexican government, "and has since then been confirmed to the party of the first part by the board of commissioners." In the patent, the residence of the patentee was not given, but he was referred to as the person filing the petition before the land commission for confirmation of his claim under the grant to Pablo Gutieras. The original deed was also produced in court, and the case was tried in a county where the grantor and his signature were well known, and no question had been made about it. Held, that a sufficient prima facie case of identity had been made out.—Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533.

§ 156. Possession.

[a] Fact that cattle and horses roamed over, and grazed upon, a particular tract of land does not of itself alone make out an actual possession of the land in the owner.—Sunol v. Hepburn, 1 Cal. 254.

[b] Fact that party had cattle on land, or was there for short periods himself, or that he claimed within given limits, is, in the absence of any inclosure or some visible physical signs of the extent of his boundaries or claim insufficient to show the fact of possession of any particular tract, when others were also in possession.—Wilson v. Corbier, 3 Cal. 166.

[c] Plaintiff in ejectment, relying on prior possession, showed that in 1856 he fenced in the premises, and thereafter cultivated them up to about the time of defendant's entry. Held, that possession was sufficiently established, without any direct testimony as to the efficiency of the fence.—Hestres v. Brannan, 21 Cal. 423.

[d] Where plaintiff relies on prior possession alone, proof that he had the land inclosed by a fence made of posts eight feet apart with two rails nailed on is not sufficient to establish such prior possession.—Black v. McGrath, 32 Cal. 15.

[e] Where the sole evidence of possession by plaintiff's grantor is that he filed a claim and affidavit, built a fence on one side of the land, ran furrows around it, put stakes at the corners and along the lines, occupied and cultivated a portion not embraced in the suit, and, while so occupying and cultivating, sold to plaintiff, but by consent remained in possession until his crop was off, it is not sufficiently established.—Spangle v. Dellinger, 42 Cal. 149.

[f] Proof that plaintiff entered into actual possession of part of the land, claiming the whole, under a deed describing the whole, is prima facie proof of prior possession, sufficient to go to the jury.—Donahue v. Gallavan, 43 Cal. 573.

[g] Evidence that plaintiff was in possession, by his servants, of houses on the demanded premises, makes a prima facie case, sufficient to go to the jury.—Donahue v. Gallavan, 43 Cal. 573.

[h] Evidence that defendant was the landlord of the tenants in possession is sufficient evidence of the defendant's possession.—Oakland Gaslight Co. v. Dameron, 67 Cal. 663, 8 Pac. 595.

[i] Where evidence does not show that defendant was in possession of any definite portion of tract or that plaintiff was ousted, judgment for defendant is proper.—Garner v. Wright, 77 Cal. 86, 19 Pac. 184.

[j] In an action of ejectment, proof that the plaintiff and his grantors had been in the possession of land for many years, and up to within a short time prior to the commencement of the action, claiming title thereto under conveyances from their respective grantors, establishes a prima facie case entitling the plaintiff to possession, and a nonsuit, granted upon the ground that the plaintiff had not shown any title in himself, is erroneous.—Leonard v. Flynn, 89 Cal. 543, 26 Pac. 1099.

[k] Code of Civil Procedure, section 318, provides that no action for the recovery of real property can be maintained unless plaintiff, his ancestor, or grantor was seised or possessed of the property within five years before suit. In ejectment for an unimproved lot, the evidence showed that plaintiff and his grantors had held the legal title to the same for more than ten years prior to the action, maintaining the fence inclosing it, and paying the taxes. Held, that the evidence was sufficient to support a verdict for plaintiff.—Baum v. Reay, 96 Cal. 462, 29 Pac. 117, 31 Pac. 561.

[l] In an action of ejectment, the possession of the land in controversy by the plaintiff prior to the intrusion of the defendant is, in the absence of any evidence in support of the defendant's right to the possession, sufficient to authorize a judgment of recovery.—Goodwin v. Scheerer, 106 Cal. 690, 40 Pac. 18.

[m] When the evidence for the plaintiff in an action of ejectment tends to prove prior actual possession of the demanded premises by the plaintiff, such prior possession is prima facie evidence of plaintiff's title, as against an intruder, who shows no better right; and it is improper to grant a nonsuit in such case. Zilmer v. Gerichten, 111 Cal. 73, 43 Pac. 408.

[n] In ejectment to recover possession of public land, plaintiff claimed under a deed from D., who had occupied the land without color or claim of title. There was no evidence of any act of possession on plaintiff's part, and several witnesses testified that defendants were in possession of the land in July, 1889. Held, that the evidence did not support a finding that D. sold and delivered possession to plaintiff in August.—Daubenbiss v. White, 31 Pac. 360.

[o] In ejectment by a widow against her husband's administrator for premises which had been set apart as a homestead to plaintiff and her minor children, it appeared that, from the time of defendant's appointment as administrator till the homestead was set apart, defendant collected the rents of the premises, and paid taxes; that two months thereafter plaintiff demanded possession of him, which he refused to give; that in his verified statement to the tax collector he included this homestead property; and that he leased part thereof to another. Held, that the evidence justified a verdict that defendant was in possession when the action was commenced.—Moore v. Moore, 34 Pac. 90.

[a] An ouster by defendant may be established without evidence that the land in dispute was so inclosed by him as to deprive plaintiff of possession.—Sheldon v. Mull, 67 Cal. 299, 7 Pac. 710.

[b] In ejectment, in which the answer denied ouster and the possession and withholding by defendants, it appeared that the land in dispute is a strip six feet wide, on which a water ditch is located. The evidence showed that defendants frequently put a pressure board in the ditch, which cut off plaintiff's water, and diverted it into a flume made by them. Held, that the evidence established a trespass, merely, and did not justify a judgment for plaintiff.—Tibbets v. Bakewell, 35 Pac. 1007.

§ 158. Course and Conduct of Trial—Separate Trials as to Several Defendants.

[a] In an action for the recovery of land brought against many defendants holding separate portions thereof, and having no common interest, it is proper for the court, without any motion therefor, to order separate trials, when it becomes apparent that the several parcels of land in controversy are separate and distinct, and that the several classes of defendants rely upon different sources of title. If separate trials in such cases be not allowed, the rule permitting the plaintiff to join, as defendants, all who are in possession of the tract for which he sues, will produce great inconvenience and injury.—Judson v. Malloy, 40 Cal. 299.

§ 159. —— Conduct of Trial.

[a] In ejectment, the statute authorizes the court to direct the jury to be conducted to view the land in controversy; but it does not authorize them to view any other property than that which is in litigation, nor to use the result of their examination as independent evidence in the case.—Wright v. Carpenter, 50 Cal. 556.

[b] After the equitable defense is dismissed, the court should proceed to the trial of the issues at law.—Thomas v. Lawlor, 53 Cal. 405.

[c] In ejectment equitable issues should be first tried.—Schieffery v. Tapia, 68 Cal. 188, 8 Pac. 878.

[d] Party waives right to have equitable defenses first tried by assenting to trial of whole cause.—George v. Silva, 68 Cal. 273, 9 Pac. 257.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 156; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2405-2507, §§ 302, 303.

§ 160. —— Scope of Inquiry and Powers of Court.

[a] Failure of defendant in ejectment to appear when the cause is called for trial—an answer being in—authorizes the court to try it without a jury.—Doll v. Feller, 16 Cal. 432.

[b] Where a defense arising from a verbal contract for the sale of the lands, accompanied with acts of part performance, is set up to an action of ejectment, the court must first pass upon this defense, and if, on hearing the evidence, the court determines the defense to be good, it should enjoin the further prosecution of the action, with its decree for a specific performance; and, on the other hand, if the court refuse the relief claimed by defendant, it should call a jury to determine the issue upon the general denial.—Weber v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 447.

[c] Upon a complaint containing the usual allegations in ejectment, and all that are necessary to quiet title, and a prayer that defendants be required to set forth their claims; that said claims be adjudged to be invalid, and plaintiff's title declared to be good; that plaintiff be restored to possession, and defendants be barred forever from asserting any claim to the land, and "for such other and further relief as shall be meet in the premises"—judgment would not be given without evidence, even if there was no answer.—Chester v. Field, 87 Cal. 422, 25 Pac. 493.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 160; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2407-2409, §§ 304-306.

161. —— Questions for Jury.

[a] In actions for the recovery of land, the question as to possession and identity of the land should be left for the jury.—Hicks v. Davis, 4 Cal. 67.

[b] It is not province of jury to determine whether a grant could fairly be presumed from a possession of a certain character.—Castro v. Gill, 5 Cal. 40.

[c] In a suit in ejectment, questions as to the proper parties plaintiff, as to the validity and effect of conveyances, and of proceedings in the probate court, and as to the loss of a conveyance and its contents, secondarily proved, are for the court exclusively Seaward v. Malotte, 15 Cal. 304.

[d] A jury need not be called to pass upon an equitable defense to an action of ejectment. The parties are entitled to a jury upon the legal issues; but as to the equitable defenses the court sits as a chancellor, and may or may not, according to its discretion, order issues to a jury.—Weber v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 447.

[e] The court, and not the jury, must pass upon the equitable title set up in the answer, and it must be sufficiently pleaded to warrant the court in granting a decree which will estop the further prosecution of the action.—Downer v. Smith, 24 Cal. 114.

[f] Where both parties in ejectment claim under a common grantor, and the answer sets up, not only a legal title in defendant, but also a parol contract by the common grantor to convey to him, and an entry thereunder, and alleges that plaintiff purchased subsequently, and entered on the land with notice of these transactions, the defense is both legal and equitable, and the court may first try the equitable defense, and refuse to plaintiff a jury trial on a traverse of the answer.—Bodley v. Ferguson, 30 Cal. 511.

[g] Where, upon examination of the complaint in an action of ejectment, there appears on its face no defect in the description of the demanded premises, it is a question of fact whether the description will apply to the land sought for.—Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467.

[h] Where there was evidence for the plaintiff tending to show that the amount of annual rent specified in an original parol lease was changed and increased by consent of the parties for the ensuing years, and that the defendant was in partial default of rent for the year in which the action was brought, it was a question of fact essential for the jury to determine as to the number and character of the leases entered into between the parties, and an instruction that the only lease established was the original parol lease for years, under which the defendant entered into possession, at a specified annual rental, is prejudicially erroneous, as touching upon a matter of fact, and taking from the jury the evidence for the plaintiff as to the change in the terms of rental.—Phelan v. Anderson, 118 Cal. 504, 50 Pac. 685.

§ 162. —— Submission of Issues.

[a] Where, to an action of ejectment, several defenses are set up, some legal and some equitable, it is error for the court to frame special issues involving these various defenses—legal and equitable—and submit them all together to a jury.—Weber v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 447.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 163; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2413-2415, § 311.

§ 163. Dismissal and Nonsuit.

[a] The plaintiff in an action of ejectment has a right to dismiss the action as to any of the defendants who have not been served with summons, or who have not appeared and set up an adverse claim.—Hinkel v. Donohue, 88 Cal. 597, 26 Pac. 374.

§ 164. —— By the Court Before Trial.

[a] In ejectment upon disclaimer of possession or interest in the property, a judgment for plaintiff cannot be entered. When such disclaimer is relied upon the only proper judgment is one of nonsuit.—Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 576.

[b] Where a cause of action in ejectment is stated, and as ground for relief in equity the complaint contains a separate statement of facts, upon which an injunction is asked, restraining the defendants from working or selling the property, the action should not be dismissed because the allegations for relief in equity show that the court has no jurisdiction to grant it.—McNeady v. Hyde, 47 Cal. 481.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 164, 165; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2415-2419, §§ 313-315.

§ 165. —— At Trial.

[a] A nonsuit should not be granted if there is evidence tending to prove all the material allegations of the complaint.—McKee v. Greene, 31 Cal. 418.

[b] Where defendant in ejectment moves for a nonsuit, and intends to rely on the point that a deed offered in evidence by plaintiff, and which was admitted without objection, does not include the demanded premises, he should distinctly so state in his motion.—Sanchez v. Neary, 41 Cal. 485.

[c] Where, in an action of ejectment, the landlord is made a joint defendant with his tenant, and upon the trial there is no proof that the landlord was in possession of any part of the demanded premises at the time the action was commenced, the landlord is entitled to a nonsuit.—Hussman v. Wilke, 50 Cal. 250.

[d] In ejectment for the possession of several distinct pieces of land, defendant may have a nonsuit as to such portions of the demanded premises as plaintiff's evidence shows were in his own possession at the time of the commencement of the action.—Dillon v. Center, 68 Cal. 561, 10 Pac. 176.

[e] Where in ejectment plaintiff introduced no evidence as to her right to the land, that she had been ousted of by defendant, or that she had any right to eject defendant, a nonsuit was properly granted.—Billings v. Pearson (Cal. App.), 86 Pac. 825.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See, also, 15 Cyc. 165; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2418, 2419, § 316.

§ 166. Instructions.

[a] In ejectment, where the defense is that plaintiffs' ancestor conveyed the premises to defendants' grantor, by a deed which plaintiffs claim was forged, it is error to instruct that a forged deed is void, and confers no rights, "except, if duly recorded, it is constructive notice of that fact."—Haight v. Vallet, 89 Cal. 245, 23 Am. St. Rep. 465, 26 Pac. 897.

[b] In ejectment, where defendant claims by virtue of the statute of limitations, and also by reason of an alleged settlement of the line between him and plaintiff by their respective grantors, failing which defenses there is no question of plaintiff's right to the land, it is not error to instruct that plaintiff is entitled to recover, unless defendant shows title in one of the ways pleaded, and that the fact that he has in good faith made improvements on the land in controversy cannot affect the verdict.—Helm v. Wilson, 89 Cal. 593, 26 Pac. 1103.

[c] Where, in an action of ejectment between persons claiming the right of possession of the bed of a river, several witnesses testified to the nature and character of the inclosures by farmers in that neighborhood of land of the same kind and quality as that sued for, including the plaintiffs', it was not error to charge that in determining whether the land in controversy was occupied and used for purposes to which it was adapted if plaintiffs occupied and used any portion of it, the jury might consider the manner in which the owners of land of like character in the same neighborhood commonly occupied and used such lands.—Hanson v. Stinehoff, 139 Cal. 169, 72 Pac. 913.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2419-2432, §§ 319-326.

§ 167. —— Form, Requisites and Sufficiency.

[a] Where the court had admitted in evidence the mesne conveyances through which plaintiff traced title, and the defendants were shown to be mere trespassers, it charged the jury with "the written evidence of title, together with the admissions of the parties, authorized them to find for plaintiff, since the execution of the papers had been passed on by the court." Held, that this instruction was correct as amounting only to an announcement of the law as to the effect of the conveyances, and of the admission of the defendants.—Stark v. Barrett, 15 Cal. 362.

[b] In an ejectment suit, the court instructed the jury that they must be satisfied that plaintiff's grantor had had "actual bona fide occupation, and had subjected the land to his will and control for some time." Held, that this instruction was proper, and that the word "occupation" was not too strong, it not signifying, from the connection in which it was used, anything more than "possession," and it not appearing to have been otherwise understood by the jury. Lawrence v. Fulton, 19 Cal. 683.

[c] In ejectment, it is error to charge that, defendant being in possession, plaintiff cannot recover, unless he prove an earlier and better possession, the use of the term "better" tending to mislead.—Sweeney v. Reilly, 42 Cal. 402.

[d] Instructions upon the subject of adverse possession by a tenant in common are to be taken together and considered as a whole; and if, when so considered, the law as to adverse holding between such tenants is correctly stated, the fact that one of the instructions taken by itself is not complete upon that subject will not vitiate the charge to the jury, but the jury will be deemed to have properly applied the law as stated by the charge taken as a whole.—Feliz v. Feliz, 105 Cal. 1, 38 Pac. 521.

[e] In ejectment, an instruction that, if the jury find for plaintiff, their verdict will be that they find for plaintiff for the recovery of the possession of the premises described in the complaint, is not objectionable, as requiring the jury to give a verdict for the whole premises, where the answer raises no question as to the amount of land plaintiff might recover, and defendant asks for no instruction with reference to the amount of such land.—Feliz v. Feliz, 105 Cal. 1, 38 Pac. 521.

§ 168. —— Evidence in General.

[a] Where defendants claimed title by adverse possession, and there was evidence to support that defense, an instruction ignoring such defense, and directing the jury to find for the plaintiff if he established the title set up by him, is erroneous.—Heilbron v. Heinlen, 72 Cal. 376, 14 Pac. 24.

§ 169. —— Title and Right of Possession.

[a] In an action for the recovery of a portion of a tract of land, both parties relying on possession, and the defendant proving a prior possession by actual inclosure of the entire tract, it was error to instruct the jury that the defendant's possession was not valid, unless in conformity with the preemption laws of the United States, or the possessory law of this state.—Bradshaw v. Treat, 6 Cal. 172.

§ 169½. Verdict and Findings—Sufficiency in General.

[a] Where the court has erroneously admitted evidence that, pending the action, plaintiff conveyed the premises to a third person, where such conveyance has not been set up in the pleading, the refusal to find the fact which it tends to establish is not error, since no material issue on that point is raised.—Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 467.

[b] In ejectment, the court will, if requested, specify in the findings the facts constituting the claim of title set up by the opposite party.—Morrill v. Chapman, 35 Cal. 85.

[c] In ejectment, general verdict is sufficient.—Joy v. McKay, 70 Cal. 445, 11 Pac. 763.

[d] Where, in ejectment, defendant pleaded a bar of the action, and, by cross-complaint, averred adverse possession for five years, under claim of right founded upon a written instrument, but the court failed to find upon either issue, although there was evidence to support them, the judgment must be reversed. Christy v. Spring Valley Waterworks, 84 Cal. 541, 24 Pac. 307.

[e] Where the answer in an action for the recovery of real estate set up as a defense that the action was barred by Code of Civil Procedure, section 318, which requires the plaintiff or his predecessors to have been seised or possessed of the property within five years, and the court found that the action was not barred by said section, such finding was, in effect, that plaintiff or his predecessors had been in possession within five years, and was a sufficient determination of an issue raised by another defense pleaded, which depended upon such question of fact, although no finding was expressly made on that issue.—Baum v. Roper, 145 Cal. 116, 78 Pac. 466.

[f] Where, in ejectment to recover a storeroom under a lease of the entire building from one of defendants, the complaint alleged a conspiracy between defendants to withhold the property from plaintiff, a finding that the lease gave plaintiff the right of possession of the entire building except such storeroom, which was occupied by the other defendant, negatived the issue of conspiracy.—Schwannecke v. Goodenow, 52 Pac. 588.

[g] In ejectment against the lessor and another lessee, a finding that plaintiff lessee had no right of possession need not dispose of the relative rights and liabilities of defendants in the property in controversy.—Schwannecke v. Goodenow, 52 Pac. 588.

[h] In ejectment, a finding held to support a judgment for plaintiff. Civ. Code, sec.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 166-172; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2432-2450, §§ 327-345.

§ 170. —— Failure to Specify on Which Count or Defense Finding is Based.

[a] A judgment in ejectment will be reversed, if there was a general verdict, without designating upon which one of several defenses set up in the answer it was rendered, if it appear that some of the defenses were insufficiently pleaded.—Anderson v. Fisk, 36 Cal. 625.

§ 171. —— Designation or Description of Property.

[a] A verdict finding that plaintiff is entitled to recover the land in controversy is sufficient, and the words "in accordance with the United States survey," appended at the end, will be presumed to be consistent with the former part, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, and may be rejected as surplusage.—Muir v. Meredith, 82 Cal. 19, 22 Pac. 1080.

[b] A finding in ejectment that "defendant withheld the east half of section 13" is a sufficient finding that he withheld the east half of section 31, where that is the only section mentioned in the complaint.—Johnson v. Vance, 86 Cal. 128, 24 Pac. 863.

[c] In ejectment, the verdict was that plaintiff was "entitled to the possession of the land described within the following boundaries," etc.; but there was nothing to show that the verdict referred to the land described in the complaint or answer, or the patents and deeds introduced in evidence, and no natural monuments were mentioned in the boundaries given. Held, that the verdict was insufficient.—Northern Ry. Co. v. Jordan, 87 Cal. 23, 25 Pac. 273.

§ 172. —— Designation of Title, Estate, or Interest.

[a] A finding that defendant has a good and perfect title to the demanded premises supports a judgment for him, whether it is to be regarded as a finding of fact or a conclusion of law.—Frazier v. Crowell, 52 Cal. 399.

[b] Finding in an action of ejectment that the plaintiff is the owner of the land in controversy is a sufficient finding that the defendants are not the owners.—Coates v. Cleaves, 92 Cal. 427, 28 Pac. 580.

[c] Findings which show a paramount source of title, with mesne conveyances to plaintiff therefrom, antedating the commencement of the action, discloses title in the plaintiff, carrying with it the right of possession, and the withholding of the possession from one who is seised of the premises is presumptively adverse to his right and is wrongful.—McCarthy v. Brown, 113 Cal. 15, 45 Pac. 14.

[d] A finding, as a conclusion of law, in an action to recover real estate, that defendant is entitled to the possession until paid for improvements, which is neutralized by a finding that defendant's possession is unlawful, does not authorize a judgment for defendant.—Moffit v. Rosecrans, 136 Cal. 416, 69 Pac. 87.

[e] Findings, in an action to recover real estate, that plaintiff is entitled, "on the conditions hereinafter expressed," to the possession of the property in question, and which require the payment of a certain sum to defendant for improvements before plaintiff shall recover the possession, are insufficient to authorize judgment for plaintiff for the want of findings on the issue of ownership, or that plaintiff is entitled to possession.—Moffit v. Rosencrans, 136 Cal. 416, 69 Pac. 87.

[f] In an action of ejectment, where the plaintiff recovered judgment, subject to a homestead claim upon part thereof, and there is no finding in favor of either party as to the ultimate facts of title and right of possession in issue, and no facts are found as to the alleged homestead, and as to whether or not it attached to the premises prior to the title acquired by plaintiff, the judgment is not sustained, and must be reversed.—The Wickersham Banking Co. v. Rice, 137 Cal. 506, 70 Pac. 546.

[g] Where defendants in ejectment claim title, possession, and right of possession under an alleged verbal gift from plaintiff's ancestor, a finding that such ancestor "took title to the land in his own name, and did not promise that he would then or thereafter convey the same to defendants, and that he never did convey to them," and that plaintiff is the owner and seised in fee of the whole property is sufficient.—Eva v. Symons, 145 Cal. 202, 78 Pac. 648.

§ 173. —— Ouster by and Possession of Defendant.

[a] Where, in ejectment, issue is taken on the allegation of possession by defendant at the commencement of the action, and on this issue evidential facts were found by the court, but there was no finding thereon, the decision of the court cannot be sustained.—Soto v. Irvine, 60 Cal. 436.

[b] Though "wrongful" withholding of possession is gravamen of action, word "wrongful" need not be used in complaint or findings.—Johnson v. Vance, 86 Cal. 131, 24 Pac. 863.

[c] Where plaintiff in ejectment alleges possession by defendant, and he admits it, it is not necessary that the court should find that defendant was in possession, as findings on to admitted facts are not required.—Johnson v. Vance, 86 Cal. 128, 24 Pac. 863.

[d] In ejectment, a finding that defendant "ousted the plaintiff" is sufficient, since the probative facts need not be stated.—McCarthy v. Brown, 113 Cal. 15, 45 Pac. 14.

[e] A finding that, on a certain date, "defendant did oust and eject plaintiff from the possession of said lot, ... and has ever since wrongfully and unlawfully withheld possession from plaintiff," is a sufficient finding of the fact of uster, though placed under the heading "Conclusions of Law"; the use of the words "wrongfully and unlawfully," in describing the withholding, being harmless surplusage.—McCarthy v. Brown, 113 Cal. 15, 45 Pac. 14.

§ 173½. —— Joint or Several Verdict.

[a] In ejectment the verdict may be joint against several defendants without specifying their respective lots in a whole tract, where they file a joint answer, which contains no averment as to the particular portion of land occupied by each, no proof being offered on the point, no damages being claimed, and defendants being in possession. McGarvey v. Little, 15 Cal. 27.

[b] Where several defendants in ejectment unite in an answer amounting to a general denial, a joint general verdict is proper, though the answer concludes with a prayer for separate verdicts. To entitle defendants to separate verdicts they should set forth with specific description the parcels which they severally occupy or claim, and thus direct the attention of the plaintiff to the course of defense upon which they will separately insist.—Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28.

§ 174. —— Incorrect, or Insufficient Verdict or Finding.

[a] Inadvertent finding that plaintiff was in possession at commencement of suit will not avoid judgment when pleadings admit and other findings indicate that defendant was in possession.—Fisher v. Slattery, 75 Cal. 329, 17 Pac. 235.

§ 175. —— Special Verdict.

[a] In a suit in ejectment, to the question whether plaintiff had notice of a sale of the property, the special finding was, "Yes, if possession is notice." Held, that the response was equivocal, and insufficient for that reason.—Woodson v. McCune, 17 Cal. 298.

§ 176. —— Responsiveness to Issues.

[a] In an action of ejectment, a verdict "in favor of the plaintiff against the defendants for the possession of the premises described in the complaint herein, and the sum of one hundred and sixty-five dollars damages," is a general verdict, covering all the issues, and the words, "for the possession of the premises described in the complaint herein," do not limit the finding to any particular fact or issue.—Hutton v. Reed, 25 Cal. 478.

[b] In an action of ejectment, where the complaint alleges seisin in the plaintiff, a finding of prior possession in the defendant does not meet the issue as to title.—Knight v. Roche, 56 Cal. 15.

[c] In an action of ejectment, and for use and occupation, where defendant denied the entry, charged as unlawful, and the court found that he did make the entry and, in a separate sentence, found "the loss of said rents, issues, and profits in the sum of seventy-five dollars," such findings, though clumsily drawn, substantially cover the issues.—Thompson v. Brannan, 76 Cal. 618, 18 Pac. 783.

[d] In ejectment based on a tax deed, where it is essential to plaintiff's case to prove each fact going to establish the validity of his deed, an allegation in the answer of payment of the tax before sale of the property does not create a material issue, requiring a finding thereon, the fact being covered by a finding as to the validity of the deed.—Cooper v. Miller, 113 Cal. 238, 45 Pac. 325.

§ 177. —— Construction and Operation.

[a] A general verdict will bind all the defendants in ejectment, unless they answer separately or demand separate verdicts.—Ellis v. Jeans, 7 Cal. 409.

[b] Where the complaint avers seisin and ouster on a certain date, and the court finds that plaintiff was owner on a prior date, and conveyed before the date named in the complaint, the property going into the hands of defendant, who was in possession from that time until the beginning of the action, the finding covers all the material issues, though there is no express finding as to the issue of ownership on the date named in the complaint.—Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 414.

[c] When the legal title of the plaintiff in ejectment is admitted, the findings of a jury upon special issues submitted to it by the court, where the matter to be tried is one of purely equitable defense, are not binding upon the court.—Wallace v. Maples, 79 Cal. 433, 21 Pac. 860.

[d] A verdict in an action of ejectment, whereby the jury "find for the plaintiff, and judgment in the sum of eleven hundred and seventy-five dollars," though informal, must be construed to be a general verdict, with a special finding of the value of the rents and profits during the whole period of the wrongful withholding, and is sufficient to support a judgment that the plaintiff recover the possession of the premises and "the sum of eleven hundred and seventy-five dollars rents and profits" and costs.—Johnson v. Visher, 96 Cal. 310, 31 Pac. 106.

Digitized by Google

[e] A cross-complaint to quiet title in an action of ejectment presents only a legal, and not an equitable, defense, and the verdict of the jury in such action as to the amount of the damages suffered by the plaintiff is not advisory, but conclusive, except as against the power of the court to grant a new trial. The court cannot disregard the verdict, and make findings inconsistent therewith as to the amount of the damages.—Mills v. Fletcher, 100 Cal. 142, 34 Pac. 637.

§ 178. New Trial for Cause—Grounds.

[a] Where plaintiff relies on a paper title and recovers judgment, and after trial defendant discovers that prior to the commencement of the action plaintiff had conveyed the title to a third person, a new trial should be granted.—Crammer v. Porter, 41 Cal. 462.

[b] Where it was clearly established that plaintiff had possessory title, and that the withholding by defendants was unlawful, and judgment went for defendants, it is proper to grant a new trial.—Johnson v. Hancock, 4 Pac. 1093.

§ 179. Judgment—Form, Requisites, and Sufficiency.

[a] That one codefendant had surrendered possession to the other authorizes a finding of possession by one and not by the other, and judgment thereupon against the one in possession only.—Burke v. Table Mountain Water Co., 12 Cal. 403.

[b] In ejectment against several defendants occupying different portions of property sued for, several judgments may be entered and at different times—and this, whether upon trial, on separate findings or verdicts, or on findings by the court, or after default.—Lick v. Stockdale, 18 Cal. 219.

[c] To a suit in ejectment, an equitable defense, imperfectly pleaded, was set up. The trial was by the court, and the findings did not distinctly show defendant's equity as against the plaintiff's claim. Held, that the judgment for the plaintiff must be affirmed. Meador v. Parsons, 19 Cal. 294.

[d] In an action against several defendants sued jointly, where defendants sever their answers, but do not demand separate trials, and the jury find specially that defendants are severally in possession of separate parcels of the land, a joint judgment against all or part of the defendants is erroneous.—Leese v. Clark, 28 Cal. 26.

[e] In an action against several defendants sued jointly, where defendants sever their answers, but do not demand separate trials, and the jury find specially that defendants are severally in possession of separate parcels of the land, the entry of a several judgment against part of the defendants is not a discontinuance of the action, or an abandonment as to the others.—Leese v. Clark, 28 Cal. 26.

[f] In an action against several defendants sued jointly, where defendants sever their answers, but do not demand separate trials, and the jury find specially that defendants are severally in possession of separate parcels of the land, an erroneous entry of a joint judgment does not preclude plaintiff from trying for and having several judgments against defendants.—Lessee v. Clark, 28 Cal. 26.

[g] Where there is a finding in ejectment that plaintiff holds an interest in common with others in the demanded premises, it is proper for the court to define in the judgment the extent of his interest.—Mahoney v. Middleton, 41 Cal. 41.

[h] In a judgment in ejectment, if the land recovered is described as bounded by any object, so that it appears upon the record that its boundaries are capable of being identified in the field, the judgment upon its face is not void for uncertainty.—Lawrence v. Davidson, 44 Cal. 177.

[i] A judgment sufficiently describes the land in controversy, by calling for a well-ascertained beginning point, from whence the land is to be run to a designated monument, a "station fence post," and then giving the course of every other call in the description.—Muir v. Meredith, 82 Cal. 19, 22 Pac. 1080.

[j] Where the complaint in ejectment alleges that defendant is in possession of the whole of a section of land, and the answer alleges he is in possession of only the east half, a judgment declaring plaintiff owner of the east half will not be reversed because it fails to find as to the west half, as it is an immaterial issue.—Johnson v. Vance, 86 Cal. 128, 24 Pac. 863.

[k] A judgment for the recovery of land entered in September, 1891, described a certain tract, but excepted from its effect such parts "as were sown to grain by the defendant during the fall of 1890 and the winter of 1891." Held, that the term "winter of 1891" referred to the winter of 1890-91, and the description is prima facie sufficient to identify the land excepted.—Rosenthal v. Mathews, 100 Cal. 624, 34 Pac. 624.

§ 179½. —— Default Judgments.

[a] A sued in ejectment B, the tenant of C. B reported to C, whose counsel put in a demurrer, and began to prepare a defense to the suit. Pending this preparation and before argument on the demurrer, B, fraudulently and collusively with A, withdrew the demurrer. Held, that a judgment by default for A was properly set aside, and C properly admitted to defend.—Barrett v. Graham, 19 Cal. 632.

[b] Where ejectment is brought against a tenant, and he permits a default to be entered, the landlord may, on proper showing made in the name of the tenant, have the default vacated.—Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 488.

[c] Where, in ejectment, default and judgment were taken and rendered against a tenant without the knowledge of his landlord, a motion to set aside the default and vacate the judgment was properly granted.—Mowry v. Nunez, 33 Pac. 1122.

[d] Where the defendants, after the commencement of an action in ejectment, and before default, had conveyed their interest in the land in controversy to another, who did not join in the motion or ask to have the action continued in the names of the defendants, held, that an order should be affirmed, refusing to open the default.—Moore v. Kellogg, 58 Cal. 385.

[e] A judgment by default in ejectment against Indians who are ignorant and unacquainted with modes of judicial proceedings may be reopened on affidavits of merits made by counsel.—Byrne v. Alas, 68 Cal. 479, 9 Pac. 850.

§ 180. —— Extent of Relief or Recovery.

[a] The plaintiff is as much entitled to recover the improvements, which are fixtures, as the land.—McMinn v. Mayes, 4 Cal. 209.

[b] Where, in ejectment, the defense alleged is based on a verbal contract of sale, accompanied with acts of part performance, taking the contract from the operation of the statute of frauds, and defendant's equity is sustained by the evidence, the court will decree a conveyance to him from plaintiff and also enjoin further prosecution of the action. Weber v. Marshall, 19 Cal. 447.

[c] A plaintiff in ejectment, suing for an undivided interest in land, may recover an interest less than the one sued for.—(Cal. 1863) Halsey v. Martin, 22 Cal. 645.

[d] The plaintiff in an action of ejectment cannot ask that he be adjudged the owner and put into possession, and that the defendant be enjoined from claiming title to the land recovered. He must rely upon his judgment as a bar.—Doyle v. Franklin, 40 Cal. 106.

[e] Growing crops, as between a successful plaintiff in ejectment and the evicted defendant, belong to the realty.—Huerstal v. Muir, 64 Cal. 450, 2 Pac. 33.

[f] In an action of ejectment, where the answer avers that the deed under which the plaintiff deraigns title was intended as a mortgage to secure a debt due to the plaintiff, and seeks a redemption of the premises, the judgment should provide for the payment of the mortgage debt within a designated time, and in default thereof that the property be sold, and the proceeds applied to such payment.—Healey v. O'Brien, 66 Cal. 517, 6 Pac. 386.

[g] In an action in the nature of ejectment, the court found that the plaintiff had advanced the purchase price on behalf of the defendant, and that he held the legal title in trust for him, and ordered that, upon tender of the amount due, the plaintiff execute deed of the premises to defendant; and further, that in case of plaintiff's failure to do so, the clerk of court should, as commissioner, execute and deliver the same. Held, that the plaintiff could not object to the decree that, in the event of his refusal to make the deed, it deprived him of his security without payment, as it was incumbent on the defendant to tender and deposit the money with the commissioner before he was entitled to obtain the deed.—Ward v. Matthews, 73 Cal. 13, 14 Pac. 604.

[h] Where defendant in his cross-complaint alleged a notice of rescission prior to the filing of the same, and expressed a willingness to surrender possession to plaintiff on payment by him of the amount paid on the purchase price, the court might properly award such relief, less value of rental from the date of the rescission to the date of the trial, and embody it in its judgment. But it was error to give judgment for such relief and also to leave the defendant in possession.—Belger v. Sanchez, 137 Cal. 614, 70 Pac. 738.

[i] Where an intervener in ejectment prays for only part of the demanded premises, it is error to render judgment in his favor for the whole premises, and enjoin plaintiff from prosecuting or maintaining an action therefor.—Reay v. Butler, 7 Pac. 669.

[j] Recovery cannot be had in ejectment for land not specified in the complaint.—Scott v. Rhodes, 41 Pac. 878.

Effect of judgment in ejectment on after-acquired title. See Judgment, § 407.

[a] A judgment in ejectment does not transfer to the successful party the title of the adverse party, but, if presented in the proper mode whenever such adverse title is drawn in issue, it shuts out all proof of such adverse title. Its effect bears a closer resemblance to an extinguishment than a transfer of the adverse title. The judgment awards the possession to the prevailing party because he had title at the commencement of the action, and because the losing party had no title, or not such a title as would authorize him to withhold the possession; but it neither directly nor indirectly transfers the title.—Mahoney v. Middleton, 41 Cal. 41.

[b] A judgment for plaintiff raises the presumption that defendant was shown to be in possession at the time of the commencement of the action.—Tubbs v. Ghirardelli, 45 Cal. 231.

[c] Judgment in ejectment concludes parties and privies as to all matters in issue in suit.—Thrift v. Delaney, 69 Cal. 191, 10 Pac. 475.

[d] Judgment does not bar parties from showing in subsequent action, new matter giving defeated party title or right to possession.—Thrift v. Delaney, 69 Cal. 191, 10 Pac. 475.

[e] Prior to the 1st of May, 1872, a purchaser pendente lite of the premises in controversy in an action of ejectment from a defendant in possession thereof was bound by the judgment afterward rendered in the action; and such judgment is admissible against him in a subsequent action brought by him to recover possession of the same premises from the plaintiffs in the prior action.—Partridge v. Shepard, 71 Cal. 470, 12 Pac. 480.

[f] Judgment in favor of defendant for costs rendered on special verdict that plaintiff was owner and entitled to possession and that defendant had not withheld possession from him does not conclude plaintiff's title. Hughes v. Wheeler, 76 Cal. 231, 18 Pac. 386.

[g] Former judgment in ejectment against defendant does not bar second ejectment suit if he remains in possession.—Southern Pacific R. R. Co. v. Purcell, 77 Cal. 71, 18 Pac. 886.

[h] A former judgment in ejectment in favor of the appellant is conclusive in a subsequent action to quiet title brought by the respondent, the grantee of a purchaser from the defendant in ejectment, who took pendente lite, with sufficient notice of the pendency of the action.—McLean v. Baldwin, 136 Cal. 565, 69 Pac. 259.

§ 182. Execution and Enforcement of Judgment.

[a] Where a sheriff, in executing a writ of possession, finds other persons than those named in possession of the property, and there is a reasonable doubt as to whether or not he has a right to remove them, he may demand indemnity.—Long v. Neville, 36 Cal. 455.

[b] On the issue as to the right of one not a party to an ejectment suit to remain in possession of the property in controversy after judgment, he has the burden of showing that his possession was rightful, and under a title that had not been determined in the action in ejectment, or that possession was not taken by collusion with defendants in the action.—Scheerer v. Goodwin, 125 Cal. 154, 57 Pac. 789.

§ 183. —— Form and Requisites.

[a] If, in a writ of possession issued on a judgment in ejectment, the land recovered is described so that its boundaries appear on the fact of the writ to be possible of identification by the sheriff in the field, the writ is not void for uncertainty of description.—Lawrence v. Davidson, 44 Cal. 177.

§ 184. —— Right to Possession and Writ Therefor.

[a] If plaintiff dies after judgment in his favor has been rendered, a writ of restitution may be issued on the judgment, at the instance and for the benefit of his successor in interest in the property.—Franklin v. Merida, 50 Cal. 289.

§ 185. —— Alias Writs.

[a] On the hearing for the issuance of an alias writ of possession in ejectment, evidence of a resurvey made after the trial by the surveyor who had testified on the trial was not improper, though the findings and judgment did not require any additional survey to be made, the survey bearing on the question whether the defendant had reentered into possession of any of the plaintiff's land as described in the judgment.—Dutra v. Pereira, 135 Cal. 320, 67 Pac. 281.

[b] Where judgment for plaintiff in ejectment is fully executed by putting plaintiff in possession, an alias writ of possession cannot issue except upon an adjudication that the person against whom the writ is to run is guilty of a contempt.—Rousset v. Reay, 31 Pac. 900, 32 Pac. 171.

[c] A motion for an alias writ of possession should not be entertained where the lapse of time after re-entry is sufficient to create a title in an adverse possessor, and bar an action of ejectment.—Rousset v. Reay, 31 Pac. 900, 32 Pac. 171.

[d] Plaintiff having obtained judgment in ejectment, a writ of possession was issued and executed in 1882 against defendants and one M, who was not a party to the suit, and a few months later M re-entered, and remained thereafter in exclusive possession. In 1889, plaintiff moved for an alias writ of possession against defendants and M. Held, that M could show on such motion that he was not a member of defendants' family, and that his possession was open and notorious, and that he was the owner of the premises in dispute, and was not a party to the ejectment suit.—Rousset v. Reay, 31 Pac. 900, 32 Pac. 171.

§ 186. —— Persons Subject to Ouster.

[a] The persons in possession of premises at the commencement of an action of ejectment to which he is not a party cannot be dispossessed by virtue of a writ of habere facias issued under a judgment for plaintiff in said suit.—(Cal. 1863) Fogarty v. Sparks, 2 Cal. 142; (1869) Ford v. Doyle, 37 Cal. 346.

[b] A writ of restitution obtained in an action of ejectment against a tenant in common cannot be served upon the grantee of the defendant's cotenant in a deed executed pending the litigation.—Wattson v. Dowling, 26 Cal. 124.

[c] Where, pending an action of ejectment against a tenant of a third party, the latter obtains possession by virtue of an action against such tenant under section 13 of the act concerning forcible entries and unlawful detainers, and with notice of the ejectment suit, and then leases to another person, the latter, though having no such notice, can be lawfully dispossessed under a writ of habere facias possessionem issued after judgment for the plaintiff in the ejectment suit. Long v. Neville, 29 Cal. 131.

[d] A writ of possession authorizes the putting out of all who have come into possession since the bringing of suit, notwithstanding they came in as tenants of a third party, when it is not shown that the latter came in before suit brought, or under an adverse title.—Leese v. Clark, 29 Cal. 664.

[e] A party and her tenants, coming into possession of lands after an action brought to recover possession under a prior unrecorded deed from two of the defendants in the action, of which plaintiff had no notice when the action was commenced, held to have been properly dispossessed under a writ of restitution issued on a judgment for plaintiff in such action.—Mayne v. Jones, 34 Cal. 3.

[f] A person cannot be legally dispossessed of land under a writ issued on a judgment rendered in an action to which he was not made a party, and when he holds under another party.—(Cal. 1868) Rogers v. Parish, 36 Cal. 127.

[g] The court ordered a writ of possession to be executed against a stranger to the suit in which it issued, where it appeared that he was in possession of the premises in controversy under cover of a legal process collusively obtained for the purpose, by persons shown to be friendly to the defendants, after the judgment in the action in which the writ issued was affirmed, and when there was no hope of avoiding the result in any other mode.—Wetherbee v. Dunn, 36 Cal. 147, 95 Am. Dec. 166.

[h] One who, after an action of ejectment has been commenced, enters upon the demanded premises, but not under the defendant, or by collusion with him, and is not made a party to the action, cannot be rightfully removed by virtue of a writ of restitution issued on a judgment rendered in the action.—Mayo v. Sprout, 45 Cal. 99.

[i] A real action was brought against the occupants of a tract of land, among whom was C. The suit was dismissed as to him. Judgment was afterwards recovered by plaintiff, and an attempt was made to oust C., under the writ of possession, from that part of the tract claimed by him. Held, that he was not affected by the judgment, and that its execution should be stayed as to him. McLean v. McNamara, 60 Cal. 610.

[j] Under a writ of possession issued on a judgment in ejectment, defendant's wife may be ejected, since her possession is presumed to be his.—Huerstal v. Muir, 64 Cal. 450, 2 Pac. 33.

[k] One in possession under a mortgage of growing crops, given pending the ejectment suit, may be evicted under the writ of possession.—Huerstal v. Muir, 64 Cal. 450, 2 Pac. 33.

§ 187. —— Injunction.

[a] A motion to restrain the sheriff from executing against the mover a writ of possession, in an action of ejectment to which he was not a party, held to be properly denied; the affidavit not showing that he did not enter under the defendants, or in collusion with them.—McCreery v. Everding, 54 Cal. 166.

[b] Where the plaintiff, in an action of ejectment, recovered judgment on the sole ground that the defendant, being his tenant, was estopped to deny his tenancy, and a third party claimed also as landlord of the same tenant under a superior title, recognized as such by the trial court, but of which he was not allowed the advantage in the action, an order restraining dispossession of the grantee of such third party under the writ of possession is properly granted.—Moulton v. McDermott, 93 Cal. 660, 29 Pac. 259.

[c] In an action to enjoin a sheriff from ejecting a plaintiff under a judgment of ejectment against his father, plaintiff testified that he never heard of the action against his father, but he was shown to have been in the courtroom during a portion of the trial. He testified that he did not know whether his father was ever in possession of the land, but admitted that he had been living with his father, and that he had worked for him for several years. He obtained from his father, as general manager of a corporation in possession of the land, a conveyance of the personal property of the corporation, and testified that he agreed with his father to permit the corporation to remain in possession of the land without any charge for rent. He claimed to have taken possession under a deed executed by a director of a corporation shortly after the rendition of a judgment of the supreme court affirming the judgment of ejectment. Held, that plaintiff's possession was taken by collusion with his father. Scheerer v. Goodwin, 125 Cal. 154, 57 Pac. 789.

[d] In an action by one in possession of land to enjoin the enforcement of a judgment of ejectment in an action in which he was not a party, it will be presumed that he obtained possession under the defendants in the ejectment action, in the absence of evidence to the contrary.—Scheerer v. Goodwin, 125 Cal. 154, 57 Pac. 789.

[e] He does not overthrow such presumption by proof that he obtained possession through a stranger to the action in ejectment, unless he shows that the stranger was in possession before the action in ejectment was commenced, or was entitled to possession under a title adverse to that of plaintiff in ejectment.—Scheerer v. Goodwin, 125 Cal. 154, 57 Pac. 789.

§ 187½. —— Stay.

[a] Where a landlord jointly sued in ejectment with a tenant, has answered and had the action dismissed as to himself, but judgment has been rendered by default against the tenant, the court cannot, on motion of the landlord, order the proceedings to be stayed under a writ of restitution.—Dimick v. Deringer, 32 Cal. 488.

§ 188. —— Vacating on Quashing Writ.

[a] Persons claiming to be entitled to possession, and not to have been equally dispossessed under a writ of restitution, may move to set aside an ex parte order, made without notice to any one, allowing the writ to issue upon a judgment in ejectment rendered more than seven years prior to the order, and the party obtaining the writ is not injured by the making of such motion, instead of a motion to restore possession, where the evidence is conflicting as to whether the persons were in fact dispossessed.—Hyde v. Boyle, 93 Cal. 1, 29 Pac. 247.

§ 189. —— Satisfaction or Release.

[a] If, in an action of ejectment, judgment has been reversed because the plaintiff was in possession of part of the land, for the occupation of which damages were given, the plaintiff cannot release such part from the operation of the judgment, and enforce the judgment as to the rest, if its location has not been determined.—Ellis v. Jeans, 26 Cal. 272.

§ 190. —— Manner of Executing Writ.

[a] Under a writ of restitution, it is the duty of the officer serving the writ to remove from the premises the defendant, and all persons who have derived possession from them since the commencement of the action, and all other persons who have acquired possession subsequent to the filing of the lis pendens, or with actual notice of the pendency of the action.—Fogarty v. Sparks, 22 Cal. 142.

[b] Upon a writ of restitution issued upon a judgment for the plaintiff in an action of ejectment, the sheriff is authorized to remove from the land the defendants and all persons found thereon, whose possession was derived under the defendants or either of them.—Scheerer v. Goodwin, 125 Cal. 154, 57 Pac. 789.

§ 191. —— Operation and Effect of Enforcement.

[a] A defendant evicted in ejectment by a writ of restitution is estopped to deny that his prior possession was wrongful.—Mann v. Rogers, 35 Cal. 316.

§ 192. Appeal and Error—Review.

[a] Where the court's findings of fact in ejectment are supported by some evidence, they will not be disturbed.—Ellis v. Jeans, 26 Cal. 272.

[b] Where the findings of a court in ejectment express only the facts constituting the prevailing title, the defeated party, in order to review the findings, is not restricted to an exception to the findings as defective, but may, by exception, on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to justify the verdict and findings, review the unexpressed and implied findings.—Morrrill v. Chapman, 35 Cal. 85.

[c] In a trial of ejectment by the court without a jury, it should, if requested, include in the findings the facts constituting the title of the defeated party, and it is not presumed on appeal that it would refuse when so requested.—Morrill v. Chapman, 35 Cal. 85.

[d] Where defendant in ejectment offered evidence "tending to prove" that lands in question were included in a grant under which he claimed, which was superior to plaintiff's title, the absence of a finding in the record on that fact presumes that it was not established.—Morrill v. Chapman, 35 Cal. 85.

[e] If the court finds that defendant was not in actual occupation of the demanded premises when suit was commenced, and still renders judgment, it will be presumed, in support of the judgment, that the court found such possession as would support ejectment. Tubbs v. Ghirardelli, 45 Cal. 231.

[f] An action of ejectment will not lie in favor of a lessor who has received annual rent under a void parol lease, before the expiration of the year for which the rent was received; and where the evidence upon the question of the receipt of rent for that year is conflicting, and the verdict was against the plaintiff, the finding of the jury as to that fact is controlling upon appeal.—Phelan v. Anderson, 118 Cal. 504, 50 Pac. 685.

[g] In ejectment, the court having found that plaintiff is not, and never was, owner or entitled to the possession of the land described in the complaint, and this finding being unchallenged, the supreme court cannot, on appeal, examine the deed under which plaintiff claims.—Gilbert v. Kelly, 138 Cal. 689, 72 Pac. 344.

§ 193. —— Harmless Error.

[a] Upon default, the court found that the plaintiff was entitled to the whole tract, and that the defendant had occupied part. Damages being waived, it was held that judgment for possession of the whole tract could not be complained of by the defendant.—Vallejo v. Fay, 10 Cal. 377.

[b] Where no damages are claimed in an action to recover realty, no injury can result from a joint verdict.—Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122, 85 Am. Dec. 103.

[c] In ejectment though it is irregular for plaintiff, in proving his case, to introduce in evidence a judgment which is an estoppel, yet, if the defendant is conclusive as an estoppel, defendant is not injured because the judgment was not reserved for rebutting testimony.—Clink v. Thurston, 47 Cal. 21.

[d] If plaintiff in ejectment, pending the action, conveys the demanded premises by a deed absolute on its face, and defendant proves it on the trial, evidence of plaintiff in rebuttal that the deed was intended as a mortgage is not prejudicial to defendant. Clink v. Thurston, 47 Cal. 21.

[e] Where defendant is in possession of only part of the demanded premises, and plaintiff owns the whole and claims no damages, defendant is not injured by a judgment in plaintiff's favor for the whole tract.—Camarillo v. Fenlon, 49 Cal. 202.

[f] In ejectment defendants offered in evidence the record of a judgment in favor of the administrator of one from whom they derived title against plaintiff's tenant for possession of the land in controversy. Held, that failure of the court to find as to the effect of such judgment on plaintiff's right to claim title to the land was not reversible error where the evidence showed adverse possession in defendants for a sufficient length of time to bar plaintiff's action. Spotts v. Hanley, 85 Cal. 155, 24 Pac. 738.

[g] In ejectment, where plaintiff city claims the land in dispute by dedication and the court has found that there was such a dedication, a further finding that after the dedication the owners of the land directed that it be so designated on the maps of the city is immaterial, and the fact that it is not supported by the evidence will not affect the judgment for plaintiff.—City of Napa v. Howland, 87 Cal. 84, 25 Pac. 247.

[h] Where plaintiff in ejectment shows title to the whole tract in suit, and that defendant is in possession of a portion, defendant cannot complain of a judgment for plaintiff for such portion on the ground that the judgment does not sufficiently describe it.—Pierce v. Hilton, 102 Cal. 276, 36 Pac. 595.

[i] The admission in evidence in an action of ejectment brought by an executrix, of a complaint filed in another action, averring individual ownership in the same plaintiff, conceding it to be erroneous, is not prejudicial, where it is conceded upon both sides that the administration is not concluded, and that no distribution has been had, and all other statements in such pleading were in support of the testimony of the executrix. Phelan v. Anderson, 118 Cal. 504, 50 Pac. 685.

[j] Where a judgment for defendant in ejectment is sustained on other grounds than that of his adverse possession, error in finding that he had paid the taxes on the land during the time he was in possession is harmless. Beattie v. Crewdson, 124 Cal. 577, 57 Pac. 463.

§ 194. —— Disposition of Cause.

[a] Where a judgment is erroneous by reason of a wrong construction given to the description of land in a deed in evidence, the supreme court cannot modify the judgment, but will reverse it and grant a new trial.—Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122, 85 Am. Dec. 103.

§ 195. Restitution—Grounds.

[a] When one who, after an action of ejectment has been commenced, enters upon the demanded premises, but not under the defendant or by collusion with him, and who is not made a party to the action, is removed under a writ of restitution issued on a judgment rendered in the action, he will be restored to possession upon application made to the court.—Mayo v. Sprout, 45 Cal. 99.

[b] Upon a reversal of an order for a writ of restitution the appellant is entitled to be restored to all that he has lost by virtue of the order, and to be placed in the same position as he was prior to the execution of the writ, by the removal of all persons that have been placed in possession of the land by virtue of the writ, as well as of all those who have come in under him after that date. Hyde v. Boyle, 105 Cal. 102, 38 Pac. 643.

§ 196. —— Proceedings.

[a] A party who is removed from the possession of real estate by virtue of a writ of restitution issued on a judgment in ejectment, and who moves to be restored to the possession on the ground that he was not a party to the action, must make out a clear case, free from ambiguity.—California Quicksilver Min. Co. v. Redington, 50 Cal. 160.

§ 197. Rights of Parties to Damages and Mesne Profits—Nature and Form of Remedy.

[a] The value of the use and occupation of the demanded premises can be recovered only in the form of damages.—Miller v. Myers, 46 Cal. 535.

§ 198. —— Rights and Liabilities as to Damages or Mesne Profits in General.

[a] Where plaintiff transfers the premises pending action, and the court orders the action continued in the name of the original plaintiff, he may recover judgment for both possession and the rents and profits.—Moss v. Shear, 30 Cal. 468.

[b] Rents and profits cannot be recovered from a person who is entitled to the possession of the land during the time in which they accrue.—Rich v. Maples, 33 Cal. 102.

[c] Neither damages nor rents and profits can be recovered in an action of ejectment, unless there is a judgment for the recovery of possession.—Locke v. Peters, 65 Cal. 161.

[d] No rents and profits can be recovered in ejectment from one occupying land with the consent of the owner for the period of such consent.—Ross v. Evans, 65 Cal. 439, 4 Pac. 443.

[e] An heir at law is entitled to the rents, issues, and profits of land not specifically devised, so long as wrongfully kept out of the possession thereof; and it is error to exclude evidence of the value of the rents of the demanded premises in an action of ejectment by the heir against a cotenant.—Estep v. Armstrong, 91 Cal. 659, 27 Pac. 1091.

§ 199. —— Defenses.

[a] A tenant in possession of premises who is sued in ejectment is not released from liability to the plaintiff for the use of the premises from the fact that he has paid rent to his landlord. If compelled to pay any further sum by the action, he can have recourse upon his landlord for the same.—Keane v. Cannovan, 21 Cal. 291, 82 Am. Dec. 738.

§ 200. —— Recovery of Damages or Mesne Profits in Action of Ejectment.

[a] Under the Practice Act in this state, it is competent for the plaintiff to recover real property, with damages for withholding it, and the rents and profits, all in the same action, and as one cause of action.—Sullivan v. Davis, 4 Cal. 291.

[b] The land and mesne profits may be recovered in the same action under Statutes of 1850 and under Revised Code, article 20, page 389.—(Cal. 1861) Bay v. Pope, 18 Cal. 694.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 206; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2539-2542, §§ 438-444.

§ 201. —— Extent of Recovery.

[a] A tenant in common may, as against a stranger, recover the whole premises in an action of ejectment, but he can recover only his proportional share of the mesne profits. Clark v. Huber, 20 Cal. 196.

[b] If plaintiff in ejectment is in possession of portion of land sued for it is error, if the answer denies damages, for the court to assess damages against defendant for the use of the entire tract.—Ellis v. Jeans, 26 Cal. 272.

[c] Where plaintiff in ejectment establishes his title, he cannot maintain claim and delivery for a crop raised and harvested on the land by defendant's tenant before judgment in ejectment was rendered, though the tenant knew that plaintiff disputed his landlord's title.—Johnson v. Fish, 105 Cal. 420, 45 Am. St. Rep. 53, 38 Pac. 979.

[d] Where, in ejectment, defendant is found to be a mere trespasser, plaintiffs, though owning only an undivided one-half, are entitled to possession of the whole tract, but to one-half the rents and profits accruing during the detention; defendant being liable for the remaining half to the owner of the other undivided one-half of the estate.—McGuire v. Lynch, 126 Cal. 576, 59 Pac. 27.

§ 202. —— Measure, Elements, and Amount of Damages.

[a] In an action to recover possession of land, brought against a party who was a naked trespasser upon his entry, and, while such, made improvements, but afterward became a cotenant, the plaintiff can recover the increased value of the rents and profits arising from such improvements.—Carpentier v. Mitchel, 29 Cal. 330.

[b] An owner of land may recover from a disseisor the value of the use and occupation of the land, but this very fact shows that he cannot recover the crops grown by the disseisor while he was out of possession.—Page v. Fowler, 39 Cal. 412, 2 Am. Rep. 462.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

§ 202½. —— Period of Computation.

[a] Plaintiff in ejectment can recover mesne profits only from the accrual of his right of possession.—Clark v. Boyreau, 14 Cal. 634.

[b] Rents and profits can be recovered, in an action of ejectment, for only three years prior to bringing suit, when the defendant sets up the statute of limitations.—Carpentier v. Mitchell, 29 Cal. 330.

[c] In an action to recover land and damages for its detention, if the statute of limitations of three years is pleaded as to the damages, the plaintiff can only recover damages which accrued three years before the commencement of the action.—Love v. Shartzer, 31 Cal. 487.

§ 203. Proceedings to Determine Right to Damages and Mesne Profits.

[a] Where damages are claimed for use and occupation prior to the commencement of the action the complaint must state the title of plaintiff as existing at some prior date (to be designated), and as continuing up to the commencement of the action, and the entry of defendant at some date subsequent to that of the alleged title.—Payne v. Treadwell, 16 Cal. 220.

[b] In an action of ejectment, a general averment of, and a prayer for, damages for the unlawful withholding are sufficient to support judgment for damages, in the absence of a special demurrer or objection to the evidence on that subject.—Martin v. Durand, 63 Cal. 39.

[c] Complaint in ejectment alleging that defendant wrongfully ousted plaintiff, and took possession of the premises to plaintiff's damage, is sufficient without an averment that defendant had received the rents and profits.—Johnson v. Visher, 96 Cal. 310, 31 Pac. 106.

§ 204. —— Stay.

[a] The pendency of a suit in the federal court, brought by the United States to cancel a patent under which plaintiff claimed title, is no ground for a stay of proceedings in an action to recover the mesne profits of the land after plaintiff had recovered judgment in ejectment against defendant.—Avery v. Superior Court of Contra Costa County, 57 Cal. 247.

§ 205. —— Appointment of Receiver.

[a] After final judgment in an ejectment suit in which a receiver has been appointed to take charge of the disputed premises and retain the profits derived from them, the court will not order the issue to be tried whether the receiver has taken possession of other land than that which was the subject of the suit, but it will be presumed that he did not transcend the bounds of his authority.—Ellis v. Jeans, 26 Cal. 272.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 217; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2563, 2564, § 462.

§ 206. —— Verdict and Findings.

[a] When, in ejectment, there is no finding as to the value of the use and occupation of the premises, the plaintiff is not entitled to judgment for damages by way of mesne profits.—Camarillo v. Fenlon, 49 Cal. 202.

[b] In ejectment, the verdict of the jury is conclusive as to damages, and the court cannot allow a different sum on finding made by the court.—Mills v. Fletcher, 10 Cal. 142, 34 Pac. 637.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 218; 17 Cent. Dig., col. 2565, § 464.

§ 207. —— Judgment.

[a] Plaintiffs in ejectment alleged that, during defendant's possession, the use and occupation, rents and profits of the premises had amounted to ten thousand dollars, which sum was claimed in damages. The complaint was verified, and the answer failed to specifically deny the allegations of the complaint. Held, that a verdict and judgment rendered on the pleadings for the whole amount claimed must stand.—Patterson v. Ely, 19 Cal. 28.

[b] In an action of ejectment against several defendants, judgment for damages may be rendered against all jointly, although one or more of them have not been in possession of the whole of the premises for which ejectment was brought, but in the exclusive possession of a part, if no request is made that a several judgment should be rendered.—Ellis v. Jeans, 26 Cal. 272.

[c] Where the annual value of the premises in ejectment is found both in gold and currency, it is not error to render a general judgment for an amount equal to the currency valuation.—Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346.

[d] A judgment for damages, in an action of ejectment, where no damages are alleged in the complaint, is clearly erroneous.—McKinlay v. Tuttle, 42 Cal. 570.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 218; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2565, 2566, § 465.

§ 208. Rights of Parties as to Improvements and Taxes.

[a] Where no proof is introduced to show damages, it is no error to refuse to allow the defendant to prove the value of the improvements made by him on the property.—Ford v. Holton, 5 Cal. 319.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Allowance for improvements, in actions of ejectment: 2 Am. Dec. 724, 13 Am. Dec. 349, 14 Am. St. Rep, 53, notes. See, also, 15 Cyc. 218-232; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2568-2571, § 468; cols. 2573-2576, §§ 470-475, 477; cols. 2578-2581, §§ 479-481.

§ 209. Title and Possession Requisite to Support Claim.

[a] Defendant in ejectment is not entitled to an allowance for betterments unless it appears that he was a bona fide purchaser. (Cal. 1868) Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346.

§ 210. Setoff of Improvements or Taxes Against Damages or Mesne Profits.

[a] Value of improvements on land may be set off against the rents and profits thereof. Welch v. Sullivan, 8 Cal. 165.

[b] In an action to recover lands, the court cannot set off the value of the improvements against the damages when the defendant does not ask it.—Carpentier v. Gardiner, 29 Cal. 160.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

Mesne profits in ejectment, setoff of betterments against: 9 Am. St. Rep. 795, note. See, also, 15 Cyc. 231, 232; 17 Cent. Dig., cols. 2600-2609, §§ 502-508.

§ 211. —— Items Which May be Set Off.

[a] The right in ejectment to offset improvements made by defendant or his grantor against plaintiff's claims for damages depends on whether the improvements are permanent.—Carpentier v. Small, 35 Cal. 346.

§ 212. —— Title and Possession Requisite to Authorize Setoff.

[a] A defendant, who entered under a bond for a deed from the plaintiff, cannot set off his improvements against the damages for use and occupation.—Kilburn v. Ritchie, 2 Cal. 145, 56 Am. Dec. 326.

[b] In ejectment defendant cannot have his improvements set off against the mesne profits under section 257 of the Practice Act, where the improvements were made after plaintiff's title accrued, or where the holding of the defendant is not adverse within that section.—Bay v. Pope, 18 Cal. 694.

[c] One entering within color of title upon a lot within the limits of an incorporated city is not entitled to have the value of improvements put up by him deducted from the damages sustained by the true owner.—White v. Moses, 21 Cal. 34.

[d] A defendant in ejectment can only set off the value of improvements made against damages claimed for withholding lands when he has held such lands under color of title adversely and in good faith.—Love v. Shartzer, 31 Cal. 487.

[e] Code of Civil Procedure, section 741, provides that "when damages are claimed for withholding the property recovered, upon which permanent improvements have been made by a defendant . . . . holding under color of title adversely to the claim of the plaintiff, in good faith, the value of such improvements must be allowed as a setoff against such damages." Held, that defendant is not entitled to set off the value of his improvements where he enters under a contract to convey which says nothing about his taking possession, and is ejected on account of default in his payments, and where the improvements are made by him before a demand for possession, as, before demand made, his possession is not adverse.—Hannan v. McMackle, 82 Cal. 122, 23 Pac. 271.

§ 213. —— Extent of Setoff.

[a] The value of permanent improvements made by defendant can only be allowed to the extent of the rent found due for the use of the land.—(Cal. 1855) Ford v. Holton, 5 Cal. 319; (1859) Yount v. Howell, 14 Cal. 465.

§ 214. —— Pleading.

[a] In an action of ejectment, the defendant, in order to be allowed the value of his improvements, must plead them by way of setoff in his answer.—Moss v. Shear, 25 Cal. 38, 85 Am. Dec. 94.

§ 1. Nature and Grounds in General.

[a] A party has his election of alternative remedies.—Salmon v. Hoffman, 2 Cal. 142.

[b] Election of alternatives applies only where party stands in same position as to both alternatives, and is bound to indicate a choice.—Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 228.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 251-267; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 7-9, § 1.

§ 2. Right of Election.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 253-257, 264; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 15, § 5.

§ 3. Necessity for Election.

[a] Defendant cannot be compelled to elect between denial of title and plea of statute of limitations.—Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192.

[b] Where facts are peculiarly within knowledge of defendant, and cannot be certainly known to plaintiffs, as to precise nature and limits of defendant's liability, before evidence is all in, plaintiff may state his cause of action variously in different counts of complaint, and should not be compelled to elect upon which count he will proceed.—Rucker v. Hall, 105 Cal. 425, 38 Pac. 962.

[c] Fact that plaintiff made two averments of damages where he should have made but one, including both grounds, does not put him to an election.—Fox v. Oakland etc. Ry., 118 Cal. 68, 62 Am. St. Rep. 216, 50 Pac. 25.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 257; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 15-17, § 6.

§ 4. Time Within Which Right of Election Must be Exercised.

[a] A right to elect between remedies which is conferred upon the condition of relinquishing one of the remedies by some positive act must be exercised while both of the remedies are open, and, unless there is a remedy to relinquish, there is no place for an election. San Bernardino Investment Co. v. Merrill, 108 Cal. 490, 41 Pac. 487.

§ 5. Notice of Election.

[a] When the defendant is allowed time to answer until the plaintiff elects on which count of the complaint he will go to trial the plaintiff should serve a copy of the complaint with notice of his election.—Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192.

[b] When court does not fix time, defendant is entitled to ten days after service of notice of election to answer.—Willson v. Cleaveland, 30 Cal. 192.

§ 6. Causes of Action and Remedies Subject to Election.

[a] Where the breach of a contract is a wrong the party may sue in tort instead of suing upon the contract.—Sheldon v. Steamship Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526, 79 Am. Dec. 193.

[b] Landlord entitled to sue in forcible entry and detainer may elect to sue in ejectment.—McCarthy v. Yale, 39 Cal. 585.

[c] When one person converts to his own use personal property of another the latter may waive the tort, and sue in assumpsit for the value thereof.—Lehmann v. Schmidt, 87 Cal. 15, 25 Pac. 161; Chittenden v. Pratt, 89 Cal. 178, 26 Pac. 626.

[d] Party who has been induced to execute contract by fraud may elect to rescind or sue for damages for deceit without warning other party that he intends to charge him with fraud.—Schmidt v. Mesmer, 116 Cal. 270, 148 Pac. 54.

[e] After unlawful conversion owner may maintain replevin or trover.—Howe v. Johnson, 117 Cal. 42, 48 Pac. 978.

§ 7. Inconsistency of Alternative Remedies.

[a] Where it was agreed that defendant would pay a certain amount to plaintiffs in consideration that plaintiffs would dismiss certain proceedings then pending in the probate court, and defendant afterward notified plaintiffs that she rescinded and withdrew from the agreement, plaintiffs cannot maintain an action to recover the amount stipulated to be paid, while at the same time continuing to prosecute the proceedings in the probate court.—Hellings v. Heyenfeldt, 107 Cal. 577, 40 Pac. 1026.

[b] When two inconsistent remedies are open to a person he must elect which he will pursue, and, having elected one, he is debarred from the other.—Parke and Lacy Co. v. White Lumber Co., 101 Cal. 37, 35 Pac. 442.

[c] Party having inconsistent remedies may not pursue both but must choose between them.—Hines v. Ward, 121 Cal. 120, 53 Pac. 427.

§ 8. Validity and Finality of Election—Mistake or Ignorance of Fact.

[a] Doctrine of election is applicable only when party is cognizant of all facts, and then makes a free and deliberate choice.—Wells v. Robinson, 13 Cal. 133.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 261; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 31, 32, § 3.

§ 9. —— Mistake as to Remedy.

[a] Where a lessor mistakes his remedy, and brings ejectment against his lessee, such action is not an election of remedies which will bar a subsequent action for unlawful detainer.—Agar v. Winslow, 123 Cal. 587, 69 Am. St. Rep. 84, 56 Pac. 422.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 262; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 32, 33, § 14.

§ 10. —— Ineffectiveness of Remedy.

[a] The rule that where there exists an election of inconsistent remedies, the party is confined to the remedy first preferred and adopted, only applies where both remedies are open and legally available to the plaintiff; and where the remedy first adopted is not legally available, the party is not estopped by his mistake in selecting it from subsequently availing himself of the other remedy.—Agar v. Winslow, 123 Cal. 587, 69 Am. St. Rep. 84, 56 Pac. 422.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 33, 34, § 15.

§ 11. Operation and Effect of Election.

[a] Where one having a legal and also an equitable remedy proceeds at law, he may estop himself from afterward, in equity, pursuing a fund which, but for his having elected his legal remedy, he might have had impressed with a trust in his favor.—Hanly v. Kelly, 62 Cal. 155.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS — CONSTRUCTION, § 3.
POWER OF LEGISLATURE TO EXTEND BEYOND CONSTITUTIONAL LIMITATION, § 4.
OPERATION OF PROVISIONS OF CONSTITUTION OF UNITED STATES, § 5.

§ 1. Nature and Source of Right.

[a] Election cannot take place under constitution without statutory regulation. All the efficacy given to the act of casting a ballot is derived from the law-making power and through legislative enactments; and the legislature must provide for and regulate the conduct of an election, or there can be none. [b] Mere power of state to determine class of inhabitants who may vote within her limits is not curtailed in the fourteenth amendment. Van Valkenburg v. Brown, 43 Cal. 43, 13 Am. Rep. 136.

[c] The clause of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States that "all persons born or naturalized . . . . are citizens," etc., does not confer citizenship upon white women, they having been citizens before its adoption, and therefore it does not confer on them the right as citizens to vote.—Van Valkenburg v. § 6. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions.

[a] The act of May 7, 1881, cannot operate to postpone the elections provided for in the acts of April 2, 1866, and March 30, 1872, because such operation would extend the terms of municipal officers, and therein violate section 9, article 11, of the constitution; but the act of May 7, 1881, applies to the city and county of San Francisco, and its operation in providing for a municipal election in 1882 is constitutional and valid. (Ross, J., concurring.)—Wood v. Board of Election Commrs., 58 Cal. 561.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 15 Cyc. 317, 318; 18 Cent. Dig., col. 67, § 20.

§ 7. Ordering and Holding Election in General—Authority and Exercise Thereof in General.

[a] An election held in pursuance of an act which authorizes the county judge to fix the time, place, and manner of holding it is void, as the legislature cannot delegate to a judge a purely ministerial function.—Dickey v. Hurlburt, 5 Cal. 343.

[b] The board of election commissioners cannot refuse to call and hold an election on the ground that there may not be sufficient funds in the treasury to defray the expenses.—Gibbs v. Bartlett, 63 Cal. 117.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:
See 18 Cent. Dig., col. 67, § 21.

§ 8. —— Authority to Hold General or Special Election.

[a] Where an act by its own terms was not to go into effect till a certain day named, and one of its sections provides for an election on a day prior to the time in which the law was to go into effect, the election so held was a nullity, there being no law then in existence authorizing it.—People ex rel. McDougal v. Johnston, 6 Cal. 673.

[b] Election to be valid must be authorized by an existing statute.—People v. Mathewson, 47 Cal. 442.

[c] Election held without authority of law gives no title to office.—Page v. Supervisors, 85 Cal. 54, 24 Pac. 607.

§ 9. —— Irregularities and Defects.

[a] The means of bringing about an election, and irregularities therein, as the neglect of the course prescribed by statute, the election itself being prescribed by law, are to be disregarded; for it is presumed that all electors knew that law, and were not prevented from voting by fraud or misconduct on the part of those managing the election.—People v. Brenham, 3 Cal. 477.

§ 10. Notice or Proclamation—Necessity, in General.

[a] Under San Francisco City Charter, article 2, section 4, which requires the common council to give notice of the election of mayor, an election held at the time the law directs would be valid without the giving of such notice; for it should not be in the power of incumbents in office to prevent the election of their successors.—People v. Brenham, 3 Cal. 477.

[b] The proclamation of the governor, required by statute, is necessary to the validity of a special election.—People v. Porter, 6 Cal. 26.

[c] The statute requiring the governor to issue his proclamation of election to fill vacancies in certain offices is mandatory, and an essential prerequisite to all such elections. People v. Weller, 11 Cal. 49.

[d] An election to fill a vacancy in the office of district judge is invalid, unless made under and in pursuance of the proclamation of the governor.—People v. Weller, 11 Cal. 49.

[e] Object of the proclamation is to give notice to the electors that such an election will be held.—People v. Weller, 11 Cal. 49.

[f] F. was elected, in the month of May, 1857, county judge of San Mateo county, in pursuance of the provisions of an act "to organize and establish the county of San Mateo." No proclamation of the governor was issued calling this election. At the general election in 1858, in pursuance of the proclamation of the governor, an election was held for the same office, and T. was elected. The second election did not invalidate the prior election and F. was entitled to the office.—People ex rel. Fox v. Templeton, 12 Cal. 394.

[g] An election to fill a vacancy caused by a resignation of a county judge must be preceded by a proclamation by the governor of the fact of the vacancy, and that it is to be filled by such special election.—People v. Rosborough, 14 Cal. 180.

[h] A special election for the office of comptroller of state, held without executive proclamation made in advance of the election, designating the time at which such election is to be holden, is void.—Kenfield v. Irwin, 52 Cal. 165.

[i] It is essential to the validity of a popular election that the time at which the same is to be holden should be designated in advance.—Kenfield v. Irwin, 52 Cal. 164.

[j] In special elections to fill vacancies, notice of the election is necessary, though it is held at the same time as a general election. People v. Thompson, 67 Cal. 627, 9 Pac. 833.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 81-87, §§ 33-35.

§ 11. —— Requisites and Sufficiency in General.

[a] The neglect of an officer to perform a mere ministerial act will not defeat an election, where there was actual notice, and no fraud or surprise.—People v. Campbell, 2 Cal. 135.

[b] It is not enough that there was a proclamation that all vacancies about to occur would be filled, if the vacancy was one which had already occurred. The county judge in his election notice cannot supply the defect in the governor's proclamation.—Westbrook v. Rosborough, 14 Cal. 180.

[c] Where the proclamation for a general election notifies voters that a certain office will be voted for, such office having been rendered vacant by the death of the incumbent, it is no objection to the validity of the vote for such office that the proclamation failed to state that, as to that office, the election was a special one.—Tillson v. Ford, 53 Cal. 701.

[d] An election proclamation, ordered published by the board of supervisors, pursuant to Political Code, section 1056, is not invalid because the clerk affixed a scroll thereto, instead of his official seal, though the County Government Act (Stats. 1883, p. 299, sec. 20, subd. 8) makes it the duty of the clerk to place his seal upon all proceedings of the board, whenever the same are ordered published.—(1890) San Luis Obispo County v. White, 91 Cal. 432, 24 Pac. 864, 27 Pac. 756.

[e] A notice of election in a school district must clearly state the particular place where the election is to be held, and where the notice is so contradictory and misleading that it failed to satisfy the statute, the election is invalid.—People v. Caruthers School District, 102 Cal. 184, 36 Pac. 396.

[f] The provision of the statute that the notice of special election shall state the amount of the tax levy to be made for the payment of the bonds is satisfied by provisions in the ordinance calling such election that the bonds shall be "serials"; that one-twentieth of the whole indebtedness shall be paid each year, including interest at six per cent, payable semi-annually; and that "the tax levy for the payment thereof amounts during the full period of twenty years to ninety-seven thousand eight hundred dollars" for waterworks bonds, and to forty thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars for the sewer bonds.—E. M. Derby & Co. v. City of Modesto, 104 Cal. 515, 38 Pac. 900.

[g] An act provided that the question of dissolution of a municipal corporation should be submitted at a special election, and that the legislative body of the corporation should give notice thereof by publication in a newspaper. Held, that where such body made provision for such an election, and directed the city clerk to give notice thereof in a designated paper, a notice of such election, over the clerk's official signature, published in such paper, was sufficient.—Mintzer v. Schilling, 117 Cal. 361, 49 Pac. 209.

[h] A notice of election for trustees of a school district, stating that "the polls will be open between the hours of 1 P. M. and 5 P. M.," obviously imports that they would be open from 1 to 5 P. M., and sufficiently states that the polls were to be kept open for four hours, as required by law.—People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7, 56 Pac. 619.

[i] Where a notice of election stated that it was to elect school "trustees," failure to state that there were vacancies to be filled did not invalidate the election, no voters being misled.—People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7, 56 Pac. 619.

[j] One of two buildings was used as a store, and the other was used by the storekeeper as a storehouse, though goods were ocasionally sold therein. An election notice designated the precinct voting place as the "store," giving the name of the storekeeper, and the election was held in the storehouse, which had been used for such purpose at the two preceding elections, and no one was misled by the notice. Held, not a failure to hold the election at the place named in the notice, sufficient to invalidate the election.—Hayes v. Kirkwood, 136 Cal. 396, 69 Pac. 30.

[k] When statute prescribes both time and place of election, election is valid though notice thereof is defective or not given at all. Sanchez v. Fordyce, 141 Cal. 430, 431, 75 Pac. 56.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See, also, 15 Cyc. 323-325; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 87-93, §§ 36, 37.

§ 12. —— Publication and Posting.

[a] Where notice of an election is published for twenty days, as prescribed by the act authorizing it, the passage of an amendatory act affecting only the details of the election will not necessitate a republication of the notice.—Hobart v. Butte County Supervisors, 17 Cal. 23.

[b] Political Code, section 1055, provides that the board of supervisors, upon the receipt of the governor's proclamation of a general or special election, shall cause a copy of the same to be published in some newspaper printed in the county, and posted in each place of election, and, in the case of a special election to fill vacancies in certain state offices, they shall post or publish a copy of such proclamation upon the receipt thereof. Section 1056 provides that whenever a special election is ordered by the board of supervisors they must publish and post a proclamation in the same manner as a proclamation issued by the governor. Held, that if a proclamation by the board of supervisors of a special election, on a proposition to levy a tax to build a bridge, was published in a county newspaper, it was not necessary that it be posted also.—(1890) San Luis Obispo County v. White, 91 Cal. 432, 24 Pac. 864, 27 Pac. 756.

[c] The statute does not, in terms, provide that the "four successive weeks" in which notice shall be posted "prior to the election" shall be the four successive weeks next preceding the election, and a notice posted on the fourth day of October, 1892, and remaining posted for four successive weeks from that date, is a sufficient compliance with the letter of the statute.—Woodward v. Fruitvale Sanitary District, 99 Cal. 554, 34 Pac. 239.

[d] Where the election was directed to be held on July 27, 1896, and notice was published in five weekly issues of a newspaper, commencing June 27th, and ending July 25, 1896, it complied with the provision requiring notice to be given by publication in a newspaper "for a period of thirty days prior to such election."—Mintzner v. Schilling, 117 Cal. 361, 49 Pac. 209.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See, also, 15 Cyc. 324; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 93-96, § 38.

§ 13. —— Proof of Notice.

[a] If the clerk of the board of supervisors neglects to enter an order for the publication of a special election proclamation upon the minutes, as he is required to do by law, parol evidence is admissible to prove that such an order was made.—San Luis Obispo County v. White, 91 Cal. 432, 27 Pac. 756, affirming (1890) 91 Cal. 432, 24 Pac. 864.

[b] Proof made that the notice of election was posted fifteen days before the election is sufficient to show a posting for fifteen days, as required by the law; and it is not necessary to prove that the notice remained posted each day after it was posted.—People v. Lodi High School Dist., 124 Cal. 694, 57 Pac. 660.

§ 14. General and Special Elections Defined.

[a] Elections to fill vacancies occasioned by the death or resignation of an officer are special elections.—People v. Porter, 6 Cal. 26.

[b] Special election is an election held to supply a vacancy in office occurring before the expiration of the full term for which the incumbent was elected.—Kenfield v. Irwin, 53 Cal. 165.

[c] A general election is an election held to select an officer after the expiration of the full term of the former officer.—Kenfield v. Irwin, 53 Cal. 165.

§ 15. Calling Second Election.

[a] Where an election has been declared to have resulted in the election of no one, a new election must be called, though perhaps a candidate may question the correctness of the canvass in some other proceeding than a contest of the election.—Austin v. Dick, 100 Cal. 199, 34 Pac. 655.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 77, 78, § 28.

§ 16. Submission of Specific Questions.

[a] Under Constitution, article 11, section 8, providing that proposed amendments of city charters may be submitted to a vote of the electors at "a general or special election," such amendments may be legally submitted at an election held for the sole purpose of voting thereon.—People v. Davis, 114 Cal. 363, 46 Pac. 150.

[b] Under Statutes of 1883, page 93, section 4, providing for submission to a vote at the next general election of a proposition to reorganize a town as a city whenever a petition shall be presented to the board, signed by one-fifth of the qualified electors, a petition to which the required number of signatures was obtained by attaching thereto signatures cut from other petitions, identical in form, gives the board no jurisdiction to submit such proposition.—People v. Town of Berkeley, 36 Pac. 591.

§ 17. Time for Holding Election.

[a] Election held at a time not authorized by law is void.—Dickey v. Hurlbut & Others, 5 Cal. 343.

[b] Legislature may change time of election. People v. Haskell, 5 Cal. 359.

[c] Election by the people had before the election fixed for filling the office of governor cannot defeat the policy of the state that all elective officers connected with the executive department of the government shall be elected at the same time and place and in the same manner.—People v. Melony, 15 Cal. 58.

[d] No election could be held in San Francisco until the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1882. (Myrick, J., and McKee, J., dissenting.)—Wood v. Board of Election Commrs., 58 Cal. 561.

[e] A general clause in a city charter provided that it should take effect May 18, 1903, and contained a specific provision that the first election under it should be held on the second Monday of May, 1903, and that the trustees of the then existing city should provide for the election. Held, that the election was properly held on the second Monday, which fell on the 11th, the provision as to the 18th not referring to the election, but to the machinery of the new government.—Trafton v. Quinn, 143 Cal. 469, 77 Pac. 164.

§ 18. Mandamus to Compel Election.

[a] Application for writ of mandamus to compel the board of supervisors of Yolo county to take steps preparatory to the holding of an election on the first Wednesday of September, 1881, for certain county officers. Application denied.—Treadwell v. Supervisors of Yolo County, 62 Cal. 563.

§ 19. Election Districts or Precincts—Constitutional and Statutory Provisions.

[a] Under Laws of 1865-66, page 292, providing that every election district throughout the state shall be so constructed as not in any case to embrace more than one township, and in such a manner that its exterior limits shall not cross the exterior boundaries of any township, town or city, or any ward, district, or other territorial subdivision in and for which local officers are to be elected, an incorporated city lying in parts of two townships may be laid off into election districts by making one or more districts in that part of it lying in each township.—People v. Laine, 33 Cal. 55.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 98-100, § 41.

§ 20. —— Creation and Alteration of Districts or Precincts.

[a] Where the board of supervisors of a county neglected to lay off election districts in a certain town or city and appoint boards of registration in the same, under the provisions of the registry act, and an election was held, not in accordance with the provisions of said act, it was held that the election was void and conferred no rights upon the parties who claimed to have been elected.—People v. Laine, 33 Cal. 55.

[b] The relators claimed to have been elected representatives in Congress at the general election in 1884. Their claim was based on the alleged invalidity of the act of March 13, 1883, dividing the state into congressional districts, and repealing all acts in conflict therewith. Only a few votes were received by them, and these were cast in pursuance of the act of March 30, 1872, relating to the same subject as the act of 1883, and within the repealing clause of the latter act. No proclamation was issued by the governor for an election in accordance with the act of 1872. Held, that the claim of the relators, conceding the invalidity of the act of 1883 could not be sustained.—People v. Thompson, 67 Cal. 627, 9 Pac. 833.

[c] Since, under Political Code, section 1129, the board of election commissioners of San Francisco were authorized to change the boundaries of, create new, or consolidate established election precincts, the fact that such commissioners redistricted a city under Statutes of 1897, page 288, providing the manner for the holding of elections for the adoption of freeholders' charters, which act was claimed to be unconstitutional, as violating Constitution, article 11, section 6, declaring that cities and towns, except in matters relating to municipal affairs, shall be subject to, and controlled by, the general laws, is immaterial.—Fragley v. Phelan, 126 Cal. 383, 58 Pac. 923.

[d] Political Code, section 1129, as amended by Statutes of 1889, page 424, authorizes the change of election precincts, and provides that boards having control of elections may from time to time change the boundaries, so that there shall always be as many precincts as shall be sufficient to make the number of votes at any one precinct not more than two hundred, as nearly as can be ascertained. Held, that the change of election precincts was within the discretion of election boards, and that in the absence of any action preceding an election at which such precincts had been changed, to correct alleged erroneous actions of the board, or show that a fair election was thereby prevented, an elector cannot thereafter impeach an election held on that ground alone.—Fragley v. Phelan, 126 Cal. 383, 58 Pac. 923.

[e] Statutes regulating the formation of election precincts at municipal elections are directory, and not mandatory. An honest error of the council in establishing ward precincts only at a special election for the annexation of territory to the city, instead of the usual voting-places, where the statutory provisions as to special municipal elections are conflicting, does not vitiate the election, in the absence of fraud, and of any showing that anyone who desired to vote was unable to do so.—People v. Los Angeles, 133 Cal. 338, 65 Pac. 749.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 100-104, § 42.

§ 21. Election Officers—Appointment.

[a] Election returns should not be rejected for any irregularity in the appointment of the officers of election, where it does not appear that any injurious results accrued therefrom, either by the reception of illegal votes or the rejection of legal votes, or that either of the candidates lost or gained votes thereby. Keller v. Chapman, 34 Cal. 635.

§ 22. Defects in Appointment.

[a] If inspector of election, appointed by board of supervisors, fails to attend at the polls, and one is there appointed by the judges, instead of being appointed by the electors present, it is not such an irregularity as will vitiate the election at that precinct, provided the result of the election is not thereby changed.—Sprague v. Norway, 31 Cal. 173.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

[b] Where one of the judges appointed by the superintendent of schools to conduct an election to determine whether a high school should be established in a school district fails to attend, and the other judges choose a substitute, instead of his being appointed by the electors present, the irregularity will not vitiate the election, where the result was not changed thereby.—People v. Lodi High School Dist. of San Joaquin County, 124 Cal. 694, 57 Pac. 660.

[c] Where election commissioners were authorized to appoint election officers for each precinct, their failure to appoint as many officers as they were authorized to appoint for an election was a mere irregularity, not sufficient to invalidate the election.—Fragley v. Phelan, 126 Cal. 383, 58 Pac. 923.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 311; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 112-117, §§ 47, 48.

§ 23. Misconduct of Judges.

[a] If votes are cast by duly qualified electors, on a lawful occasion and at the proper place, their effect cannot be defeated by reason of mere official delinquency of the inspector in not transmitting them to the county clerk.—Bourland v. Hildreth, 26 Cal. 161.

[b] Neglect of directory provisions of statute, together with actual fraud sufficient to throw doubt on result of election, is ground for rejecting entire vote of precinct if there be no means of purging the poll.—Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 77, 23 Pac. 183.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 316; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 127, 128, § 52.

§ 24. —— Effect of Failure of Officer to be Sworn.

[a] Failure of officers conducting election in given district to be sworn as the election laws provide will not invalidate the entire election, without reference to its influence on the general result.—Whipley v. McKune, 12 Cal. 352.

[b] The neglect of the officers of the election to be sworn as required by law, though a felony, cannot affect the validity of the election, if a fair election and honest count were not thereby prevented.—People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7, 56 Pac. 619.

§ 25. Ineligibility of Officer as Affecting Validity of Election.

[a] Certain ballots held not rendered invalid because of ineligibility of certain members of the election board, under Political Code, section 1142.—McCarthy v. Wilson, 146 Cal. 323, 82 Pac. 243.

§ 26. Authority of Election Board to Investigate Election Frauds.

[a] Board of election commissioners is purely a creature of statute and can only do that which statute says it may do. It cannot investigate election frauds. (Garoutte, J.)—People v. Buckley, 116 Cal. 155, 47 Pac. 1009.

§ 27. Removal of Officers.

[a] Mayor of city and county of San Francisco does not have exclusive jurisdiction to remove election commissioners for misconduct in office, but jurisdiction is also vested in the superior court.—Roberts v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 147 Cal. 568, 82 Pac. 201.

§ 28. Constitutional and Statutory Provisions.

[a] Political Code, section 1239, subdivision 3, which was valid under Constitution 1863, article 2, section 1, provides that "a person must not be held, by reason of having moved from one precinct to another in the same county, within thirty days prior to the election, to have lost his residence in the precinct so moved from, provided he was an elector therein on the thirtieth day prior to such election." Held, that it conflicted with the new constitution (article 2, section 1), which requires residence in the precinct for thirty days preceding the election.—Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 70, 23 Pac. 183.

[b] Constitution should not be construed to cut off right to vote of person who has resided in state one year, in county ninety days, including residence in precinct on thirtieth day preceding election (concurring opinion).—Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 82, 23 Pac. 183.

[c] The material facts necessary to be charged to show a disqualification to vote are those facts prescribed by the constitution and the code as constituting the qualifications and creating the disabilities of electors.—People v. Neil, 91 Cal. 465, 27 Pac. 760.

[d] Section 1083 of the Political Code, assuming to define who "shall be a qualified elector," which adds to the constitutional qualifications that of enrollment upon the great register of the county fifteen days prior to the election, must be construed to use the words "qualified elector," in the sense of an elector who has the right to vote. Bergevin v. Curtz, 127 Cal. 86, 59 Pac. 312.

[e] Under Constitution of 1900, article 2, section 2½, Political Code, section 1367, prescribing qualifications of voters at primary elections held not in violation of Constitution, article 2, section 5.—Rebstock v. Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco, 146 Cal. 308, 80 Pac. 65.

§ 29. —— Validity of Laws Permitting Soldiers to Vote.

[a] The provision in the constitution which provides that "every white male citizen of the United States of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of that state six months preceding the election, and of the county or district in which he claims his vote thirty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections authorized by law," fixes, by the words "in which he claims his vote," the place at which the elector must vote, if at all; and therefore the act of the legislature of 1863, allowing soldiers from that state in the service of the United States to vote without the county in which they reside, is unconstitutional.—Bourland v. Hildreth, 26 Cal. 161.

[b] Act of April 25, 1863, providing for the taking of the votes of electors of the state while they are outside the county of their residence, engaged in the military service of the United States, is repugnant to Constitution, article 11, section 1, providing that "a citizen . . . . who shall have been a resident of the state six months next preceding the election, and [of] the county or district in which he claims his vote thirty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections."—Bourland v. Hildreth, 26 Cal. 161.

[c] Constitution, article 2, section 1, providing that a citizen who shall have been a resident of the state six months preceding the election, and of the county or district "in which he claims his vote" thirty days, shall be entitled to vote, defines the place of voting; and therefore act of 1864, authorizing soldiers in the army of the United States to vote elsewhere than in the county or district where they reside, and have their votes returned and counted in such county or district, is unconstitutional.—(1864) Bourland v. Hildreth, 26 Cal. 161; (1866) Day v. Jones, 31 Cal. 261.

§ 30. —— Power of Legislature to Prescribe Test for Voters.

[a] That legislature has no power to establish a test for voters at primary or other election intimated.—Spier v. Baker, 120 Cal. 379, 380, 52 Pac. 659.

§ 31. Qualifications in General.

[a] Evidence considered and held to support the findings that certain voters were not qualified voters.—Donnelly v. Potter, 55 Cal. 474.

[b] Only persons declared competent by constitution are entitled to vote in this state. Spier v. Baker, 120 Cal. 376, 52 Pac. 659.

[c] Persons entitled to vote at any election are entitled to vote at primary elections.—Spier v. Baker, 120 Cal. 378, 379, 52 Pac. 659.

[d] The constitutional qualifications of an elector are not the same thing as the legal qualifications of a voter. The voter is the elector who votes; and an elector may not be legally qualified to vote.—Bergevin v. Curtz, 127 Cal. 86, 59 Pac. 312.

of allegiance to a foreign power; and his son, born abroad afterward, is not a citizen of the United States, nor can he vote there.—Browne v. Dexter, 66 Cal. 39, 4 Pac. 913.

§ 33. —— Naturalization.

[a] Where a registered voter produced a certificate of naturalization from a court having a clerk and a seal, and, for aught that appeared, common-law jurisdiction, held, that the court erred in rejecting his vote.—Preston v. Culbertson, 58 Cal. 198.

§ 34. Residence.

[a] When elector moves his family to county with intention of residing there, that is the county where he should vote while his family remains there, although he passes his time and works in an adjoining county.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

[b] The thirty days' residence in a county, to entitle an elector to vote, must be ascertained by excluding the day of the election. People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

[c] One who removes to another state with his family and votes there, loses his residence, though intending to return.—Donnelly v. Potter, 55 Cal. 474.

[d] Laborer unmarried, resides in the county of his labor, though intending to return when unemployed.—Donnelly v. Potter, 55 Cal. 474.

[e] Persons who are not residents of county in which an election is held are not qualified voters, and their votes are properly deducted in the count.—Donnelly v. Potter, 55 Cal. 474.

[f] The fact that a voter left his real residence once a week to visit a place he had taken as a homestead, in order to comply with the homestead laws, did not estop him from claiming his real residence for the purpose of voting.—Preston v. Culbertson, 58 Cal. 198.

[g] Residence in precinct for thirty days preceding election is a constitutional prerequisite to right to vote.—Russell v. McDowell, 83 Cal. 81, 23 Pac. 183.

[h] A vote was not necessarily illegal on account of nonresidence of the voter, where he testified that he was often absent from the town, performing different jobs, but that he always left with the intention of returning when his work was done.—Smith v. Thomas, 121 Cal. 533, 54 Pac. 71.

[i] Political Code, section 52, subdivision 3, provides that every person has, in law, a residence, which cannot be lost until another is gained. By section 1239, subdivision 4, it is declared that a person must not be considered to have gained a residence in any precinct into which he comes for temporary purposes merely; and subdivision provides that the mere intention to acquire new residence, without the fact of removal avails nothing, "neither does the fact of removal without the intention." Held, that where a voter had no intention of making the precinct into which he moved his home but went there for temporary purposes, he did not lose his legal residence in the precinct from which he moved, although he did not have a place in such precinct that he could call his home.—Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

[j] A wood chopper, who had no home, but who made a particular place in a ward his home whenever in town or out of work for five years past, and who was sent there when sick, and who never voted in any other place for eleven years, is a legal voter in such ward.—Smith v. Thomas, 52 Pac. 1071

§ 35. —— Employment in Public Service.

[a] Mere fact that man is soldier in United States army does not disqualify him from voting in this state. But he cannot vote unless he has been a citizen of the state and of the county in which he votes for the constitutional period.—Orman v. Riley, 15 Cal. 48.

[b] D., who was a citizen of New York, enlisted in that state as a soldier in the service of the United States. He came to California under military orders, and has been in the state more than six months, in the county of Mendocino more than thirty days, but still in the service and under military orders, applied to the county clerk to be registered as a voter in that county. Held that, in view of such facts alone, he was not entitled to be registered. Mere residence as a soldier of the United States, and obedience to military orders, does not make a residence in the sense of the laws of California in relation to the elective franchise. Delvin v. Anderson, 38 Cal. 92.

37. Statutory Provisions.

a] The object of the registration law is to revent illegal voting by providing, in adance of election, an authentic list of quali- d electors; and, when its terms are doubtful, ey should be so construed as to give the llest opportunity to voters to procure the try of their names upon the register that consistent with reasonable precautions ainst fraudulent registration.—Welch v. illiams, 96 Cal. 365, 31 Pac. 222.

b] The Political Code provides that the alified electors of counties may have their mes registered at any time, and preribes with great care and particularity the ties of electors and officers in relation ereto, and further provides (section 1094) at a great register shall be kept. Section 94, as amended by Laws of 1889, provides at upon the order of the board of supersors a new registration may be made, and at such registration shall commence one ndred days before a general election, and ntinue eighty-five days, when it shall cease, ld, that the board of supervisors may ncel the existing register, and order a new e, more than one hundred days before a neral election, and that the registry of a me in the new register, made at any time er the old register is canceled, and more an fifteen days prior to the election, is fful and valid.—Welch v. Williams, 96 Cal. 5, 31 Pac. 222.

] Provision in primary law that no per- is entitled to vote whose name does not pear on great register used at last general election, is void as curtailing constitutional right of suffrage.—Spier v. Baker, 120 Cal. 377, 378, 52 Pac. 659.

[d] Registration is not a "qualification" of an elector, and cannot add to the qualifications fixed by the constitution; but it is to be regarded as a reasonable regulation by the legislature for the purpose of ascertaining who are qualified electors, and of having their names enrolled upon an authentic list, in order to prevent illegal voting.—Bergevin v. Curtz, 127 Cal. 86, 59 Pac. 312.

[e] Registration is not a constitutional qualification of voters; but is simply a reasonable method of identifying qualified voters. A registry law should not be construed so as seriously to impair the practical working of a city government, and leave it without a legislative department, unless clearly imperative.—People v. Woswick, 142 Cal. 71, 75 Pac. 663.

§ 38. Elections Subject to Registration Laws.

[a] Act of 1865-66 for registration of voters covers whole subject of elective franchise, and applies to municipal and local, as well as to general state and county, elections.—People ex rel. Ellsworth v. Laine, 33 Cal. 55.

[b] The act of 1878 does not provide for or authorize precinct registration at special elections, and any required changes in the precinct registers for a special election may be had at the office of the registrar, under the regulations of the board of election commissioners. The rights of the registered voters are subject to the power of the election commissioners to consolidate precincts and to change polling places for a special election.—Fragley v. § 40. Persons Entitled to Registration.

[a] An entry of A's registration in the great register of the county failed to show the date of his naturalization, as required by law. The board of supervisors ordered a re-registration under Political Code, section 1094, but the county clerk refused to register A on the ground that he had failed to furnish him with the date of his naturalization. Held that, A's name being enrolled and uncanceled on the great register, he was entitled to register under the provisions of the above section; and that section 1097 does not apply to persons who have been previously registered.—Cohen v. Harvey, 56 Cal. 70.

§ 41. Registration Officers.

[a] Clerks and other assistants to the registrar mentioned in the twenty-ninth section of the act of 1877-78, relating to the registration of voters (Stats. 1877-78, p. 299), are to be appointed by the board for the purposes indicated in that section.—Schmitt v. Dunn, 55 Cal. 651.

[b] Under act of March 18, 1878, to regulate the registration of voters, etc., in San Francisco, the board of election commissioners has power to fix the number of the registrar's clerks, but the power of selecting and employing them belongs to the registrar.—Schmitt v. Dunn, 55 Cal. 651.

[c] Act of 1889 amending section 1142, Political Code, providing for two inspectors and two judges in each precinct, applies only to board of election on election day and not to board of precinct registration.—Meyers v. Pond, 86 Cal. 67, 24 Pac. 808.

§ 42. Proceedings for Registration.

[a] Where, on an election contest, it appeared from the affidavits of certain voters that each of them had sworn to a statement that he could read the constitution in English, write his name, and mark his ballot, and, apart from the undisputed fact that they were not able to mark their ballots, and that some of the affidavits were signed by mark, and some by another person at the request of the deponent, there was nothing to indicate that the registration officer did not fully question them or correctly enter their statements, such facts were not sufficient to support a conclusion that the registration officer did not fully perform his duty. Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

[b] Where, on an election contest, it appeared that the formal affidavit for registration signed by an elector was in the precinct register, but there was no jurat of the county clerk showing that he had been sworn, but it appeared that he went to the clerk's office, and that the clerk prepared his affidavit, and that he understood he was making an affidavit, and the clerk testified that it was usual to swear the voters when they were registered, it being the duty of the clerk to administer such an oath, it was proper to presume that the clerk discharged his duty and administered the necessary oath.—Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

FOR AUTHORITIES FROM OTHER STATES:

See 15 Cyc. 305-307; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 195-197, § 103.

§ 43. —— Correction of Lists.

[a] The act of March 18, 1878 (Stats. 1877-78, p. 299), only authorizes the board of election commissioners of the city and county of San Francisco to appoint clerks or other persons to assist the registrar in ascertaining the correctness of the precinct registers and in correcting the same, and the board cannot appoint an agent or other assistants to advise it in the selection and appointment of precinct boards of registration and officers of election, nor for the purpose of scrutinizing the roll and detecting fraud in the registration, for its own information, and not as assistants to the registrar.—Falk v. Reis, 88 Cal. 514, 26 Pac. 359.

[b] Nor is such authority given the board by section 33, providing that all provisions for carrying out the registration and election laws shall be made by the board.—Falk v. Reis, 88 Cal. 514, 26 Pac. 359.

[c] Supervisors have no authority to cancel old register until new one is complete.—Fullrick v. Sullivan, 119 Cal. 619, 51 Pac. 947.

[d] The great register, though ordered canceled by the supervisors for the purpose of new registration, remains for all purposes required by law until the new registration is completed, and re-registration is not required for the annual school election.—People v. Prewett, 124 Cal. 7, 56 Pac. 619.

[e] After certain voters had registered, it was ascertained that the affidavits of registration contained incorrect designations of their voting precincts, and the county clerk corrected them by inserting the proper precinct names. All the voters in fact actually resided, when they registered, in the precincts represented by the correction. Held, that the correction did not affect the validity of the registration.—Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

§ 44. Irregularities and Defects—Right to Vote.

[a] Under Political Code, section 1227, providing that no elector shall be allowed to vote if his name is not on the precinct register, a ballot cannot be received from a citizen whose name is not on the register, though its failure to appear thereon is due to the mistake of the county clerk in making the book, and though the elector produces a certificate from the clerk showing that the elector has regularly registered, and that his name is on the great register.—Patterson v. Hanley, 136 Cal. 265, 68 Pac. 821, 975.

[b] During the absence of a deputy registration clerk, electors visited his store to be registered, and their registrations were made out by a person employed in the store, who was not a deputy, but what purported to be the affidavits of such persons were contained in the book of affidavits delivered to the board of election. Held, that such persons were qualified electors; the affidavits merely constituting an official list of voters who have been enrolled by the registration officer on the great register, and the phrase in section 1083, "conformed to the law governing registration," merely meaning those who have caused themselves to be enrolled on the authentic list.—Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

See 15 Cyc. 307; 18 Cent. Dig., cols. 204, § 110.

§ 45. Conclusiveness and Effect of Registration.

[a] In an election contest, evidence may be admitted to show that registered voters are not citizens.—Preston v. Culbertson, 58 Cal. 198.

[b] Political Code, section 1208, provides that when it appears from the register that any elector has declared under oath, when he registered, that he cannot read, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to mark his ballot, he shall, on request, receive assistance in preparing his ballot; and section 1096, subdivision 11, provides that the entry on the great register must show the fact whether or not the elector desiring to be registered is able to read the constitution and to write his name, and whether or not the elector has any physical disability by reason of which he cannot mark his ballot, and, if he cannot mark his ballot by reason of physical disability, the nature of the disability must be entered. Held, that the question whether an elector cannot read, or cannot mark his ballot because of physical disability, is to be ascertained from the entry on the great register. Huston v. Anderson, 145 Cal. 320, 78 Pac. 626.

§ 46. —— Irregularities and Defects as Affecting Right to Vote.

[a] Under the register act, which declares a vote illegal if the name of the elector is not on the poll list of the election precinct where the vote is cast on the day of the election, where a name had been entered on a precinct poll list, but at the final sitting of the board of registration, as required by section 24 of that act, the name was erased by the board, it was held that the result was the same as if the name had never been on the poll list.—Webster v. Byrnes, 34 Cal. 273.

[b] Qualified voters, who were properly registered, could not be deprived of their votes because the officers of election neglected to perform the ministerial and directory duty of having the proper register before them for examination, and any provision of law having that effect would be unconstitutional.—People v. Woswick, 142 Cal. 71, 75 Pac. 663.

[a] Statutes of 1899, page 47, requiring the primary elections of all political parties to be held at the same time, and under the control of the county board of election commissioners, and providing for the use of but one ticket at such an election, which is received by the intending voter without question as to his political affiliations, and taken into the privacy of a booth, where he may name such delegates as he desires to the political convention of one or another of the political parties, whether he is a member of that party or not, is an unwarranted invasion of the rights of political parties, and an innovation of the rights reserved to the people by Constitution, article 1, section 23, providing that the rights enumerated in the constitution shall not be construed to impair or deny others retained by the people.—Britton v. [b] Constitution, article 2, section 1, provides that "every native male citizen of the United States . . . . and every male naturalized citizen thereof who shall have become such ninety days prior to any election, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the state one year next preceding the election, and of the county in which he claims to vote ninety days, and in the election precinct thirty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or may hereafter be authorized by law." Article 20, section 11, provides that the privilege of free suffrage shall be supported by laws regulating elections. Acts of 1897, page 115, section 23, relating to primary elections, provides that all native-born citizens who since the last general election have become of legal age, and all persons naturalized since the last general election and who have been legal residents of the county for "thirty days" prior to the election, shall be entitled to vote, on being registered, at any primary election. Held that, since the above section of the statute is an enlargement of the constitutional right of suffrage, it is void.—Spier v. Baker, 120 Cal. 370, 52 Pac. 659.

[c] Acts of 1897, page 115, section 22, relating to the right to vote at primary elections, and which places such elections on the same plane as state elections, provides that "no person shall be allowed to vote whose name does not appear on the great or precinct register of the county, or the city and county, used at the last general election held before such primary election, in the precinct in which he desires to vote as a person entitled to vote in such precinct, or unless his name appears on the supplements to such great or precinct register." By this section various classes of persons qualified under the constitution to vote at all elections which might thereafter "be authorized by law" (Const., art. 2, sec. 1), are debarred from participating in primary elections to be held under the above act. Held, that the act is void, as an attempt to deprive certain citizens of their right to vote at all elections, as provided by the constitution.—Spier v. Baker, 120 Cal. 375, 379, 52 Pac. 659.

[d] Primary election is an "election" referred to in article 20, section 11 and article 2, section 1 of the constitution.—Spier v. Baker, 120 Cal. 375, 379, 52 Pac. 659.

§ 49. Nomination by Convention.

[a] Where a convention of a political party is regularly called and organized, its nominees and not those of a convention made up of a minority of the delegates, who withdrew from the regular convention, are entitled to have their certificates filed by the Secretary of State, though the delegates violate pledges, and disregard the advice of the executive committee, in that it nominates certain men who do not belong to the party, and makes a bargain by which some of its nominees are to retire in favor of the nominees of other parties.—Hutchinson v. Brown, 122 Cal. 189, 54 Pac. 738, 42 L. R. A. 232.

[b] In deciding on the regularity of certificates of nomination for Congress offered to the Secretary of State to be filed, the usage of a party in nominating its candidates, viz., by the formation of district conventions at a state convention by the delegates thereto, in accordance with the call of the state central committee, will be recognized as decisive in favor of a candidate thus nominated against one nominated by delegates in a district convention organized and conducted independent of the state convention.—Spelling v. Wheatly, 147 Cal. 372, 81 Pac. 1105; Thompson v. Wheatly, 147 Cal. 372, 81 Pac. 1105.

[b] The purposes of the statute concerning nominations by certificates are to permit independent nominations of candidates, and to facilitate the formation of new political parties.—Partridge v. Devoto (Cal. Sup.), 82 Pac. 775.

[c] The court, in determining whether a political party name, adopted by persons signing a certificate of nomination of candidates, is liable to mislead the voters, within Political Code, section 1188, held authorized to consider certain matters of public knowledge.—Partridge v. § 52. Certificates of Nomination.

[a] Under section 1192 of the Political Code, a certificate of nomination by a convention must be filed not less than thirty days before the day of election, and the fact that the thirtieth day preceding the election falls on Sunday cannot operate to lessen the time limited by law for such filing, nor do sections 12 and 13 of the Political Code have application to the limitation of time prescribed by section 1192.—Griffin v. § 56. —— Official Ballots.

[a] Political Code, sections 1197, 1205, as amended by Statutes of 1891, chapter 130, provide that the names of all political parties which have filed certificates of nomination of candidates in accordance with the statutory requirements shall be printed, in separate lines, at the head of the official ballot, and that an elector who desires to vote any such party ticket straight may do so by putting a cross opposite the name of such party; but a ballot so marked shall not be counted, if marked in any other place, except to indicate a vote on a constitutional amendment or other question. Held, that such sections were unconstitutional, as resulting in the partial or total disenfranchisement of any elector so voting unless his party had a full state and local ticket.—Eaton v. Brown, 96 Cal. 371, 31 Am. St. Rep. 225, 31 Pac. 250, 17 L. R. A. 697.

[b] Political Code, section 1197, relating to official election ballots, which provides that the name of a candidate shall be printed only once upon the ballot, and, if any candidate is nominated by more than one certificate of nomination, he must choose which of the party designations he desires to have his name printed under, and, if the candidate shall fail to make the choice, his name shall be placed on the ballot under the party designation named, in the certificate first filed, and underneath the title of the office in the other party column shall be printed the words "No Nomination," is unconstitutional, as interfering with the rights of political parties to make nominations, and with the right of a candidate to demand that his name shall be placed on the ballot, so as to inform the voters that he is the nominee of a particular party; and therefore a candidate nominated by two parties for the same office is entitled to have his name printed twice on the ballot, under the two party designations.—Murphy v. Curry, 137 Cal. 479, 70 Pac. 461, 59 L. R. A. 97.

[c] Political Code, section 1186, provides that a party represented by a convention in a political division in which sections 1357 to 1375, relative to primary elections, are not mandatory, must have polled, at the last election before the holding of the convention, at least three per cent of the entire vote of the state or other political division for which nominations are to be made. Section 1361 provides that political parties which shall have polled at the last election at least three per cent of the entire vote of the state or other political division for which a primary election is to be held shall be entitled to a place on the official ballot to be used in all primary elections for delegates. Held, that a party which at the last state election polled over three per cent of the total vote of the state is entitled to a place on the congressional ballot in a district where sections 1357 to 1375 are not mandatory, although it failed to cast three per cent of the votes within such district.—Gaylord v. Curry, 145 Cal. 154, 78 Pac. 548.

§ 57. Form and Contents.

[a] A ballot is a single piece of paper containing the names of the candidates and the offices for which they are designated.—People v. Holden, 28 Cal. 123.

[ab] Ballot should not be rejected because it differs from regulations prescribed in Code in matters over which elector has no control, such as size of ballot, kind of paper on which it is printed, or character of type used in printing.—Kirk v. Rhoads, 46 Cal. 398.

[b] The fact that, in preparing ballots for the election of a supervisor of the first district of a county, the printer, by mistake designated the district as the "second," does not prevent the counting of such ballots, the purpose for which they were cast being obvious.—Inglis v. Shepherd, 67 Cal. 469, 8 Pac. 5.

[c] Ballot not conforming in length and other respects to sec. 1191, Political Code, is properly rejected.—Reynolds v. Snow, 67 Cal. 497, 8 Pac. 27.

[d] The California election law, prior to its amendment by Statutes of 1889, page 209, provided that spurious tickets could only be counted for what they would have been if genuine, where the fraudulent names were "pasted" on the tickets. Held, that under such law tickets in all respects genuine, except that on them was "printed" the name of the adverse party's candidate for sheriff, were properly counted for him in a contest for his office.—Russell v. Dowell, 83 Cal. 70, 23 Pac. 183.

[e] Although it was not required of the clerk of a city that he send the voters a sample ballot before election, where he does so the voters have the right to assume that the ballots furnished them at the voting booth correspond to the sample.—City of San Luis Obispo v. Fitzgerald, 126 Cal. 279, 58 Pac. 699.

[f] Statutes of 1889, p. 358, provides that electors shall be invited to vote on the proposition of annexing territory to a city by placing on the ballots the words "For annexation" or "Against annexation." The ticket used contained the direction, "To vote, stamp a cross (X) in the square opposite the proposition indicating your choice," while below, on separate lines, were the words "For annexation" and "Against annexation." Held a substantial compliance with the statute.—People v. City of Los Angeles, 133 Cal. 338, 65 Pac. 749.

§ 58. —— Party Names, Emblems or Devices.

[a] The words "Regular Prohibition Ticket," printed at the head and on the face of a ballot, are not such part of the ticket as renders it illegal, under Political Code, section 1191, providing that the word "For" shall comprise the top line of all tickets used at an election, as the ticket consists merely of the words showing for whom and for what office the ballot is cast.—Coffey v. Edmonds, 58 Cal. 521; Coffey v. Lyman, 92 Cal. 135, 28 Pac. 91.

[b] There should be no party designation at the head of official ballots printed pursuant to Political Code, sections 1197, 1205, as amended by Statutes of 1891, chapter 130.—Eaton v. Brown, 96 Cal. 371, 31 Am. St. Rep. 225, 31 Pac. 250, 17 L. R. A. 697.

[c] The party designation, "National Democratic," on the official ballots, is not calculated to deceive. (Beatty, C. J., and Garoutte, J., dissenting.)—Craig v. Brown, 114 Cal. 480, 46 Pac. 870.

§ 59. —— Effect of Printer's Mistake in Describing Office.

[a] Obvious intent to vote for contestant will not be defeated by mistake of printer in description of office.—Inglis v. Shepherd, 67 Cal. 469, 8 Pac. 5.

§ 60. —— Statement of Question or Proposition.

[a] Where the statute provides (Laws 1883, p. 311) that the ballots, on an election to determine the issuance of bonds, shall be printed "For the issue of bonds," or "Against the issue of bonds," ballots "For the issue of bonds" are sufficient, without adding the word "Yes."—Gibson v. Board of Supervisors, 80 Cal. 359, 22 Pac. 225.

[b] A ballot cast at an election on the question of town incorporation, under Statutes of 1883, page 93, marked in pencil in lieu of the official stamp, or having no mark except the words "Against incorporation" at the bottom, is invalid.—People v. Town of Sausalito, 106 Cal. 500, 39 Pac. 937.

§ 61. Indication of Choice by Voter.

[a] Where a ballot had the names of candidates for judge of the superior court printed in lines directly above that of a candidate for state senator, and the name of the candidate for state senator was erased, and that of a candidate for judge of the superior court upon the opposition ticket written opposite the words "state senator," and in line with it, the intention of the voter, as shown on the face of the ballot, must be held to be to vote for such candidate as state senator, and not for the office of judge of the superior court, and it is error for the court to count the ballot for him as candidate for the latter office.—Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 774.

[b] Ballot is only expression of voter's will, and it must be counted according to its legal effect. When it intelligently shows that a particular person is voted for to fill a particular office it cannot be counted differently merely because the court may believe that the voter made a mistake in preparing his ticket.—Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779.

[c] Political Code, sections 1197, 1205, as amended by Statutes of 1891, chapter 130, provides that an elector who desires to vote any party ticket straight may do so by putting a cross opposite the name of such party; but a ballot so marked shall not be counted, if marked in any other place, except to indicate a vote on a constitutional amendment or other question. Held, that voters can only express their choice by placing a cross opposite each name or proposition voted for, except in voting for presidential electors, when the mark may be placed opposite the party group.—Eaton v. Brown, 96 Cal. 371, 31 Am. St. Rep. 225, 31 Pac. 250, 17 L. R. A. 697.

[d] The law requiring a voter to place a cross opposite the name of each candidate for whom he votes its mandatory.—Lay v. Parsons, 104 Cal. 661, 38 Pac. 447.

[e] In an election to determine as to the incorporation of a town, official ballots deposited in the ballot-box, without any marks thereon to indicate the elector's wish in any particular, are not to be deemed as "votes cast" in any sense.—People v. Town of Sausalito, 106 Cal. 500, 39 Pac. 937.

[f] Political Code, section 1197, provides for a margin on ballots one-half inch wide, at the right hand of the names, so that the voter may clearly indicate the candidate for whom he votes, and requires the ticket to have printed on it, "To vote for a person, stamp a cross (X) in the square at the right of the name." Section 1211 provides that any ballot not made as provided in the act shall be void. Section 1205 provides that the voter shall prepare his ballot by making a cross after the name of the person for whom he intends to vote. Section 1215 forbids the voter to place any mark upon his ballot by which it may be identified. Held, that a ballot with a cross placed opposite the candidate's name, but outside the square, should be counted as a vote for the candidate opposite whose name the mark is placed.—Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 101, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454, 29 L. R. A. 673.

[g] Failure to follow prescribed mode of marking ballot renders vote nugatory.—Murphy v. San Luis Obispo, 119 Cal. 633, 51 Pac. 1085.

[h] Failure to follow mandatory provisions for holding election vitiates it; minor and unsubstantial departure from directory provisions not changing result does not.—Murphy v. San Luis Obispo, 119 Cal. 632, 51 Pac. 1085.
